I vividly recall the 1980-81 drought and its devastating impact on Virginia Beach. The economic stability and indeed the future of this area depends on obtaining a secure supply of water.

The ground water system in southeastern Virginia is simply insufficient to meet future needs. Virginia Beach already has the strictest water conservation requirements in Virginia. In 1993 the city's contract to purchase water from Norfolk expires, and they are faced with developing a new water source by that time.

Detailed technical reviews have shown that the Lake Gaston pipeline is by far the most economically and technically feasible source of water for the Virginia Beach area, and that it will not result in any significant environmental damage to other parts of Virginia or North Carolina.

Mr. President, I—along with my colleague PAUL TRIBLE and Virginia's Gov. Charles Robb—support the Lake Gaston pipeline. But I want you to understand that we did not arrive at this point without considerable deliberations. We do not have a united constituency on this issue. Virginians in the area surrounding Lake Gaston oppose the pipeline while those in the Virginia Beach area support it. Yet all three statewide elected officials in Virginia support the Lake Gaston pipeline.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed at this point in the RECORD an August 6, 1984, letter which I received from Governor Robb in strong support of the Lake Gaston pipeline.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA,
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR,
Richmond, VA, August 6, 1984.

Hon. JOHN W. WARNER,
U.S. Senate, Russell Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR JOHN: I understand that the Senate will shortly be considering H.R. 6040, the Second Supplemental Appropriations Act for Fiscal Year 1984. The House committee report accompanying this bill contains language that would prohibit the Army Corps of Engineers from using funds to transfer water from the Roanoke River Basin (e.g., Lake Gaston) to the James River Basin (e.g., Virginia Beach) until the Corps has prepared an Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) and until both the Corps and the Environmental Protection Agency have determined from the EIS that there will be no detrimental effects on the environment.

I strongly urge that you oppose the inclusion of such language in any Senate committee report on this bill, or in the bill itself. The language would block any implementation of the Virginia Beach water supply project until the EIS process is carried out completely. As you know from our experiences last winter, requiring an EIS on this project would be a misuse of the EIS process and a waste of governmental effort at three levels of government.

As you recall, members of the North Carolina Congressional delegation introduced a bill in the House of Representatives to require an EIS for this project, just after the Corps of Engineers issued a permit for the project. I joined you and Paul Trible and Bill Whitehurst in appearing before Congressman Roe's subcommittee to oppose the bill, which did not make it to the floor.

In considering H.R. 6040 and the associated committee report, and in talking with your colleagues about it, I hope you will keep in mind the following:

Through extensive review of the City's environmental report, the preparation of two environmental assessments, and the holding of three well-attended public hearings, the Corps of Engineers complied almost completely with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) mandate for environmental impact statements. The effort and expenditure for literal compliance with the EIS requirement would be superfluous and hence wasteful on the part of all levels of government.

The critical question of whether the project would harm Roanoke River resources or downstream river flows has been decisively answered in the negative by extensive Corps study. The maximum withdrawal proposed—60 million gallons per day—represents only 1.2 percent of the average river flow at Roanoke Rapids. The worst-case effect on lake levels would be at most 2½ inches in a lake where existing variation is much greater. Water quality and lake levels impacts would, therefore, be insignificant.

Alternatives, the study of which is supposed to be the heart of an environmental impact statement according to NEPA regulations, have been studied by the Corps, the Commonwealth, and Virginia Beach for a number of years. The fact is that the groundwater system in Southeastern Virginia cannot be relied upon indefinitely. The water supply contract with Norfolk expires in 1993, a scant 8½ years from now. Water-sharing arrangements among Tidewater localities have been examined and can only accomplish a limited goal—a goal which falls short of projected actual needs. More water is needed for a city that already has the strictest water conservation ordinances in Virginia.

Additional delay of this vital project would threaten the water supply, and consequently the health and well-being, of the citizens of Southeastern Virginia. It is my hope that your opposition to the language in the committee report accompanying H.R. 6040 will be decisive as the bill is considered in the Senate.

Sincerely,

CHARLES S. ROBB.

Mr. WARNER. Virginia Beach is trying to be a responsible citizen in developing this project.

Their application for a permit to build the Lake Gaston pipeline is the result of years of study. As early as 1978 in a report on the Hampton Roads water supply, the Corps of Engineers examined 50 alternatives for providing additional water for the area. In 1978, the corps, in an interim report, tentatively recommended the Lake Gaston pipeline.

After extensive study of the options available to them, the city of Virginia Beach in July 1983 applied to the corps for a permit to construct the Lake Gaston pipeline.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers made a finding of no significant environmental impact and issued a construction permit in January 1984.

More than 38 State and Federal agencies, including the Environmental Protection Agency and the Fish and Wildlife Service, were supplied information on the project and given the opportunity to comment. Also included were agencies of the Commonwealth of Virginia including those responsible for drinking water safety, air and water quality, fisheries management, and transportation.

Each of these State and Federal agencies had the opportunity to request environmental impact statements. However, none of the 38 State and Federal agencies felt there were sufficient unanswered environmental questions to call for an environmental impact statement. Indeed, the Virginia Marine Resource Commission and the Virginia State Water Control Board have both issued the necessary State permit for the project.

There were some 66 mitigation measures which are proposed by Virginia Beach and made a part of the contract. I submit to you, Mr. President, that the reason these agencies did not request an environmental impact statement was because they were convinced, based on the comprehensive permit application filed by Virginia Beach and the environmental impact statement.

I am convinced that the project's impact on the environment would be temporary and minor. Frankly, Mr. President, I believe those advocating an environmental impact study, and I presume they mean "statement," believe that also. Their real concern is the effect this withdrawal could possibly have on water levels in Lake Gaston and downstream in the Roanoke River. Their fears are simply not based on fact.

The Corps of Engineers estimates that for a worst case drought in Kerr Reservoir, the proposed Lake Gaston pipeline intake would result in an additional drawdown of two-tenths of 1 foot. This drawdown is estimated to occur less frequently than once every 100 years.

This means that during a worst case drought, the level of Kern Reservoir—which already fluctuates approximately 12 feet annually—may fluctuate an additional two-tenths of 1 foot because of the pipeline withdrawal. The overall pipeline withdrawal represents only 1 percent of the average flow of the Roanoke River system. This evidence indicates to me that the impact of this withdrawal would truly be insignificant.

Because of existing Federal Energy Regulatory Commission licensing requirements, Vepco is required to maintain the water level of Lake Gaston at a minimum of 199 feet above mean sea level. This requirement would not be altered as a result of the Lake Gaston pipeline. Thus, the level of Lake Gaston is not going to change under the proposed pipeline.

The Corps of Engineers, in my judgment, has made a most thorough examination of the project. The corps conducted three public hearings, circulated an environmental assessment for two public comment periods, and reviewed volumes of data on the project.

I want to set the record straight on the assertion in the House report that "more than 99 percent of the witnesses opposed the granting of the permit." This is simply not the case.

More than 1,700 persons attended a November 17 hearing in Virginia Beach. Almost every individual testified in support of the project. Two hearings were conducted in the areas surrounding Lake Gaston with nearly 4,000 persons testifying in opposition to the permit.

The corps record on this project indicates that approximately 24 percent of the comments supported the project, 65 percent opposed, and 11 percent expressed no opinion. This 24 percent is a far cry from the 1 percent alleged in the House committee report. Had a second hearing been held in or around Virginia Beach—as a second hearing was held in the heartland of the opposition—the percentage of those registering in favor of the proposal would be much higher.

I have on my desk approximately 2 feet of documents associated with the official record of public involvement. I invite any Senator who has doubts about the degree to which the project has been studied to review these documents.

The language in the House committee report is particularly troublesome for two reasons.

First language directs that the project not go forward until the corps has made an environmental impact study.

The corps has been directed to conduct a study with an impossible result. What is demanded cannot possibly be achieved. The NEPA and its legislative intent has totally been discarded in this language. The House report says, in effect, that the life of one worm will prohibit the transfer of water to more than 300,000 people. If one shovel of dirt has an environmental impact, the pipeline could not be built.

The definition of environmental impact study is unclear. Traditionally, the corps conducts an environmental assessment—which it has in the case of the Lake Gaston pipeline. Then if there is a potential of significant environmental impact, an environmental impact statement is prepared. How the environmental impact study relates to either an environmental assessment or an environmental impact statement is unclear, and, therefore, it is impossible to know what kind of study is required.

Second, the language ignores the delicate balance between environmental and other factors which must be weighed under the statutes and regulations of the National Environmental Protection Act. The House report language allows no detrimental effect on the environment. The term "significant"—as included in NEPA—is omitted.

A finding of no environmental impact is impossible to meet and, in effect, blocks the project.

Mr. President, this language is mischievous and clearly obstructionist.

Legislation was introduced in the House of Representatives, H.R. 4317, to require the corps to conduct an environmental impact statement prior to issuing the permit. This legislation was the subject of hearings February 8, 1984, before the Water Resources Subcommittee of the House Committee on Public Works and Transportation: 24 witnesses, including Governor Robb, Senator TRIBLE, and myself, testified. In my judgment, the subcommittee did not act further on this matter because they were persuaded that the bill requiring an environmental impact statement was without merit.

Opponents of the pipeline have been unable to persuade the Corps of Engineers or the House Public Works Committee of the merits of their arguments. Now they are making a last ditch effort before the Appropriations Committee—and I underline Appropriations Committee—not the authorizing committees which have an expertise in this area.

Mr. President, the Corps of Engineers is the appropriate Federal office charged by the Congress with determining the precise environmental impact of projects, such as the Lake Gaston pipeline. I understand that the corps makes thousands of environmental studies on proposed projects each year.

Federal law vests in agencies technical decisionmaking authority. We have multitudes of engineers, scientists, and other Federal executive branch civilian and military employees who are specifically hired to make these decisions.

I believe the corps is qualified to decide whether the environmental impact statement is required before a section 404 permit is issued.

How many Members of Congress are really convinced that Congress is better equipped to make technical judgments which override the decisions of the executive branch—decisions based on research and studies funded with billions upon billions of taxpayer dollars?

Why are we spending all these billions of dollars to support the executive branch so that they can hire these experts, if we in Congress become another executive branch?

The Congress' role is to make laws and oversee their execution. The executive branch administers our laws. The judicial branch interprets our laws. All three branches play a role in the Lake Gaston pipeline project. Congress passed the law dictating how section 404 permits shall be issued. The executive branch determined that an environmental impact statement was not necessary and that the permit should be issued. The courts are now involved with challenges to the corps decision.

If we intervene here, I suggest the Congress will be potentially subject to intervene in each and every corps project. I cannot believe the Congress wants to get in the business of duplicating corps business in determining which projects require environmental impact statements. The ramifications of setting such a terrible precedent are obvious.

With the many important national issues before this Congress, I question why its Members would want to start ruling on the technical environmental impact of thousands of projects throughout the United States. I predict that if this legislation is enacted, everyone displeased with corps decisions will be lined up outside our doors requesting special legislation to veto or sanction their projects.

Despite the good efforts of many in this body, the Congress has been logjammed for 8 years on authorizing federally funded water projects. If the Congress is unable to move forward on such legislation of vital national importance, I certainly do not believe we should take on this additional task.

I suggest, Mr. President, that the executive branch do what it is staffed and authorized to do. If we in Congress do not agree with the law by which such decisions are to be made, then Congress should change the law—not attempt to change individual decisions which we vest in the executive branch, just because someone in our constituency disagrees with the conclusion.

I want to point out to my colleagues the implications of delaying the Lake Gaston pipeline. Virginia Beach City officials have estimated that for each and every month of delay, project costs escalate by about $900,000. This imposes a severe financial strain on the taxpayers of Virginia Beach who must ultimately bear the cost of the pipeline.

I urge the conferees on this bill to be silent on the necessity of an environmental impact statement for the Lake Gaston pipeline.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article from the Ledger Star by Frank Callaham.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Ledger-Star, Aug. 7, 1984]

HOUSE PANEL BULLIES THE ENGINEERS ON GASTON WATER

(By Frank Callahan)

When the House of Representatives Appropriations Committee went along with a North Carolina congressman's obstructive order to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to prepare an environmental impact statement on the Lake Gaston pipeline and the full body endorsed the measure, the House reduced itself to a petty meddler in interstate controversy.

By this action, the chamber embraced the North Carolina side in the state's effort to block Virginia Beach's quest for water—and embraced that side in the position of bully.

Granted, the directive is not binding, but the North Carolina congressman, Tim Valentine, made sure everyone understood that the intent was coercive. If corps officials ignore the order, he said, "they do so at their peril." He added that he couldn't imagine the corps "not paying attention to this type of directive coming from the holder of its purse strings." And anticipating that the Senate may not join in, he said: "I think the corps should be mindful that appropriations bills originate in the House—and the House has spoken."

The corps' position is that it has carefully followed the provisions of the National Environmental Policy Act. This law states that only when a major federal action has a significant effect on the human environment should the corps do an environmental impact statement. In January, the corps concluded that the Beach water project would not have an adverse environmental effect and awarded the city a permit to build the pipeline.

Just what effect the House order will have on the progress of the project is uncertain. Preparation of an official statement could lengthen the process of getting the pipeline under way. With the current completion target already nine years away, it is obviously important to try to avoid new delays.

But North Carolina already is suing in federal court to void the corps' permit, pending preparation of an environmental statement. So, it could be that, if North Carolina should prevail in court, the House directive by itself would have no delaying effect.

This, though, is beside the point. For the evidence suggests that the corps followed the procedures called for in the law passed by Congress. If the House feels these procedures offer insufficient ecological protections, then the House should adopt amendments to the law. Getting into the Virginia-Carolina water dispute itself amounts to an unwarranted intrusion.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I ask for third reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment of the amendments and third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read a third time.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill, having been read the third time, the question is, Shall it pass?

On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Texas [Mr. TOWER], is necessarily absent.

Mr. BYRD. I announce that the Senator from Texas [Mr. BENTSEN], the Senator from California [Mr. CRANSTON], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. GLENN], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG], and the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STENNIS], are necessarily absent.

[The following proceedings occurred after midnight:]

The PRESIDING OFFICER [Mr. WILSON]. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who wish to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 62, nays 32, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 221 Leg.]

NOT VOTING—6

Bentsen	Glenn	Stennis
Cranston	Long	Tower

So the bill (H.R. 6040), as amended, was passed.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist on its amendments to H.R. 6040, and that the Senate ask for a conference with the House of Representatives on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that the chair be authorized to appoint conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I do not object. The distinguished majority leader, the assistant majority leader, and I have talked about the possibility that on tomorrow we might want some adjustment made in the list of minority conferees. They have both indicated that would be agreeable. Am I correct?

Mr. STEVENS. My good and great friend from West Virginia is absolutely correct. We have looked at it. There are more from this side of the aisle than there are from the other side of the aisle. But it is because of the decision to wait until tomorrow to determine who else should be named, and we are in agreement. We will amend this list of requested conferees by the distinguished Democratic leader.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the distinguished acting majority leader.

I withdraw my reservation.

The motion was agreed to, and the Presiding Officer appointed MARK O. HATFIELD; THEODORE F. STEVENS; LOWELL P. WEICKER, JR.; JAMES A. MCCLURE; JAKE GARN; THAD COCHRAN; MARK ANDREWS; JAMES ABDNOR; ROBERT W. KASTEN, JR.; ALFONSE M. D'AMATO; MACK MATTINGLY; WARREN RUDMAN; ARLEN SPECTER; JOHN C. STENNIS; DANIEL K. INOUYE; ERNEST F. HOLLINGS; THOMAS F. EAGLETON; BENNETT J. JOHNSTON; QUENTIN N. BURDICK; PATRICK J. LEAHY; DENNIS DECONCINI; and DALE BUMPERS as conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, as of 11:45 p.m., I am informed that the Senate had considered H.R. 6040 for 2 days; a total of 13 hours; with 7 rollcall votes; and 46 amendments and motions were considered, of which 35 were agreed to.

That was a matter that was handled in I think great dispatch, and with dignity and ability demonstrated by the managers on both sides.

ROUTINE MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be a period for the transaction of routine morning business during which Senators may speak therein for not to exceed 5 minutes each, and that the period last not beyond the hour of 1 a.m.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRIBUTE TO REPRESENTATIVE CARL D. PERKINS

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. President, no matter what degree of national respect a U.S. Congressman may have earned over the years, what he will be remembered by is how well he served the people of his district. With that as the measure, Carl Perkins will never be forgotten.

Carl D. Perkins could, over his 35 years in Congress, lay claim to much at the national level. Without Carl Perkins, the war on poverty might well have been lost in the early skirmishes. It was Carl Perkins' hands that molded and guided the legislation that produced job training and school lunch programs, remedial education for the disadvantaged, vocational education, and school libraries.

Child care and nutrition, adult education, mathematics and science educations, and the Appalachian Regional Commission, all were shepherded through by this master of the legislative and political process.

The legislation he shaped touched people from New England to Hawaii, from Alaska to Florida. Evidence of that was ample Tuesday at his funeral in Hindman, where House Speaker TIP O'NEILL, Majority Leader JIM WRIGHT, and Senator EDWARD KENNEDY spoke in tribute to Carl Perkins, and where nearly a hundred of his colleagues gathered to pay their respects.

More telling was the fact that more than 3,000 of his beloved constituents came to pay their respects as well. Carl Perkins was a national leader, he was chairman of the Education and Labor Committee, he was ranked among the truly powerful in Washington. But every hour of every day, Carl Perkins was the U.S. Representative from the Seventh Congressional District of Kentucky.

While he worked on writing law that would make dramatic changes in our American society, he was never too busy to talk to a constituent. No problem in Appalachian Kentucky was too small to garner his personal attention. No President was ever too powerful to prevent Carl Perkins from carrying the case for a Kentuckian to a solution.

He returned home to Knott County every week, and he saw the world from the vantage point of his mountain farm. He looked at the world through the eyes of a man who was truly of the people.

He knew that the illiterate coal miner in Pike County had much in common with the illiterate farm worker in southern California. He knew that the hungry child in Martin County had much in common with the hungry child on Chicago's South Side. He knew that the homeless family in Breathitt County shared common experiences with the homeless family in New York City. He knew that the schoolhouse without a decent library in Carter County was no more able to provide quality education than a school in Arizona with the same lack. He knew that being unemployed in Letcher County was little different than being unemployed in Miami.

As he served his people, he served people everywhere in America. And as his loss will be felt in the seventh district, so it will be felt across America.

A TRIBUTE TO COL. HOWARD VAUGHAN

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, today I would like to pay tribute to a man who has given 30 years of outstanding service to the U.S. Air Force Reserve, Col. Howard R. Vaughan, who recently retired. I would like to congratulate this patriotic individual on his years of recognized leadership and dedication to his country.

As a Reserve officer, Howard Vaughan managed to accomplish a great deal. He performed brilliantly the past 5 years as Mobilization Augmentee Chief, Congressional Legislation Division, Directorate of Legislative Liaison. As Chief Legislative Attorney (Reserve), Colonel Vaughan has been a part of several important decisions. He managed to obtain Air Force participation for the personnel portion of the annual DOD authorization hearings, and he was a key component in the defeat of the Garcia amendment to the 1983 DOD authorization bill, which would have cut several services available to Air Force officers and their dependents. In addition, his efforts were crucial to the passage of legislation which increased compensation for survivors of Civil Air Patrol members. Due to these successes on Capitol Hill, he is considered an expert on legislative matters.

On Friday, May 11, 1984, Vaughan retired from the military. At the retirement ceremony, Maj. James P. McCarthy, Director of Legislative Legion, awarded Vaughan the "Legion of Merit."

A native of Birmingham, AL, Colonel Vaughan received his bachelor of science degree from the University of Alabama and his LL.D. from Birmingham School of Law. Currently, he lives in Montgomery, AL, with his wife, Ann Stringfellow, and his son Howard, Jr.

Alabama is lucky to claim such a fine man. He is a credit to his country and family, and should not go unrecognized.

THE ALABAMA SPORTS FESTIVAL

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, on Sunday evening, July 8, 1984, I had the honor and privilege of participating in the closing ceremonies of the Alabama Sports Festival. The ceremonies were held at Birmingham's Sixth Avenue Baptist Church and signaled the end of a 4-day tribute to Olympic style competition.

We are all very familiar with the pageantry and spirit identified with the Olympics, which, of course, are going on right now in Los Angeles. The Alabama Sports Festival is an athletic gathering, sanctioned by the U.S. Olympic Committee, which includes competition for the disabled as well as for youths and adults.

When the Sports Festival was first held, only 1 year ago, it consisted of only four events—track and field, swimming, gymnastics, and exhibition cycling. This year, there were 4 days of competition rather than 1, 16 events rather than 4, and some 3,000 athletes participating rather than 600.

Following even more in the Olympic tradition, the festival this year had elaborate opening and closing ceremonies, under the direction of James Hatcher of Birmingham's Town & Gown Theatre. The opening ceremonies were held in the 17,000 seat Birmingham-Jefferson Civic Center, and began and ended with a parade of all athletes participating.

The closing ceremonies, held at the Sixth Avenue Baptist Church, were another moving and inspirational moment. I was one of several persons who participated by reading selected words of such great Americans as Benjamin Franklin, Theodore Roosevelt, Daniel Webster, Woodrow Wilson, and others. These testimonies of patriotism and national courage were separated by hymns and inspirational songs performed by Anita Bryant and other talented individuals and singing groups. The patriotic leaning of the program was, of course, additionally fitting in that the ceremony was held so close to our national celebration of independence.

Mr. President, I rise today to commend all those who helped make this year's Alabama Sports Festival such a successful event—both participants and planners. Their efforts and dedication are building an event of which all of Alabama can and should be proud. I ask unanimous consent that the texts of the readings delivered at the closing ceremonies of the Alabama Sports Festival be printed in full at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

PRESIDENT WOODROW WILSON IN HIS INAUGURAL ADDRESS, WASHINGTON, DC, JANUARY 21, 1917

. . . Only a peace between equals can last; only a peace the very principle of which is equality and a common participation in a common benefit . . . No nation should seek to extend its policy over any other nation or people, but that every people should be left free to determine its own policy, its own way of development, unhindered, unthreatened, unafraid, the little along with the powerful.

. . . Only free peoples can hold their purpose and their honor steady to a common end and prefer the interests of mankind to any narrow interest of their own.

PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY IN HIS INAUGURAL ADDRESS; WASHINGTON DC; JANUARY 20, 1961

. . . And so, my fellow Americans—Ask not what your country can do for you—ask what you can do for your country.

My fellow citizens of the world: Ask not what America will do for you, but what together we can do for the freedom of man.

Finally, whether you are a citizen of America or a citizen of the world, ask of us here the same high standards of strength and sacrifice which we ask of you. With a good conscience our only sure reward, with history the final judge of our deeds, let us go forth to lead the land we love, asking His blessing and His help, but knowing that here on earth God's work must truly be our own.

EDWARD EVERETT; CHARLESTOWN, MA; AUGUST 1, 1926

. . . Henceforward, while America exists among the nations of the earth, the first emotion of the 4th of July will be of joy and triumph in the great event which immortalizes the day; the second will be the one of chastened and tender recollection of the venerable men who departed on the morning of the jubilee. (John Adams and Thomas Jefferson both died on July 4th.) This mingled emotion of triumph and sadness has sealed the beauty and sublimity of our great anniversary.

The fabric of America's freedom . . . may crumble into dust. But the cause in which these our fathers shown is immortal.

ANDREW JOHNSON; WASHINGTON, DC; MARCH 4, 1833

. . . The loss of liberty, of all good government, of peace, plenty and happiness, must inevitably follow a dissolution of the Union. In supporting it, therefore, we support all that is dear to the freeman and the philanthropist.

The eyes of all nations are fixed on our Republic. Great is the stake placed in our hands; great is the responsibility which must rest upon the people of the United States. Let us realize the importance of the attitude in which we stand before the world. Let us exercise forbearance and firmness. Let us extricate our country from dangers which surround it, and learn wisdom from the lessons they inculcate. Without union, our independence and liberty would never have been achieved; without union, they never can be maintained.

HENRY CLAY AS U.S. SENATOR FROM KENTUCKY; WASHINGTON, DC., 1850

. . . Let us look to our country and our cause, elevate ourselves to the dignity of pure and disinterested patriots, and save our country from all impending dangers. What if, in the march of this nation to greatness and power, we should be buried beneath the wheels that propel it onward?

ROBERT G. INGERSOL AT THE FUNERAL SERVICES OF HIS BROTHER; NEW YORK CITY; 1899

. . . Life is a narrow vale between the cold and barren peaks of two eternities. We strive in vain to look beyond the heights. We cry aloud, and the only answer is the echo of our waking cry. From the voiceless lips of the unreplying dead there comes no word; but in the night of death hope sees a star, and listening love can hear the rustle of a wing.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN; PHILADELPHIA; 1787

. . . I doubt, too, whether any other convention we can obtain may be able to make a better Constitution; for, when you assemble a number of men, to have the advantage of their joint wisdom, you inevitably assemble with those men all their prejudices, their passions, their errors of opinion, their local interests, and their selfish views. From such an assembly can a perfect production be expected?

It therefore astonishes me, sir, to find this system approaching so near perfection as it does; and I think it will astonish our enemies, who are waiting with confidence to hear that our counsels are confounded.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT WHILE GOVERNOR OF NEW YORK STATE; CHICAGO; APRIL 10, 1899

. . . I preach to you my countrymen, that our country calls not for the life of ease, but for the life of strenuous endeavor. The twentieth century looms before us big with the fate of many nations. If we stand idly by, if we seek merely swollen, slothful ease, and ignoble peace, if we shrink from the hard contests where men must win at hazard of their lives and at the risk of all they hold dear, then the bolder and stronger peoples will pass us by and will win for themselves the domination of the world. Let us therefore boldly face the life of strife, resolute to do our duty well and manfully; resolute to uphold righteousness by deed and by word; resolute to be both honest and brave, to secure high ideals, yet to use practical methods. Above all, let us shrink from no strife, moral or physical within or without the nation, provided we are certain that the strife is justified; for it is only through strife, through hard and dangerous endeavor, that we shall ultimately win the goal of true national greatness.

DANIEL WEBSTER; BOSTON; JUNE 17, 1825

. . . The whole world is becoming a common field of intellect to act in. Energy of mind, genius, power, wherever it exists, may speak out and the world will hear it.

Mind is the great lever of all things; human thought is the process by which human ends are ultimately answered; and the diffusion of knowledge, so astounding in the last half century, has rendered innumerable minds, variously gifted by nature, competent to be competitors or fellow-workers in the theatre of intellectual operation.

When men speak out they demand it; where the bayonet is at their throats, they pray for it.

DAVID E. LILIENTHAL BEFORE THE SENATE SECTION OF THE JOINT COMMITTEE ON ATOMIC ENERGY, 80TH CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION; WASHINGTON, DC.; JANUARY 27, 1947

My convictions are not so much concerned with what I am against as what I am for—and that excludes a lot of things automatically.

Traditionally, democracy has been an affirmative doctrine rather than merely a negative one.

I believe in—and I conceive the Constitution of the United States to rest, as does religion, upon—the fundamental proposition of the integrity of the individual; and that all Government and all private institutions must be designed to promote and protect and defend the integrity and the dignity of the individual; that that is the essential meaning of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights, as it is essentially the meaning of religion.

Any forms of government, therefore, and any other institutions, which make men means rather than ends in themselves, which exalt the state or any other institutions above the importance of men, which place arbitrary power over men as fundamental tenet of government, are contrary to this conception; and therefore I am deeply opposed to them.

I deeply believe in the capacity of democracy to surmount any trials that may lie ahead provided only we practice it in our daily lives.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN IN HIS SECOND INAUGURAL ADDRESS; WASHINGTON, D.C.; MARCH 4, 1865

At this second appearing to take the oath of the Presidential office, there is less occasion for an extended address than at the first. Then a statement somewhat in detail of the course to be pursued seemed very fitting and proper . . .

Fondly do we hope, fervently do we pray, that this mighty scourge of war may speedily pass away; yet if it be God's will that it continue until the wealth piled by bondsmen by two hundred and fifty years' unrequited toil shall be sunk, and until every drop of blood drawn with the lash shall be paid by another drawn with the sword, as was said three thousand years ago, so still it must be said that the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogethers.

With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in, to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and orphans; to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and a lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations.

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT BEFORE THE DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL CONVENTION; CHICAGO, IL; JULY 23, 1952

You are very kind to me and I am glad to have been asked to talk to you about the United Nations, about its past, about what it is doing today and more important, about its future.

I remember well, even though it seems a long time ago, hearing for the first time a statement and the reasons why, when the war ended, we must make another try to create another world organization to help us keep the peace of the world. This talk took place in my husband's study in the White House one evening during the bitter days of the last war when victory was not yet in sight.

My husband, discussing what would happen after the war, turned to a friend and said in effect "When this war is over and we have won it, as we will, we must apply the hard lessons learned in the war and in the failure of the League of Nations to the task of building a society of nations dedicated to enduring peace. There will be sacrifices and discouragements but we must not fail for we may never have another chance."

The UN is the machinery through which peace may be achieved and it is the responsibility of 60 nations and their delegations to make that machinery work. Yet you and I may carry the greatest responsibility because our national strength has given us opportunities for leadership among the nations of the free world.

The UN is the only machinery for the furtherance of peace that exists today. There is a small articulate minority in this country which advocates changing our national symbol which is the eagle to that of the ostrich and withdrawing from the UN. This minority reminds me of a story of a short-sighted and selfish man who put green goggles on the cow and fed her sawdust. The cow became sick and died. I warn you against the short-sighted and selfish men who are trying to distort the vision of the American people. We must have eagle eyes. These men who lack vision are poor in hope. They turn their backs on the future and live in the past. They seek to weaken and destroy this world organization through their attacks on the UN. They are expressing a selfish, destructive approach which leads not to peace but to chaos and might eventually lead to World War Three . . .

I can only hope that in the future there may be some little unexpected values . . . that may serve the great common hope that through the United Nations peace may come to the world.

PRESIDENT RONALD REAGAN IN HIS INAUGURAL ADDRESS; WASHINGTON, DC; JANUARY 1980

. . . If we look to the answer as to why for so many years we achieved so much, prospered as no other people on earth, it was because here in this land we unleashed the energy and individual genius of man to a greater extent than has ever been done before. So, with all the creative energy at our command, let us begin an era of national renewal. Let us renew our determination, our courage and our strength. And let us renew our faith and our hope. We have every right to dream heroic dreams.

BERNARD M. BARUCH ADDRESSING THE UNITED NATIONS IN NEW YORK CITY; JUNE 14, 1946

. . . We are here to make a choice between the quick and the dead. That is our business.

Behind the black portent of the new atomic age lies a hope which seized upon with faith, can work our salvation. If we fail, then we have damned every man to be a slave of fear. Let us not deceive ourselves: We must elect world peace or world destruction.

HENRY CABOT LODGE, SR.; BROOKLYN, NY; DECEMBER 21, 1888

. . . The American idea is a free church in a free state, and a free and unsectarian public school in every ward and in every village, with its doors wide open to the children of all races and of every creed. It goes still further, and frowns upon the constant attempt to divide our people according to origin or extraction. Let every man honor and love the land of his birth and the race from which he springs and keep their memory green. It is a pious and honorable duty. But let us have done with British-American and Irish-American, and so on, and all be Americans—nothing more, nothing less. If a man is going to be an American at all, let him be so without qualifying adjectives, and, if he is going to be something else, let him drop the word American from his personal description.

THE PROBLEMS OF THE SPECIALTY STEEL INDUSTRY

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, many times during my years here in the Senate I have stood in this Chamber to discuss one of America's most important industries—the domestic steel industry—and the present status of that industry.

We are all only too familiar, Mr. President, with the economic damage undergone by the steel industry as a result of unfair foreign trade practices. We are also familiar with the problems this causes for our overall economy.

One particular area of the steel industry which has suffered damage from unfair foreign trade practices is the specialty steel industry, an industry which is critical to our national defense and national welfare. In this country, there are fewer than 30 firms engaged in specialty steel production. These firms are forced, by unfair foreign trade practices, to compete with some 40 foreign firms, each of which is unfairly subsidized by the government of their home country.

The domestic specialty steel industry simply cannot compete with government-owned and government-subsidized producers. I have been, and I remain, a firm believer in the positive aspects of free trade. Even more importantly, however, I am a devoted believer in fair trade. Unfortunately, fair trade is not to be found in the distribution of specialty steel.

Today, I would like to share with my colleagues a paper prepared by two distinguished scholars at the University of Montevallo in my home State of Alabama, Dallas R. Blevens and Nathan E. McMinn. This paper, entitled "Specialty Steel: A Description of an Industry," demonstrates the material damage caused to domestic producers of specialty steel by this foreign "dumping," and argues that for these producers to survive our Government must fully enforce American trade laws and successfully encourage foreign governments to end their unfair subsidies. I believe this article makes some excellent points, and I commend it to all of you.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the paper be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the paper was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SPECIALTY STEEL: A DESCRIPTION OF AN INDUSTRY

(By Dallas R. Blevins)

I. INTRODUCTION

World War II visited its destruction upon the productive capacity of every major industrialized nation of the world, save one. Not only did the industrial base of the United States survive the war intact: it grew. At that point, this nation could easily have placed the rest of the world in economic bondage. Characteristically, it did not.

Post World War II, the United States reached out to friend and former foe alike in an effort to help them rebuild. Disproportionate trade rules were encouraged during this period. The good neighbor policy of the United States paid rich dividends to foreign economies. Within ten years, the smoke from the world's factories was no longer from its burning rubble, the smoke was now the signal of a new prosperity.

Unfortunately, the once useful one-sided trade practices had institutionalized. During the mid-1940's foreign companies had been provided with sundry protections. In spite of the lack of economic justification, they were continued beyond the mid-1950's. By the mid-1960's the artificial barriers were causing the United States to suffer a sustained unfavorable balance of trade. By the mid-1970's the damage caused by unfair trade practices began threatening the continued existence of several basic industries. Autos, textiles and steel are notable among these.

Unfair foreign trade practices have also caused severe damage to at least one "high tech" industry: specialty steel. This paper reviews the industry and the damage caused by unfair trade practices.

Section II defines the specialty steel industry. It contrasts specialty steel production with carbon steel production processes and outlines the importance of the specialty steel industry to the national defense and the national welfare. Section III provides a comparison of the competition domestic specialty steel producers theoretically face with that competition which they actually face. Section IV describes the nature of "dumping" practiced by foreign producers. It discloses the subsidization that allows foreign producers to continue trade practices which are, otherwise, not economically justifiable. Finally, it demonstrates the material damage caused to domestic producers. Section V concludes.

II. THE INDUSTRY

This section: (1) defines the output which is classified as specialty steel, (2) identifies the domestic producers of these products, (3) contrasts specialty steel production with carbon steel production and (4) outlines the importance of the industry to the national defense and the national welfare.

Products

The Tariff schedules of the United States annotated (TSUSA) law define specialty steel as an alloy steel containing less than one percent carbon and greater than 11.5 percent chromium by weight. The American Iron and Steel Institute (AISI) lowers the percentage of chromium to ten percent in its definition. The discrepancy affects only one standard grade of stainless steel: grade 409, which is used in automobile catalytic converters. There are four domestic producers of grade 409 (5 p.Cl; 16 p.A6).

There are six general categories of specialty steel mill products: (1) stainless plate, (2) stainless sheet, (3) stainless strip, (4) stainless bar, (5) stainless rod and (6) alloy tool steel. The first three of these are flat rolled from slabs. Bars and rods are groove rolled from billets, while tool steel is specially processed. Once again the trade law definitions differ from those provided by the AISI. The TSUSA definitions appear to be the more comprehensive.

Plate.—Stainless steel plate has the largest dimensions of the three flat rolled products. The AISI defines plate as product with thickness greater than or equal to .1875 inches and width greater than six inches (5 p.C3). The TSUSA definition is the same in thickness, but requires a width greater than 12 inches (18 p.A7).

Sheet.—Stainless steel sheet has intermediate dimensionality. The AISI defines sheet as product with thickness equal to or less than .1874 inches and width greater than or equal to 24 inches (5 p.C2). The TSUSA definition requires a thickness less than .1875 inches and a width greater than 12 inches (18 p.A6).

Strip.—Stainless steel strip is the smallest of the flat rolled products. The AISI defines strip as output with thickness less than or equal to .1874 inches and width less than or equal to 23 15/16 inches (5 p.C3). The TSUSA definition requires a thickness less than .1875 inches and a width less than or equal to 12 inches (18 p.A6).

Bar.—Stainless steel bar is groove rolled into solid section shapes. Common cross sectional shapes are: (1) triangles, (2) squares, (3) rectangles, (4) hexagons, (5) octagons, (6) circles and (7) ovals (5 p.C4; 18 p.A7).

Rod.—Stainless steel rod is a special subset of stainless steel bar. The TSUSA defines rod as product with a circular cross section having a diameter greater than .2 inches but less than .74 inches (18 p.A8).

Tool steel.—Stainless tool steel is a class of product, rather than a description of a specific output. Tool steels are produced in special heats, each designed to meet performance specifications along three axes: (1) hot-hardness, (2) wear resistance and (3) toughness. Hot-hardness is the ability to resist softening at high temperatures. Wear resistance is the ability to resist changing shape is use. Toughness is the ability to resist the loss of strength in use (18 pp.A8–9).

Producers

About 29 domestic firms produce specialty steels: (1) 11 produce stainless steels only, (2) 8 produce tool steels only and (3) 10 produce both. Six of the 29 also produce carbon steels. Most of the specialty steel producers concentrate in relatively few product lines (18 p.A14).

Process

Basic carbon steelmaking requires three ingredients: (1) iron ore, (2) limestone and (3) coal. The iron ore is reduced to pellets or sinter. The limestone is purified into lime. Coal is converted into coke. The three ingredients are mixed in a blast furnace. The pellets or sinter is melted into iron, the lime washes away the impurities as slag with the coke fueling the process. The result is molten iron.

The molten iron is then mixed with scrap, lime and oxygen in one of three classes of furnace: (1) open hearth, (2) basic oxygen or (3) electric. The result is molten steel.

The molten steel is released from the furnace in a stream (continuous casting) or in individual block (conventional ingot teeming). Further processing takes one of three basic forms: (1) slabs, (2) billets or (3) blooms. Slabs have a rectangular cross section and are flat rolled into: (1) plate, (2) sheet or (3) strip. Billets have a square cross section and are groove rolled into: (1) bars or (2) rods. Blooms have a square cross section and are larger than are billets. Blooms are groove rolled into: (1) beans, (2) rods or (3) structural shapes (14).

Specialty steelmaking, in contrast, starts with the combination of stainless scrap and alloying elements, using electric furnaces and other high-technology processes. Argon oxygen decarbonization vessels or vacuum oxygen decarbonization vessels are used to add alloying elements such as chromium, nickel and molybdenum (15).

Thus, specialty steels and tool steels require multiple processing by large amounts of capital equipment possessing state of the art technology.

Importance

Although specialty steels and tool steels represent less than two precent of domestic steel output, they are critical to the national defense and to the national welfare (12 p. 26; 20 p.77). Many of these products have one domestic producer (4).

Stainless steel plate is used in the production of industrial equipment. Fifteen firms are engaged in the production of stainless steel plate (5 pp.C3-4).

Stainless steel sheet is used in the production of airplanes, submarines, missiles, food processing equipment, storage tanks and hospital equipment. There are some seven producers of stainless steel sheet (5 p.C2).

Stainless steel strip is used in automobile, appliance and industrial equipment production. Eight firms make stainless steel strip (5 pp.C2-3).

Stainless steel bar and rod are used in hydraulic fittings, valves, airframes, jet engines, and medical and dental instruments. There are eight producers of stainless steel bar and rod (5 p.C4).

Tool steels are produced for a wide variety of military and commercial users. There are seven major categories of such steels: (1) high speed tool steels, (2) hot work tool steels, (3) cold work tool steels, (4) shock resisting tool steels, (5) mold steels, (6) special purpose tool steels and (7) water hardening tool steels. Tool steels are produced in the form of plates, sheets, strips, rod and bars. Ten firms produce tool steels (5 p.C5).

III. THE COMPETITION

There are fewer than 30 domestic firms engaged in specialty steel production. When individual classes of production are considered the number of competitors drops further: (1) plate—15, (2) Sheet—7, (3) Strip—8, (4) bar and rod—8 and (5) tool—10. The number of competitors drops further when individual products are considered. Often there is but one producer for a given output (4).

Domestic producers face oligopolistic competition. Each must be very cost and price conscious. A lack of cost containment could cause the firm to deliver a lower than acceptable return to the common stockholders. A unilateral price increase may not be followed by the competition, in which case the firm would lose a share of the market, and the stockholders would suffer. A unilateral price decrease would be followed by the competition, so the share of the market would remain constant while the average selling price declined, causing the common stockholder to suffer. A bilateral or multilateral price change is against the law.

Thus, the specialty steel producers are in a highly competitive environment. This statement is true, even before international competition is introduced. Foreign firms add dozens of additional competitors to the U.S. market.

In fact, foreign competition is structurally unfavorable to domestic producers. Although the per unit costs borne by domestic producers remain highly competitive with those borne by foreign producers (19 pp.216-19), domestic producers face relatively higher cash outflow for labor and pollution control devices than do their foreign competitors (3 pp.1-11; 8 pp.216-219). This asymmetry provides short run difficulties for domestic producers, but is not insurmountable (10 pp.197-202).

The problem which faces the domestic industry with what may well be its demise is the subsidization of foreign industry. Our steelmakers are competing against foreign countries, not foreign producers.

IV. THE DAMAGE

This section defines dumping, traces the subsidization which allows it to continue and annotates the material injury done to the domestic producers.

Dumping

The term "dumping" is used to describe either of two activities: (1) pricing below the average total cost of production or (2) pricing in the United States below the price charged in the "home country (1 p.3).

Pricing Below Cost.—Pricing decisions are made within the limits of a ceiling and floor. The price ceiling is the lower of: (1) what the market will bear or (2) what the law will allow. Since the law places no maximum on steel prices, market forces determine the ceiling on the prices of the various steel products. The price floor, theoretically, has two levels. The higher of the two is that price which is equal to the average total cost of production. This includes the cost of manufacture, operating expenses, interest, taxes and a return to the stockholders. In the long run, all these costs must be borne, so the price must be adequate to cover them all. In the short run, the price must be adequate to cover only cash outflows, under the proviso that later price increases will cover that portion of the full cost not borne during the short term.

Discriminatory Pricing.—Dropping prices in the United States below those charged in other nations may seem to be favorable. Consumers are pleased. An illustration demonstrates the apparent benefits.

Assume a foreign producer has capacity to manufacture 150 units. Labor cost is fixed at $200. All other costs are variable at $2 a unit. Demand in the foreign producer's own country is 50 units at a price of $4 a unit. One hundred can be sold in the United States at $3 each (7 p.21).

Analysis: Local sales only

Local sales $4(50)	$200
Variable costs $2(50)	100
Contribution margin	100
Fixed costs	200
Operating income	−100

Analysis: With dumping

Local sales $4(50)	$200
Sales in U.S. $3(100)	300
Total sales	500
Variable costs $2(150)	300
Contribution margin	200
Operating income	0

This illustration makes dumping appear to be favorable. Foreign markets are paying the same in either case, while the U.S. market gets a price break. The reason such activity is illegal is that it represents, on an international scale, precisely the national activity that gave rise to the Sherman Act of 1890. Underpricing in one area can drive out competition: allowing the survivor a monopoly. If competition is eliminated or reduced, no one wins but the survivor.

Subsidization

Unaided foreign producers who consistently price their product below full cost would not survive. Yet, foreign governments can and do continue to subsidize economically unprofitable producers, allowing them to survive long after private firms would be bankrupt. Further, the nature of specialty steel production is such that no single producer would have the power to drive out competition with differential pricing. The reason domestic specialty steel producers are at risk is the subsidization provided by foreign governments.

Sudsidies take a vast array of forms, but in each case the host country is placing itself in direct competition with U.S. specialty steel producers.

As an example of the magnitude of the problem, a partial listing of subsidized firms and their host countries has been prepared for both carbon steel and specialty steel production.

Belgium subsidizes seven firms. France subsidizes four. West German subsidizes seven. Italy subsidizes five. Luxembourg subsidizes two. The Netherlands subsidizes one. The United Kingdom subsidizes one. Brazil subsidizes four. South Africa subsidizes two. Spain subsidizes six (1 pp. 9-16).

Material injury

That such unfair competition is harmful to domestic producers is obvious. None-theless, a listing of some of the evidence serves to point out the seriousness of the threat.

Specialty steel is an efficient industry. In spite of this, the survival of domestic producers is at risk (9). Unfair trade practices have resulted from dumping, subsidization and discriminatory pricing. The impact of this has been an increase in import penetration (8 pp. 216-19). An example of the magnitude of the problem can be seen in the August 1982 import figures. That month foreign producers' share of domestic stainless steel bar sales was 42 percent. It was 54.1 percent for stainless steel rod and 56.4 percent for tool steels (7 p. 5). This has brought in its wake: (1) a reduction of domestic shipments, (2) a reduction of domestic production, (3) a reduction of domestic employment and (4) a reduction in the profitability of domestic producers.

Domestic Shipments.—Total tonnage of domestic specialty steel shipped during the calendar year 1982 was the lowest for a quarter-century (17 p. 2).

Domestic Production.—Domestic specialty steel production may be viewed in terms of both total volume of output and percentage of capacity. The industry is in a decline from either perspective (11 pp. 108-114; 16 pp. 421-37). The last half of 1982, volume of output was the lowest of any similar period since the close of World War II. The percentage of specialty steel capacity utilized during 1982 was the lowest since 1938 (17 p. 2.).

Domestic Employment.—Employment in the domestic stainless steel industry has also been in decline. This is true, both in terms of the numbers of workers and the total hours expended. The number of persons involved in specialty steel fell by over 20 percent during the four year period 1979-1982. At the same time, total hours spent producing specialty steels declined by over 60 percent (5 tables 8, 9). The cost of this in terms of human suffering is staggering.

Profitability.—Domestic specialty steel producers continue to suffer declines in profitability. This has been true, both in absolute and in relative terms (2 pp. 30-33). The 1979-1982 period serves to illustrate. The weighted ratio of net operating profit to net sales for all specialty steel producers declined from 12.2 percent to −1.9 percent over the period (5 table 10).

Negative operating profit margins act as an absolute barrier to the capital markets. Positive, but relatively low, operating profit margins also hinder investment. If this continues for an extended period the specialty steel industry will be denied the funding necessary to remain a state-of-the-art competitor. The world will be denied its technological leadership and its high quality output.

V. CONCLUSION

This paper addresses the issue of foreign competition in the specialty steel industry. After defining the industry, the paper argues that free trade would provide the optimal allocation of resources and the maximum output, worldwide. Unfortunately, free trade does not exist in the distribution of specialty steel. The subsidization of foreign dumping has placed a heavy burden on domestic producers. The effect is that U.S. specialty steel producers are in direct competition with foreign governments, not foreign producers.

Domestic producers are materially injured as a result. For them to survive in our free enterprise system, our government must: (1) rigorously enforce U.S. trade laws and (2) successfully encourage foreign governments to put an end to subsidization. Such action would reduce uneconomic excess world capacity and the higher prices that consumers ultimately must bear as a result of it.

ENTERPRISE ZONE ACT, S. 2914

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I am pleased to be a cosponsor of S. 2914, the Enterprise Zone Act of 1984, introduced today.

In the past, efforts to bring about neighborhood renewal have been supported by Government loans and grants for rehabilitation of community facilities construction.

Billions of dollars have been spent producing a mixed record.

Enterprise zone concept has been proven by many States to be a better approach to reviving economically depressed areas.

By offering incentives to businesses to locate or expand their operations in economically distressed areas, this proposal can do a better job without Government grants or loans and without the burden of governmental interference or redtape.

This bill provides an array of Federal tax incentives, regulatory relief, and expedited procedures for establishing foreign trade zones.

Combined with State and local government contributions to aid zone development, this legislation will encourage the formation of new business and new real jobs in areas that would otherwise continue to be depressed.

At least 14 States have enacted enterprise zone laws, including my own Commonwealth of Virginia.

Now is the time to enact Federal legislation.

I urge my colleagues to join with Senators DOLE and BOSCHWITZ to enact this legislation before Congress adjourns this year.

SENATOR LEAHY: A LEADER IN FARMLAND PROTECTION

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. President, on July 5, the Department of Agriculture issued regulations implementing the provisions of the Farmland Protection Policy Act. This legislation, enacted as part of the 1981 farm bill, was initiated by my colleague on the Agriculture Committee, Senator PATRICK J. LEAHY.

Although some longtime proponents of a Federal farmland protection policy are likely to find the regulations deficient in some respects, there is no doubt that the Department's action is an important first step toward eliminating the unnecessary conversion of farmland to nonagricultural uses by the Federal Government.

I believe it is largely due to Senator LEAHY's persistence and skilled leadership that the farmland protection legislation was enacted as part of the 1981 farm bill and the administration has, at least, issued the regulations needed to implement it.

The Farmland Protection Policy Act requires the Department of Agriculture and other Federal agencies to take appropriate steps to ensure that actions by the Federal Government do not cause U.S. farmland to be irreversibly converted to nonagricultural uses when it is not necessary in the national interest.

Specifically, the act requires the Department of Agriculture, in cooperation with other Federal agencies, to develop procedures for identifying the effects Federal programs have on converting farmland to nonagricultural uses, and to assist all units of the Federal Government in developing plans for making their programs and actions as consistent as possible with the goal of preserving our Nation's farmland.

The act also provides an informational and educational role for the Department of Agriculture, to support the efforts of State and local entities in developing farmland protection programs.

During the past several years, public concern has increased about the loss of our Nation's greatest natural resource—our productive farmland. By some estimates, each year at least 1 million acres of productive farmland are permanently removed from agricultural production and converted to nonagricultural uses.

The people of this Nation have enjoyed the blessings of an abundant agriculture for so long that this abundance is often taken for granted. Our country is almost unique in the world for not having suffered, within recent memory, through severe food shortages. Americans, unlike people in much of the rest of the world, do not know the fear of being unable to find food at any price.

It is due to our rich natural resources and the dedication of American farmers and their skillful working of our natural bounty that we enjoy this unprecedented food security. However, we may be robbing future generations of the same well-being if we continue to pave over or build on prime farmland—forever eliminating its food production capability.

During a series of field hearings, held a year ago by the Agriculture Subcommittee on Soil and Water Conservation, Forestry, and Environment, members of the subcommittee heard many expressions of concern about the conversion of farmland to nonagricultural uses. In particular, it was pointed out that the Federal Government was, in some instances, undermining State and local efforts to preserve valuable farmland by converting highly productive land to uses such as highways and flood control projects without any consideration to the effects on agricultural productivity.

Of course, Federal projects serve essential purposes. However, greater consideration to project design and location will avoid unnecessary farmland conversion.

About 90 Federal programs, administered by 12 different agencies, have been identified as potentially contributing to farmland conversion. Without the assistance of the Department of Agriculture, these agencies would be poorly equipped to identify and assess alternatives that would maximize conformity with State and local farmland protection policies and prevent unnecessary conversion of farmland.

The Farmland Protection Policy Act, sponsored by Senator LEAHY, will greatly reduce the unnecessary conversion of farmland by Federal agencies while having no negative effect on the Federal budget. Senator LEAHY is to be commended for his diligent leadership in developing a responsible policy that will protect our most valuable natural resource for generations to come.

COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS BY WILLIAM P. PENDLEY

Mr. DENTON. Mr. President, I would like to insert in the RECORD a commencement address delivered by Mr. William P. Pendley to Northeast Alabama State Junior College in Rainsville, AL, on May 28. Mr. Pendley is a consultant to the Department of the Navy and the Former Deputy Assistant Secretary for Energy and Minerals at the Interior Department. While this commencement speech has just come to my attention, I believe that the message is timeless.

I ask unanimous consent that following my remarks Mr. Pendley's commencement address be included in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the remarks were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

OF FREEDOM, OF LIBERTY, OF OPPORTUNITY (COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS OF WILLIAM P. PENDLEY)

I feel as if I have come home to the South. My father, son of a railroad man, was born and raised in Decatur, Arkansas. My mother, daughter of a coal miner, spent her youth in Harlan County, Kentucky. In the midst of the Depression they traveled separate roads west to Wyoming, where they met, married and raised my brother and me at the foot of the Rocky Mountains. So in a way I have come home. For while our lives are separated by a thousand miles, the values you and I share are the same. Both the West and the South are fiercely independent, proud of our past and our heritage. We celebrate and revel in a life style that is unique. Our rural communities and small towns, our farms and ranches, add a richness to our lives that few ever experience and we glory in that—that emphasis on family and friendship, on religious faith and traditional values. How is it that the song goes: "I was country, when country wasn't cool".

It is 1984. For nearly four decades, the world has anticipated this year with some dread and fear because of a novel written in 1948 by an English author who went by the name George Orwell. His was a frightful vision. And as we drew closer to that year, we all asked where would Orwell be right, where would he be wrong?

For much of the world, Orwell was right. Tyranny controls the lives of hundreds of millions of men, women and children. And in those lands, it is not just freedom that is a rarity—a nonexistent dream—but it is opportunity as well.

Yet for us—for America—Orwell could not have been more wrong. We live today in an era of unprecedented freedom, liberty and rare opportunity. We are, as a nation, the envy of the world. People everywhere dream of America. Tonight as we sit here, celebrating with our family, friends and loved ones, as we anticipate our futures, millions around the world dream of America—of our freedom, liberty and opportunity—and long desperately, pray fervently to be among us.

Men and women, clutching their families, still race through the barbed wire, bamboo and barricades that separate the East from the West in hopes of coming here—to America. Families still huddle in the backs of trucks or set themselves to sea in flimsy boats to come here—to America—for freedom, for liberty, for opportunity.

Nine years ago, a Vietnamese family was pulled from the South China sea, half dead, their fortune gone, used to pay for the boat that bore them, half starved, their food consumed or lost overboard, their water supply dangerously low, their vessel on the verge of collapse. Rescued only hours before the sea claimed them they came to America speaking no English, with nothing but the clothes they wore—and a dream—a dream that their children would be a part of the American dream of which they had heard. Last year, the eldest child—nine when her parents fled their homeland—sat in an audience such as this, wearing the cap and gown you wear—to receive a diploma, to graduate from high school—as her class valedictorian. Today, she studies computer technology at university. For her, and for her family, the dream is reality.

It is not the only such story. It has been repeated generation after generation, after generation. Everyone among us could tell similar stories, less dramatic, perhaps, but just as real, just as illustrative of the greatness of this land of ours.

Where else but in America could the son of a railroad man and the daughter of a coal miner—together representing but ten years of schooling come west in the midst of the depression and through hard work and sacrifice and drive and desire and commitment make a life for their children that would allow one to go east to work in government, to serve a nation at a critical time in its history, to be allowed years later to speak about the dream. That is my life and I'm proud of it, not because of what it says about me, but because of what it says about my parents and what it says about our country.

Here you can say anything, think anything, be anything, go anywhere, set any goal and make it happen. In America, as in nowhere else in the world, you are the master of your destiny.

This is America in 1984. This is the land which you enter tonight as you leave us.

All of us tonight who look at you see ourselves years ago when we sat in the seats which you occupy or wished we had. It was not all that long ago. We have not forgotten because of the dreams we had then—the dreams that are with us today.

Some of those dreams are gone, forgotten, some achieved, some foregone, some yet unattained, some replaced by yet other dreams—not any more or less realistic but simply changed as our lives have changed.

And we look to you remembering ourselves when we were you and remember those dreams, knowing that within you grow such hopes and aspirations. Yet it is more. For the greatest dream of every generation is that it will leave the world a better world than the one it found and while every generation hopes it for itself and its generation, it knows that the next generation surely shall. Every father and mother who have held an infant, have wished for that child a better world, and falling short, as we often do, know in their hearts that that child will succeed where they had failed.

So you hold not just our memories but our hopes for the future of the world. So what of that future and what of the role that you will play in it—and what can we say to you that will serve if not as a guide, if not as an inspiration, then at least a positive reflection on the fact that the dream is real, that it can be yours.

There's the story of the man—a pillar of his community, a man giving of his time and his effort, committed to his town and its people. No one could be counted on more than he. No one gave more of himself and yet asked less. It was he the community admitted that had made the town, had given it its spirit.

Yet although he was a builder, a contractor, he had never made for himself the dream home that he had always wanted. So the community leaders, coming upon a windfall in the city, then decided to reward this man to whom they were so indebted. They decided to reward him with the home that he always wanted.

They located the choicest piece of real estate in the city and they asked him to build on that land a showpiece, a home for someone soon to come. Spare no expense they said, build it as if for yourself, they said. Make it your finest work.

At first the builder did as he had been asked. He gave the house the time that it demanded. He used only the best materials, assured himself of only the finest craftsmen in the use of those materials. But in time, as the wearisomeness of day-to-day business wore upon him, he began to cut corners, he began to skimp. At first there wasn't really much difference, he assured himself, between the top grades of materials and second best, so there was little harm done. But with each such decision it became easier to skimp, easier to chose inferior products and approve poorer workmanship.

In the end, he realized that the house that he had built was not one of which he was particularly proud. He knew he hadn't done his finest work. Imagine his surprise when the city, with pride and much fanfare presented him with that house as his home.

As we pass through life, we find ourselves in much the same position as that builder, faced each day with decisions, with choices that will determine the future. And surely as the decisions made by the builder changed the shape, the nature and the quality of the structure that he built, so the decisions you make will alter and affect your life. And like the builder, too often you are unaware that the home you are building for the future is to be your home—for the rest of your life.

No one will inhabit it but you. No one will know of what it is built or how it is crafted or how steady is its construction but you. And believe me you will know. Every day of your life, you will know.

You are building a home for yourself. With this day you have excavated the basement, laid the cinder blocks that form the foundation and framed it in with studs. You can see it take shape, but so much remains to be done, so much work lies ahead.

You can make that house a beautiful thing. You can do it. You all have it in you to make it happen, to dream dreams and make them real, to have hopes and aspirations and act upon them. You can do it if you try.

What have you got to lose? Is it fear of failure that holds you back? Believe me, failure is a faint demon compared to the terror of opportunity foregone, of projects never undertaken or of dreams never pursued. Talk about living in a house of your own building, nothing is worse than a house filled with "what if's". How is it the poem goes: "Of the saddest words written by pen. The saddest are these, it might have been."

You, believing in you, in the sanctity, the godliness, the beauty, the brilliance, can make it happen. Believe, believe in yourself, and believing reach inside yourself for what you would be and what you would do and drive for that objective.

Where then do you go? Anywhere you want!

There are still frontiers. The most exciting times for people, for the South, for the nation, for the world, lie ahead of us. So much remains to be done, so much opportunity for doing it is provided us Americans. Who could have imagined the progress science has made in just the last few years. The space shuttle alone, with hundreds of experiments conducted in the most unique laboratory in the world's history, circling miles above the earth's surface, permitted truly gigantic leaps for mankind.

A few short years ago, we thought the earth's surface was a hard, cooled mass of limited movement. Within the past decade, we discovered that that surface is, in fact, a series of plates in which movement is constant, those plates crushing up against one another or pulling apart. Amazingly, we made these discoveries on the ocean floor, finding along those vasts rift zones, as they are called, a rich undersea life where mineral deposits are formed, where sea creatures, heretofore unknown, spring almost magically into existence. and flourish. Plans are now being made to determine if those rich new mineral deposits can be developed to meet America's national security needs for strategic and critical minerals. Impossible, some say, to take minerals from the ocean floor, miles from land, in conditions that make our journey to the moon look like a stroll in the park. But it can be done, and it will, by people like you, with imagination, and desire and commitment.

Just a few short years ago, when America first began to recover our precious energy resources from the ocean, experts felt that we could never drill in more than 600 feet of water. Today, America has offshore oil and gas platforms in 1000 feet of water and we expect that the"technological limit" is 6000 feet—for now.

The frontiers, the challenges, for you and your generation, for all of us who now celebrate with you are there. In this country, of freedom, of liberty and of opportunity, there is no limit on what you can do if you will.

We've spoken much today of opportunity, and we should. But there is another side to the American dream, the flip side of opportunity, and that is obligation. We who are the world's richest, most privileged people, so rich in spirit, in freedom, liberty, and opportunity, share an obligation to our fellow man to make his life richer too.

Recently, I had the opportunity to address a group whose program included the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner". We stood together, holding the song books in our hands, singing our national anthem. As we sang the last line, I saw something that I had never noticed before. For, following the words, "Oh say, does that Star-Spangled Banner yet wave, o'er the land of the free and the home of the brave" there is a question mark.

This country ends its national anthem with a question. On that long, cold night, as Francis Scott Key wrote those words, he must have wondered to himself, "How long America, how long?" And by his words, he has reached out over the generations and down through the ages to ask each one of us, how long America, how long?

Freedom demands a price. It demands a commitment to make it last. It is easily lost by those unwilling to pay that price. Today, on this day of all days, we must pay tribute to those brave men and women throughout our history who have paid the ultimate price so that this nation might live, that our freedom prevail and that tyranny be stopped. Throughout our history, our nation has called her young men and women to the defense of liberty, and thank God, they have never failed her. We can celebrate with you today. We have opportunity and freedom and liberty today, because of them, because of their service and sense of obligation to their country. We need honor that service, that sense, and the price that they willingly paid, by a commitment from each of us to the defense of liberty and freedom.

In Los Angeles, California, there stands a memorial to the holocaust, to that time when tyranny swept a continent and put to torture and death millions of Europeans. On one wall of that memorial is a picture of a survivor of the death camps reaching out with his hand to those who look upon him. Beneath that photograph is printed:

"Here is to the world that did not care—those that had eyes and would not see, those that had ears and would not hear, those that had mouths but would not speak."

Today, on this proud day for you, as we glory in your accomplishment and as we celebrate your bright future in this great, great land of freedom, of liberty and of opportunity; today, as we honor those who have served this nation with their blood, sweat, tears, and their lives, a nation reaches out to you and to all of us. Oh, let it never be said of any of us, that in defense of freedom, and liberty and opportunity, that we did not care; that we had eyes and would not see, ears and would not hear, mouths but would not speak.

Today, let all of us rejoice with you by rededicating ourselves to the principles, to the spirit that has made this the greatest nation on earth. Let us all go forth today, to make it a better world, to make all of our dreams a reality—to live a better life, more free, more peaceful, to leave the world a better place for those who follow you into the seats you occupy tonight.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Saunders, one of his secretaries.

ANNUAL REPORT ON NUCLEAR PROLIFERATION — MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT—PM 161

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

To the Congress of the United States:

I have reviewed the activities of United States Government departments and agencies during calendar year 1983 related to preventing nuclear proliferation, and I am pleased to submit my annual report on this subject pursuant to Section 601(a) of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Act of 1978 (Public Law 95-242).

The report concludes that U.S. nonproliferation initiatives during 1983 continued to contribute positively to the important goal of preventing the further spread of nuclear explosives.

As I have stated on a number of occasions, nuclear proliferation would pose a severe threat to international peace, regional and global stability, and the security interests of the United States and other countries. I continue to regard the prevention of the spread of nuclear explosives as a fundamental national security and foreign policy objective, and I remain firmly committed to the pursuit of policies designed to advance our nonproliferation goals.

RONALD REAGAN.

THE WHITE HOUSE, August 8, 1984.

William W. Hoover, of Maryland, to be an Assistant Secretary of Energy (Defense Programs).

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

The following bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first and second time by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated.

By Mr. DOLE (for Mr. BOSCHWITZ) (for himself, Mr. DOLE, Mr. SPECTER, Mr. CHAFEE, Mr. BRADLEY, Mr. D'AMATO, Mr. MOYNIHAN, Mr. ABDNOR, Mr. ANDREWS, Mr. BENTSEN, Mr. DANFORTH, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. DURENBERGER, Mr. EVANS, Mr. GARN, Mr. GORTON, Mr. HATCH, Mrs. HAWKINS, Mr. HEFLIN, Mr. HEINZ, Mr. HUMPHREY, Mr. KASTEN, Mr. LAXALT, Mr. MATTINGLY, Mr. MURKOWSKI, Mr. PERCY, Mr. PRESSLER, Mr. QUAYLE, Mr. ROTH, Mr. RUDMAN, Mr. SIMPSON, Mr. THURMOND, Mr. TOWER, Mr. TRIBLE, Mr. WALLOP, Mr. WARNER, and Mr. WILSON):

S. 2914. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to provide for the establishment of enterprise zones, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. BYRD (for himself, Mr. PELL, Mr. CHILES, and Mr. KENNEDY):

S. 2915. A bill to establish a Federal Merit Scholarship Program to promote student excellence and achievement and to recognize exceptionally able students who show promise of continued excellence; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

By Mr. ARMSTRONG:

S. 2916. A bill to designate certain additional national forest lands and national park lands in the State of Colorado as components of the National Wilderness Preservation System and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

By Mr. TSONGAS (for himself, Mr. CHILES and Mr. RANDOLPH):

S. 2917. A bill to confer citizenship posthumously on Cpl. Wladyslaw Staniszewski; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DECONCINI:

S. 2918. A bill to address the problems caused by the 1983 flood along the Colorado River Floodway; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

By Mr. HATCH:

S. 2919. A bill to authorize the Secretary of Education to make grants to strengthen the capacity of postsecondary institutions to respond to the continuing education needs of adults, to link postsecondary resources more closely to the preparation and performance of the American workforce, and to enhance Federal policies affecting the development of the Nation's human resources; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

By Mr. BURDICK:

S. 2920. A bill for the relief of Elizabeth Khakshouri, Paul Khakshouri, Nathan Khakshouri, and David Khakshouri; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. THURMOND, from the Committee on the Judiciary:

S. 2921. An original bill entitled the "Federal Forum Equity Act"; placed on the calendar.

By Mr. MOYNIHAN (for himself and Mr. RIEGLE):

S. 2922. A bill to establish an independent agency, governed by a bipartisan board, to administer the Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance Program under Title II of the Social Security Act, the Supplemental Security Income Program under title XVI of such act, and the medicare program under title XVIII of such act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. MOYNIHAN (for himself and Mr. HEINZ):

S. 2923. A bill to amend Title II of the Social Security Act to eliminate the 3-percent threshhold amount for cost-of-living adjustments; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. JEPSEN:

S. 2924. A bill to amend Title 5, United States Code, to require that any officer or employee of the Government convicted of a felony be removed from civil service; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

By Mr. STEVENS (for Mr. HELMS) (by request):

S. 2925. A bill to reduce the cost of and improve the Food Stamp Program, and for other purposes; read the first time.

By Mr. STEVENS (for Mr. HATCH) (for himself, Mr. DECONCINI and Mrs. HAWKINS):

S. 2926. A bill to amend the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act to revise the procedures for new drug applications, to amend Title 35, United States Code, to authorize the extension of the patents for certain regulated products, and for other purposes; placed on the calendar.

SUBMISSION OF CONCURRENT AND SENATE RESOLUTIONS

The following concurrent resolutions and Senate resolutions were read, and referred, or acted upon, as indicated:

By Mr. HUDDLESTON (for himself and Mr. FORD):

S. Con. Res. 134. Concurrent resolution congratulating Mary T. Meagher for her accomplishments in the XXIII Olympiad; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

STATEMENT ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. DOLE (for Mr. BOSCHWITZ), (for himself, Mr. DOLE, Mr. SPECTER, Mr. CHAFEE, Mr. BRADLEY, Mr. D'AMATO, Mr. MOYNIHAN, Mr. ABDNOR, Mr. ANDREWS, Mr. BENTSEN, Mr. DANFORTH, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. DURENBERGER, Mr. EVANS, Mr. GARN, Mr. GORTON, Mr. HATCH, Mrs. HAWKINS, Mr. HEFLIN, Mr. HEINZ, Mr. HUMPHREY, Mr.

S. 2916. A bill to designate certain additional national forest lands and national park lands in the State of Colorado as components of the National Wilderness Preservation System, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

COLORADO WILDERNESS ACT

● Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, Gifford Pinchot was America's first forester and one of the driving inspirations behind the conservation movement in this country. Writing in 1910, he outlined the objectives of conservation in these now celebrated words:

> Conservation means the wise use of the earth and its resources for the lasting good of man. Conservation is the foresighted utilization, preservation, and/or renewal of forests, waters, lands and minerals for the greatest good of the greatest number for the longest time.

More than 70 years later, these words still ring true. And yet, few people today seem to speak about natural resources with such moderation and compelling good sense. Our national public discussion of natural resource issues has too often become strangely and bitterly divided between the extreme poles of development and preservation, and this country cannot be well served by any policy produced from a battle between two such extremes.

The Nation is moving through an extraordinarily important era of decision in which we will have to balance the need for resource development against the need to preserve the priceless natural and scenic values that still exist. For Colorado—with its large undeveloped energy and water potential, its rapidly growing economy and industries, and its unique natural splendors—this debate has special significance. The time has definitely come, in my opinion, for a return to the first principles of conservation and a new, moderate consensus approach to the management of the public lands. A good start would be with the words of Pinchot. "Conservation," he said, "means the greatest good to the greatest number for the longest time." He added that it "demands the application of common sense to the common problems for the common good."

This was the moderate and reasonable spirit that guided Coloradans in 1980, when we got together and wrote a very sensible wilderness bill. That process began in controversy and covered a long list of fundamental issues. But in the end, we Coloradans agreed on a bill that was well balanced, and one that was good for our State and good for the Nation. At the same time, I believe we laid the foundation for a lasting consensus on how to approach these critical natural resource issues. In Colorado, Mr. President, we are demonstrating how to tackle these tough issues in practical, commonsense ways.

It is in this spirit and with this intention, Mr. President, that I am today introducing the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1984. Before going into the details of this legislation, I would like to put it in perspective by reviewing the nature of public lands in the State of Colorado and the history of wilderness legislation in our State.

The Federal Government owns outright and actively manages 36 percent of the State of Colorado—an area larger than 13 individual States. The largest Federal landholders are the Forest Service, with 14.4 million acres, and the Bureau of Land Management, with 8.3 million acres, Colorado has been richly blessed with an abundance of wild lands. Our first wilderness area was created in 1931, when the Mount Zirkel/Dome Peak Primitive Area was designated in the Routt National Forest, and 10 more primitive areas were set aside by 1939. Five new wildernesses were designated with the passage in 1964 of the first national wilderness legislation, and public land agencies began a long and comprehensive inventory to identify and protect as wilderness the most spectacular and wild lands in the country. The Wilderness Act of 1964 created the National Wilderness Preservation System and described potential wilderness as areas that were untrammeled by man and shaped largely by the forces of nature, and which offered exceptional prospects for solitude and primitive recreation.

In the 20 years since the Wilderness Act was passed, Colorado's National Forest lands have been the subject of intense study for their wilderness character. In our State alone, the Forest Service has studied 6.15 million acres during its roadless area review evaluations, popularly known as RARE I and RARE II, while the National Park Service and the Bureau of Land Management have been conducting their own reviews.

In the wake of these studies and the litigation that followed, Colorado took the lead in addressing its wilderness concerns when the Colorado congressional delegation forged an agreement in 1980 that added 12 Colorado Forest Service areas and 1.4 million acres to the National Wilderness Preservation System. After the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1980 became law, the Forest Service was left to study 18 areas concurrently, for a total of approximately 675,000 acres. The Forest Service has now completed, or is nearing completion of, those studies and the Bureau of Land Management has completed its wilderness study of the Powderhorn Primitive Area.

Two years ago, I introduced the Colorado Wilderness bill of 1982 to complete the wilderness system in Colorado's national parks. At that time, I called for new wilderness legislation to finish the work we started on Forest Service lands in 1980. I felt then as I feel now that we should lose no time in making these wilderness decisions, once the careful review of the Forest Service is completed.

The Forest Service's review includes the preparation of a draft environmental impact statement on a land and management resource plan for each of the national forests in Colorado. The management plans include analysis of the wilderness study areas and discussion of management plans for other areas within the national forest. The draft EIS is then circulated for public comment through the mail, by public meetings, notices in the press, and other outlets. The hundred of comments received from private citizens, local and State agencies, and various organizations are then reviewed and considered in the development of the final EIS for the management plan.

In my view, this is an important part of the process and we should not short circuit the public comment. For example, in the draft EIS on the land and resource management plan for the Pike and San Isabel National Forests, the Buffalo Peaks wilderness study area was not recommended for wilderness designation because of many conflicting uses and needs throughout the area. However, strong public comment and support convinced the Forest Service to revise the plan and develop a recommendation that will include a 36,060-acre wilderness designation from within the 56,900 study area. Other examples of changes in Forest Service plans, as the review moved from draft to final, include numerous boundary changes in the recommended Sangre de Cristo area to accommodate a variety of needs and uses.

Final environmental impact statements have been prepared for most of the areas under study. In other cases, the substantial work on the final EIS has now been completed and the public comment thoroughly reviewed. This, in fact, is the situation for the Pike and San Isabel study, and recommendations from the Rocky Mountain Region of the Forest Service have been transmitted to the Forest Service in Washington.

Two remaining areas, the Wheeler Geologic and the Oh-Be-Joyful wilderness study areas were given special study status in the 1980 Colorado Wilderness Act. We do not have final EIS's from the Forest Service, although draft recommendations call for release for both areas. Final recommendations are expected shortly, and while I do not expect any significant changes from the Forest Service's previous recommendations, I have not addressed these two areas in my legislation and will consider amendments as we move through the legislative process.

With most of these reviews now completed, I believe the time has come for Coloradans to put our heads together and work out a new wilderness bill that will answer the remaining questions about most of our State's wild lands. As a strong supporter of the National Wilderness Preservation System, I am very pleased that we have reached this point, and I am including in my bill 12 Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management areas totaling 443,131 acres.

In addition, I think that it is also timely for Congress to consider certain other wilderness designations for National Park Service lands in Rocky Mountain National Park, Colorado National Monument and Dinosaur National Monument. It is true, of course that National Parks generally are already protected from several kinds of developments; but I think we should add this extra measure of protection from the heavy development pressures that even our National Parks will begin to feel. This is nowhere more true than in Colorado, where there is a large and rapidly growing population within a few hours drive of every park in the State. Accordingly, this legislation designates as wilderness 435,624 acres in these park preserves.

The total acreage in this measure is therefore 878,755 acres of new wilderness designation to add to the 2,651,278 acres already protected as wilderness; passage of this bill will increase Colorado's wilderness inventory by a third, to 3,530,033 acres. Also, this measure will release 266,358 acres to multiple use land management; that is, this acreage will be managed for a variety of beneficial public uses, such as recreation, resource development, and wildlife enhancement.

For my own part, I am flexible on nearly all the proposals in this legislation. I regard this measure as a point of departure rather than as a final product. The areas my bill includes and the boundaries it delineates are not set in concrete and I fully expect there will be a number of modifications as we hear from more Coloradans about the issues and as the Colorado congressional delegation meets to develop a consensus wilderness bill for our State. I for one am looking forward to such discussions and the give-and-take compromises that are sure to occur on all sides.

The central principle that must guide the final development and passage of this legislation, however, is that the public lands belong to all of the people. The members of the delegation have an overriding responsibility to provide the fullest information to all concerned, but particularly to those who are directly affected in our State, and to assure that all Coloradans have an opportunity to participate in this process. There has already been a great deal of public input in the preparation of these bills and, as far as I am concerned, the more the better. I don't think any member of the Colorado delegation will claim to be an expert on forest management, land use or the intricacies of wilderness legislation. We are eager to hear from as many interested parties as possible, in order to conform this legislation more closely to the land use ideal Pinchot has set for us.

In drafting this measure, I have conducted my own review, area by area and issue by issue, just as I did during consideration of the wilderness bills of 1980 and 1982. I have reviewed the letters and comments from Coloradans, the detailed comments of State and local officials, as well as the advice of numerous interest groups. In addition, I have studied the recommendations of the Federal agencies which themselves were the product of literally thousands of letters and comments by public officials, private citizens and public interest groups. This has been a very time-consuming process with painstaking detail work, but my aim is to produce a balanced bill and one that represents the interests of all Coloradans.

This is the same goal we aimed for during consideration of the Colorado wilderness bill of 1980. That year's RARE II legislation clarified grazing guidelines to eliminate grazing use questions that had plagued ranchers for years. The problem of access to privately owned inholdings within wilderness areas was addressed. Language was included in the bill calling for a reassessment of Forest Service practices for controlling fire, disease, and insect outbreaks in wilderness areas. The buffer zone questions were also addressed to give the Forest Service and nonwilderness users a degree of certainty in their land management planning. The legislation also included a nationally significant compromise on language to release nonwilderness lands to multiple use management. Finally, it designated several areas for further review, many of which are dealt with in the legislation I am introducing today.

Serious issues are sure to come up again in connection with this new wilderness legislation, though they are likely to be different from the issues we covered in the 1980 bill. In completing my review of issues involved this time around, I have identified one significant management policy issue that will need to be explored and another on which there is now general agreement, but which represents a change from our 1980 bill.

MANAGEMENT ISSUES—WATER RIGHTS

One of Colorado's scarce and most valuable natural resources is water. Over the years we, along with many other Western States, developed a system for allocating this scarce resource. Based on history, our Colorado constitution, State law and court decrees, water rights are owned by individual farmers and ranchers, by the citizens of our towns and cities, by industrial users, and by others who put this valuable resource to beneficial use. This water right system has served our State well and deserves vigilant protection by Colorado public officials and private citizens alike.

A central question has come up as to whether designating an area as wilderness creates a reserved water right in the Federal Government, and I would like to take a moment to outline this concern.

Near the turn of the century, the U.S. Supreme Court held in the case Winter against United States that, when the Federal Government set aside some of its land for a specific purpose, it reserved to itself enough water for that purpose. These are called reserved water rights and, as every Westerner knows, they have been the subject of considerable controversy for many years because they can displace other water rights established on the same stream. After many years of struggle, Colorado has finally been able to make some progress against the Federal Government's reserved rights claims by forcing them into court to quantify these otherwise vague rights. Now there is a very real threat that the reserved rights doctrine may be expanded to the detriment of our State's system of water law.

Some people actually think that congressional creation of a wilderness may create a new kind of Federal reserved water right in addition to the Federal reserved rights created in the Winter's case. This has serious implications for water rights established by Colorado's urban and rural communities, farmers, ranchers, and other landholders. In fact, this issue is currently in litigation before Federal District Court in Colorado in a suit brought by the Sierra Club against the Forest Service. As it has been explained to me, this suit charges that the Federal Government has refused and failed to claim reserved water rights in Colorado's existing wilderness areas, and that this is arbitrary and capricious, so as to violate the Administrative Procedure Act. Among the kinds of relief sought is a declaration that the Federal Government has reserved water rights that they need to administer for the benefit of wilderness areas. I am told it is not clear from the complaint whether these alleged reserved rights are meant to have a seniority date of the original reservation of the forest lands or from the creation of the wilderness area.

After a careful review of relevant materials that show congressional intent in creating Colorado's existing wildernesses and after taking legal counsel on the matter, I am convinced that Congress intended no reservation of any kind of water right through the creation of the wilderness system. Such a step would clearly do serious violence to the West's longstanding system of State water law and would throw into serious jeopardy the water rights of thousands of Coloradans.

For this reason, my bill contains straight-forward language that clearly states what I know to have been congressional intent in creating Colorado's wildeness areas; namely, that wilderness designation is meant to be neutral as to water rights, neither creating nor extinguishing any water right, nor interfering with its enjoyment. Because this issue has never been raised or addressed before, there is no boilerplate legal phrase to cover it; the language in my bill is therefore put forward to bring this issue to light and to initiate a discussion of it. I expect that, as a result of this discussion, it will be further refined; but I think it is essential that wilderness legislation contain a provision that protects our State's system of water law and the integrity of existing rights that are depended on by thousands of Coloradans.

RELEASE LANGUAGE

Included in my bill is the "release/sufficiency" language recently negotiated and adopted by the House and Senate in several State wilderness proposals this session—for examples see the Senate Reports. 98-461 and 98-465. Although section 107 of the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1980 contains express release language, the relevant House and Senate committees found in their review of other State wilderness bills that further clarification was necessary.

The controversy on "release"—that is, making lands available for nonwilderness management—began because of concern over the future management of areas that were reviewed during the 1977 RARE II process. The controversy was about whether RARE II study lands not designated for wilderness or wilderness study can again be considered for wilderness and, if so, how they will be managed in the meantime.

The "sufficiency" aspect of the question arose in 1979, when the State of California brought suit against the Secretary of Agriculture challenging the legal and factual sufficiency of the RARE II final environmental impact statement as it related to California's wilderness bill. This suit, which eventually succeeded, raised serious questions about what was a "sufficient" EIS and threatened to paralyze the RARE II process.

As one of the first States to establish wilderness in the RARE II process, Colorado in 1980 was in uncharted waters with our compromise release/sufficiency language. Since that time, a slightly different formula has been more commonly used and this new wilderness bill seems a good opportunity to standardize our release/sufficiency language. Therefore, this bill contains the same new provision used in the House-passed bill, H.R. 5426, making it clear that areas studied in the RARE II process will be considered for wilderness in the future planning process by the Forest Service, but meanwhile will be managed for multiple use. As the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee put it in Senate Report 98-465 at page 30:

> In short, this language means that the Forest Service cannot be forced by any individual or group through a lawsuit, administrative appeal, or otherwise to manage lands not recommended for wilderness designation in a "de facto" wilderness manner. Of course, the Forest Service can, if it determines it appropriate, manage lands in an undeveloped manner, just as it can, if through the land management planning process, it determines it appropriate, develop released lands. The emphasis here is that the Forest Service will be able to manage released lands in the manner determined appropriate through the land management planning process.

I have prepared a detailed section-by-section analysis, which explains boundary and other issues, including why some areas designated in other bills are excluded in my bill and, in turn, why other areas have been included.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the section-by-section analysis be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the section-by-section analysis was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS, COLORADO WILDERNESS ACT

Section 1. Defines the term "the Act" as the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1980.

Section 2. Amends section 102(a) of the Act of 1980 designating 11 additional areas as part of the National Wilderness Preservation System in Colorado. Starting with new subparagraph (21), the areas are as follows:

(21) Buffalo Peaks: 36,060 acres are recommended for wilderness designation. The Buffalo Peaks unit lies atop the Continental Divide between the Arkansas and South Platte drainages in the Pike and San Isabel National Forests, in Lake, Chaffee and Park Counties. It is located 80 miles southwest of Denver and 10 miles southeast of Leadville. Elevation ranges from 9,200 and 13,326 feet. The area was designated a wilderness study area in the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1980.

The character of this area is alpine peaks and ridges with lower wet meadows and willow areas north of the peaks. At lower elevations, there are large stands of Engelmann spruce and aspen; lodgepole pine, bristlecone pine, Ponderosa pine and Douglas fir are also common at still lower elevations. The Buffalo Peaks area contains significant habitats for deer, elk, and bighorn sheep.

The Armstrong proposal for this area is smaller than other proposals because it excludes the outer fringe of the study area which has a variety of important non-wilderness uses that recommend against designation of the entire area. For example, there are wildlife habitat improvement opportunities in the southeast portion, particularly for bighorn sheep; there is a need for local firewood collection in the same area; along the western edge, there are mineral claims as well as opportunities for big game habitat improvement. In the northern portion, there are motorized recreation and mining claims; there also mining claims on the eastern edge.

About 75% of the area is forested, with species ranging from pinon/juniper to Ponderosa pine and Douglas fir; the other 35% consists of rock, grassland and brushland. The diverse terrain ranges from narrow canyons containing waterfalls, to the pinon/juniper lands in the dry southern end of the area, to alpine tundra on the mountain's upper slopes. The area is a habitat for threatened and endangered species. The area is also an important habitat for mule deer and includes a winter range for bighorn sheep.

Other proposals would expand the area to the north of the studied area, into acreage that was previously released to multiple use management. Such an expansion would disrupt ongoing forest management and planning, such as sales of timber that are ready to occur. In addition, the Armstrong proposal, consistent with the House bill, excludes a private inholding on the western boundary of the area which was included in the Forest Service proposal.

(23) Piedra: 41,500 acres are recommended for wilderness designation. The Piedra unit is located in the San Juan National Forest in parts of Archuleta and Hinsdale Counties between the towns of Durango and Pagosa Springs. Elevation ranges from 6,800 to 10,500 feet. The area was studied in RARE I and II; in the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1980, it was designated a wilderness study area.

With the exception of a few open meadows and stream zones, the terrain is generally rolling and heavily wooded by a coniferous forest, which is an excellent habitat for elk, deer, black bear, turkey and other wildlife species. The Piedra River, the main drainage, cuts deeply through the surrounding forest to form a spectacular box canyon and a renowned fishery and river ecosystem that includes landlocked salmon and the endangered river otter. Due to its low elevation, healthy wildlife populations, gentle terrain and distinctive scenery, the Piedra unit has become very popular with primitive recreationists.

Other proposals recommend expansion on the eastern side of the study area into unstudied lands that were released by the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1980, where multiple use management plans have been developed. Such an expansion would disrupt plans to harvest over-mature timber that is vulnerable to being blown down by wind.

(24) Sangre de Cristo: 190,500 acres are recommended for wilderness designation. The unit lies along the mountains of the same name and divides the San Luis Valley and the Rio Grande drainage from the Arkansas River drainages. The total length of the area is about 70 miles, with widths ranging from 2 to 10 miles. It is in the San Isabel and Rio Grande National Forests, about 120 miles southwest of Denver. Elevation ranges from 8,200 to over 14,000 feet. The unit was designated as a wilderness study area by the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1980.

The area is nationally famous for its towering mountain peaks that rise 6,000 to 7,000 feet above the surrounding countryside. The range was formed by gigantic fault blocks of Precambrian granite which were thrust through the surrounding rocks and represent a geological formation unique in Colorado. The diversity and magnitude of the area's spectacular scenery have made it very popular for primitive recreation; it contains hundreds of miles of trails used by hikers, horsemen and other recreationists. Heavy snowfall results in abundant water supplies of high quality and has helped establish healthy populations of a wide variety of trout species together with black bear, cougar, elk, bighorn sheep, eagles, and peregrine falcons.

Other proposals expand the area beyond the studied acreage and into lands released to non-wilderness use by the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1980. The proposed unstudied expansion area to the north would include a portion of the Rainbow Trail, which is now used for motorized recreation. In the north middle section, all of the Cloverdale Basin was excluded from the Armstrong recommendation because it has had longstanding motorized recreational use. Also, the boundary in the Greenleaf area was moved westward to accommodate local timber and firewood needs.

The Armstrong boundary accommodates motorized recreation in the southeastern portion of the north middle section, as well as other recreation uses. In the south middle section, the Armstrong proposal excludes an area around Crestone and the South Colony Lakes because of traditional motorized recreation and a very popular rock climbing area. This area attracts such large tenting populations on weekends that the Forest Service believes installation of facilities may be necessary.

Other proposals would extend the boundary on the east side of the south middle section into areas where there is significant oil and gas potential and boundaries would be very difficult to manage. In the south section, other proposals would extend the wilderness area substantially to the east, outside the study area on to lands known to include existing oil and gas leases and a potential for oil and gas production. It also encompasses old mining areas and private inholdings. The proposed Armstrong boundary would avoid these problems and accommodate longstanding motorized recreation.

(25) Vasquez Peak: 12,800 acres are recommended for wilderness designation. The Vasquez Peak unit is located in the Arapahoe and Roosevelt National Forests in Grand County south of Fraser. Elevations range from 8,600 to 12,000 feet. Studied in RARE II, the area was designated a wilderness study area by the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1980.

The area lies along the Continental Divide in the Vasquez Mountains. Being just an hour's drive from Denver, the area is popular with primitive recreationists for hiking and across country skiing. Designation as wilderness is designed to help alleviate the pressures being felt in nearby wilderness areas from the rapidly growing communities along Colorado's Front Range of the Rocky Mountains. Wildlife species in the proposed area include elk, mule deer, black bear and the newly introduced mountain goat.

The Armstrong proposal, consistent with the House bill, makes a minor westerly adjustment to the eastern boundary to accommodate the needs of the Winter Park and Berthoud Ski Areas for avalanche control and ski lift construction. This boundary differs from the one recommended by the Forest Service.

(26) West Needles: 20,690 acres are recommended for wilderness designation. The West Needles unit is located in the San Juan National Forest and on Bureau of Land Management land in the San Juan Resource Area in San Juan and La Plata Counties, between Durango and Silverton. The area adjoins the western boundary of the existing Weminuche Wilderness Area; its elevation ranges from 8,000 to 13,100 feet. Studied in both RARE I and RARE II, the area was designated a wilderness study area in the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1980.

Bordering the west edge of the Animas River Gorge, this proposal contains several peaks above 13,000 feet and a number of beautiful lakes. Wildlife species are abundant in the area and include a population of mountain goats. Much of the area is accessible from U.S. Highway 550 and is popular for primitive recreation, especially hiking.

Other proposals would extend wilderness boundaries beyond the studied lands on the north and southwest edges of West Needles, creating topographically arbitrary boundaries that would be difficult to identify or administer. The northern extension would also foreclose the possibility of its use as a future utility corridor. In addition, based on the State's testimony in the House, the Armstrong proposal directs the Forest Service to pursue an exchange for the 640-acre State owned school land grant located within the proposed wilderness boundaries.

(27) Powderhorn/Cannibal Plateau: 56,911 acres are recommended for wilderness designation. The area is located in the Gunnison National Forest and on Bureau of Land Management land 25 miles southwest of Gunnison; elevation ranges from 8,800 to 12,644 feet. The Powderhorn unit contains approximately 43,311 acres and was designated by the Secretary of the Interior as a primitive area in 1973. Cannibal Plateau consists of approximately 13,600 acres and was studied in RARE II and the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1980 left it as a further planning area.

The Powderhorn unit, historically used by the Ute Indians as a summer hunting ground, is noted for its level alpine plateaus deeply dissected by glacial valleys and cirque basins. It encompasses a wide variety of distinctive wilderness attributes: alpine tundra, spruce and fir forests, Ponderosa pine, wide-open parks, sagebrush, grassland and several ponds or small lakes. The area contains outstanding opportunities for solitude, together with primitive and unconfined recreation.

The Cannibal Plateau unit includes a portion of the largest alpine tundra area in the nation outside Alaska. It terrain consists of level, open plateaus that break off into steep, rugged slopes and canyons on the fringes of the area. Due to the gentle nature of the plateaus, they offer outstanding opportunities for hunting, hiking and other forms of primitive recreation, with many locations affording sweeping, 360 degree views. Wildlife is abundant, and includes large populations of elk and mule deer. The bulk of the area is overlain with thick tertiary volcanic deposits and is rated low in mineral potential. Most of the area is devoid of timber due to its high elevation.

In this Armstrong bill, the western portion of the plateau is not designated wilderness, to enable continued snowmobiling on several loop trails. Unlike the House bill, this boundary recommendation does not include the area known as Mesa Seco. I saw no management advantage to drawing the southwestern boundary closer to the trail. I understand that there is some scientific interest in the Mesa Seco area; however, there is conflict between the scientific activies and the Forest Service's management prescription for the area and no requirement for a wilderness designation of that particular area. However, I look forward to further public comment on this point.

(28) Service Creek: 39,860 acres are recommended for wilderness designation. Lying in Routt County in the Routt National Forest, the Service Creek unit is located just a few miles southwest of Steamboat Springs; its elevation ranges from 7,000 to 10,700 feet. The area was studied in RARE II and left as a further area by the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1980.

This area of lower elevation is unique among the many other wilderness areas of higher elevation in the State. Due to their lower elevation, the drainages in the unit provide excellent wildlife habitat. There is a large resident elk herd, a significant population of mule deer and an unusually high concentration of black bear. The area is also popular for rock climbing, with a wide array of cliffs and rock towers at the headwaters of Service Creek.

Other proposals go beyond the study area and propose wilderness designation on acreages to the east and north of Service Creek which were released to multiple use management by the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1980. These proposals would disrupt multiple use planning by the Forest Service, under which timber sale contracts were let in the spring of 1984. In addition, the Forest Service has invested in timber studies of other released areas and programmed timber sales are under way in selected portions of the released area.

(29) Davis Peak addition to Mount Zirkel: 8,100 acres are recommended for wilderness designation. Located in the Routt National Forest in Jackson County, the Davis Peak unit is about 33 miles northwest of Walden. Elevation ranges from 8,600 to 10,900 feet. The area was studied during RARE II and the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1980 left it as a further planning area.

This area is formed by rounded peaks and broad, deeply glaciated valleys. Ten percent of it is covered by alpine tundra and another ten percent is meadowland located in drainage bottoms of the Main and West Forks of the Encampment River. Much of the forested portion is very steep. There are dense stands of spruce, fir and lodgepole, with small groups of aspen interspersed among the conifer. Big game species in the area include black bear, mule deer, elk and a few bighorn sheep that drift into the Davis Peak area from Wyoming.

Other proposals recommend expansion into areas released for multiple use management by the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1980. Timber harvests have been programmed for parts of the western portion of this proposed expansion.

(30) Spruce Creek: 8,000 acres are recommended for wilderness designation. The Spruce Creek unit is located in the White River Forest, in northeastern Pitkin County about 9.5 miles northeast of Aspen. When Congress enacted the Hunter-Fryingpan Wilderness in 1978, it directed a study of the Spruce Creek addition. This study resulted in a positive recommendation by the Forest Service, and it was included in the Armstong Colorado Wilderness Bill of 1982 (S. 2783) as an addition to the Hunter-Fryingpan Wilderness, but Congress did not act on it prior to adjournment.

Wilderness designation will round out the existing wilderness by adding lower elevation lands that comprise an important migration route for deer and elk. Spruce Creek provides a valuable habitat for the declining Colorado cutthroat trout and is a popular area for cross country skiing and ski touring.

(31) Weminuche Contiguous Additions: Three separate wilderness areas will be designated as additions to the western border of the 467,400-acre Weminuche Wilderness Area. Located in the San Juan National Forest in southwestern Colorado, the proposed "Weminuche Contiguous" addition, consisting of 375 acres, lies to the northeast of the West Needles Proposed Wilderness Area. The proposed Whitehead Gulch addition contains 3,475 acres and is flanked on the west by the West Needles Proposed Wilderness Area. The third unit, known as the Needle Creek addition, lies to the south of Whitehead Gulch and contains 4,160 acres.

The "Weminuche Contiguous" unit is characterized by its high altitude, and steep, mountainous topography, containing the headwater areas of streams tributary to the Animas River. Much of the area is alpine tundra, with several rugged peaks and ridges separating basins, isolating them from one another. This topography affords outstanding opportunities for solitude, with features of special ecological interest.

The Whitehead Gulch unit is noted by steep, rugged canyon walls rising from the channel of the Animas River at about 8,800 feet elevation to peaks as high as 13,000 feet. The western boundary is primarily comprised of the Durango-Silverton narrowgauge railroad right-of-way through the Animas River Gorge. Except for foot and horse trails, this railroad provides the only access into the area. The higher portions of the area afford scenic vistas of vast landscape-mountains, valleys, forest, and tundra, including the West Needle Mountains, Needle Mountains, and the Grenadier Range. This combination of jagged peaks, cirque basins, alpine tundra and subalpine forest produce unique and outstanding scenic qualities.

The Needle Creek unit contains several small stream drainages which flow westerly through the area, creating side canyons in the main canyon of the Animas River. The area consists of rugged mountains with high peaks, narrow canyons and several lakes, including Webb, Pear, Ruby, and Emerald lakes. In conjunction with the Weminuche Wilderness Area, this unit contains outstanding opportunities for a primitive and unconfined type of wilderness recreation.

Section 3. This section recommends establishment of three areas within the National Park Service. They are the result of Park Service wilderness studies and the size and boundaries of each are the same as proposed by the Park Service, except for some changes in the boundaries recommended for Dinosaur which are necessary for access. These areas will be added to the three existing Park Service Wilderness areas in Colorado: Mesa Verde, Great Sand Dunes, and the Black Canyon of the Gunnison. The new areas are described as follows:

(1) through (4): Four areas located in Rocky Mountain National Park: 235,668 acres are recommended for wilderness designation. The Mummy Range Wilderness proposal in the northern portion of the Park contains approximately 81,320 acres and is adjacent to the Comanche Peak Wilderness in the Roosevelt National Forest. The proposed Never Summer unit contains approximately 9,620 acres and lies adjacent to and becomes part of the existing Never Summer Wilderness in the Arapahoe National Forest. This legislation provides for the continued management by the Forest Service and the Park Service of their respective portions of the enlarged Never Summer Wilderness. The Trail Ridge Wilderness proposal contains approximately 4,300 acres and is located in the center portion of the Part between the Fall River Road and the Trail Ridge Road. The Enos Mills Wilderness proposal is in the southern portion of the Park and contains approximately 140,428 acres; this proposal would add approximately 2,917 acres of the Indian Peak Wilderness within Rocky Mountain National Park to the Enos Mills unit.

The Mummy Range unit contains large areas of the alpine, sub-alpine, wet meadow and montane forest ecosystems. The Never Summer unit includes the steep upper slopes and peaks of the Never Summer Mountains. About two-thirds of the area is above timberline, and it is capped by a row of twelve jagged peaks reaching over 12,000 feet in altitude.

The Trail Ridge unit is forested mountainside sloping northward to Fall River, between the Trail Ridge and Fall River Roads. It contains much studied examples of subalpine forest and alpine tundra. Lodgepole pine, Englemann spruce and sub-alpine fir are dominant in the forest cover. Although the area is visible from various points along the two roads, the wilderness traveler within it feels quite isolated.

The Enos Mills unit contains examples of all the ecosystems present in Rocky Mountain National Park, including a spectacular array of rugged peaks, snow fields and glacial cirques. In this unit are located both the Park's most popular backcountry destinations and some of its least visited valleys. The high peaks are visible from as far away as Fort Collins, the Denver metropolitan area and many parts of the eastern plains of Colorado.

(5) and (6): Two areas located in Colorado National Monument: 13,842 acres are recommended for wilderness designation. The Monument Mesa proposal contains approximately 10,237 acres, which is nearly all of the roadless acreage in that portion of the park north of the Rim Rock Drive road; the No Thoroughfare Canyon Wilderness proposal contains approximately 3,605 acres and is located in the portion of the park south of the Rim Rock Drive road.

The Monument Mesa unit includes an unusual and extremely interesting series of box canyons carved out of the Uncompahgre Highland by severe erosion. The Highland forms one rim of the Grand Valley of the Colorado River. Scattered minor archeological sites are evident where primitive man visited and hunted. Visitors to this deep canyon experience solitude and isolation from man's activities. Hikers and horseback riders reach the area on existing primitive trails which are the only developments in the proposed wilderness area.

The No Thoroughfare Canyon unit includes typical erosion patterns and geological formations of interest. It is a good example of pinion-juniper woodland and is interspersed with sagebrush, service berry and mountain mahogany.

(7) and (8): Two areas located in Dinosaur National Mounument: 186,114 acres are recommended for wilderness designation. The Monument, located in both Utah and Colorado, will be protected with two areas: the Green-Yampa Wilderness proposal contains approximately 160,635 acres and is located in the northern portion of the park, while the Blue Mountain Wilderness proposal is located in the southern portion of the park and consists of approximately 25,479 acres.

The Green-Yampa unit, the largest of the Park Service units in this bill, contains the spectacular canyons along 44 miles of the Green River and 48 miles of its main tributary, the Yampa. These river canyons contain outstanding displays of geology. There is a high degree of ruggedness and remoteness which creates a true challenge to the visitor. The high plateaus along the canyon rims offer spectacular views of the canyons and the rivers. This is a semi-arid environment which provides for many different plant and animal communities. Unexpected examples of Ponderosa pine and Douglas fir are found in the protected canyons and unusual animals such as mountain lion and bighorn sheep continue to exist in this remote area.

The Blue Mountain unit lies south of the Yampa Bench Road and contains the Blue Mountain Plateau, which is 2,000 feet above the Yampa Bench and offers dramatic views of the canyons and rivers of the Monument.

Section 4. Repeals section 105(a), and 107 of the Act of 1980 and section 2(e) of the Endangered American Wilderness Act of 1978. Section 105(a) of the Act of 1980 designates Buffalo Peaks, Fossil Ridge, Greenhorn Mountain, South San Juan Wilderness Expansion, Piedra, Spanish Peaks, Vasquez and West Needle as Wilderness Study Areas. Section 2 of this Act designates all or portions of some of these areas. This section repealing those studies releases into multiple use management those areas, or portions thereof, not designated wilderness. Section 107 of the Act of 1980 is the "release" provision, which is replaced by Section 5 of this Act. Section 2(e) of the Endangered American Wilderness Act of 1978, established the Spruce Creek Wilderness study area.

Not repealed by this section is the wilderness study status of the Wheeler Geologic and the Oh-Be-Joyful Wilderness Study Areas. The Wheeler Geologic Wilderness Study Area was established under section 105(b) of the Act of 1980, but the Final Environmental Impact Statement for the designation recommendation is not yet final. Until Congress expressly designates or releases the area, it will be preserved for possible wilderness designation. The Oh-Be-Joyful Wilderness Study Area, established under section 106 of the Act of 1980, also lacks a Final Environmental Impact Statement. Under the special provisions in section 106 of the Act of 1980, this area will be managed for preservation for wilderness designation until the President makes a final recommendation to Congress—and for two years thereafter—giving Congress ample time to decide whether the area or portions thereof should be added to the National Wilderness Preservation System.

The following is an area-by-area explanation of the areas that are not recommended at all for wilderness designation and are therefore released from wilderness study management under this section:

Fossil Ridge: None of the area was recommended for designation as wilderness. The wilderness study area contains 47,400 acres and is located in the Gunnison National Forest, about 8 miles northeast of Gunnison, Colorado.

The area contains several conflicting interests to wilderness designation. It has a high potential for locatable minerals, including molybdenum, uranium, limestone, gold and silver, and contains 465 acres of patented mining claims and 1,154 unpatented mining claims covering 23,080 acres. The area provides a unique opportunity for limited motorized vehicle recreation, and there is a possible conflict with a transmission facility for a proposed hydroelectric project. Moreover, there are 904,700 wilderness acres within a 50-mile radius (not including the designation recommendations for Powderhorn and Cannibal Plateau), and 1,699,800 wilderness acres within a 100-mile radius. According to the Forest Service's Land and Resource Management Plan for the Grand Mesa, Uncompahgre and Gunnison National Forests, the area is to be managed diversely, with core areas to be managed as primitive/non-motorized, while allowing corridors for semi-primitive motorized traffic to traverse the area. Special wildlife habitat management is identified, including emphasis on big game winter and summer range, and other special areas for livestock grazing emphasis.

The House bill, H.R. 5426, retains the area in further study status. However, the area was studied in RARE II as well as the Final Land and Resource Management Plan and EIS process for the Grand Mesa, Uncompahgre and Gunnison National Forests. Both studies recommended against designation of the area as wilderness. I see no reason to differ from the Forest Service's recommendation on this area, or to spend the time and money further studies would cost.

South San Juan Expansions: None of the area is recommended for designation as wilderness. The wilderness study area contains two areas, Montezuma Peak (13,000 acres) and V-Rock to the South (19,800 acres). The areas are adjacent to the South San Juan Wilderness Area that was created in 1980—about 20 miles east of Pagosa Springs, Colorado in the San Juan National Forest.

Similar to the conflicts affecting Fossil Ridge, about 37 percent of Montezuma Peak has high to moderate potential for locatable minerals and around 48% of V-Rock has high/moderate potential for oil and gas. The areas contain two patented mining claims and 7 outstanding oil and gas leases. Interest in the area for limited motorized recreation has also been expressed. Moreover, there are 1.6 million wilderness acres within a 100-mile radius of the area.

Studied in RARE I and RARE II, as well as within the Final Land and Resource Management Plan and EIS for the San Juan National Forest, the area has consistently been recommended for non-designation. I am not convinced at this point that Congress should conclude otherwise.

Spanish Peaks: None of the area is recommended for designation as wilderness. The wilderness study area contains 19,600 acres and is located on the Continental Divide between the Cucharas and Apishapa River drainages in the San Isabel National Forest. The area lies about 160 miles south of Denver and 20 miles southwest of Walsenburg, Colorado.

The area includes several old mines, 870 acres of private land—including patented mining claims, and about 90 percent of the area has high to moderate potential for locatable minerals and about 93% of it has high to moderate potential for oil and gas. In fact there are pending oil and gas lease applications on about 78% of the wilderness study area. Moreover, according to the Forest Service, the area would add no unique land forms or ecosystems to the National Wilderness Preservation System. The Land and Resource Plan for the Pike-San Isabel National Forests indicates an intent to manage about 80% of the eastern portion for non-motorized recreation in a non-wilderness semiprimitive setting, while managing the western portion for motorized outdoor recreation and potential commercial timber production.

The Forest Service has given the area a low wilderness area rating of 16 on a scale of 4 to 28, where 22 is the average. There are 1,400,000 wilderness acres within a 50-mile radius of the area, and the Forest Service has concluded that this is not needed to improve the representation of landforms and ecosystems within the National Wilderness Preservation System. I see no reason at this point to disagree with their conclusions.

Section 5. This section replaces the "release" language of the Act of 1980 with the revised and updated release language recently negotiated and adopted by the House and Senate. An excellent description of the meaning of the language can be found in Senate Reports 98-461 and 98-465.

Like the Act of 1980, the release language provided in this section insures that all areas, or portions thereof, that are not designated wilderness under this Act or any previous wilderness Act for Colorado, unless expressly excepted, are released to multiple use management. Those Further Planning Areas that are released under this section because they are not designated under section 2 include:

Williams Fork: None of the area is recommended for designation as wilderness. The further planning area contains 53,888 acres and is located in the Arapaho National Forest, in Grand and Summit Counties north of Dillon and southeast of Kremmling, Colorado.

The Williams Fork FPA presents an interesting combination of competing and conflicting uses. The Forest Service has not recommended wilderness designation—for some of the following reasons: (1) traffic noise from I-70 and Colorado Highway 9 affect the areas on the west and south side of the Williams Fork Divide; (2) structures that may be built to develop Denver's water rights in the central portion of the area would conflict with wilderness designation and would be an obvious inconsistency with the 1964 Wilderness Act definition of wilderness as ". . . an area of undeveloped Federal land retaining its primeval character and influence, without permanent improvements or human habitation . . ."; (3) evidence of man's activities can be seen and heard from most parts of the area; (4) there are no threatened or endangered species occupying the area and no species have been identified on the area that require a wilderness environment for survival; and (5) land forms and ecosystems on the area do not differ significantly from those found on other nearby wildernesses.

On the other hand, there is an important goal of providing areas closer to large population centers for the enjoyment of wilderness environments. It is true that there are now 651,881 acres in designated wilderness within a 50-mile radius of the Williams Fork area.

The House bill, H.R. 5426, has attempted to outline a proposed wilderness area while leaving the remaining portions in a further study status. At first glance, it is not clear that the conflicting wilderness/non-wilderness values have been resolved by these proposed boundaries. Nor is it clear what purpose is served by retaining a portion of the area for further study.

The Forest Service Land and Resource Management Plan for the Routt National Forest, as described in the Plan's accompanying final EIS for this area, calls for semi-primitive and primitive management in different sectors of the area, emphasizing non-motorized recreation opportunities and protecting the beauty of the area while allowing for some limited resource development.

While I look forward to hearing further comments on the House proposal—particularly on the ability to distinguish and manage the proposed boundary and the wilderness character of the proposed area—at this point the Forest Service land and resource management plan seems to answer the conflicting needs with good common sense.

Lost Creek: None of the area is recommended for designation as wilderness. The further planning area contains 23,000 acres and is located on the north end of the Platte River Mountains in the Pipe National Forest. The area is adjacent to the Lost Creek Wilderness Area established in 1980 and is about 40 miles southwest of Denver.

The 1977 Roadless Area Review Evaluation Process (RARE II) inventoried the Lost Creek area, recommending 71,000 acres as wilderness and 48,040 acres as a further planning area. In 1980, 106,000 acres of the Lost Creek FPA were designated wilderness, leaving the 23,000 for further study.

Like Williams Fork, the Lost Creek FPA presents an interesting combination of competing and conflicting uses. The area has been classified by the Forest Service as containing high to moderate potential for minerals, and the State owns the mineral estate in two tracts—totalling 3800 acres—in the north and north central part of the area. In addition the area contains 19 miles of logging roads, 600 timbered acres, a 60-acre plantation, and a radio repeater site.

The House bill, H.R. 5426, has attempted to outline a proposal to avoid some of these conflicts. However, the Forest Service has indicated that adding further acreage would simply be adding land for land's sake. The area has been given a wilderness area rating of 14 on a scale of 4 to 28, where the average for Colorado was 22, and the Forest Service concluded that the area did not qualify under any of the three criteria applied to wilderness designation—capability, availability or need. Nevertheless, I look forward to hearing further comment on the proposed House boundaries.

Saint Louis Peak: None of the area is recommended for designation as wilderness. The further planning area contains about 12,800 acres and is contiguous to a small segment of the Vasquez wilderness study area. The further planning area is located in the Arapaho National Forest in Grand County southeast of Kremmling, Colorado.

The major problems with the area are locating a manageable boundary and the area's close proximity to conflicting land uses. According to the Final EIS, about two-thirds of the FPA's boundary is very irregular, crosses drainages or follows broad ridges where precise topographic features are less prominent. Considerable timber cutting has occurred to the west of the area and is visible from within the area. Other external influences include the AMAX mill, railroad and other roads and water diversion facilities, which are visible and can be heard from within the area.

The House bill, H.R. 5426, apparently tries to address some of these concerns. However, like the Forest Service's recommendations on Williams Fork and Lost Creek, I believe that common sense dictates nondesignation of this area. But, I look forward to hearing further comment on the proposed House boundaries or any other reasonable alternative.

Section 6(a). Relates to the filing of maps and necessary details, including a provision that the maps shall be available to the public.

Section 6(b). Emphasizes that, subject to valid existing rights, the wilderness areas designated by this Act shall be administered by the Federal Government in compliance with the Wilderness Act which designated them wilderness areas, except that with respect to the areas designated by this Act, any reference to other wilderness acts shall be deemed to be a reference to the effective date of this Act.

Section 7. Provides clarifying language to settle any ambiguity in existing law. This provision spells out that designation of an area as wilderness does not create any right in the federal government to the use or flow of water because of the designation. To emphasize that this is simply restating what I believe, based on the advise of several Colorado water law experts, is current law, a second proviso is added to explain that this section is not intended to create, by implication, a right in the federal government to use or flow of water in other wilderness areas established by Congress for other States. My provision does not presume to resolve the issue one way or the other for other States, because I did not think it appropriate to extend my concern beyond that of Colorado's.●

By Mr. TSONGAS (for himself, Mr. CHILES, and Mr. RANDOLPH):

S. 2917. A bill to confer citizenship posthumously on Cpl. Wladyslaw Staniszewski; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

POSTHUMOUS CITIZENSHIP FOR CPL. WLADYSLAW STANISZEWSKI

● Mr. TSONGAS. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation to confer citizenship posthumously on Cpl. Wladyslaw Staniszewski.

Corporal Staniszewski was killed in action in Quang Nam Province July 7, 1967, 2 weeks after his 20th birthday. He had emigrated to the United States just 2½ years earlier. He had hoped to become an American citizen.

Resident aliens who survive wartime service in the U.S. Armed Forces are routinely granted citizenship upon honorable discharge without the normal waiting period. Because Scotty Staniszewski gave his life, he died a foreigner in the eyes of our law.

In October 1983, I introduced S. 1083 which would have amended the Immigration and Nationality Act to provide that aliens who die while serving in the Armed Forces during periods of hostility be considered to have been citizens of the United States at the time of their death. The bill I am introducing today deals specifically with the Staniszewski case.

Mr. President, few opportunities are presented where swift action by Congress is called for by all from across the political spectrum. I urge my colleagues to take up this legislation as soon as possible. It is a most deserving measure of simple justice.●

● Mr. CHILES. Mr. President, I am pleased to join with my colleague from Massachusetts, Senator TSONGAS, in introducing legislation to grant U.S. citizenship posthumously to Cpl. Wladyslaw Staniszewski. This private bill would only grant posthumous citizenship and would not make Corporal Staniszewski's family eligible for any benefits or assistance. Enactment of this bill will bring peace of mind to the parents of Corporal Staniszewski, who have been fighting for years to win citizenship for their deceased son.

Corporal Staniszewski, or "Scotty," as he was known to his family and friends, was killed in action in 1967, while serving with the U.S. Marine Corps. Scotty was born in Scotland and emigrated to the United States with his parents, a sister and brother. Less than 18 months after the Staniszewski's left Scotland and settled in Massachusetts, Scotty registered for the draft. Later when he received his draft notice and was told he would have to wait because the Army had filled their quota for the month, Scotty chose not to wait to be called again. Instead, he enlisted in the Marines. Scotty didn't have to do this. He was technically still a British subject and in possession of a British passport. He could have avoided service altogether by leaving the country. But Scotty was proud to be a marine, and he wanted to serve his newly adopted country. He told his mother, "It's a good country, Mum. I want to make my roots here. If a country's worth living in, it's worth fighting for."

A little over a year later, 2 weeks after his 20th birthday, Scotty was killed in the Quang Nam Province of Vietnam. He died before achieving his dream of becoming a naturalized citizen of this country. It is my understanding that the residency requirements for foreigners to become U.S. citizens is waived for aliens who serve in the Armed Forces during wartime. Upon discharge, they are routinely granted citizenship. Because Scotty died on the battlefield before his discharge, he remains a noncitizen. His parents are now American citizens. So are his brother and sister. But it appears that only through an act of Congress can Scotty posthumously become a citizen of the United States.

Anyone who is patriotic enough to offer up his life in service to this country should be allowed U.S. citizenship. Corporal Staniszewski more than earned this recognition by fighting and dying for his adopted country.●

By Mr. DECONCINI:

S. 2918. A bill to address the problems caused by the 1983 flood along the Colorado River Floodway; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

COLORADO RIVER FLOODWAY TASK FORCE ACT

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation which will establish a task force made up of Federal, State, local, and private representatives with the purpose of determining the proper management of the Colorado River from Hoover Dam to the Mexican border.

The Colorado River includes a series of multipurpose dams which provide a variety of benefits to upper basin as well as lower basin States. Through these dams, the river affords flood control, power generation, water for irrigation, municipal and industrial use, fish and wildlife enhancement and preservation, as well as recreational benefits. Because of the many and diverse purposes of the river, conflicts sometimes occur with respect to its management which present problems to residents along the river, as well as State and Federal agencies.

The Bureau of Reclamation, the agency charged with managing the operation of the dams along the river, through the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, has developed criteria for the operation of the structures. For the most part, the established operating criteria is sufficient to meet the demands for water and power. However, there are times when weather changes and runoff from areas upstream create a need to change the criteria to accommodate immediate and unforeseen demands being placed on the structures. The problem, Mr. President, is that there are times when acts of nature do not give Bureau of Reclamation personnel sufficient time to react without causing additional problems, like flooding to downstream areas.

The summer of 1983 clearly illustrates this point. Because snowmelt in the upper basin areas was greater than anticipated, Reclamation could not respond immediately to change the operation of the dams without creating much greater than normal releases from the structures. This action, although a responsible one on the part of the Bureau of Reclamation, did create considerable flood damage to personal property in areas along the river. The effect of that flooding is still in evidence in many areas where water has not sufficiently receded to thoroughly estimate property damage.

While the situation that resulted in 1983 is a rare occurrence, it tells me that all Federal, State, local and private interests along the river need to develop a policy which is consistent with the wise management of water, power, and flood control, taking into consideration what may occur in the future. The creation of a task force, outlined in the bill, will permit all individuals who may be directly impacted by the operation of the river below Hoover Dam to thoroughly review the management of this floodway and put forth their comments and recommendations on future management and development, which will then be forwarded to the Secretary of the Interior and the Congress. The task force will have 1 year in which to complete its mission. Hopefully, after the assessment has been completed, public officials will be in a better position to determine what the permanent policy on the management of the floodway should be.

One additional duty the task force will be assigned, Mr. President, is to review the economic losses incurred as a result of the 1983 flooding along the river. If, on the basis of the information that is presented, the task force feels compensation should be justified, the task force will make the appropriate recommendation to the Secretary of the Interior who will then be authorized to allow certain individuals access to the Court of Claims to plead their case.

I have no doubt that the Bureau of Reclamation acted in the most responsible manner possible in the operation of these dams last year. The Government Accounting Office conducted an investigation and concluded that the Bureau did not act negligently. However, because the losses were substantial, I believe the compensation question needs to be explored.

The task force includes representatives from all Indian tribes, States, counties, and cities located along the Colorado River below Hoover Dam. Also included are two private citizens from each State appointed by the Governor of each State and a representative from the Colorado River Wildlife Council. Federal representatives include the Bureau of Reclamation, Bureau of Land Management, Corps of Engineers, the Federal Emergency Management Agency, and the Department of Agriculture. Additionally, it includes a representative from law enforcement agencies along the river.

The task force provides a balanced team of residents, professionals, and officials from every level of government to provide the Congress with recommendations for a balanced solution to the Colorado River flooding problem.

Mr. President, the task force is a responsible means to determining a permanent policy for the management of the Colorado floodway. It is my hope that the Senate can review this legislation and take the appropriate action before we have another flooding situation.

By Mr. HATCH:

S. 2919. A bill to authorize the Secretary of Education to make grants to strengthen the capacity of postsecondary institutions to respond to the continuing education needs of adults, to link postsecondary resources more closely to the preparation and performance of the American workforce, and to enhance Federal policies affecting the development of the Nation's human resources; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

CONTINUING EDUCATION ACT OF 1984

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, today I an introducing a bill to reauthorize and substantively change what is title I of the Higher Education Act of 1980. As you know, although we have made a pronouncement of public policy in support of continuing education through title I, up to this time little effort has been expended to implement it.

In introducing this legislation, I want to recognize the assistance I received from members of the National Advisory Council on Continuing Education, and particularly from its chairman, W. Hughes Brockbank.

Hughes Brockbank, as everyone in Utah knows, is one of the State's outstanding business and education leaders. His deep commitment to public service and civic responsibility and his voluntary efforts on behalf of many good causes are models well worth emulating.

Mr. President, during the past year and a half we have been literally swamped by reports of blue-ribbon commissions regarding the status of American education, all of which had their peculiar brand of elixir for curing education's ills. The most celebrated of the reports—and the one to come out first—was Secretary Bell's National Commission on Excellence in Education, chaired by then Utahn, David Gardener.

This was a good report. It said things that needed to be said and forgot some things that also should have been said.

There was a plethora of other reports. There was the Carnegie report put out by Ernest Boyer, former U.S. Commissioner of Education. There was a report by the National Governors Association—the so-called Hunt report, named after Governor Hunt of North Carolina, who chaired that task force.

There was another excellent report from the National Science Board, called Educating Americans for the 21st Century, that laid out a plan of action for improving mathematics, science, and technology education for elementary and secondary students. This report somehow lost track of the fact that only about 1 percent of the population of the United States is trained as engineers or scientists. Too much of the science and mathematics education in our country has been under the misguided influence of the academic research community, which does not really have any philosophical rationale for or against "science education" for the nonscientists. Most, as Rustum Roy suggests, "simply do not think about it or care."

I do not wish to review these reports here, but I do wish to interject two personal reactions to them, the second of which relates directly to my home State of Utah.

First, there is no question in my mind that these reports have struck a very responsive chord in the minds of the American public. Poeple are concerned about schooling and education, as much now as at any time during the recent past. Through tax dollars, Americans have invested abundantly in schools and teachers. These dollars are a wise investment. But Americans have every right to question the integrity of that investment if fears linger among families and communities that the quality of education being provided to their children is not the very best that money can buy.

Of course, we all know the quality in education does not rest solely on money. Quality depends also on teachers and administrators, and equipment and facilities, and on a multitude of auxiliary services that help make education good.

These reports have addressed all of these issues. The success of their solutions for improving quality in our schools, however, ultimately rests on the commitment of parents, families and communities in making sure that our schools are capable of doing what is expected of them.

Second, it appears to me that there is a basic discrepancy between the thrust of these reports and the work that leaders in adult and continuing education are doing, between the role of schools in our society as it once was and the role of schools in a society that is changing rapidly, between the demands for quality education services to children and youths and the demands for quality services to adults who are beyond the years of compulsory or normal schooling.

Read as you will through all of these reports and you will find little said about adult and continuing education, about occupational and vocational education, and about the fairly recent concept of lifetime learning opportunities being made available to all our citizens, regardless of age.

Most of these reports are focused on elementary and secondary education, which is laudable. But little is said about higher education, and less is said about one of the most rapidly developing segments of postsecondary education—what some observers have called the phenomenon of tertiary education—the whole landscape of education and training for adults.

Mr. President, some adult learning needs are dire: It is reported that nearly 23 million American adults are functionally illiterate. This does not necessarily mean that these adults are totally devoid of any capacity to read, write, and compute simple figures; but it often means that adults do not function very well in our postindustrial, knowlege-based society that requires people to be able to prepare a résumé to find work, balance a checkbook, and understand what they are capable of reading in a newspaper.

This is a terrible loss to society. The loss is compounded by the fact that many of these individuals must depend on public assistance for help and too frequently the dependence becomes chronic.

However, adult and continuing education has some good news, too. It is an historic accident, but it is nonetheless a fact that an additional 23 million adults in the United States participate in various forms of continuing education, with schools at all levels providing the single largest base for these programs.

These combined figures give us a total of 46 million adults or nearly one-quarter of the population. I know many people believe that these estimates are conservative and that the real figures may be higher.

In either case, the world that adult and continuing educators occupy is a huge one. It is one that needs far more attention than it has received from educators, from people who make public policy and from Federal, State, and community leaders.

Let us look at what has happened to college enrollments during the decade from 1972 through 1982:

The growth of all students during the decade was 34.8 percent;

Enrollments by women were 61 percent, nearly double the above;

Enrollments by minorities exceeded even that of women, increasing 85 percent;

Enrollments by older individuals were equally impressive, with an increase of 70 percent by 25 to 34 years-olds, and an increase of 75 percent by those over 35;

Full-time enrollments during the decade increased only 18 percent while part-time enrollments were over triple that;

Enrollments in 4-year institutions and universities lagged behind the general growth of 34.8 percent, but enrollments in 2-year institutions increased by 73 percent.

It is obvious from these data that the kinds of individuals served by continuing education programs are the same type of individuals who are forcing collegiate enrollment figures up—despite the fact that there are relatively fewer and fewer individuals coming to higher education from the traditional undergraduate youth cohorts between the ages of 18 and 22 or 24.

The median age of Americans today is about 30. It is interesting to note that the average age of students enrolled in many post-secondary institutions is closing in on that median age.

If you add to the individuals who are enrolled for degrees and credits, all those other individuals who return to educational institutions for a variety of noncredit work, then it is not a mistake to call the presence of nontraditional and older adults on the campus as the new majority in postsecondary education.

Adults who continue their education do not see themselves as comprising any special educational constituency, let alone a political constituency. They seem unaware of their vital importance to American higher education. I do not believe they sense that their presence in such large numbers on any campus can dramatically alter the policies in effect at any given institution.

This is a shame. Adult learning is a powerful commodity. It can and should alter the ways that colleges and universities view their missions as educators; it should influence decisions about how institutions can best relate to the concerns of their communities and the need to draw some better equations between the world of education and the world of work.

My bill recognizes that the majority of adults who participate in continuing education are doing so for one primary reason—to get or keep their jobs or to improve their job status and employment opportunities.

This objective, is in my mind, as valid as any other, and it is certainly driven by a sincere motivation to improve one's capacity to learn. The ability of adults to do this—with minimal encumbrance—can directly affect the quality of our society and the happiness, well-being, and security of our people.

I fear, however, that not enough educators and makers of public policy in our national life are willing to accept this growth of adult learning as the rich and positive influence that it is.

Mr. President, on the matter of education and training for adults—especially adults who are working or seeking work—the logic of colleges, universities, and others working more closely with employers is just good commonsense. My bill will encourage such cooperation and help the millions of adults already participating in education and training for work-related reasons. It will establish a pattern for extending help to those millions of others who may wish or need to participate but who do not.

Mr. President, those of us who favor adult learning opportunities must face a problem that is unique to America and not shared by most other developed nations: Our Nation has not as yet reached a working consensus on the value or the purpose of policies that promote adult learning.

The quality of services we provide to adults is of no less importance than the anxiety that we feel regarding the quality of services provided to our children in elementary and secondary schools and in our postsecondary institutions.

It is a tragedy that we have people in this country who cannot read, write, or compute effectively. It is a shame that people who possess these faculties still cannot find jobs suitable to their training or their aspirations. It is wrong that adults who want to continue to learn—for whatever reason—are not encouraged to do so, or who must do so against odd and incomprehensible barriers.

It is the central purpose of my bill, Mr. President, to assist colleges and universities, and particularly 2-year institutions, in reaching out to these adults who are not now adequately served.

My home State of Utah has some outstanding 2-year institutions, which, along with the lower divisions of Utah 4-year postsecondary institutions, are doing an outstanding job, with meager resources, of serving the needs of people who accommodate well to programs structured under the traditional vocational or adult education programs. But, like countless other institutions across the country, they need assistance in providing programs tailored to the needs of people neither of these other fine programs was designed to serve. My bill will fill that void.

In summary, Mr. President, there are several critical issues addressed by my bill:

It would help postsecondary institutions improve and expand outreach services to their communities.

The bill recognizes the relationship between continuing education and the workplace and encourages the broader involvement of employers and employee representatives in the planning and implementation of postsecondary continuing education for adults. It stands as a kind of challenge grant to encourage all institutions to reexamine their commitments to adult learning and to express these commitments through beneficial institutional policies and specific application of their resources to respond to the learning needs of adults.

The bill helps point the Department of Education in the direction of that portion of postsecondary education where the greatest enrollment increases are and where innovative and nontraditional curricula and delivery systems are most needed.

Finally, Mr. President, with this legislation, I want to give a clear signal to institutional leaders, to corporate executives and to others, that lifetime learning opportunities for all our citizens involves us all, including the Federal Government, which through this legislation can demonstrate its readiness to cooperate in this partnership.

By Mr. MOYNIHAN (for himself and Mr. RIEGLE):

S. 2922. A bill to establish an independent agency, governed by a bipartisan board, to administer the Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance Program under title II of the Social Security Act, the Supplemental Security Income Program under title XVI of such act, and the Medicare Program under title XVIII of such act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATIVE REORGANIZATION ACT

● Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation to reorganize the Social Security Administration as an independent agency, governed by a five-member bipartisan board.

Under this legislation, the independent agency would be responsible for administering the network of programs we have created since 1935, to provide insurance to virtually all Americans in the event of old age, death, disability, or sickness. This agency, then, would be responsible for the Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance Programs, the Hospital and Supplementary Medical Insurance Programs, and Supplementary Security Income Programs, and the Supplemental Security Income Program.

It has long been my view that the operations of the Social Security Administration would be improved—and public confidence in the system strengthened—by establishing Social Security as an independent agency.

This is not a new idea—just one lately forgotten. The original Social Security Act of 1935 established an independent Social Security Board to administer the programs. In 1939, Social Security Programs were made a part of the independent Federal Security Agency, where they remained until 1953. At that point, nearly 20 years after the passage of Social Security, the Social Security Administration was moved into the newly formed Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. There it has remained.

Almost 30 years later, the National Commission on Social Security recommended the creation of an independent agency to administer the Old-Age, Survivors, Disability, Medicare, SSI, and Medicare Programs. Last year, the President's Commission on Social Security Reform, of which I was a member, stated as a general principle its support for the concept of Social Security as an independent agency.

Mr. President, I was among those Commission members who supported this idea. Now is the time to act on these recommendations. Quite simply, the size of the programs and their importance to nearly every American dictate, in my view, the establishment of SSA as an independent agency. The Social Security Administration has outgrown the Department of HHS. In 1953, about 6 million Americans received monthly Social Security checks. That number has increased sixfold in the past 31 years. Today, 36 million Americans receive monthly Social Security checks, and 29 million aged and disabled citizens receive protection against the costs of hospitalization and medical treatment; 4 million more of our most needy blind, aged, and disabled receive SSI assistance. Indeed, the benefits paid through the Social Security Program, Medicare, and SSI Programs comprise more than 85 percent of the entire budget for the Department of HHS.

The legislation I introduce today would include Medicare, as well as Social Security and SSI, as programs to be administered by an independent Social Security agency. This agency would be governed by a bipartisan, five-member board of directors, appointed by the President, for staggered 15-year terms. The directors would be subject to the advice and consent of the Senate.

The board would be responsible for agency policy, including making annual budget recommendations and recommendations to Congress regarding legislation and the administration of the program. It also would be empowered to appoint a commissioner, to serve as the agency's chief operating officer, as well as an ombudsmen to represent the public and beneficiaries inside the agency. This governing board also would provide the President and Congress with actuarial analysis, and conduct research and policy analysis.

The commissioner, an individual chosen for management expertise, would direct operations of the agency on a daily basis. As chief operating officer, the commissioner would devise and implement plans to improve the effectiveness and administration of the agency's programs and advise the board and Congress on the impact of legislative changes.

Our social insurance programs have long enjoyed nearly universal support—and earned this support by assuring tens of millions of Americans of a dependable retirement income, protection in the event of disability, and basic health insurance coverage during old age. Over the past few years, public confidence in Social Security has eroded as the programs have become embroiled in political debate. Ill-conceived proposals to alter benefit and eligibility requirements have undermined the public's faith and confidence in public arrangements around which tens of millions of Americans plan their retirements.

In addition, the system's long-term and well-deserved reputation for administrative efficiency, fairness, and public responsiveness has been tarnished in the last decade. Difficulties have arisen in efforts to implement major provisions of the SSI program, hundreds of thousands of disability beneficiaries, have been wrongfully terminated, and the system's computer system has deteriorated. Criticism has spread, and people's confidence in the system and its programs has been shaken.

We can rebuild their confidence and help restore the high levels of efficiency and fairness for which SSA was long famous, by establishing the Social Security Administration as an independent agency governed by a bipartisan board. By including Medicare as well as Social Security Programs, we would send a signal to our elderly and disabled citizens that there is an agency focused solely on their needs. The independence of the agency will help insulate its programs from partisan politics and ill-considered proposals. And by granting the agency greater authority over its own personnel, space, and budget, we will improve the operations of these essential Social Insurance and Income Security Programs.

I urge your support of this legislation. I request unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2922

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

ESTABLISHMENT OF AN INDEPENDENT SOCIAL SECURITY AGENCY; SOCIAL SECURITY BOARD

SEC. 2. (a) Section 701 of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows:

"SOCIAL SECURITY AGENCY; SOCIAL SECURITY BOARD

"SEC. 701. (a) There is hereby established, as an independent agency of the executive branch of the Government, a Social Security Agency (hereafter in this title referred to as the 'Agency').

"(b)(1) The Agency shall be headed by a Social Security Board (hereafter in this title referred to as the 'Board').

"(2)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the Board shall be composed of five members appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

"(B) For the period ending January 31, 1989, the Board shall be composed of three members appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

"(C) The members shall be chosen, on the basis of integrity, impartiality, and good judgment, from among individuals who, by reason of education, experience, and attainment, are exceptionally qualified to serve on the Board.

"(3)(A) Except as provided in subparagraphs (B) and (C), members shall be appointed for terms of fifteen years. A member of the Board may be removed only pursuant to a finding by the President of neglect of duty or malfeasance in office. The President shall transmit any such finding to the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the Majority Leader of the Senate not later than five days after the date on which such finding is made.

"(B) Of the members first appointed—

"(i) one shall be appointed for a term ending October 1, 1989,

"(ii) one shall be appointed for a term ending October 1, 1992,

"(iii) one shall be appointed for a term ending October 1, 1995,

"(iv) one shall be appointed for a term beginning February 1, 1989, and ending October 1, 1998, and

"(v) one shall be appointed for a term beginning February 1, 1989, and ending October 1, 2001, as designated by the President at the time of appointment. Such members shall be appointed after active consideration of recommendations made by the Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and of recommendations made by the Chairman of the Committee on Finance of the Senate.

"(C) Any member appointed for a term after the commencement of such term shall be appointed only for the remainder of such term. A member may, with the approval of the President, serve for not more than one year after the expiration of his or her term until his or her successor has taken office.

"(4)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), not more than three members of the Board shall be of the same political party.

"(B) For the period ending January 31, 1989, not more than two members of the Board shall be of the same political party.

"(5) A member of the Board may not, during his or her term as member, otherwise serve as an officer or employee of any government. If any member of the Board becomes an officer or employee of any government, he or she may continue to serve as a member of the Board not more than 30 days after the date he or she becomes an officer or employee of such government.

"(6)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), three members of the Board shall constitute a quorum.

"(B) For the period ending January 31, 1989, two members of the Board shall constitute a quorum.

"(C) A lesser number may hold hearings.

"(7) A member of the Board shall be designated from time to time by the President to serve as Chairperson of the Board.

"(8) The Board shall meet at the call of the Chairperson or a majority of its members.

"(c) The Board shall—

"(1) govern by regulation the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance program under title II, the supplemental security income program under title XVI, and the medicare program under title XVIII,

"(2) appoint a Commissioner of Social Security, as described in section 702, to act for the Board as the chief operating officer of the Agency responsible for administering such programs,

"(3) make annual budgetary recommendations relating to the Agency and defend such recommendations before the appropriate committees of each House of the Congress,

"(4) make recommendations to the Congress and the President as to the most effective methods of providing economic security through social insurance, and, in consultation with the Commissioner of Social Security, as to legislation and matters of administrative policy concerning such programs,

"(5) provide the Congress and the President with the ongoing actuarial and other analysis undertaken by the Agency with respect to such programs and any other information relating to such programs, and

"(6) conduct policy analysis and research relating to such programs.

"(d)(1) The Office of the Board shall include an Office of the Actuary, to be headed by a Chief Actuary appointed by the Board. To the extent provided by the Board, the Office of the Actuary shall assist the Board in carrying out its actuarial functions.

"(2) The Office of the Board shall include an Office of Policy and Legislation, to be headed by a Director of Policy and Legislation appointed by the Board. To the extent provided by the Board, the Office of Policy and Legislation shall assist the Board in carrying out its functions relating to policy analysis, research, and legislation.

"(3) The Office of the Board shall include an Office of General Counsel, to be headed by a General Counsel appointed by the Board. The General Counsel shall serve as the principal legal counsel in the Agency and shall provide necessary legal advice and services to the Board and the Commissioner.

"(4) The Office of the Board shall include an Ombudsman, to be appointed by the Board. The Ombudsman shall represent the concerns of the public, including beneficiaries, with respect to the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance program under title II, the supplemental security income program under title XVI, and the medicare program under title XVIII, to the Board and the Commissioner.

"(5)(A) The Board shall appoint such additional attorneys, actuaries, and other employees as it considers necessary to carry out its functions.

"(B) The Board may appoint, without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, such technical or professional employees as the Board considers appropriate, and such employees may be paid without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates.

"(C) The Board may procure the services of experts and consultants in accordance with the provisions of section 3109 of title 5, United States Code.

"(D) Notwithstanding section 3133 of title 5, United States Code, the Director of the Office of Personnel Management shall authorize for the Agency a total number of Senior Executive Service positions equal to 150 percent of the number of such positions existing in the Social Security Administration of the Department of Health and Human Services on the day before the date of the enactment of the Social Security Administrative Reorganization Act, and the total number of such positions authorized for the Agency pursuant to such section 3133 shall not at any subsequent time be less than such number.

"(E) In addition to the positions of the Agency in the Executive Schedule specified in subchapter II of chapter 53 of title 5, United States Code, the Board may establish additional positions at levels IV and V of the Executive Schedule.

"(d)(1) The Board may establish, alter, consolidate, or discontinue such organizational units or components within the Agency as the Board considers necessary or appropriate to carry out its functions, except that this paragraph shall not apply with respect to any unit or component established by this Act.

"(2) The Board may assign duties, and delegate, or authorize successive redelegations of, authority to act and to render decisions, with respect to the functions of the Board under this section. Within the limitations of such delegations, redelegations, or assignments to officers or employees of the Agency, all official acts and decisions of such officers and employees shall have the same force and effect as though performed or rendered by the Board.

"(e) There shall be in the Agency an Office of the Inspector General, to be headed by an Inspector General appointed in accordance with the Inspector General Act of 1978.

"(f)(1) The Board, the Secretary, and the Secretary of the Treasury shall consult with each other and shall develop rules, regulations, practices, and forms which, to the extent appropriate for the efficient administration of titles II, XVI, and XVIII and the other provisions of this Act and the applicable provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, are designed to reduce duplication of effort, duplication of reporting, conflicting or overlapping requirements, and the burden on beneficiaries and other persons of compliance with the provisions of this Act.

"(2) In order to avoid unnecessary expense and duplication of functions, the Board, the Secretary, and the Secretary of the Treasury may make such arrangements or agreements for cooperation or mutual assistance in the performance of their functions under titles II, XVI, and XVIII and the other provisions of this Act and the applicable provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 as they find to be practicable and consistent with law.".

(b)(1) Section 5313 of title 5, United States Code (relating to level II of the Executive Schedule), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Chairperson of the Social Security Board, Social Security Agency.".

(2) Section 5314 of such title (relating to level III of the Executive Schedule) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Members of the Social Security Board, Social Security Agency (4).".

(3) Section 5315 of such title (relating to level IV of the Executive Schedule) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new items:

"Inspector General, Social Security Agency.

"Chief Actuary, Social Security Agency.

"Director of Policy Analysis and Legislation, Social Security Agency.

"General Counsel, Social Security Agency.

"Ombudsman, Social Security Agency.".

COMMISSIONER OF SOCIAL SECURITY

SEC. 3. (a) Section 702 of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows:

"COMMISSIONER OF SOCIAL SECURITY

"SEC. 702. (a) There shall be in the Agency an Office of the Commissioner, to be headed by a Commissioner of Social Security (hereinafter in this title referred to as the 'Commissioner') appointed by the Board. The Commissioner shall be chosen from among individuals who are, by reason of experience and attainment, especially qualified to manage a large-scale organization of the Government.

"(b)(1) The Commissioner shall be appointed for a term of five years, except that—

"(A) an individual appointed Commissioner for a term after the commencement of such term shall be appointed only for the remainder of such term,

"(B) an individual may, with the approval of the Chairperson of the Board, serve as Commissioner after the expiration of his or her term for not more than one year until his or her successor has taken office, and

"(C) the individual first appointed to the Office of Commissioner shall serve for a term ending January 31, 1989.

An individual may be appointed as Commissioner for successive terms, and

"(2) An individual may be removed from the office of Commissioner before completion of his or her term only upon the vote of a majority of the full membership of the Board, pursuant to a finding by the Board of neglect of duty or malfeasance in office. The Board shall transmit any such finding to the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the Majority Leader of the Senate not later than five days after the date on which such finding is made.

"(3) Except as provided in paragraph (6) of subsection (c), an individual serving as Commissioner may not, during his or her term as Commissioner, otherwise serve as an officer or employee of any government. If an individual serving as Commissioner becomes an employee of any government, he or she may continue to serve as Commissioner not more than 30 days after the date on which he or she becomes an officer or employee of such government.

"(c) The Commissioner shall—

"(1) constitute the chief operating officer of the Agency, responsible for administering, in accordance with applicable statutes and regulations, the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance program under title II, the supplemental security income program under title XVI, and the medicare program under title XVIII,

"(2) establish and maintain an efficient and effective operational structure for the Agency,

"(3) devise and implement long-term plans to promote and maintain the effective implementation of such programs,

"(4) make annual budgetary recommendations of the Agency for the ongoing administrative costs of the Agency and defend such recommendations before the Board and before the appropriate Committees of each House of the Congress,

"(5) advise the Board and the Congress of the effect on the administration of such programs of proposed legislative changes in such programs,

"(6) serve as Secretary of the Board of Trustees of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Trust Fund, the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, and the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund, and

"(7) report in December of each year to the Board and the Congress concerning the administrative endeavors and accomplishments of the Agency.

"(d)(1) The Commissioner may establish, alter, consolidate, or discontinue such organizational units or components within the Office of the Commissioner as the Commissioner considers necessary or appropriate to carry out his or her functions.

"(2) The Commissioner may assign duties, and delegate, or authorize successive redelegations of, authority to act and to render decisions, with respect to the administration of the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance program under title II, the supplemental security income program under title XVI, and the medicare program under title XVIII to such officers and employees as the Commissioner may find necessary. Within the limitations of such delegations, redelegations, or assignments, all official acts and decisions of such officers and employees shall have the same force and effect as though performed or rendered by the Commissioner.

"(3)(A) The Commissioner shall appoint such additional employees as he or she considers necessary to carry out his or her functions.

"(B) The Commissioner may appoint, without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, such technical or professional employees as the Commissioner considers appropriate, and such employees may be paid without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates.

"(C) The Commissioner may procure the services of experts and consultants in accordance with the provisions of section 3109 of title 5, United States Code.

"(D) The Commissioner may delegate such powers of appointment and procurement to any of the employees in the Office of the Commissioner as he or she determines appropriate.

"(4) To the extent requested by the Commissioner, the Director of the Office of Personnel Management shall delegate to the Commissioner, pursuant to section 1104 of title 5, United States Code, and subject to applicable limitations under such title relating to delegations under such section, functions relating to—

"(A) recruitment and examination programs for entry level employees, and

"(B) classification and standards development systems and pay ranges for those job categories identified by the Commissioner in assuming such delegation.

The Director of the Office of Personnel Management shall provide any assistance requested by the Commissioner in assuming any such delegation.".

(b)(1) Section 5313 of title 5, United States Code (relating to level II of the Executive Schedule) is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Commissioner of Social Security, Social Security Agency.".

(2) Section 5315 of such title is amended by striking out the following item:

"Commissioner of Social Security, Department of Health and Human Services.".

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

SEC. 4. (a) There are transferred to the Social Security Agency all functions carried out by the Secretary of Health and Human Services with respect to the programs and activities the administration of which is vested in the Social Security Agency by reason of this Act and the amendments made thereby. The Social Security Board shall prescribe such regulations as are necessary to allocate such functions in accordance with sections 701 and 702 of the Social Security Act (as amended by this Act).

(b)(1) There are transferred from the Department of Health and Human Services to the Social Security Board, for appropriate allocation by the Board by regulation in the Social Security Agency—

(A) the personnel employed in connection with the functions transferred by this Act and the amendments made thereby, and

(B) the assets, liabilities, contracts, property, records, and unexpended balance of appropriations, authorizations, allocations, and other funds employed, held, or used in connection with such functions, arising from such functions, or available, or to be made available, in connection such functions.

(2) Unexpended funds transferred pursuant to this subsection shall be used only for the purposes for which the funds were originally authorized and appropriated.

(c) The position of Commissioner of Social Security in the Department of Health and Human Services is abolished.

TRANSITIONAL RULES

SEC. 5. (a) All orders, determinations, rules, regulations, permits, contracts, certificates, licenses, and privileges—

(1) which have been issued, made, promulgated, granted, or allowed to become effective, in the exercise of functions (A) which were exercised by the Secretary of Health and Human Services (or his delegate), and (B) which relate to functions which, by reason of this Act, the amendments made thereby, and regulations prescribed thereunder, are vested in the Social Security Board or the Commissioner of Social Security (as the case may be), and shall (to the extent that they relate to functions described in paragraph (1)(B)) continue in effect according to their terms until modified, terminated, suspended, set aside, or repealed by such Board or Commissioner (as the case may be).

(b) The provisions of this Act (including the amendments made thereby) shall not affect any proceeding pending at the time this Act takes effect before the Secretary of Health and Human Services with respect to functions vested (by reason of this Act, the amendments made thereby, and regulations prescribed thereunder) in the Social Security Board or the Commissioner of Social Security, except that such proceedings, to the extent that they relate to such functions, shall continue before such Board or Commissioner (as the case may be). Orders shall be issued under any such proceeding, appeals taken therefrom, and payments shall be made pursuant to such orders, in like manner as if this Act had not been enacted, and orders issued in any such proceeding shall continue in effect until modified, terminated, superseded, or repealed by such Board or Commissioner (as the case may be), by a court of competent jurisdiction, or by operation of law.

(c) Except as provided in this subsection—

(1) the provisions of this Act shall not affect suits commenced prior to the date this Act takes effect; and

(2) in all such suits proceedings shall be had, appeals taken, and judgments rendered, in the same manner and effect as if this Act had not been enacted.

No cause of action, and no suit, action, or other proceeding commenced by or against any officer in his official capacity as an officer of the Department of Health and Human Services, shall abate by reason of the enactment of this Act. Causes of action, suits, actions, or other proceedings may be asserted by or against the United States and the Social Security Agency, or such official of such Agency as may be appropriate, and, in any litigation pending when this section takes effect, the court may at any time, on its own motion or that of a party, enter an order which will give effect to the provisions of this subsection (including, where appropriate, an order for substitution of parties).

(d) This Act shall not have the effect of releasing or extinguishing any criminal prosecution, penalty, forfeiture, or liability incurred as a result of any function which (by reason of this Act, the amendments made thereby, and regulations prescribed thereunder) is vested in the Social Security Board or the Commissioner of Social Security.

(e) Orders and actions of the Social Security Board and the Commissioner of Social Security in the exercise of functions vested in such Board or Commissioner (as the case may be) under this Act (and the amendments made thereby) shall be subject to judicial review to the same extent and in the same manner as if such orders and actions had been taken by the Secretary of Health and Human Services in the exercise of such functions immediately preceding the effective date of this Act. Any statutory requirements relating to notice, hearings, action upon the record, or administrative review that apply to any function so vested in such Board or Commissioner shall continue to apply to the exercise of such function by such Board or Commissioner (as the case may be).

(f) In the exercise of the functions vested in the Social Security Board or the Commissioner of Social Security under this Act, the amendments made thereby, and regulations prescribed thereunder, such Board or Commissioner (as the case may be) shall have the same authority as that vested in the Secretary of Health and Human Services with respect to the exercise of such functions immediately preceding the vesting of the same in such Board or Commissioner, and actions of such Board or Commissioner shall have the same force and effect as when exercised by such Secretary.

BUDGETARY AND FISCAL AFFAIRS OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY AGENCY

SEC. 6. Section 703 of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows:

"BUDGETARY AND FISCAL AFFAIRS OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY AGENCY

"SEC. 703. (a) Appropriations requests of the Social Security Agency for staffing and personnel shall be based upon comprehensive workforce plans. The entire amount of appropriations provided for the administrative costs of the Social Security Agency shall be apportioned in the time period provided in title 31, United States Code, for apportionment and shall be apportioned for the entire period of availability without restriction or deduction by the apportioning officer or employee of the Office of Management and Budget or any other entity within the executive branch of the Federal Government, except as otherwise provided in this section.

"(b)(1) Authority of the Social Security Agency for automated data processing procurement and facilities construction shall be provided in the form of contract authority covering the total costs of such acquisitions, to be available until expended.

"(2) Amounts necessary for the liquidation of contract authority provided pursuant to this section are hereby made available from the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, and the Federal Supplemental Medical Insurance Trust Fund to the extent that the Social Security Board, with the concurrence of the Secretary of the Treasury, determines that any of such amounts to be provided from such Trust Fund are not necessary to meet the current obligations for benefit payments from such Trust Fund.

"(3) Funds appropriated for the Social Security Agency to be available on a contingency basis shall be apportioned only upon the occurrence of the stipulated contingency, as determined by the Social Security Board and reported to each House of the Congress.

"(c)(1) To the extent requested by the Commissioner, the Commissioner shall have—

"(A) all authorities permitted to be delegated under the provisions of Federal law codified under title 40 of the United States Code, that the Commissioner considers are necessary for the acquiring, operating, and maintaining of the facilities needed for the administration of programs for which the Commissioner is given responsibility under this Act,

"(B) all authorities permitted to be delegated under section 111 of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (40 U.S.C. 759), relating to the lease, purchase, or maintenance of automated data processing equipment, and

"(C) the authority to contract for any automated data processing equipment or services which the Commissioner considers necessary for the efficient and effective operation of such programs.

"(2) The Administrator of the General Services Administration shall provide any assistance requested by the Commissioner in assuming the delegations required under paragraph (1).".

REPORTS ASSESSING ORGANIZATIONAL CHANGES

SEC. 8. (a) Five years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Social Security Board, the Comptroller General of the United States, and the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall each submit to each House of the Congress a report setting forth in detail an assessment of the organizational changes made by this Act and the amendments made by this Act.

(b) Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Social Security Board, the Comptroller General of the United States, and the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall submit to each House of the Congress their recommendations for further technical and conforming amendments necessary to effectively and efficiently carry out the purposes of this Act.

EFFECTIVE DATE AND INTERIM RULES

SEC. 9. (a)(1) Sections 2, 3, 4, 5, and 7 of this Act shall take effect October 1, 1986.

(2) Notwithstanding the effective date set forth in paragraph (1), effective on the date of the enactment of this Act—

(A) the initial members of the Social Security Board may be appointed before such effective date, after the date of the enactment of this Act, and the Commissioner of Social Security, the Inspector General, the Chief Actuary, the Director of Policy Analysis and Legislation, and the General Counsel of the Social Security Agency may be appointed by such Board at any time after such initial members of the Social Security Board have been appointed,

(B) the persons appointed under subparagraph (A) shall be compensated from the date they first take office, at the rates provided for in the amendments to title 5, United States Code, made by sections 2(b) and 3(b) of this Act,

(C) such compensation and related expenses of such persons shall be paid from funds available in the Department of Health and Human Services for the functions vested in the Social Security Agency by this Act and the amendments made thereby, and

(D) the Social Security Board and the Commissioner of Social Security may each utilize, as appropriate, the services of such officers, employees, and other personnel of the Department of Health and Human Services, and funds appropriated to the functions of such Department to be transferred by this Act and the amendments made thereby, for such period of time as may reasonably be needed to facilitate the orderly implementation of this Act.

(b) The amendment made by section 6 of this Act shall apply with respect to fiscal years beginning on or after October 1, 1986.●

By Mr. MOYNIHAN (for himself and Mr. HEINZ):

S. 2923. A bill to amend title II of the Social Security Act to eliminate the 3-percent threshold amount for cost-of-living adjustments; to the Committee on Finance.

SOCIAL SECURITY COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENT ACT

● Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation that would ensure, on a permanent basis, that Social Security and supplemental security income beneficiaries, veteran pensioners, and railroad retirees will receive a timely cost-of-living adjustment every year that the Consumer Price Index rises.

Less than 2 weeks ago, the U.S. Senate approved overwhelmingly legislation I introduced to ensure that our Nation's 36 million Social Security recipients and 4 million SSI recipients will receive a COLA this January. That measure waived of a provision of the Social Security Act, this one time, that delays the payment of COLA whenever the CPI is below 3 percent. These 40 million American deserved no less.

As a result, single Americans on Social Security, receiving an average benefit of $425 a month, will receive an additional $12 each month, beginning next January. Couples on Social Security, who receive an average benefit of $700 a month, will receive an additional $21 each month. The most impoverished of our aged—those receiving SSI benefits—will receive an additional $108 in 1985 as a result of the COLA this coming January.

These sums—an extra $12 or $21 each month—may not seem to some to be worth much. But for elderly, blind, and disabled Americans, the millions of retirees who depend on those small sums of money, it will mean they can maintain the buying power of their current incomes. These are the citizens most vulnerable to inflation, because they cannot offset a rising cost of living by working harder.

The legislation I am introducing today would simply eliminate, on a permanent basis, this provision, section 215(i), that requires the CPI to rise at least 3 percent before beneficiaries may receive a COLA. There are three basic reasons for so doing.

In 1972, Congress set in place automatic cost-of-living adjustments of Social Security benefits, so our elderly, blind, and disabled citizens would not find themselves gradually impoverished, automatically if you will, by inflation. However, Congress decided such adjustment would be skipped whenever the annual price index rose by less than 3 percent. At the time, this was done for as much as anything, to save the bother of reprogramming the then-antiquated computers. The computer system is now much improved; today it is fully feasible, administratively, to provide a cost-of-living adjustment every year that prices rise.

Moreover, this change would in no way disturb the financial solvency of the OASDI trust funds, which we have worked so hard to achieve. The 3-percent trigger, I understand, likely will have no significant long-range costs. Permit me to explain.

Under current law, when the CPI does not rise at least 3 percent over the previous year, the COLA is delayed, not canceled, being calculated in the third quarter of the following year to cover the 2 previous years. Sooner or later, benefits are adjusted to take account of all increases in the CPI. Whenever the COLA is granted, the level of earnings subject to Social Security tax—the wage base—is likewise adjusted automatically, increasing trust fund income. This increase in trust fund income, then, offsets in part the cost of providing the COLA in years when the CPI rises by less then 3 percent. I would note that the increase in the wage base tied to the COLA we approved 2 weeks ago will affect only the top 8 percent of all wage earners.

There is another source of savings from this proposal. Under current law, as I noted, when a COLA is postponed because the CPI rises less than 3 percent, inflation is not permanently ignored. Beneficiaries lose a cost-of-living adjustment for 1 year, but the next year their benefits rise to reflect 2 years' worth of inflation. This arrangement, we now know, produces a double-dipping situation. If the COLA due in January 1985 is delayed until 1986, anyone retiring in 1985 would receive a benefit adjustment in January 1986 reflect a period of time before he or she had retired. This over adjustment would permanently raise their benefits.

The legislation we passed on July 26 prevents this from occurring in 1985, as the COLA will be paid on time. Initially, the trust funds will save some $0.1 billion and within 2 or 3 years the savings should grow to $0.3 billion per year. Thus, the one-time costs of providing the COLA increase of less than 3 percent will be substantially offset over the coming years by correcting the flaw in current law.

Should we, once again, be faced with a rise in consumer prices of less than 3 percent, and should we not take special action to grant the COLA on time, we would face the prospect of overcompensating a select group of retirees.

I urge my coleagues to join me in this effort to ensure the payment of a timely COLA to Social Security and SSI recipients, veteran pensioners, and railroad retirees. It likely ultimately will be a cost savings measure, but I urge my colleagues not to lose sight as well that this is a compassionate measure. Can we do less than guarantee an annual cost-of-living adjustment to millions of retired Americans, many on fixed incomes who desperately need the sums the annual COLA provide?

I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2923

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SHORT TITLE

SECTION 1. This Act may be cited as the "Social Security Cost-of-Living Adjustment Act of 1984".

AMENDMENTS TO SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

SEC. 2. (a) Section 215(i)(1)(B) of the Social Security Act (as currently in effect, and as in effect in December 1978 and applied in certain cases under such Act as in effect after December 1978) is amended by striking out "3 percent or more" and inserting in lieu thereof "greater than zero".

(b) Section 215(i)(2)(A)(ii) of such Act is amended, in the matter following subdivision (III), by striking out "The increase shall be derived by multiplying each of the amounts described in subdivisions (I), (II), and (III) (including each of those amounts as previously increased under this subparagraph) by the applicable percentage increase; and any" and inserting in lieu thereof "In the case of a benefit (described in subdivision (I)) or primary insurance amount of an individual who became eligible for an old-age or disability insurance benefit (as determined pursuant to subsection (a)(3)(B)), or who died prior to becoming eligible for such a benefit, in or before the year following the most recent prior year in which a cost-of-living increase became effective under this subparagraph, the increase shall be derived by multiplying each of the amounts described in subdivisions (I), (II), and (III) (including each of those amounts as previously increased under this subparagraph) by the applicable percentage increase. In the case of a benefit (described in subdivision (I)) or primary insurance amount of an individual not described in the preceding sentence, the increase shall be derived by multiplying each of the amounts described in subdivisions (I), (II), and (III) by a percentage equal to the applicable percentage increase which would be established under paragraph (1) if the quarter ending on the September 30 last preceding the year in which the individual became eligible for an old-age or disability benefit (as determined pursuant to subsection (a)(3)(B)), or died prior to becoming eligible for such benefits, had been a cost-of-living computation quarter. Any".

(c) Section 215(i)(4) of such Act is amended by inserting "and by the Social Security Cost-of-Living Adjustment Act of 1984" after "Social Security Amendments of 1983".

(d) Section 215(i)(5)(A)(1) of such Act is amended by striking out "was less than 3 percent" and inserting in lieu thereof "was not greater than zero".

SEC. 3. The amendments made by this Act shall apply to cost-of-living computation quarters ending on or after September 30, 1984.●

● Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, today Senator MOYNIHAN and I are introducing legislation to permanently eliminate the provision in the Social Security Act that prohibits cost-of-living adjustment [COLA] increases in any year in which the Consumer Price Index [CPI] is less than 3 percent. This bill simply corrects an outdated and technical problem in the law and in no way jeopardizes the long-term solvency of the trust funds achieved through the Social Security Amendments of 1983.

In 1972, Congress chose to build into the Social Security system an automatic mechanism to ensure that all Social Security and SSI beneficiaries receive yearly benefit increases directly tied to the CPI. This decision reflected a concern that the periodic ad hoc increases of the 1960's often overcompensated for inflation, and that everyone would benefit from predictable, standard COLA increases provided automatically, rather than through political grandstanding.

One technical aspect of the 1972 legislation was a provision to postpone the payment of a COLA increase in any year the CPI increased less than 3 percent. This was stipulated for purely administrative reasons—at the time, the Social Security Administration's computer system was very primitive, and any COLA increase consumed a great deal of administrative resources to execute. Due to improvements in SSA's computer capability, this is no longer the case, and there is no real justification for the 3-percent threshhold. The legislation we are introducing simply conforms the law to current administrative capacity.

Though the 3-percent threshold has been in the law since 1972, persistent high inflation has never triggered it. Other than Social Security experts, very few people were even aware of the existence of the 3-percent threshold until recently, and if it were activated, I am sure many in the public would assume that Congress had cut their benefits, and that many beneficiaries would suffer from an enormous amount of unneeded anxiety over a purely technical provision. The tremendous public confusion and misunderstanding surrounding the decision the Senate made 2 weeks ago to waive the 3-percent threshold this year confirms my belief that we should solve this problem once and for all.

The bill we are introducing will ensure the timely and accurate payment of COLA increases to this Nation's elderly and disabled. It will create no new costs for the trust funds, nor new burdens for the taxpayer. It extends the concept that COLA increases should be granted automatically, rather than through election-year political pressures. Most importantly, it provides a positive assurance to those who depend upon a fixed income that they will be protected from inflation, and that they will not have to suffer from unnecessary anxiety or uncertainty in a year in which the CPI increases by less than 3 percent.●

By Mr. JEPSEN:

S. 2924. A bill to amend title 5, United States Code, to require that any officer or employee of the Government convicted of a felony be removed from the civil service; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

REMOVAL FROM CIVIL SERVICE FOR FELONY CONVICTION

● Mr. JEPSEN. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation that would rectify an existing, outrageous situation in our Federal Government. In a nutshell, the legislation would require that a Federal employee, who is convicted of a felony, be fired. I was quite surprised to discover that there was a need for this kind of legislation, but under current law an adverse action against an employee of the civil service may be taken only "for such cause as will promote the efficiency of the service."

The Merit Systems Protection Board and the courts have interpreted that language to require that there be a connection, or nexus between the removal of the employee and a promotion of the efficiency of the civil service. Quite simply, this means that a felony conviction alone is not cause enough to fire a civil service employee.

Somehow this interpretation has created another of those situations where the emphasis is on caring for the criminal at the expense of the victim, or I should say victims—the victim of the felony and the taxpayer victim who must continue to pay the salary of our civil service felon.

I illustrate my point with real cases of record:

In 1977, an individual was convicted of the felonies of unlawful possession of controlled substances and marijuana. The agency removed the individual from the civil service, but the removal was reversed by a Federal court and the felon was reinstated.

In 1983, a Federal court reversed an agency removal action of an individual who had been sexually abusing his 7-year-old daughter for the past 3 years.

In 1983, a Federal court reversed an agency removal action of an employee who had been convicted of welfare fraud.

But the case which most clearly demonstrates how preposterous the current situation is began in 1982. In this case the convicted felon was a GS-13; he was convicted of conspiracy to defraud the Government. He was submitting false certifications to authorize payment for material not received from a commercial contractor. The Board recently reversed the removal action. This action by the Board requires the Government to give the convicted felon 2 years back pay. I emphasize give, because it is quite simply a gift. It is my understanding that this felon also has made a request for attorney's fees, which have been awarded in these kinds of cases in the past.

Mr. President, it's little wonder that the Government has problems of waste, fraud, and abuse when we have such ridiculous situations as cited above.

How would you feel if you were an employer and one of your employees was convicted of stealing from you, but you were forbidden to fire him—and on top of that you have to give him back pay—and possibly be required to pay his attorney? Do you think that result would hurt the morale and efficiency of the rest of your employees? Of course it would, and correspondence received from the FBI agent who labored long and hard on the case of the GS-13 criminal indicates just how demoralizing the reinstatement to employment of convicted criminals can be.

Mr. President, we have a large Government workforce, most of whom are hardworking, very able, and honest. They, as a group, have been under some fire for a number of years now. I believe that much of the criticism aimed at the civil servants comes about because of legislatively created situations such as those I have cited.

We can easily remedy this, by enacting this legislation which would simply require the removal of a civil servant after a felony conviction. The legislation would also eliminate all employee grievance appeal avenues for the convicted employee, but would not disturb in any manner the normal appeal and judicial review process relative to the criminal conviction.

The legislation also allows for reinstatement in certain instances if the conviction is vacated or overturned on appeal. Restoration of pay would be at the discretion of the agency concerned, but would be required if later court action resulted in a finding which amounted to an acquittal on the merits.

Mr. President, commonsense demands that we act quickly and responsibly to eliminate situations in which the U.S. Government is forced to retain and maintain convicted felons as employees. I look forward to getting the support of my colleagues to solve this critically serious problem.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2924

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That (a) chapter 75 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subchapter:

"SUBCHAPTER VI—REMOVAL FOR CRIMINAL CONVICTION

"§ 7551. Definitions

"For the purposes of this subchapter—

"(1) 'officer' does not include a justice or judge of the United States;

"(2) 'employee' includes individuals described in the first sentence of subsection 2105 (c) of this title;

"(3) 'convicted', when used with respect to an officer or employee tried for a felony in a court of general jurisdiction in a State or in a United States district court, means that a judgment that the officer or employee is guilty of the felony has been entered by the court in the records of such court as a disposition of the proceedings and that the judgment is final for the purposes of appeal; and

"(4) 'felony' means—

"(A) any offense in violation of a law of the United States classified as a felony under section 1 of title 18;

"(B) any offense in violation of a law of any State, any possession or territory of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Panama Canal Zone, or the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, which at the time the offense was committee was classified as a felony by the law of the place where that offense was committed; or

"(C) any offense in violation of a law of any other sovereign if that offense would be classified as a felony under section 1 of title 18.

"§ 7552. Cause and procedure

"(a) Any officer or employee who is convicted of a felony shall be removed from office or employment.

"(b) A removal action pursuant to subsection (a) of this section shall be completed within 30 days after the date the employing agency receives notice of the conviction. Failure to take such action within such period shall not be a bar to the removal action.

"(c) Not later than fourteen days before the date an officer or employee is removed pursuant to subsection (a) of this section, the agency employing the officer or employee shall transmit a notice of the removal to the officer or employee. The notice shall include the date and time the removal takes effect and a copy of the court document recording the conviction.

"(d) The provisions of chapter 77 of this title do not apply in the case of an officer or employee removed under subsection (a) of this section. Removal actions under such subsection shall not be reviewable by any court of the United States.

"§ 7553. Reinstatement

"(a) The head of an agency who removed a former officer or employee pursuant to section 7552 of this title may reinstate the former officer or employee to the same position or a similar vacant position in the civil service if, after the date of the removal—

"(1) the conviction upon which the removal is based is vacated by the court that convicted the individual or by a higher court;

"(2)(A) the court action is based on a finding that the evidence was insufficient to support the conviction and the head of the agency determines that further judicial proceedings on the matter giving rise to the initial conviction are unlikely to be commenced; or

"(B) in the case of a retrial—

"(i) the former officer or employee is acquitted; or

"(ii) further judicial proceedings are terminated and the vacation of the previous conviction was based on a finding that the evidence was insufficient to support the conviction; and

"(3) the former officer or employee transmits to the head of the agency a written request for reinstatement as provided in subsection (b) of this section.

"(b) For the purposes of subsection (a)(3) of this section, a request for reinstatement may be transmitted to the head of an agency not later than 90 days after the date of the court action described in subsection (a)(1) of this section or, in the case of an acquittal in a retrial or a termination of a retrial, not later than 90 days after the date of the acquittal or termination.

"(c)(1) An officer or employee who, after removal under section 7552 of this title, is reinstated pursuant to subsection (a) of this section by reason of an acquittal or a court action based on a finding of insufficiency of the evidence is entitled to be paid the amount of the pay lost by reason of the removal, computed as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection. In the case of an officer or employee who for any other reason is reinstated after removal under section 7552 of this title, the head of the agency employing the reinstated officer or employee may pay the officer or employee the amount of the pay lost by reason of the removal, computed as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection.

"(2) For the purposes of paragraph (1) of this subsection, the amount of the pay lost by a reinstated employee by reason of a removal under section 7552 of this title is equal to the excess of the amount of the pay the employee would have received by reason of employment by the Government if the employee had not been removed under such section over the total of any amounts earned by the employee through other employment during the period the removal was in effect.".

(b) The chapter analysis at the beginning of such chapter is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"SUBCHAPTER VI—REMOVAL FOR CRIMINAL CONVICTION

"Sec. 7551. Definitions.
"Sec. 7552. Cause and Procedure.
"Sec. 7553. Reinstatement.".

SEC. 2. The amendments made by this Act shall take effect with respect to judgments of conviction entered by a court after the date of enactment of this Act.●

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 134—CONGRATULATING MARY T. MEAGHER FOR THE ACCOMPLISHMENTS IN THE XXIII OLYMPIAD

Mr. HUDDLESTON (for himself and Mr. FORD) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation:

S. CON. RES. 34

Whereas, Mary T. Meagher of Louisville, Kentucky has won three gold medals for swimming in the XXIII Olympiad:

Whereas, "Mary T.'s" efforts in the 100-meter butterfly, the 200-meter butterfly, and on the butterfly leg of the 400 meter team relay all set Olympic or world records:

Whereas, "Mary T." has had the strong and united support of her Kentucky family in the pursuit of her goals; now therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (The House of Representatives concurring), That it is the sense of Congress that Mary T. Meagher be heartily congratulated for her outstanding accomplishment in the XXIII Olympiad: and that the Congress urges all young American athletes to draw inspiration from the example of discipline, training, hard work, and ability provided by Mary T., a superior competitor who has brought distinction to herself, her family, her coaches, her state and her nation.

● Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. President, "Madame Butterfly Swims to Victory" "Three Golds for Mary T." Around the world, these and similar headlines herald the magnificent athletic achievements of Louisvillian Mary T. Meagher in the Los Angeles Olympic games.

And correctly so. Mary T., the 9th of 10 children in the Mr. and Mrs. James L. Meagher family, set the swimming world on its ear last week with her brilliant performances in the 100-meter butterfly, the 200-meter butterfly, and as the butterfly leg in the 400-meter team relay. Mary T. set Olympic records in both the 100 and 200 and swam the fastest butterfly relay leg in history.

Mary T.'s dedication and rededication in the pursuit of these great accomplishments are legend. From her preteen victories at Lakeside Swim Club in Louisville, to her litany of international meet championships and world records, to her overwhelming disappointment over the 1980 Olympic boycott, to her triumphs in Los Angeles, Mary T. has shown the world the value of hard work. The thousands of miles she has put in have paid off. They should. She exemplifies the American spirit and should serve as an inspiration to all of us.

Along with viewing Mary T. win her gold medals, the world has also been treated to an almost unbelievable show of family support for this great athlete. Mary T. T-shirts, Mary T. hats, the gigantic cardboard T for victory insignia, and, most impressive of all, the Mary T. cheering section in the front row of the swimming stadium—brothers, sisters, cousins, aunts, uncles seemed to be everywhere, eager to demonstrate their support for their champion. It is not likely we will soon see a more poignant portrait of the American family.

Mary T. is everyone's champion now and, with the rest of the world, I offer my hearty congratulations to her and her family for a job well done.

In recognition of her efforts, I offer, on behalf of Senator FORD and myself, this concurrent resolution.●

On page 105, between lines 21 and 22, insert the following:

SEC. 305. (a) The Senate finds that—

(1) in 1974 delegations representing the governments of 136 countries, including the United States, unanimously endorsed a statement of the World Population Conference which calls for efforts to address population growth in the context of goals for socioeconomic development and also recognizes both the rights and the responsibilities of all couples to family planning;

(2) in 1984, global population is projected to increase by more than 80 million people, the largest annual increase in the history of the world;

(3) a recent study by the National Academy of Sciences, which is supported by numerous other studies, finds that "family planning programs have a significant, independent effect over and above socioeconomic factors" on the decline of fertility in developing countries;

(4) for two decades and with repeated bipartisan leadership, the Congress has committed the United States Government to strong support for international, voluntary population and family planning programs;

(5) in the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, the Congress states as national policy that "voluntary population planning programs can make a substantial contribution to economic development, higher living standards, and improved health and nutrition";

(6) in 1982, the Agency for International Development (hereafter in this subsection referred to as "AID") accurately expressed the intent of the Congress regarding support for population and family planning by stating: "Assistance for voluntary population and family planning programs is an essential part of a cost effective program of United States development assistance";

(7) as part of the United Staes commitment to voluntary population and family planning the Congress specifically has given high priority to United States support for the work of nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) in voluntary population and family planning programs in developing countries;

(8) the Congress has prohibited the use of United States population assistance to pay for abortion as a method of family planning, and AID repeatedly has reported to the Congress, based on ongoing audits, that AID funds are not spent for these activities or any other activities not conducted in accordance with applicable Federal laws and regulations;

(9) the conference report of the International Security and Development Cooperation Act of 1981 asserts that the prohibitions on abortion funding authorized by the Act sufficiently constitute the "necessary limits on United States support for international population planning programs with respect to concern about adequate directives against promotion of abortion-related activities";

(10) the AID document of September 1982 entitled "Policy Paper: Population Assistance" sets forth United States population assistance policy as authorized by law;

(1) the House of Representatives has reiterated its support for this policy again in 1984 with its passage of the International Security and Development Cooperation Act of 1984, and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate has done the same with its own version of the International Security and Development Cooperation Act; and released by AID departs from congressional authorization and intent as well as current practice with respect to furnishing United States population assistance.

(12) the July 13, 1984, "Policy Statement: International Conference on Population"

(b) The Senate hereby reaffirms the commitment of the United States, as set forth in section 104 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 and as evidenced by funding in annual appropriations Acts, to the furnishing of population assistance.

(c) It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) United States policy toward furnishing such assistance, and the administration of such assistance, should continue to comply faithfully with the intent of Congress in enacting such Acts; and

(2) the President, in furnishing population assistance, should not deny funds to any multilateral institution or any nongovernmental or private and voluntary organization because of the participation by such institution or organization, paid for with funds derived from private, non-governmental sources, in any activity involving population growth or family planning which is carried out in accordance with all applicable Federal laws and regulations.

KENNEDY AMENDMENT NO. 3623

Mr. KENNEDY proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 6040, supra; as follows:

To be inserted at page 73 after line 26 in H.R. 6040: "None of the funds appropriated in this bill for the purpose of providing military assistance to the Government of El Salvador shall be available after October 1, 1984, for obligation or expenditure unless the President has, by that date, prepared and transmitted to the Congress a report stating his determination that the Government of El Salvador has demonstrated progress towards free elections, land reform, freedom of association, the establishment of the rule of law and an effective judicial system, and the termination of the activities of the so-called death squads, including vigorus action against members of such squads who are guilty of crimes and prosecution to the extent possible of such members who are past offenders."

HELMS AMENDMENT NO. 3624

Mr. HELMS proposed an amendment to amendment No. 3622 proposed by Mr. PACKWOOD (and others) to the bill H.R. 6040, supra; as follows:

At the end of the pending amendment, add the following:

"Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, it is the sense of Congress that the President is to be commended for his outstanding leadership in condemning abortion at home and abroad as a grave injustice against unborn human beings and that, consistent with law, the President should be encourgaged to continue to modify the domestic and foreign polices of the United States Government to protect unborn human beings from the violence of abortion.".

DIXON (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 3625

Mr. DIXON (for himself, Mr. BRADLEY, Mr. SARBANES, Mr. DODD, Mr. MOYNIHAN, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. RANDOLPH, Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. RIEGLE, and Mr. LAUTENBERG) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 6040, supra, as follows:

On page 24, line 17, strike out "$60,000,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$120,000.000".

On page 25, line 19, strike out "$60,000,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$120,000,000".

GORTON (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 3626

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. GORTON (for himself, Mr. HATFIELD, Mr. PACKWOOD, Mr EVANS, Mr. WILSON, and Mr. CRANSTON) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them to the bill H.R. 6040, supra; as follows:

At the end of the bill, add the following:

SEC. . (a) For purposes of paragraph (2) of section 7(b) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 636(b)), the Administrator of the Small Business Administration shall, with respect to small business concerns involved in the fishing industry, treat the recent El-Nino related ocean conditions as a disaster to which such paragraph applies.

(b For purposes of subsection (a)—

(1) the term "recent El Nino-related ocean conditions" means the ocean conditions (including high water temperatures, scarcity of prey, and absence of normal upwellings)—

(A) which occured in the eastern Pacific Ocean off the west coast of the North American Continent during the period beginning with June 1982 and ending at the close of December 1983, and

(B) which resulted from the climatic conditions occurring in the Equatorial Pacific during 1982 and 1983;

(2) the term "fishing industry" means any trade or business involved in—

(A) the catching taking, or harvesting of fish (whether or not sold on a commericial basis).

(B) any operation at sea or on land, in preperation for, or substantially dependent upon, the catching, taking, or harvesting of fish, and

(C) the processing or canning of fish (including storage, refrigeration, and transporation of fish before processing or canning); and

(3) the term "fish" means finfish, mullusks, crustaceans, and all other forms of marine animal and plant life other than marine mammels and birds.

BOREN (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 3627

Mr. BOREN (for himself, Mr. BENTSEN, Mr. DOLE, Mrs. KASSEBAUM, Mr. NICKLES, and Mr. BAUCUS) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 6040, supra; as follows:

On page 5, between lines 15 and 16 insert the following:

"1985 WHEAT PROGRAM

"Section 107B(e) of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1445b-1(e)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

" '(9) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection, in carrying out acreage limitation and land diversion programs for the 1985 crop of wheat, the Secretary shall permit all or any part of the acreage diverted from production under such programs by participating producers to be devoted to grazing except during five of the principal growing months, as determined for each State by the State committee established under section 8(b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act.".

WILSON AMENDMENT NO. 3628

Mr. WILSON proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 6040, supra; as follows:

On page 59 after line 14 insert the following new section:

"None of the funds appropriated in this Act for Military Construction, Navy may be obligated unless the Secretary of the Navy executes the real estate transaction required by Section 812 of Public Law 98-115 prior to September 30, 1984.".

MATHIAS (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 3629

Mr. MATHIAS (for himself, Mr. BAKER, Mr. PERCY, Mr. PELL, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. CRANSTON, Mr. BOSCHWITZ, Mr. PRYOR, Mr. DANFORTH, Mr. ZORINSKY, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. INOUYE, Mr. MATSUNAGA, Mr. TSONGAS, Mr. RIEGLE, Mr. JEPSON, Mr. DURENBERGER, Mr. HOLLINGS, and Mr. KASTEN) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 6040, supra; as follows:

On page 105, between lines 21 and 22, insert the following:

TITLE IV—UNITED STATES SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM FOR DEVELOPING COUNTRIES ACT

SHORT TITLE

SEC. 401. This title may be cited as the "United States Scholarship Program for Developing Countries Act".

DEFINITION

SEC. 402. For purposes of this title, the term "institution of higher education" has the same meaning as given to such term by section 1201 (a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965.

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

SEC. 403. The purpose of this title is to establish an undergraduate scholarship program designed to bring students of limited financial means from developing countries to the United States for study at American institutions of higher education.

FINDINGS AND POLICY

SEC. 404. The Congress finds and declares that—

(1) it is in the national interest for the United States Government to provide a stable source of financial support to give students in developing countries the opportunity to study in the United States, both to improve the range and quality of educational alternatives, to increase mutual understanding, and to build lasting links between those countries and the United States;

(2) providing scholarships to foreign students to study in the United States has proven over time to be an effective means of creating strong bonds between the United States and the future leadership of developing nations and, at the same time, assists nations substantially in their development efforts;

(3) study in United States institutions by foreign students enhances trade and economic relationships by providing strong English language skills and establishing professional and business contacts;

(4) students from families of limited financial means have in the past largely not had the opportunity to study in the United States, and scholarship programs sponsored by the United States have made no provision for identifying, preparing, or supporting such students for study in the United States;

(5) it is essential that the United States citizenry develop its knowledge and understanding of the developing countries and their languages, cultures, and socio-economic composition as these areas assume an ever larger role in the world community;

(6) the number of United States Government-sponsored scholarships for students in developing countries has been exceeded as much as twelve times in a given year by the number of scholarships offered by Soviet-bloc governments to students in developing countries, and that this disparity entails the serious long-run cost of having so many of the potential future leaders of the developing world educated in Soviet-bloc countries;

(7) an undergraduate scholarship program for students of limited financial means from developing countries to study in the United States would complement current assistance efforts in the areas of advanced education and training of people of developing countries in such disciplines as are required for planning and implementation of public and private development activities; and

(8) the Bipartisan Commission on Central America has recommended a program of 10,000 United States Government-sponsored scholarships to bring Central American students to the United States, which program would involve careful targeting to encourage participation by young people from all social and economic classes, would maintain existing admission standards by providing intensive English and other training, and would encourage graduates to return to their home countries after completing their education.

PROGRAM AUTHORITY

SEC. 405. (a) The President is authorized and directed, acting through the United States Information Agency, to provide by loan or grant for citizens and nationals of developing countries, who have completed their secondary education but who would not otherwise have an opportunity to study in the United States due to financial limitations, to study, beginning with the academic year 1985-1986 or any academic year thereafter, at an American institution of higher education.

(b) To encourage students to use their training in their countries of origin, half of each payment to a student shall be in the form of a loan with repayment to be forgiven upon the student's prompt return to his or her country of origin for a period of no less than the equivalent of the years spent studying in the United States plus one.

(c) Before allocating any of the funds made available to carry out this title, the President shall consult with United States educational institutions, educational exchange organizations, United States missions, and the governments of participating countries on how to implement the guidelines specified in section 406.

GUIDELINES

SEC. 406. Programs under section 405 shall be carried out in accordance with the following guidelines:

(1) Consistent with section 112(b) of the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961, all programs created pursuant to this title shall be nonpolitical and balanced, and shall be administered in keeping with the highest standards of academic integrity.

(2) United States missions shall design ways to identify promising students in secondary educational institutions, or who have completed their secondary education, for study in the United States. These missions shall develop and strictly implement specific economic need criteria. Grants or loans available under this title may only be provided to students who meet the economic need criteria.

PROGRAM AUTHORITY

SEC. 405. (a) The President is authorized and directed, acting through the United States Information Agency, to provide by loan or grant for citizens and nationals of developing countries, who have completed their secondary education but who would not otherwise have an opportunity to study in the United States due to financial limitations, to study, beginning with the academic year 1985-1986 or any academic year thereafter, at an American institution of higher education.

(b) To encourage students to use their training in their countries of origin, half of each payment to a student shall be in the form of a loan with repayment to be forgiven upon the student's prompt return to his or her country of origin for a period of no less than the equivalent of the years spent studying in the United States plus one.

(c) Before allocating any of the funds made available to carry out this title, the President shall consult with United States educational institutions, educational exchange organizations, United States missions, and the governments of participating countries on how to implement the guidelines specified in section 406.

GUIDELINES

SEC. 406. Programs under section 405 shall be carried out in accordance with the following guidelines:

(1) Consistent with section 112 (b) of the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961, all programs created pursuant to this title shall be nonpolitical and balanced, and shall be administered in keeping with the highest standards of academic integrity.

(2) United States missions shall design ways to identify promising students in secondary educational institutions, or who have completed their secondary education, for study in the United States. These missions shall develop and strictly implement specific economic need criteria. Grants or loans available under this title may only be provided to students who meet the economic need criteria.

(3) Programs financed under this title shall utilize educational institutions in the United States and in developing countries to help participants in the programs acquire necessary skills in English and other appropriate education training.

(4) Each participant from a developing country shall be selected on the basis of academic and leadership potential and the economic, political, and social development needs of such country. Such needs shall be determined by each United States mission in consultation with the government of the respective country. Scholarship opportunities shall emphasize fields that are critical to the development of the participant's country, including agriculture, civil engineering, communications, social science, education, public and business administration, health, nutrition, environmental studies, population and family planning, and energy.

(5) The programs shall be flexible in order to take advantage of different training and educational opportunities offered by universities, postsecondary vocational training schools, and community colleges in the United States.

(6) The programs shall be flexible with respect to the number of years of undergraduate education they would provide but in no case shall students be brought to the United States for a period less than one year.

(7) Adequate allowance shall be made in the scholarship grant for the purchase of books and related educational material relevant to the program of study.

(8) Further allowance shall be made to provide adequate opportunities for professional, academic, and cultural enrichment for scholarship recipients.

(9) The scholarship program created by this title shall, to the maximum extent practicable, offer equal opportunities for both male and female students to study in the United States.

AUTHORITY TO ENTER INTO AGREEMENTS

SEC. 407. the President is further authorized to enter into agreements with foreign governments in furtherance of the purposes of this title. Such agreements may provide for the creation or continuation of binational or multinational educational and cultural foundations and commissions for the purposes of administering programs under this title.

POLICY REGARDING OTHER INTERNATIONAL EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMS

SEC. 408. (a) The Congress urges the administrator of the agency primarily responsible for administering part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, in implementing programs authorized under that part, to increase assistance for undergraduate scholarships for students of limited financial means from developing countries to study in the United States at American institutions of higher education. To the maximum extent practicable, such scholarship assistance shall be furnished in accordance with the guidelines contained in section 406 of this title.

(b) The Congress urges the President to take such steps as are necessary to expand the opportunities for Americans from all economic classes to study in developing countries.

ESTABLISHMENT AND MAINTENANCE OF COUNSELING SERVICES

SEC. 409. (a) For the purpose of assisting foreign students in choosing fields of study, selecting appropriate institutions of higher education, and preparing for their stay in the United States, the President may make suitable arrangements for counselling and orientation services abroad.

(b) For the purposes of assisting foreign students in making the best use of their opportunities while attending colleges and universities in the United States, and assisting such students in directing their talents and initiative into channels which will make them more effective leaders upon return to their native lands, the President may make suitable arrangements by contract or otherwise for the establishment and maintenance at educational institutions in the United States attended by foreign students of an adequate counseling service.

BOARD OF FOREIGN SCHOLARSHIPS

SEC. 410. The Board of Foreign Scholarships is directed to advise and assist the President in the discharge of programs authorized by this title, in accordance with the guidelines set forth in section 406. The President is authorized to provide for additional necessary secretarial and staff assistance for the Board as may be required under this title.

GENERAL AUTHORITIES

SEC. 411. (a) The public and private sectors in the United States and in the developing countries shall be encouraged to contribute to the costs of the programs financed under this title.

(b) The President shall seek to engage the public and private sectors of developing countries in programs to maximize the utilization of program participants upon their return to their own countries.

(c) The President is authorized to provide for publicity and promotion abroad of the scholarship program provided for in this title.

ENGLISH TEACHING, TEXTBOOKS, AND OTHER TEACHING MATERIALS

SEC. 412. Wherever adequate facilities or materials are not available to carry out the purposes of section 406(3) in the applicant's country and the President determines that the purposes of of this title are the best served by providing the preliminary training in the participant's country, the President's may, by purchase, contract, or other appropriate means, provide the necessary materials and instructors to achieve such purpose.

FUNDING

SEC. 413. (a) Except as provided in subsection (b), funds to carry out the provisions of this title for a fiscal year shall be available only from appropriations made to the United States Information Agency for such fiscal year.

(b) None of the funds appropriated to the United States Information Agency for the fiscal year 1984 or 1985 to carry out section 102(a)(b) of the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961 may be available to provide financial assistance under this title.

REPORTING REQUIREMENT

SEC. 414. Not later than one year after the date of enactment of this title, and at intervals of one year thereafter, the President shall submit to the Congress a report on activities carried on and expenditures made pursuant to this title.

RUDMAN (AND HOLLINGS) AMENDMENTS NOS. 3630 AND 3631

Mr. RUDMAN (for himself and Mr. HOLLINGS) proposed two amendments to the bill H.R. 6040, supra, as follows:

AMENDMENT No. 3630

On page 13, strike all beginning with the word "Notwithstanding" on line 9, through the word "Act" on line 14 and insert in lieu thereof:

Notwithstanding section 8(b) of the Board for International Broadcasting Act of 1973, as amended, the amounts placed in reserve, or which would be placed in reserve, in fiscal year 1984 pursuant to that section, shall be available to the Board for carrying out the Act until September 30, 1985.

AMENDMENT No. 3631

GENERAL PROVISION—DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Notwithstanding the provisions of 31 U.S.C. 1342, the Attorney General is hereby authorized to accept, receive, hold, and administer on behalf of the United States, gifts of money, personal property, and services, for the purpose of hosting the meeting of the General Assembly of the International Criminal Police Organization (INTERPOL) in the United States in September and October, 1985. All moneys received for this purpose shall be credited to the appropriation "Salaries and expenses, general legal activities" notwithstanding 31 U.S.C. 3302. The Attorney General is further authorized to use otherwise available funds from the appropriation "Salaries and expenses, general legal activities" for fiscal year 1984, 1985, and 1986 as he deems necessary, to pay expenses of hosting such General Assembly meeting, including but not limited to reception and representation expenses. The authority of the Attorney General under this section shall continue through September 30, 1986.

KENNEDY AMENDMENT NO. 3632

Mr. KENNEDY proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 6040, supra, as follows:

On page 6, line 23, strike all through page 7, line 2 and insert in lieu thereof:

For an additional amount for "Economic development assistance programs," $26,000,000, to remain available until expended, pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 3151(1) of which $7,000,000 is for a grant to the Institute for Technology Development in the State of Mississippi, and of which $19,000,000 is for a grant to Boston University for the construction and related costs of the university engineering and technical training center.

RUDMAN (AND HOLLINGS) AMENDMENT NO. 3633

Mr. RUDMAN (for himself and Mr. HOLLINGS) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 6040, supra; as follows:

On page 10, line 16, after "1983," strike "and 1984" and insert in lieu thereof: "1984, 1985, and hereafter".

RUDMAN AMENDMENT NO. 3634

Mr. RUDMAN proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 6040, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, add the following new section:

GENERAL PROVISION—LEGAL SERVICES CORPORATION

Upon the enactment of the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1985, the first proviso under the heading "Legal Services Corporation, Payment to the Legal Services Corporation", in title II of the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1985 is amended to read as follows: "Provided, That the funds appropriated in this paragraph shall be expended in accordance with the provisions under the heading 'Legal Services Corporation, Payment to the Legal Services Corporation' contained in Public Law 98-166 except that 'fiscal year 1984', wherever it appears in such provisions, shall be construed as 'fiscal year 1985', 'fiscal year 1983', wherever it appears in such provisions, shall be construed as 'fiscal year 1984'; 'January 1, 1984' shall be construed as 'January 1, 1985'; '$6.50' shall be construed as '$7.61'; and '$13' shall be construed as '$13.57'; and shall not be denied to any grantee or contractor which received funding from the Corporation in fiscal year 1984 as a result of activities which during fiscal year 1984 have been found by an independent hearing officer appointed by the President of the Corporation not to constitute grounds for a denial of refunding:".

ANDREWS (AND WEICKER) AMENDMENT NO. 3635

Mr. ANDREWS (for himself and Mr. WEICKER) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 6040, supra; as follows:

At the end of the bill, add the following new section:

SEC. . Section 5532(f)(2) of Title V United States Code is amended by striking "December 31, 1984" and inserting "December 31, 1985" in lieu thereof.

EVANS (AND GORTON) AMENDMENT NO. 3636

Mr. EVANS (for himself and Mr. GORTON) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 6040, supra; as follows:

On page 20, after line 2, add

"If the State of Washington, the Yakima Indian Nation, or any other entity, public or private, prior to an authorization or the providing of an appropriation of funds to the Secretary of the Interior to construct the Yakima River Basin Water Enhancement Project (hereinafter, Yakima Enhancement Project), shares in the costs of or constructs any physical element of that project, including any reregulating dam or fish passage facility, and conveys the same to the United States, the costs incurred by the State, the Yakima Indian Nation, or any other entity in the construction of such elements shall be credited to the total amount of any costs to be borne by the State, the Yakima Indian Nation, or any other entity as contributions toward payment of the cost of the Yakima Enhancement Project; except that no such credit shall be given for any element constructed by the State, the Yakima Indian Nation, or any other entity unless the element has been approved by the Secretary of the Interior prior to its construction. The Secretary shall grant such approval, when requested by the State, the Yakima Indian Nation, or other entity, if the Secretary determines that the element proposed for construction would be an integral part of the Yakima Enhancement Project. The Secretary is authorized to accept title to any reregulating dam or fish passage facility constructed by the State, the Yakima Indian Nation, or any other entity, pursuant to this section, without giving compensation therefor, and thereafter to operate and maintain such facilities. Any such facility shall be operated by the Secretary in a manner consistent with the treaty rights of the Yakima Indian Nation, Federal reclamation law, and water rights established pursuant to State law, including the valid contract rights of irrigation users. The Secretary of the Interior shall negotiate and enter into agreements for the payment of operation and maintenance costs pursuant to Federal reclamation law and other applicable law: Provided, That operation and maintenance costs related to anadromous fish, including costs at facilities in the Yakima River Basin authorized to be constructed by the Secretary of the Interior, which are in excess of present obligations, as determined by the Secretary, shall be nonreimbursable and nonreturnable.".

DOMENICI AMENDMENT NO. 3637

Mr. DOMENICI proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 6040, supra, as follows:

On page 34, line 16, insert before the period the following ": Provided further, That section 3 of the Act entitled "An Act to improve the administration of the Historic Sites, Buildings and Antiquities Act of 1935 (49 Stat. 666)", approved September 8, 1980 (Public Law 96-344) is repealed."

JOHNSTON AMENDMENT NO. 3638

Mr. JOHNSTON proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 6040, supra; as follows:

On page 34 line 2 in front of the period insert the following: "and legislation to establish a National Wildlife Refuge within the Atchafalaya Basin if enacted."

BAUCUS (AND PRYOR) AMENDMENT NO. 3639

Mr. BAUCUS (for himself and Mr. PRYOR) proposed an amendment to the bill (H.R. 6040) supra, as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following new section:

SEC. . (a) The Congress finds that—

(1) high interest rates are devastating American farmers and small businesses;

(2) the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System sets monetary policy which dramatically affects interest rates;

(3) on June 4, 1984, President Reagan appointed Martha Seger to a full term on the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System;

(4) article II, section 2, clause 2 of the Constitution empowers the President to obtain the "Advice and Consent of the Senate" to appoint certain Federal officers;

(5) the Senate Banking Committee, consistent with the Senate's constitutional duties, held four days of hearings on the Seger nomination;

(6) on June 29, 1984, the Senate Banking Committee reported her nomination by vote of 10 to 8;

(7) on July 2, 1984, President Reagan submitted the name of Martha Seger as an appointee to the Federal Reserve Board during an intra-session recess;

(8) this intra-session appointment intentionally circumvents the advice and consent process prescribed by the Constitution;

(9) Martha Seger has no background in agriculture or small business;

(10) on March 1, 1984, the Senate resolved by a vote of 50 to 37 that the next nominee to the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System should be a person with a background in agriculture or small business; and

(11) farmers, small businesses, and consumers continue to be at the mercy of high interest rates and Federal Reserve monetary policy management.

(b) It is the sense of the Congress that President Reagan should—

(1) withdraw the recess nomination of Martha Seger to the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System; and

(2) with the full advice and consent of the Senate, nominate a person to the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System with a background in agriculture or small business.

CONSUMER LEASE AND LEASE-PURCHASE AGREEMENT ACT

TRIBLE AMENDMENT NO. 3640

Mr. TRIBLE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed to the bill (S. 2851) an original bill to authorize depository institution holding companies to engage in certain activities of a financial nature and in certain securities activities, to provide for the safe and sound operation of depository institutions, and for other purposes, as follows:

Beginning with page 51, line 24, strike out all through page 52, line 2, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(2) This subsection does not prohibit—

"(A) the continuation of such an affiliation which commenced prior to June 27, 1984, or which commences as a result of the approval of an application for the acquisition of a savings and loan association that was completed and pending before the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation on June 27, 1984, where the acquisition results in the formation of a unitary savings and loan holding company; or

"(B) The establishment of such an officer, director, or employee relationship in connection with an affiliation described in subparagraph (A).

SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS, 1984

BIDEN (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 3641

Mr. BIDEN (for himself, Mr. NUNN, Mr. MATTINGLY, Mr. SARBANES, Mr. EAST, Mr. BUMPERS, Mr. RANDOLPH, Mr. PRYOR, Mr. DENTON, and Mr. HOLLINGS) proposed an amendment to the bill (H.R. 6040) supra, as follows:

On page 105, between lines 21 and 22, insert the following new section:

SEC. 305. (a) The Congress finds that—

(1) the export of American poultry meat products has reduced our nation's annual trade deficit by over $275,000,000 but has declined for two straight years;

(2) an even more drastic decline in the exports of American shell eggs has occurred over the same period of time and many foreign markets have been completely lost;

(3) the decline of such exports is largely a result of the use of unfair trade subsidies for poultry and egg exports by countries of the European Economic Community and Brazil;

(4) the United States has been engaged for almost three years in negotiations with such countries to end the use of such subsidies but has been unable to make substantial progress in ending such subsidies; and

(5) further negotiations to end the use of such subsidies are expected to be held in October, 1984.

(b) It is the sense of the Congress that the President should use all practicable means to negotiate an end to the use of unfair trade subsidies for poultry and egg exports by countries of the European Economic Community and Brazil in order to permit American producers to compete more fairly in international markets and to avoid the imposition of such subsidies by the United States.

ABDNOR AMENDMENT NO. 3642

Mr. ABDNOR proposed an amendment to the bill (H.R. 6040) supra; as follows:

On page 62, after line 11 insert the following:

UNITED STATES CUSTOMS SERVICE

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

For an additional amount for "Salaries and expense, United States Customs Service", $3,000,000, to be derived by transfer from "Salaries and expenses, United States Secret Service", to remain available until expended.

HUDDLESTON (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 3643

Mr. HUDDLESTON (for himself, Mr. BOREN, Mr. EXON, Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. SASSER, and Mr. ZORINSKY) proposed an amendment to the bill (H.R. 6040) supra; as follows:

On page 4, line 19, after "$25,000,000", insert the following: "; and guaranteed operating loans, $650,000,000, to remain available until September 30, 1985: Provided, That operating loans shall be available for the refinancing of existing indebtedness, as provided under section 312(a)(7) of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act (7 U.S.C. 1942(a)(7))".

HATCH AND KENNEDY AMENDMENT NO. 3644

Mr. HATCH (for himself and Mr. KENNEDY) proposed an amendment to the bill (H.R. 6040) supra; as follows:

On page 45, between lines 22 and 23, insert the following:

DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITIES ASSISTANCE

For an additional amount for carrying out part B of the Developmental Disabilities Assistance and Bill of Rights Act, $387,000.

TRANSFER AND ALLOCATIONS OF APPROPRIATIONS AND PERSONNEL

SEC. 10. (a) The personnel (including members of the Senior Executive Service) employed in connection with, and the assets, liabilities, contracts, property, records, and unexpended balance of appropriations, authorizations, allocations, and other funds employed, held, used, arising from, available to or to be made available in connection with, any function transferred by section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 or section 4 of this Act, subject to section 1531 of title 31, United States Code, shall be transferred to the head of the agency to which such function is transferred for appropriate allocation. Personnel employed in connection with functions so transferred, or transferred in accordance with any other lawful authority, shall be transferred in accordance with any applicable laws and regulations relating to transfer of functions. Unexpended funds transferred pursuant to this subsection shall only be used for the purpose for which the funds were originally authorized and appropriated.

(b) In order to facilitate the transfers made by section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 and section 4 of this Act, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget is authorized and directed, in consultation with the Civil Aeronautics Board and the heads of the agencies to which functions are so transferred, to make such determinations as may be necessary with regard to the functions so transferred, and to make such additional incidental dispositions of personnel, assets, liabilities, contracts, property, records, and unexpended balances of appropriations, authorizations, allocations, and other funds held, used, arising from, available to, or to be made available in connection with, such functions, as may be necessary to resolve disputes between the Civil Aeronautics Board and the agencies to which functions are transferred by section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 and section 4 of this Act.

(c) The Chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board and the Secretary of Transportation shall, beginning as soon as practicable after the date of enactment of this Act, jointly plan for the orderly transfer of functions and personnel pursuant to section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 and section 4 of this Act.

EFFECT ON PERSONNEL

SEC. 11. (a) Employees covered by the merit pay system under chapter 54 of title 5, United States Code, who are transferred under section 10 of this Act to another agency shall have their rate of basic pay adjusted in accordance with section 5402 of such title. With respect to the evaluation period during which such an employee is transferred, merit pay determinations for that employee shall be based on the factors in section 5402(b)(2) of such title as appraised in performance appraisals administered by the Civil Aeronautics Board in accordance with chapter 43 of title 5, United States Code, in addition to those administered by the agency to which the employee is transferred.

(b) With the consent of the Civil Aeronautics Board, the head of each agency to which functions are transferred by section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 or section 4 of this Act is authorized to use the services of such officers, employees, and other personnel of the Board for such period of time as may reasonably be needed to facilitate the orderly transfer of such functions.

SAVINGS PROVISIONS

SEC. 12. (a) All orders, determinations, rules, regulations, permits, contracts, certificates, licenses, and privileges—

(1) which have been issued, made, granted, or allowed to become effective by the President, any agency or official thereof, or by a court of competent jurisidiction, in the performance of any function which is transferred by section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 or section 4 of this Act from the Civil Aeronautics Board to another agency, and

(2) which are in effect on December 31, 1984, shall continue in effect according to their terms until modified, terminated, superseded, set aside, or revoked in accordance with law by the head of the agency to which such function is transferred, or other authorized officials, a court of competent jurisdiction, or by operation of law.

(b) The transfers of functions made by section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1948 and section 4 of this Act shall not affect any proceedings or any application for any license, permit, certificate, or financial assistance pending at the time such transfers take effect before the Civil Aeronautics Board; but such proceedings and applications, to the extent that they relate to functions so transferred, shall be continued. Orders shall be issued in such proceedings, appeals shall be taken therefrom, and payments shall be made pursuant to such orders, as if such sections 1601(b) and 4 had not been enacted; and orders issued in any such proceedings shall continue in effect until modified, terminated, superseded, or revoked by a duly authorized official, by a court of competent jurisdiction, or by operation of law. Nothing in this subsection shall be deemed to prohibit the discontinuance or modification of any such proceeding under the same terms and conditions and to the same extent that such proceeding could have been discontinued or modified if such sections 1601(b) and 4 had not been enacted.

(c) Except as provided in subsection (e)—

(1) the transfer of any function under section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 or section 4 of this Act shall not affect any suit relating to such function which is commenced prior to the date the transfer takes effect, and

(2) in all such suits, proceedings shall be had, appeals taken, and judgments rendered in the same manner and effect as if section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 and section 4 of this Act had not been enacted.

(d) No suit, action, or other proceeding commenced by or against any officer in his official capacity as an officer of the Civil Aeronautics Board shall abate by reason of the transfer of any function under section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 or section 4 of this Act. No cause of action by or against the Civil Aeronautics Board, or by or against any officer thereof in his official capacity shall abate by reason of the transfer of any function under section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 or section 4 of this Act.

(e) If, before January 1, 1985, the Civil Aeronautics Board, or officer thereof in his official capacity, is a party to a suit relating to a function transferred by section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 or section 4 of this Act, then such suit shall be continued with the head of the Federal agency to which the function is transferred.

(f) With respect to any function transferred to another agency by section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 or by section 4 of this Act and exercised after the effective date of such transfer, reference in any Federal law (other than title XVI of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958) to the Civil Aeronautics Board or the Board (insofar as such term refers to the Civil Aeronautics Board), or to any officer or office of the Civil Aeronautics Board, shall be deemed to refer to that agency, or other official or component of the agency, in which such function vests.

(g) In the exercise of any function transferred under section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 or section 4 of this Act, the head of the agency to which such function is transferred shall have the same authority as that vested in the Civil Aeronautics Board with respect to such function, immediately preceding its transfer, and actions of the head of such agency in exercising such function shall have the same force and effect as when exercised by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

(h) In exercising any function transferred by section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 or section 4 of this Act, the head of the agency to which such function is transferred shall give full consideration to the need for operational continuity of the function transferred.

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 13. For purposes of this Act—

(1) the term "agency" has the same meaning such term has in section 551(1) of title 5, United States Code; and

(2) the term "function" means a function, power, or duty.

ACCESS FOR HANDICAPPED PERSONS

SEC. 14. Section 104 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "In the futherance of such right, the Board or the Secretary, as the case may be, shall consult with the Architectual and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board established under section 502 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, prior to issuing or amending any order, rule, regulation, or procedure that will have a significant impact on the accessibility of commercial airports or commercial air transportation for handicapped persons.".

FURTHERANCE OF THE PUBLIC INTEREST IN AIR TRANSPORTATION

SEC. 15. (a) Section 102 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"STUDIES AND REPORTS

"(c) The Board may, upon its own initiative or upon the reasonable petition of any person directly affected, undertake such studies as may be necessary to determine the extent to which any aspect of air transportation furthers or hinders the public interest as set forth in this section. In undertaking this review, the Board shall conclude its consideration of all relevant factors within 120 days of receipt of the petition. The results of any such study, together with such recommendations as the Board may deem necessary, shall be forwarded to the petitioner, air carrier and appropriate Committees of the Congress.".

(b) That portion of the table of contents of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 that relates to section 102 of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(c) Studies and reports.".

STUDY OF TRANSPORTATION TO AND FROM WASHINGTON DULLES AIRPORT

SEC. 16. (a) The Secretary of Transportation shall study the feasibility of constructing a rail rapid transit line between the West Falls Church, Virginia, station of the Washington, D.C. metrorail system and Dulles International Airport in Virginia. The study shall include, but need not be limited to, a study of the feasibility of heavy rail, light rail, monorail, magnetic levitation systems and any other appropriate transportation systems. The Secretary shall study the feasibility of each such system with and without intermediate stops.

(b) The Secretary shall complete the study required by subsection (a) and transmit the results thereof to Congress not later than one year after the date of enactment of this Act.

AIR SERVICE IN THE STATE OF ALASKA

VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION HEALTH CARE AMENDMENTS OF 1984

SIMPSON (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 3662

Mr. STEVENS (for Mr. SIMPSON) (for himself, Mr. CRANSTON, Mr. BOSCHWITZ, and Mr. WILSON) proposed an amendment to the bill (S. 2514) to amend title 38, United States Code, to enhance the management of Veterans' Administration medical treatment programs by providing for the referral of veterans to non-Veterans' Administration entities and arrangements for additional necessary services, to revise and clarify the authority for the furnishing of care for veterans suffering from alcohol or drug dependence, to require the Administrator to establish the position of Associated Director for Post Traumatic Stress Disorder, to require the Administrator to submit a report to Congress regarding programs of the Veterans' Administration providing hospice and respite care to certain veterans, and to authorize the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to provide telecaption television decoders to totally deaf veterans in certain cases, and for other purposes, as follows:

(1) On page 15, line 6, strike out "extended" and insert in lieu thereof "inpatient-extended".

(2) On page 23, delete lines 14 through 20.

(3) Redesignate sections 9 through 13 as sections 8 through 12, respectively.

(4) On page 33, lines 15 and 16, strike out "(as amended by section 8 of this Act)".

(5) On page 33, strike out line 22 and all that follows through page 35, line 21.

(6) Redesignate section 15 as section 13.

(7) At the end of the bill, add the following new sections:

USE OF CERTAIN LANDS BY THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA

SEC. 14. (a) Notwithstanding the Act described in subsection (b), the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs shall execute such legal documents as are necessary to permit the use of the real property described in subsection (b) (or any portion of such property) for educational or cultural purposes in addition to the use of such property as a research and medical center and for allied purposes. The Administrator may carry out the preceding sentence subject to such terms and conditions as the Administrator determines are necessary in order to protect the interests of the United States.

(b) The real property referred to in subsection (a) is the property transferred to the State of California for the use of the University of California by a quitclaim deed dated December 10, 1948, executed by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs under the Act entitled "An Act to authorize the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to transfer a portion of the Veterans' Administration center at Los Angeles, California, to the State of California for the use of the University of California", approved June 19, 1948 (62 Stat. 559), and recorded in the land records of the County of Los Angeles, California, at page 307 of book 29032.

(c) Any document executed to carry out subsection (a) shall provide that the property involved shall revert to the United States if it ceases to be used as a research and medical center or for educational or cultural purposes.

ACQUISITION OF BUILDINGS FOR STATE HOME FACILITIES

SEC. 15. Subchapter III of chapter 81 is amended as follows:

(1) Section 5031(c) is amended—

(A) by striking out "term 'construction' means" and inserting "terms 'constructed' and 'construction' refer to"; and

(B) by inserting "the acquisition of existing buildings for use as domiciliary or nursing home care facilities," after "home buildings,";

(2) Section 5032 is amended by inserting "to acquire existing buildings for use as State home facilities for furnishing such care to veterans," after "nursing home care to veterans,"; and

(3) Section 5035(a) is amended—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of clause (7); and

(B) in clause (8),

(I) by striking out "sections 276a through 276a-5 of title 40" and inserting in lieu thereof "the Act of March 3, 1931 (40 U.S.C. 276a—276a-5)"; and

(II) by striking out the period at the end and inserting in lieu thereof a comma and "and"; and

(C) by inserting at the end the following new clause:

"(9) in the case of a project for acquisition of a facility, reasonable assurance that the estimated total costs of acquisition of the facility and of any expansion, remodeling, and alteration of the acquired facility necessary to meet Veterans' Administration standards shall not be greater than the estimated cost of constructing an equivalent new facility.".

SENSE OF THE CONGRESS REGARDING CERTAIN GRACE COMMISSION RECOMMENDATIONS

SEC. 16. (a) The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The Department of Medicine and Surgery of the Veterans' Administration, established by an Act of the Congress, represents a national commitment by the Government to meet the medical needs of eligible veterans, especially those who have been disabled as a result of their military service.

(2)(A) Section 409(a) of Public Law 97-306 states that it is the policy of the United States that the Veterans' Administration "shall maintain a comprehensive, nationwide health-care system for the direct provision of quality health-care services to eligible veterans".

(B) Section 5010 (a)(1) of title 38, United States Code, requires the Veterans' Administration to operate and maintain a total of not less than 90,000 hospital and nursing home beds and such additional beds as may be necessary for the Veterans' Administration to meet its contingency obligations to assist the Department of Defense in times of war or national emergency in caring for the casualties of such war or national emergency.

(3) The President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control (commonly known as and hereinafter referred to as the "Grace Commission") has recommended that Veterans' Administration hospitals reduce the average length of stay of their inpatients to a level comparable to that found in the private sector; however, many Veterans' Administration hospital patients have severe and multiple disabilities requiring extensive treatment.

(4) The Grace Commission has recommended that funds for construction of Veterans' Administration hospitals not already under contract be deleted from the Veterans' Administration budget, that bids be invited from private hospital management companies to lease hospital facilities to the Veterans' Administration under long-term contracts, and that such facilities be managed by private companies under short-term performance contracts.

(5) The Grace Commission has recommended that nursing home construction by the Veterans' Administration be entirely discontinued and that the Veterans' Administration contract for the operation of nursing home care facilities by the private sector.

(6) The Grace Commission has recommended that the Veterans' Administration eliminate such number of Veterans' Administration acute care hospital beds as is necessary to achieve an 80 percent occupancy rate for such beds.

(7) The Grace Commission has recommended that the Veterans' Administration consider converting some underutilized acute health-care facilities to extended health-care facilities and phasing out old hospital facilities which may be in need of replacement or significant reconstruction; however, demographic information compiled by the Veterans' Administration shows a forthcoming major increased demand on the Veterans' Administration from the aging veterans of World War II for acute as well as long-term health care.

(8) A joint study of the Grace Commission's recommendations conducted by the Congressional Budget Office and the General Accounting Office and submitted to Congress in February, 1984, concluded that the potential deficit reductions that might result in 1985 through 1987 from implementations of the Grace Commission's recommendations would be much smaller than the three-year savings projected by the Commission.

(9) The Congress desires to reassure veterans that the Congress remains firmly committed to an independent and comprehensive, nationwide health-care system within the Veterans' Administration, capable of providing quality care to eligible veterans.

(b) In light of the findings made in subsection (a), it is the sense of the Congress (1) that the aforementioned recommendations of the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control relating to the Veterans' Administration health-care system must be evaluated in light of the national policies described in subsection (a)(2) and in light of the aforementioned factors, and (2) that no action to implement such recommendations should be taken without their policy implications having first been given full and careful consideration, after appropriate hearings, by the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Senate.

AUTHORITY TO ADJUST RATES OF PAY FOR CERTAIN PSYCHOLOGISTS

SEC. 17. Section 4104 is amended—

(1) by inserting "(other than those described in paragraph (3))" after "psychologists" in paragraph (2); and

(2) by striking out "Certified" in paragraph (3) and inserting in lieu thereof "Clinical or counseling psychologists who hold diplomas as diplomates in psychology from an accrediting authority approved by the Administrator, certified".

PROGRAM GUIDE ON ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE

SEC. 18. Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall disseminate to appropriate Veterans' Administration medical facilities and submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Senate a program guide to clarify Veterans' Administration policy regarding the authorization and provision of treatment, including diagnosis, information, outpatient services, hospital care, and nursing home care, of veterans who are eligible for services under title 38, United States Code, and who are suffering from Alzheimer's disease and related neurological diseases.

NAMING OF VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION MEDICAL CENTERS

SEC. 19. (a) The Veterans' Administration Medical Center in Murfreesboro, Tennessee, shall after the date of the enactment of this Act be known and designates as the "Sergeant Alvin C. York Veterans' Administration Medical Center". Any reference to such medical center in any law, regulation, map, document, record, or other paper of the United States shall after such date be deemed to be a reference to the Sergeant Alvin C. York Veterans' Administration Medical Center.

(b) The Veterans' Administration Medical Center in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, shall after the date of the enactment of this Act be known and designated as the "Clement J. Zablocki Veterans' Administration Medical Center". Any reference to such medical center in any law, regulation, map, document, record, or other paper of the United States shall after such date be deemed to be a reference to the Clement J. Zablocki Veterans' Administration Medical Center.

CARL ALBERT FEDERAL BUILDING

METZENBAUM (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 3663

Mr. BYRD (for Mr. METZENBAUM) proposed an amendment to the bill (S. 2820) to name the Federal building in McAlester, OK, the "Carl Albert Federal Building"; as follows:

At the end of the bill:

SEC. . That the Federal building located at 550 Main Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, shall hereafter be named and designated as the "John Weld Peck Federal Building". Any reference in a law, map, regulation, document, record, or other paper of the United States to such building shall be held to be a reference to the "John Weld Peck Federal Building".

NOTICES OF HEARINGS

SUBCOMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS AND RESERVED WATER

Mr. WALLOP. Mr. President, I would like to announce for the information of the Senate and the public the scheduling of a public hearing before the Subcommittee on Public Lands and Reserved Water on Tuesday, September 11, beginning at 9 a.m. in room SD-366 of the Dirksen Senate Office Building. The subcommittee will consider S. 2916, to designate certain additional national forest lands and national park lands in the State of Colorado as components of the National Wilderness Preservation System, and for other purposes; S. 2032, to designate certain additional forest lands in the State of Colorado as components of the national wilderness preservation system; and H.R. 5426, to designate certain National Forest System lands in the State of Colorado for inclusion in the national wilderness preservation system, and for other purposes.

Those wishing to testify or who wish to submit written statements for the hearing record should write to the Subcommittee on Public Lands and Reserved Water, Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC 20510. Witnesses will be placed in panels and oral testimony will be limited to 3 minutes. Witnesses are requested to provide the subcommittee with 25 copies of their written testimony 24 hours in advance of the hearing, as required by the rules of the committee, and 75 copies on the day of the hearing.

For further information regarding this hearing you may wish to contact Mr. Tony Bevinetto of the subcommittee staff at 224-5161.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON ENERGY RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I would like to announce for the information of the Senate and the public the scheduling of a public hearing before the Subcommittee on Energy Research and Development to consider the May 1984 DOE/EIA comprehensive review of the status of the U.S. domestic uranium mining and milling industry. This oversight hearing will be held on Wednesday, September 12, beginning at 2 p.m. in room SD-366 of the Dirksen Senate Office Building.

Those wishing to testify or who wish to submit written statements for the hearing record should write to the Subcommittee on Energy Research and Development, Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC 20510.

For further information regarding this hearing you may wish to contact Mr. Paul Gilman of the subcommittee staff at 224-4431.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON CIVIL SERVICE, POST OFFICE, AND GENERAL SERVICES

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I would like to announce for the information of the Senate and the public, the scheduling of a public hearing before the Subcommittee on Civil Service, Post Office and General Services, Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs.

A hearing is scheduled for August 16, 1984, from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. at the Brentwood Theater of the Veterans' Administration Medical Center, Sawtelle and Wilshire Boulevards, Los Angeles, CA. The subcommittee will hear testimony on S. 2116, a bill to accept the findings and to implement the recommendations of the Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians.

For further information regarding the hearing, please contact Pat Phillips of the subcommittee staff at 224-2254.

Mr. President, I would like to announce for the information of the Senate and the public, the scheduling of a public hearing before the Subcommittee on Civil Service, Post Office and General Services, Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs.

A hearing is scheduled for August 29, 1984, from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. in courtroom No. 2 of the Federal Building, 601 West Fourth Avenue, Anchorage, AL. The subcommittee will hear testimony on S. 2116, to accept the findings and to implement the recommendations of the Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians.

For further information regarding the hearing, please contact Ruth Wheeler of the subcommittee staff at 224-2254.

COMMITTEE ON RULES AND ADMINISTRATION

Mr. MATHIAS. Mr. President, I wish to announce that the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration and the Committee on House Administration, U.S. House of Representatives, will conduct a joint meeting on Thursday, August 9, 1984, at 10 a.m., in H-328, the Capitol.

At this joint meeting members will be receiving testimony on S. 2271, to authorize the transfer to the Smithsonian Institution without reimbursement of the General Post Office Building and the site thereof located in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

For further information regarding this hearing, please contact Ron Hicks of the Rules Committee staff at 224-0290.

AUTHORITY FOR COMMITTEES TO MEET

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Foreign Relations be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Wednesday, August 8, at 11 a.m., to hold a business meeting to vote on the following nominations and legislation:

Brandon Grove, Jr., to be Ambassador to the Republic of Zaire;

Larry Williamson, to be Ambassador to the Gabonese Republic;

Leon Weil, Jr., to be Ambassador to the Kingdom of Nepal;

Anthony Quainton, to be Ambassador to the State of Kuwait;

Edward Streator, to be Representative of the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development with rank of Ambassador;

Victor Rivera, to be Assistant Administrator for AID for Interamerican Affairs;

Senate Resolution 241, commemorating the Armenian genocide; and

S. 2768, U.S. Scholarship Program for Developing Countries Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON RULES AND ADMINISTRATION

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Rules and Administration be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Wednesday, August 8, 1984, at 3 p.m., in S-207, for a business meeting to mark up S. 1676, a bill dealing with access to polling places for the handicapped and elderly, and other legislative and administrative business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS AND RESERVED WATER

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Public Lands and Reserved Water, of the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Wednesday, August 8, at 2 p.m., to hold a hearing to consider S. 2657, to withdraw and reserve for the Department of the Air Force certain public lands within the Nellis Air Force Range, within Clark, Nye, and Lincoln Counties, NV, for use as a training and weapons testing area, and for other purposes; S. 2658, to withdraw and reserve for the Department of the Army certain public lands within the McGregor Range, Otero County, NM, for use as training and weapons testing area, and for other purposes; S. 2659, to withdraw and reserve for the Department of the Air Force certain public land within the Luke Air Force Range, Maricopa, Pima and Yuma Counties, AZ, for use as a training and weapons testing area, and for other purposes; S. 2660, to withdraw and reserve for the Department of the Army certain public lands within the Fort Greely Maneuver Area, in the Big Delta Area, AK, and certain public lands within the Fort Greeley Air Drop Zone, in the Granite Creek Area, AK, for use as a training and equipment development area, and for other purposes; S. 2661, to withdraw and reserve for the Department of the Army certain public lands within the Fort Wainwright Maneuver Area, Fourth Judicial District, AK, and for other purposes; and S. 2662, to withdraw and reserve for the Department of the Navy certain public lands for the Bravo 20 Bombing Range, Churchill County, NV, for use as a training and weapons area, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

S. 44, THE PRODUCT LIABILITY ACT

● Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, one of the biggest falsehoods used to support passage of S. 44, the Product Liability Act, is that a Federal product liability code would reduce the amount of fees paid to attorneys. Implicit in this claim is that somehow, people who are injured by defective products stand to benefit from provisions to this effect. Various figures are frequently cited as support for the assertion that the amount of claimant and defense costs exceed the amount of claimants' recovery, and blame has been attributed to the State tort litigation system.

It's time we look at the facts. And fact No. 1 is that S. 44 would result in higher litigation costs because it would bring legal chaos, and not uniformity, to the product liability system. The bill contains so many confusing and ambiguous terms and standards that its provisions would be subject to conflicting interpretations from 50 State supreme courts and the various Federal courts which would hear cases under diversity jurisdiction. Further, the bill takes the unprecedented approach of removing Federal question jurisdiction—where the Federal district courts interpret the Federal laws—from the Federal courts without keeping concurrent jurisdiction. Because it is highly unlikely that the U.S. Supreme Court would review State court decisions in this area, the bill ensures that these conflicts and disparities would not lessen over time. The increased litigation will most certainly result in higher legal costs. Indeed, the Library of Congress' own Congressional Research Service [CRS], in a report entitled "The Effect of Federal Products Liability Legislation on Legal Fees," has raised these important issues.

Under the current system a vast portion of the time and resources expended presenting and defending product liability claims does not relate to researching applicable State law—to the contrary, there are many publications apprising lawyers of the current situation in the States. In fact, enactment of S. 44 would likely result in higher litigation costs in individual product liability lawsuits because many of the bill's provisions would complicate these cases.

For example, the bill eliminates strict liability in "design defect" and "failure to warn" cases, requiring the claimant to prove negligence, that the manufacturer knew or should have known about the danger that caused the injury. As a preeminent tort scholar from the University of Texas School of Law, Dean W. Page Keeton, emphasizes, the whole purpose of using a strict liability, rather than a negligence, standard is to avoid difficulties entailed in deciding what was in the manufacturer's mind when he produced the harmful product. Quoting him now:

> One of the most important justifications for eliminating the negligence theory altogether is that doing so eliminates several complicated questions concerning whether the maker knew or should have known in the exercise of ordinary care about the extent of the dangers involved in the use of the particular product.

According to Dean Keeton, a strict liability standard saves judicial and litigation resources because it "eliminates a number of difficult decision points, would greatly simplify a trial, and enhances the likelihood of settlements." On the other hand, the negligence standard proposed in S. 44 would have the opposite effects and thus increase litigation costs.

Similarly, the punitive damages section of S. 44 in effect would require that two trials be conducted—the first on the question of liability and the second on the question of punitive damages. The requirement in section 10 that the jury determine the amount of workers' compensation benefits to which an injured worker would be entitled in the future also would increase costs. Finally, the basic standards of liability for design defect and failure to warn cases would in practice be unnecessarily complex, and thus costly. Chief Justice Jack Pope of the Supreme Court of Texas, representing the U.S. Conference of Chief Justices, has interpreted section 5(b)(1) alone to require the resolution of eight special interrogatories by the jury. This runs counter to the efforts by the State courts today to simplify questions presented to the jury for resolution.

A number of highly reputable studies have demonstrated that the so-called problem of high legal fees emanating from product liability cases has been greatly exaggerated. According to a recent study by the Rand Corp., statements by industry representatives that claims were approaching 1 million a year by the mid-1970's have been "thoroughly discredited." In fact, the Department of Commerce interagency task force on product liability concluded that the "best estimate" of claims on lawsuits filed in 1976 was between 60,000 and 70,000. Therefore, actually less than 1 percent of the estimated 30 million actual product-related injuries resulted in claims. Since legal costs are reflected in insurance costs, an insurance study commissioned by the interagency task force found that insurance premiums exceeded 1 percent of the total sales for only three industries. And rather than a preponderance of huge sums being awarded in product liability cases, the Rand Corp. reports in a survey of claims adjudicated between July 1, 1976, and March 15, 1977, that the average payment of bodily injury claims was $3,592 per claim and $6,692 per incident.

Since the time these studies were conducted, there has been no evidence demonstrating a significant increase in the number of claims or the average award. In fact, the 1983 Rand study concludes that the reports of a product liability "crisis" in the mid-1970's were greatly exaggerated, and that even the perception of such a "crisis" has eased because it has become evident that product liability claims have not been an unreasonable cost to most manufacturers. Quoting from that study:

> It appears safe to conclude that for most large manufacturing firms, product liability costs . . . probably amount to less than 1 percent of total sales revenue.

I hear time and time again from the proponents of S. 44 that theirs is a "consumer bill"—that it benefits the consumers and workers of our Nation. Yet if this legislation were to really reduce the legal costs of our product liability system, it could only do so if the substantive standards in S. 44 operate to preclude individuals from bringing claims or from pursuing such claims aggressively. One torts scholar pointed out the chilling effect of a negligence standard, saying:

> Product liability suits usually are financed through contingent fees (with the plaintiff's attorney normally taking one-third of the award or settlement amount, and no fee if the plaintiff loses). To the extent that attorneys perceive "tougher odds" under a negligence regime, they will be less willing to take on cases than they would be under a rule of strict liability. Plaintiffs will thus be unable to "finance" their litigation.

In other words, the bill would have to accomplish its aim of reduced costs to the direct detriment of injured product users. In that case, the simple effect of the bill will be to undermine our legal system's guaranteed right of access to justice. For this reason, every major consumer advocacy group in the Nation is opposed to S. 44.

Mr. President, I ask that the following items be printed in the RECORD. They include articles and letters from the major consumer groups, all of whom oppose this bill, and letters and testimony from the American Bar Association, explaining how the organization arrived at its position of long-standing opposition to S. 44.

The material follows:

CONSUMERS UNION,
Washington, DC, May 7, 1984.

Hon. ERNEST F. HOLLINGS,
U.S. Senate, Russell Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR HOLLINGS: Consumers Union, Consumers Federation of America, National Consumers League, and Public Citizen's Congress Watch assert our continued unanimous opposition to S. 44, the Product Liability Act as reported from the Senate Commerce Committee.

S. 44 represents a devastating assault on the rights of thousands of individuals injured by defective products. This legislation, which its proponents tout as the route for simplifying the maze of state product liability laws, is nothing more than a codified obstacle course designed to thwart victim's compensation.

We urge you to vote against S. 44.

Sincerely,

LINDA A. LIPSEN,
Legislative/Regulatory Counsel, Consumers Union.
DAVID GREENBERG,
Legislative Director, Consumers Federation of America.
BARBARA F. WARDEN,
Executive Director, National Consumers League.
JAY ANGOFF,
Staff Attorney, Congress Watch.

[From the Washington Post, June 2, 1984]

IT WOULD BE UNIFORM, ALL RIGHT—UNIFORMLY UNFAIR

The "Product Liability Act" (S. 44), establishing a federal system for judging product liability claims, may soon go to the Senate floor. This legislation would make it much more difficult for thousands of consumers to obtain compensation for injuries resulting from defective products.

Advocates of the bill include a powerful alliance of manufacturers, distributors and wholesalers in the pharmaceutical, chemical, automobile, machine tool and insurance industries. In making their case for the bill, the proponents seize upon two attractive themes: (1) that it will ensure uniformity in product liability law; and (2) that it will reduce legal fees in product liability lawsuits.

While these objectives are superficially desirable, they are not by themselves sufficient to justify the passage of this particular legislation. Furthermore, there is a paucity of evidence that the bill would accomplish either mission.

The Post's April 17 editorial "Suing the Manufacturer" endorsed the goal of uniformity in the product liability field, seemingly for its own sake. Legislation that is unfair to consumers does not become more desirable because the unfairness is organized in one package.

The bill would shift the focus of personal injury litigation away from the defective nature of the product to the conduct of the defendant. Accordingly, under one section of the bill, an injured consumer would have to meet the additional burden of proving that a manufacturer of a defective product knew or should have known about the unreasonably dangerous aspect of the product that caused the injury.

This requirement presents a formidable hurdle. Even where negligence is present, it is often difficult if not impossible to prove because the defendants have control of evidence about what they knew, when they knew it and how they responded to this knowledge. This is particularly true in cases involving drugs, toxic chemicals and workplace injuries. Requiring proof of negligence in such cases makes it far less likely that people with otherwise justifiable claims would prevail.

The particular negligence test in the bill is unnecessarily burdensome. It contains several provisions limiting manufacturer liability, even where the plaintiff is able to prove negligence, and it expands traditional manufacturer defenses.

For example, one part of the bill would shield the negligent manufacturer from liability if a "means to eliminate the danger was not within practical technological feasibility." As one tort professor concludes, "ideas that are available and easy to implement but not yet implemented would not be within practical technological feasibility." This section would actually discourage manufacturers from producing the safest products possible.

The uniformity of this bill lies in its unfairness to injured consumers. It would consistently weaken standards for finding the defendant liable, and it would do so in a very confusing manner. Legal scholars emphasize that the bill contains unclear, complicated and novel provisions subject to diverse interpretations. Fifty state courts and various federal courts will apply this statute and obviously will not speak with one voice.

Sponsors also trumpet the bill as a mechanism to reduce legal fees, despite the fact that fees are never mentioned in the bill. While limiting legal fees may be a worthy objective, it is unreasonable to accomplish it by curtailing victims' compensation.

In a typical product liability lawsuit, the plaintiff's lawyer receives one-third of the award, if the claim is successful. If it is not, the lawyer receives no fee. This "contingency fee" system makes it possible for an ordinary individual to afford a lawsuit against a corporation. This system also acts as a screening system for meritless suits. If S. 44 is enacted, legal fees would be reduced only because fewer injured consumers would be able to bring suit. This is like reducing medical costs by creating a shortage of hospital services.

Aside from limiting opportunities for recovery, there is no evidence that this bill would reduce legal fees. But it would impose many new and difficult standards of proof likely to increase the costs of litigation.

The objectives of any product liability scheme should be fair compensation for victims of defective products. Considerations of uniformity and lower fees must remain secondary to this goal. If S. 44 were approved, such secondary matters would be shifted to the forefront. A fair system of compensation for injured consumers would be its ultimate victim.

LINDA LIPSEN.

JULY 26, 1984.

Re: S. 44, the product liability bill.

DEAR SENATOR: We are writing to reiterate our strong opposition both to federal product liability legislation in general and to S. 44, Sen. Kasten's product liability bill, in particular.

We oppose federal pre-emption of state common law in general because the common law has the flexibility to adapt to changing times and technology, whereas a statute does not.

In addition, we specifically oppose the Kasten bill because its provisions so overwhelmingly favor defendants and handicap plaintiffs. For example, section 5 of the bill eliminates strict liability in design defect cases; section 6 eliminates strict liability in failure to warn cases; section 8 virtually eliminates strict liability for non-manufacturer sellers even in construction defect cases; section 9 both severely undercuts joint and several liability and broadens the affirmative defenses; section 11 establishes a 25 year statute of repose (i.e., cuts off the right to sue if the product causing the injury is more than 25 years old) for defectively designed capital goods; section 12 retroactively prohibits punitive damages; and section 13 virtually prohibits the victim from introducing evidence of subsequent remedial measures to prove his case, but expressly allows the defendant to introduce such evidence in defense of a punitive damages claim.

In short, S. 44 is rotten to the core. Amendments can not make it palatable. We urge you to oppose it in the strongest possible terms.

Sincerely,

GENE KIMMELMAN,
Legislative Director, Consumer Federation of America.
JAY ANGOFF,
Staff attorney, Public Citizen's Congress Watch.

CONSUMERS UNION,
July 25, 1984.

DEAR SENATOR: Consumers Union continues its strong opposition to S. 44, "The Product Liability Act," which may soon reach the Senate floor for your consideration. We urge you to reject this legislation because of its uniform imposition of unfairness on injured product users.

Product safety has been a major concern of Consumers Union throughout our 48 year history. We believe that the strict liability standard for determining who will pay for an injury resulting from a defective product, encourages manufacturers to make the safest products possible. Strict liability is not a carte blanche ticket for the recovery of meritless claims. A claimant must prove that the product was defective rendering it unreasonably dangerous, and that the defect caused the injury.

S. 44 would replace a strict standard of liability with negligence in the vast majority of cases. It shifts the emphasis of a product liability lawsuit from the defective condition of the product causing the injury to the conduct and state of mind of the manufacturer or seller of a defective product. Accordingly, victims would encounter exceedingly difficult and unnecessary proof problems in court, because the evidence of negligence is largely in control of the defendant. Under S. 44, many thousands of deserving victims would simply not be able to prove what the manufacturer knew or should have known about the defective product and thereby fail to recover. The bill further outlines several situations in which even a negligent manufacturer would escape liability.

Other provisions of S. 44 including the expansion of traditional defenses to a negligence claim, the absolute bar of claims created by a 25 year statute of repose for capital goods, and the severe limitation on assessing punitive damages for a course of wreckless conduct, are similarly and unjustifiably restrictive to the rights of injured consumers.

We urge you to defeat this legislation.

Sincerely,

LINDA A. LIPSEN,
Legislative/Regulatory Counsel, Consumers Union.

[From the American Bar Association Journal]

A BILL TO HURT CONSUMERS

(By Jay Angoff)

S. 44, the Kasten product liability bill, would abolish all state product liability laws and substitute for those laws a federal statute, to be interpreted by the state courts.

The Kasten product liability bill seeks not to bring certainty and predictability to product liability law but rather to limit the liability of the business community and prevent recovery.

As new drafts of S. 44 would appear every few months in 1983, industry-specific, liability-limiting provisions would be added to the bill to obtain the support of specific industries—and thereby of specific senators. This process was described in a draft memorandum in April 1983 from H. Stephen Halloway, associate general counsel of the U.S. Department of Commerce, to Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige. (Copies of the memo are available from Public Citizen's Congress Watch, 215 Pennsylvania Ave., S.E., Washington, D.C. 20003.)

For example, the Sept. 15, 1983, draft of S. 44 contains a new provision that would judge the conduct of the aircraft industry at the time of certification by the Federal Aviation Administration rather than at the time of manufacture, as is the case with all other industries. This provision was inserted to gain the support of the Kansas small plane manufacturers and thus of Sen. Nancy Kassebaum (R-Kan.).

Similarly, the most recent draft, dated (Oct. 19, contains the so-called "Dalkon Shield IUD" amendment, which would absolve a manufacturer from all pending and future punitive damage claims as soon as it settles one punitive damage claim. It was strongly urged by the A. H. Robins Co. of Richmond, Va., the makers of the Dalkon Shield, and was inserted at the request of Sen. Paul S. Trible Jr. (R-Va.). It would benefit any company that actually knew its product was defective before it sold it.

OVERRULE MANY DOCTRINES

Even before the industry-specific, liability-limiting provisions were added to S. 44, however, the bill contained numerous provisions that limited liability across the board. Most significant, the bill largely would overrule the doctrines of strict liability, joint and several liability, and liability for foreseeable misuse.

The bill also would limit a plaintiff's recovery against the manufacturer of a product that has injured him in the workplace; establish a nationwide statute of repose (ironically, the courts of four states already have held these statutes unconstitutional); and prohibit the admission of subsequent remedial measures unless the defendant "expressly denies the feasibility of such a measure." People burned by exploding Ford Pintos, women with DES-caused vaginal cancer and men with asbestos-caused mesothelioma, among many others, would be much less likely to be compensated for their injuries should the Kasten bill become law.

Consumer groups strongly oppose the Kasten bill because its provisions so overwhelmingly favor defendants over plaintiffs. In addition, most judges and torts scholars oppose any codification of tort law—regardless of its substantive provisions—because the common law can grow and develop as times and technology change, whereas a statute necessarily freezes the law in one place as time and technology march on. While business groups see the flexibility of the common law as a defect, most torts scholars see it as a virtue.

Most torts experts think codification of tort law on the federal level is particularly unwise because of the practical problems it would create. Consider, for example, a routine automobile accident. The liability of the car manufacturer would be determined under the federal product liability law, but the liability of the driver would be determined under state law. Under state law, joint and several liability generally applies, but comparative responsibility may not; under a federal product liability law, on the other hand, comparative responsibility may apply but not joint and several liability. What is a state court judge to do? The federal bill introduced by Sen. Kasten presents exactly this problem but offers no solution.

CREATING CONFUSION

More fundamental, a federal bill would create additional confusion and uncertainty in the law. Although state product liability laws, like other state laws, do differ somewhat, the law within each state is generally predictable. Were a federal bill enacted, on the other hand, the law within each state would be thrown into confusion as the state courts struggled to interpret the new federal statute on top of preexisting and often conflicting state substantive law and procedure. The confusion would be particularly acute if the federal bill eschewed traditional common law tort terms like "foreseeable" in favor of new terms like "reasonably anticipated conduct" and "practical technological feasibility," as the Kasten bill does.

An additional argument against federal product liability legislation is made by those who believe in reducing the power of the federal government and giving power back to the states. A federal product liability bill, of course, would do exactly the opposite; for that reason, many Reagan administration officials privately have opposed the Kasten bill.

The easiest argument against a federal bill, however, remains the substance of the Kasten bill and the process by which it was put together. As long as federal product liability legislation seeks to limit liability and restrict recovery—and all federal product liability bills have sought to do just that—it is unnecessary to reach the theoretical arguments about whether a federal product liability bill, in the abstract, would be desirable.

AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION,
Washington, DC, May 19, 1983.

DEAR SENATOR: It is our understanding that Members of the Senate are being asked to cosponsor S. 44, broad federal legislation preempting state law in the area of product liability. We would like to take this opportunity to reiterate our opposition to enactment of S. 44 or any other broad federal legislation to preempt state statutes, regulations or case law in the area of product liability.

The American Bar Association's opposition dates from February, 1981, when the ABA's House of Delegates adopted a resolution opposing enactment of legislation which would impose a model product liability proposal as federal law.

As you are aware, the ABA's House of Delegates is composed of members representing the diverse interests of the legal community. Operating in a manner similar to the United States Congress, it is the policy-making body for the 300,000 member ABA.

In February, 1983, the House of Delegates by a substantial majority adopted the enclosed resolution opposing enactment of the broad federal legislation that would codify the tort laws of the 50 states as they relate to product liability.

The law of product liability historically has been rooted in the common law, with each state molding its laws through judicial interpretation and state legislation to respond to that state's particular social and economic needs. In each state, product liability law continues to evolve as new developments in the field demand legislative correction or refinement of judicial interpretation. This evolutionary process has had the salutary effect of providing continuity and stability for all who are affected by the laws.

Broad preemptive legislation such as S. 44 would promote uncertainty and instability in state product liability laws—results exactly contrary to the stated purpose of the legislation and contrary to that which the states have provided. It is our belief that federal legislation that would codify product liability laws and preempt the existing body of state law will open up a whole new area of litigation and deprive citizens of the certainty that now exists in each state. In addition, serious constitutional issues raised by this legislation suggest the possible need for protracted litigation to settle such issues.

The stability and certainty resulting from ever-evolving state laws, combined with the ability of each state to respond to its unique circumstances, argue against broad federal preemptive legislation. Accordingly, the American Bar Association urges you not to endorse S. 44 and to vote against it if it reaches the Senate floor.

Sincerely,

MORRIS HARRELL.

AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION,
Washington, DC, July 19, 1984.

DEAR SENATOR: As you may know, Majority Leader Baker has indicated his desire to schedule for full Senate consideration sometime between July 23rd and August 10th, S.44, broad product liability legislation that would preempt state product liability laws. If the measure is brought to the Senate floor, we urge you to oppose it.

S.44 was reported May 23, 1984 by the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee. Many months earlier, the Labor and Human Resources Committee requested that the bill be referred to it when the Commerce Committee completed its consideration. That request has not yet been granted. We believe that all appropriate committees, including the Labor and Human Resources Committee should be given a chance to consider the sweeping provisions of this ill-advised measure before it is brought to the Senate floor.

The ABA strongly opposes enactment of S.44 or any other broad product liability legislation that would preempt state statutes, regulations and case law.

The ABA believes that the ability of each state to respond to its unique circumstances with laws tailored to its needs, as well as the need to maintain the stability and certainty resulting from ever-evolving state laws, argues against the enactment of a national law such as S.44.

Historically, the law of product liability has been rooted in the common law, with each state molding its laws through judicial interpretation and state legislation to respond to that state's particular social and economic needs. In each state, product liability law continues to evolve as new developments in the field demand correction or refinement. This evolutionary process has had the salutary effect of providing continuity and stability for the public which is affected by these laws.

Broad, preemptive legislation such as S.44 simply is not needed. It would be an unwise and unnecessary intrusion of massive proportions on the long-standing authority of states to promulgate tort law. Rather than resolve any uncertainty that now may exist, such legislation would result in legal chaos and, most likely, even more litigation. S.44 would impose upon our judicial system new and undefined terms and concepts to be unraveled by the legal community that would take many years to clarify. In addition, serious constitutional issues raised by this legislation suggest the possible need for protracted litigation to settle such questions.

We respectfully urge you to support referral of S.44 to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources and, in any event, to vote against S.44 if it reaches the Senate floor.

Sincerely,

WALLACE D. RILEY.

S. 44—PRODUCT LIABILITY ACT

STATEMENT OF ERNEST Y. SEVIER, CHAIRMAN, SECTION OF TORT AND INSURANCE PRACTICE, ON BEHALF OF THE AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Subcommittee, thank you on behalf of the American Bar Association for allowing me to present this testimony. ABA President Morris Harrell has requested that I appear to express the Association's continued opposition to broad federal legislation preempting state law in the area of product liability.

The Association's opposition dates back to February of 1981, when the ABA's policy-making body, the House of Delegates, adopted by voice vote a resolution opposing enactment of legislation "which would impose a Model Products Liability proposal as federal law."

Subsequently, with the introduction of S. 2631 in June of 1982, a resolution was submitted to the House of Delegates by the Section on Corporation, Banking and Business Law, to reverse the ABA's position and to support federal legislation. When the House of Delegates met in San Francisco in August of 1982 to consider this resolution, it voted to postpone consideration until the next meeting, scheduled for early February in New Orleans in 1983. The House of Delegates also recommended that the President appoint a Special Committee which included representatives from interested sections to study the matter and make recommendations to the House of Delegates. During the course of the debate, a motion was made that would have prevented the Association from making any representation to Congress either supporting or opposing federal products liability legislation pending consideration of the subject by the House of Delegates at its next meeting in February. The motion was defeated by a narrow margin; it nevertheless affirmed the Association's duty in the interim to continue to advocate its 1981 position to Congress.

In October of 1982, President Harrell appointed a distinguished seven-member committee chaired by Robert McKay, former Dean of New York University School of Law and current Director of the Institute of Judicial Administration. The committee included among its members nominees of the Sections of Corporation, Banking and Business, Public Contract Law, Litigation, and Tort and Insurance Practice. After extensive deliberations, the committee produced a thorough Recommendation and Report which was submitted to the House of Delegates at the New Orleans meeting. The basic tenet of this Recommendation is that the ABA remain opposed to "enactment of broad federal legislation that would codify the tort law of the 50 states as they relate to products liability, and oppose legislation such as S. 2631 * * * that would attempt to do so." The Recommendation listed four exceptions where federal legislation or federal attention should be considered.

The Special Committee's Recommendation was submitted to the House of Delegates, and after extensive debate, the House voted 185 to 113 to back the above quoted portion of the Recommendation opposing "broad federal legislation" preempting states' laws. The House then took up the four exceptions, approving two of them: support for federal legislation to address the issues of liability and damages in the area of occupational disease claims, such as asbestosis, and federal legislation "allocating products liability risks between the federal government and its contractors." See Appendix A.

The ABA's House of Delegates is composed of approximately 385 elected members representing a broad and diverse cross-section of the legal community. Operating in a manner similar to the United States Congress, it is the legislative body for the largest professional lawyers organization in the world, with membership approaching 300,000 people. Between the San Francisco meeting where the matter was deferred and the New Orleans meeting where the matter was decided upon, the Special Committee's recommendation was the subject of considerable discussion by concerned members of the Bar Association. The largest single concerted lobbying effort was by members of the Association connected with the manufacturing community. Letters, telephone calls, personal contacts and telegrams were addressed to the members of the House of Delegates by house counsel for manufacturers and manufacturing trade associations opposing the basic recommendation of the Special Committee and the ABA's position opposing broad federal preemptive legislation. Despite these extensive lobbying efforts that continued to the floor of the House of Delegates at the time of the debate, the ABA's position was reaffirmed by 62 percent of the voting Delegates, a substantial victory by the standards of any legislative body.

The House of Delegates reaffirmed the wisdom of leaving the great majority of products liability case law to the various states which are in a position to best address themselves to the specific social and economic needs of their constituents. Our long evolved common law system was reaffirmed.

However, the ABA feels that the Congress should consider legislation in the two areas contained in the Special Committee's Recommendation: asbestosis, or more broadly occupational disease claims; and claims involving the relationship between the federal government and its private contractors. At the same time, other forums are considering these problems, such as the prestigious National Council of State Courts which has been and is holding meetings on possible joint state solutions to asbestosis and related occupational disease litigation. We are confident that the attention focused on products liability litigation by the recent ABA debate and hearings such as these will encourage further state legislative review of the need for change or adjustment in the existing laws.

It has been argued that the lawyers are only interested in feathering their nests. If this were the case, the legal profession by opposing enactment of federal preemptive legislation would be turning its back on a whole new area of litigation created by the uncertainty which such legislation would invoke. Constitutional challenges of the Act in whole or in part would be raised in the various state courts where jurisdiction would reside under your proposed legislation. Interpretation of various provisions of the Act would differ as state courts tailor their decisions according to the individual state's desires. Unequal results would occur when products liability litigation is combined with other fields of law with differing rules of law, for example, when a products liability claim is joined with an automobile liability claim. The proposed Act's "pure" comparative negligence rule may conflict with modified forms of comparative negligence such as the Wisconsin rule. The proposed Act's punitive damage rules may conflict with the rules in states where no punitive damages are granted. Rules will differ in the areas of set-offs, separate settlement, joinder, contribution and indemnity. Therefore, the desire for certainty will in fact be undermined by federal legislation.

Our judicial system has reached its unparalleled position of justice among the legal systems of the world by adherence to the evolutionary rules of the common law. We respectfully urge that the wisdom of these rules not be undermined, but instead be maintained by opposition to broad federal preemptive legislation in the products liability field.

Thank you.

RESOLUTION OF THE HOUSE OF DELEGATES OF THE AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION, ADOPTED FEBRUARY 1983

1. Be it resolved, That the American Bar Association opposes enactment of broad federal legislation that would codify the tort laws of the 50 states as they relate to product liability, and opposes legislation, such as S. 2631 reported by the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee in the 97th Congress, that would attempt to do so.

II. Further resolved, That the American Bar Association supports federal legislation which addresses the issues of liability and damages with respect to claims for damages against manufacturers by those who contract an occupational disease (such as asbestosis) when: (a) there is a long latency period between exposure to the product and manifestation of the disease, (b) the number of such claims and the liability for such damages in fact threaten the solvency of a significant number of manufacturers engaged in interstate commerce; and (c) the number of such claims have become clearly excessive burdens upon the state and federal judicial systems.

III. Further resolved, That the American Bar Association supports enactment of federal legislation allocating product liability risks between the federal government and its contractors and providing, in certain instances, indemnity against those risks

[The following information was subsequently received for the record:]

AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION,
San Francisco, CA, June 15, 1983.

Hon. ROBERT W. KASTEN, Jr.
Chairman, Subcommittee on Consumer, Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: This is in response to your letter to me asking a series of questions in connection with my ABA testimony, before your subcommittee, on broad federal uniform product liability legislation.

Question. The ABA Study states that existing common law product liability decisions of state courts "reflect the policies and desires of widely-diverse states as to standards of proper conduct and reflect local ideas as to how best to product their own businesses, consumers and their general public from wrongful conduct."

Do you find many judicial decisions that say, "Well, we've looked at the facts and you could go either way, but this is a rural state so we're ruling against the defendant." Or, "This is an urban state so we are ruling against a defendant." Can you direct the Committee to judicial opinions that explicitly rule on the basis of specific economic or social conditions of the State in which the claim is brought?

Answer. Judicial opinions. do not contain statements such as you suggest. Principles of law under our federal system of government vary from state to state, whether one is dealing with products liability or other areas of law. Businesses and citizens understand the principles of law peculiar to their states, which have been developed over the years to reflect the political, philosophic and economic characteristies of the locality.

Question. One theme I get out of the ABA report is that the court, not the legislation, is the proper place to make product liability law. In fact, I understand that at the recent ABA meeting it was argued that value judgments have to be made on case by case basis and these value judgments should be made by judges. Do you believe that a judge is better suited to make these value judgments than a legislator who is elected to make value judgments in formulating public policy?

Answer. I disagree with your statement that the ABA believes that the courts, as opposed to legislative bodies are the proper forum to make products liability law. We have stated in both the ABA Special Committee report and in my testimony that state courts laws in products liability evolved through court decisions, supplemented by state legislation.

The ABA Special Committee Report, to which I assume you are referring, states in applicable part:

"The Committee, however, also believes that there may be an important place for legislative enactment of the common law; but on the federal level, it must be very cautiously approached. Unlike civil law, which relies exclusively on one mode of lawmaking, our system of justice permits both common and statutory development. Dean Roscoe Pound, in defending the role of the legislature of the development of the common law, perhaps said it best when he explained that the 'imperative' (legislative) and 'traditional' (judicial) elements of common law act upon and correct each other so that 'when either, from occupying the field too long, becomes to fixed and rigid, the needed flexibility is restored to the law by its rival.' "

Question. Can you cite an example where after a federal statute codified a common law, the law was more uncertain, more unclear, more confusing than before enactment of the federal bill?

Answer. The proposed Federal Products Liability Act is unique in its attempt to codify such a broad area of common law. Therefore, we are without any valid examples to follow.

Common law has developed at the state level. Therefore, it is obvious that when years of carefully evolved common law, supplemented by state statutes, are preempted at the federal level, we will have disruptions. State courts which have exclusive jurisdiction under proposed Act, will come up with varied interpretations. The developed hybrid will increase confusion and uncertainty and the picture will remain unclear for years, unless and until the Supreme Court, already overburdened as stated by Chief Justice Burger, resolved the matter.

Question. The March 1983 issue of the American Bar Association Journal reports that the ABA recently conducted a random poll of 528 members and 78 members of the ABA's Law Student Division. The results indicate that 491 of those polled favor "enactment of federal product liability legislation superseding state law." Isn't this inconsistent with the position adopted by a majority of the ABA House of Delegates at the midwinter meetings? Some have suggested that the ABA poll was confined to the Association's younger members. Isn't this incorrect?

Answer. It is not correct that the Law Poll in the March issue of the ABA Journal reported that 491 of the 606 people polled favor "enactment of federal product liability legislation superseding state law." The poll reported that 73 percent of the respondents attached great or moderate importance to the issue but that less than half of the respondents favored federal legislation in this area. The poll made no effort to determine the type or extent of federal legislation which would be supported by those favoring some federal legislation.

I have no information on the polling techniques used in the poll and cannot comment on the age distribution of the sample or on the statistical validity of a sample of 606 persons out of a profession numbering over 600,000.

The 385-member House of Delegates, which is carefully structured to represent all aspects of the Bar, carefully studied all sides of this matter before making its final decision in February of 1983. When the Section of Corporation, Banking and Business Law of the ABA submitted its proposal of the House of Delegates in August of 1982 to reverse the ABA's position opposing enactment of federal preemptive legislation and further asking the ABA to support legislation such as S. 2631, the delegates voted to defer the matter until the next meeting six months hence. The House further requested that the ABA President appoint a Special Committee to study the matter. This was done, resulting in a detailed report of over forty pages, which was submitted to all delegates in advance of the February 1983 meeting. At that time, the House of Delegates voted to approve a recommendation of the Special Committee report, which opposed broad federal preemptive legislation, by a vote of 185 to 113 and voted to approve two recommendations providing for support of federal legislation in limited areas: occupational disease litigation such as that involving asbestosis, and allocation of liability risks between the federal government and its contractors.

Please let us know if we can provide any additional information.

Sincerely,

ERNEST Y. SEVIER,
Chairman, Section of Tort and Insurance Practice.

QUESTIONS OF SENATOR HOLLINGS AND THE ANSWERS THERETO

Question. Some other resolutions were considered by the American Bar Association's House of delegates. What were these resolutions?

Answer. The ABA's Special Committee report, prepared at the request of the House of Delegates for its deliberations in Febrary 1983 in New Orleans, made five recommendations. Three of them, which were attached to my written statement were approved by the House. Two of these approved recommendations provided for support of federal legislation in limited areas: occupational disease litigation (such as that involving asbestosis); and allocation of liability risks between the federal government and its contractors.

There were two other exceptions provided in the Special Committee's report which were turned down by the House of Delegates: recommending federal legislation regarding actions for damages sought for harm for which an injured person is entitled to federal or state workers compensation type benefits (defeated by voice vote); and consideration at the federal level of problems inherent in punitive damages (defeated 127 to 141).

The House also had before it a report recommending ABA approval of broad federal legislation in this area, presented by two sections of the Association. These sections withdrew their report following the House debate and favorable action on the Special Committee's report.

Question. To what extent did voting delegates at the ABA New Orleans meeting have information on which to base their decision?

Answer. Each delegate was given a complete copy of the full report of the ABA's Special Committee, which had been appointed by the ABA President to study the matter after that issue was deferred for consideration from the August 1982 meeting to the February 1983 meeting of the House of Delegates. Each delegate was also given the full report of the Corporation, Banking and Business Law and Public Contract Law Sections which called for support of broad federal legislation. Additionally, each delegate was inundated with statements from representatives of the manufacturing community asking that the ABA support a broad federal products liability law.

Question. It has been alleged that the ABA delegate vote to oppose federal product liability reflects only the views of the plaintiff's bar. What is your response?

Answer. The House of Delegates voted by a substantial majority 62 percent to oppose broad federal product liability legislation. No vote breakdown is made when such a vote is taken to indicate who voted each way but the vote strongly suggests support for the House action from many different segments of the Bar. Enclosed is a list containing a breakdown of the House of Delegates membership.●

FOUR SMALL WATERSHED PROJECTS

● Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. President, the Committee on Environment and Public Works carries the responsibility for authorizing construction of certain Public Law 83-566 small watershed projects that are to be undertaken by the Soil Conservation Service.

Since 1976, the committee has included in its resolutions authorizing such projects a ceiling that limits expenditures on each project to the cost that was estimated at the time of authorization, plus cost increases due to inflation.

Earlier this year, the Soil Conservation Service notified the committee that the cost of four of these projects would exceed the limitations that had been imposed by the committee.

Due to special circumstances on these four projects, the Committee on Environment and Public Works on August 2, 1984, voted to approve new cost ceilings. Mr. President, I ask that a copy of my letter to Secretary Block regarding these projects be printed in the RECORD.

The letter follows:

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON ENVIRONMENT AND PUBLIC WORKS,
Washington, DC, August 6, 1984.

Hon. JOHN R. BLOCK,
Secretary, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SECRETARY: In testimony before the Committee on Environment and Public Works on June 13, 1984, the Soil Conservation Service indicated that the cost of four small watershed projects previously authorized by Congress would exceed the authorized levels.

Given the unusual situation that has developed with each of the four projects, the Committee on Environment and Public Works voted on August 2, 1984, to approve the higher cost levels and continued installation of the Public Law 83-566 projects listed below. The new cost limits will be the Federal cost listed, plus or minus such amounts, if any, as may be justified by reason of the fluctuation in the costs of construction, as indicated by engineering costs applicable to the type of construction involved. The projects:

Bush River Watershed, Virginia—$6,490,000 (using January 1984 prices).

Great Creek Watershed, Virginia—$2,900,000 (January 1984 prices).

Little Calumet River Watershed, Illinois—$68,645,500 (January 1984 prices).

Cottonwood-Walnut Creek Watershed, New Mexico—$24,630,000 (January 1984 prices).

The Committee's decision with regard to the Cottonwood-Walnut Creek Watershed was based on the understanding that the cost estimate reflects an agreement between the Soil Conservation Service and project sponsors to supplement the original work plan by eliminating all but three of the eleven structures that were contained in the original plan.

We would appreciate your keeping this committee informed of progress on these projects.

Sincerely yours,
ROBERT T. STAFFORD,
Chairman.●

JOHN A. BUTLER—A TRIBUTE

● Mr. BOSCHWITZ. Mr. President, this summer Minnesota lost one of its outstanding citizens and a most remarkable human being: John A. Butler. His accomplishments and influence went far beyond the borders of my State, so I would like to share with the Nation, by having it reprinted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, a very moving tribute to John Butler that was delivered at his funeral by University of Minnesota professor, Gordon I. Swanson.

The tribute follows:

JOHN A. BUTLER—A TRIBUTE
(By Gordon I. Swanson)

There is a destiny and a duty in each human pilgrimage which is difficult to fathom and impossible to fully comprehend. We look today at only a few of the footprints of a man who, by mid-career had already become one of the great heroes of his profession, a position which he shall hold for the remainder of this century and on through the next.

John A. Butler came to Minneapolis from his birthplace in Perrysville, Missouri and took a job as a carpenter at the age of 15. Attracted to the mysteries and the challenges of the emerging role of electricity in American industry, he changed his occupation and, at the age of 17, was employed as an electrician in Minneapolis. Seeking to improve his skills, he enrolled at Dunwoody from which he graduated at the age of 19. Two years later, at the age of 21, he was invited to accept an appointment as an instructor at Dunwoody. It was at this stage that John Butler began a remarkable record of devotion to the task of improving the destiny of young men and women across the nation, to serving the community and, thus, to enriching the legacy of one of the city's major benefactors, William Hood Dunwoody. At the age of 35, John Butler became the Assistant Director of Dunwoody, and by his mid-forties he had become the Director.

He was a genious at attracting people of quality and ability to his side. The staff at Dunwoody and his professional colleagues across the nation are ample evidence. Some strong leaders attract only subservient colleagues, but Butler identified with those who had talent, ability, independent judgment and initiative. No ordinary person could have won, held and led such a diverse assembly of remarkable collaborators and co-workers.

He was a powerful factor of influence in the White House, on Capitol Hill, in many state legislatures, on numerous Main Streets across the country, and in the halls of academe. His wisdom and his wit seemed to find its way everywhere. For a 35 year period, he served on almost every appointed commission to study and strengthen higher education in Minnesota.

In academe he was regarded, not only as a notable organizer and manager, but as an eloquent lecturer, a respected author and a careful researcher. He conducted seminars all over the world, and he was comfortably "at home" in numerous capitals of the world. Most of all, it was known that he had covered the ground, in carefully measured steps, from 15-year old carpenter to renowned intellectual leader and so the admiration and respect he engendered was never merely gratuitous; it was always genuine.

In 1981 on the occasion of the 75th anniversary of the College of Education, University of Minnesota, it was noted that, in its entire history, the college had never awarded an honorary doctorate. Although it is a sparsely awarded honor, there was no difficulty in determining who most merited the honor. The University faculty and regents agreed, and John Butler was awarded the first and only honorary doctorate recommended by the faculty identified with the oldest and one of the most prestigious colleges of education in America.

John Butler was in all things a man of standards—standards in scholarship, in language and in personal relationships. His accomplishments reveal much about him—his dedication, his hard work, his leadership and his wisdom. They also reveal the power, logic and precision of an orderly mind as well as the fairness, humanity and generosity that made him so valuable a citizen of this state. In addition to his accomplishments, there are some personal qualities which endeared him to his friends—his subtle wit, his genuine modesty, his distaste for pretension, his vast learning and his boundless good will.

For more than a half century, John Butler was the architect of policies and programs which enriched and ennobled this state and nation. There is no way that any of us can keep from noting this great influence.

He is included in what George Eliot called "the Choir Invisible of those immortal dead who live again in lives made better by their presence."

Someone once asked G.K. Chesterton, the famous British historian, why, in all of England, there were no statues to the Romans. Surely, Rome was an important factor in British history!

Unhesitatingly, Chesterton replied, "In England we don't need any statues to the Romans, here we are all statues to the Romans."

In Minnesota, we don't need any statues to John Butler. Here, we are all statues to John Butler.●

S. 2258—GRANTING OF FEDERAL CHARTER TO 369TH VETERANS' ASSOCIATION

● Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I rise today as a cosponsor of legislation offered by my distinguished colleague, the senior Senator from my home State of New York, Senator MOYNIHAN. This bill, S. 2258, will grant a Federal Charter to the 369th Veterans' Association, originally an all-black unit. This bill is identical to a measure introduced in the House of Representatives by another distinguished New Yorker, Representative CHARLES B. RANGEL, which passed unanimously in the House.

I take this action at the request of Mr. Roderick Gittens, the president of the 726th Fraternal Association, Inc., formerly Battery A of the 369th Coast Artillery [AA]. He wrote to me on behalf of this measure on July 6, 1984, following up on a meeting between us on May 14. I commend him for his efforts in support of this measure and assure him that I will do all I can to ensure its swift passage.

The 369th has a long, proud history highlighted with many accomplishments and honors. Its distinguished record in World War I will long be remembered. In fact, Hamilton Fish, Sr., later a New York Member of Congress, was a captain and company commander in the 369th Regiment during World War I.

The 369th Veterans Association has been operating since 1953 as a nonpartisan and nonprofit organization. Its membership is comprised of honorably discharged men and women of all races, colors, religions, and ethnic origins. Members of the association reside all over the country. Its activities are directed toward people of all ages for charitable, educational, and patriotic purposes. Its list of past and present endeavors is diverse and extensive.

Mr. President, I strongly support the objectives and goals of this organization. Last year, the 369th Veterans Association asked my support for the installment of a plaque in Hawaii in honor of those Afro-Americans who served in World War II in the 369th Coastal Artillery Regiment. I worked for this goal, writing letters to Hawaiian leaders on the organization's behalf. Last year, in 1983, the plaque was installed, making Hawaii the first State to recognize the efforts of Afro-American servicemen. I believe that we should act quickly to pass this bill, which would provide richly deserved national recognition, attention and commendation to the loyalty and service of Afro-Americans in our Armed Forces.●

VICTORIA MAZZARELLI

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, on Monday, July 2, 1984, at the New York international ballet competition, Victoria Mazzarelli of Torrington, CT, was awarded the gold medal as the most outstanding dancer. Miss Mazzarelli's triumph climaxed a 3-week program that included 1 week of competition. What made Miss Mazzarelli's accomplishment all the more noteworthy was that she was the only recipient of a gold medal at the first New York international ballet competition.

Miss Mazzarelli, a dancer with the Nutmeg Ballet Co. of Connecticut since she was 4, danced the pas de deux from "La Fille Mal Gardee" with her partner in this competition, fellow Nutmeg dancer Jonathan Bauer.

Her solo number was "Annie Oakley," choreographed in the American traditional style by Yuli Vzorov for Nutmeg Ballet. "Annie Oakley" is a part of the company's repertory production, "Western Revelries," which was choreographed by assistant director Donna Bonasera.

It was in this work that Miss Mazzarelli had a complete triumph. Undaunted by the challenge, she proved herself a technical wizard, fulfilling every requirement of the choreography to perfection. She was the audience favorite at the finals and won a storm of applause and bravos.

In the past few weeks we have had many reasons to be proud of our young men and women who performed so ably in the 1984 summer Olympics. They truly gave a wonderful account of themselves in winning the gold at the athletic competitions. Today I salute Victoria Mazzarelli on the occasion of winning the New York international ballet competition and I urge my colleagues to join me and the citizens of Connecticut in taking great pride in Victoria Mazzarelli's accomplishment of winning this gold in the arts.●

POLISH DAILY NEWS 80TH ANNIVERSARY

● Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I would like to take this opportunity to recognize the 80th anniversary of the Polish Daily News, a vital source of communication for Michigan's Polish community.

The Polish Daily News was founded in 1904 by a group of parishioners at St. Albertus Church and their pastor, Father Mueller. The publication was created to inform the many Polish natives settling in the Detroit area of local events.

Today, the Polish Daily News—which changed to a weekly format in 1981—publishes both a Polish edition and an English edition. Their subscribers are not only in the Detroit area and in Michigan, but also in Europe, Australia, and New Zealand.

Michigan is proud of its 1 million citizens of Polish ancestry. The Metropolitan Detroit area alone has 600,000 Polish-Americans—the second largest Polish population concentration in the Nation.

Recent years have not proven easy for ethnic publications in this country and it is a testament to the hard work and perseverance of the extraordinary staff of the Polish Daily News that it continues to thrive. I commend Chairman Bruno Nowicki, President Adam Sarnacki, editor and chief Stanley Krajewski, and secretary and general counsel Larry Ledwon for their great dedication. I further commend all those associated with this publication for the fine job they do in bringing community, State, national, and international events to their readers. They provide a valuable service by keeping the Polish culture and tradition vibrant in the mosaic of American life.●

A SUSTAINABLE AGRICULTURE POLICY

● Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, recently Mr. Terry Gips, the executive director of the International Alliance for Sustainable Agriculture offered testimony before the Subcommittee on Agricultural Research and General Legislation in regard to S. 1128, the Agricultural Productivity Act of 1983.

I was very pleased to have the opportunity to read Mr. Gips' statement, not only because he is a fellow Minnesotan with a great deal of experience in agricultural policy and economics, but also because he supports this bill of which I happen to be a cosponsor.

In his testimony, Terry covers two subjects quite well. First, as a result of his broad experience in this field, he was able to give the subcommittee a good overview of the efforts of other nations to develop a sustainable agricultural policy. Second, he informed the subcommittee of the ripple effects that even a small Federal effort would have on research in this area domestically.

Mr. President, I recommend the remarks of Mr. Gips to my colleagues and ask that his statement be printed in the RECORD with my comments.

The statement follows:

INTERNATIONAL ALLIANCE FOR SUSTAINABLE AGRICULTURE

(Statement of Terry Gips)

Mr. Chairman, Members of the Subcommittee: I am Terry Gips, Executive Director of the International Alliance for Sustainable Agriculture, a non-profit, tax-exempt organization of individuals and groups committed to the creation of economically viable, ecologically sound, socially just and humane agriculture worldwide. We have three major program areas: (1) Research and documentation of sustainable agricultural practices; (2) Organizational support and Networking; and (3) Education and information dissemination. We are funded by memberships, donations, grants and the sale of slide shows and publications such as a bimonthly newsletter Manna and a monthly worldwide news information service, "New Directions in Agriculture."

I welcome this opportunity to appear before you today, a place quite familiar to me as I served as an aide to former Congressman, now Federal Appeals Court Judge Abner Mikva, as well as agricultural legislative assistant to former Congressman John Krebs. The perspective I'd like to share with you is based on ten years of experience in many aspects of agriculture. I am an agricultural economist trained at the University of California, Davis and the Yale School of Management. I have worked as a Cooperative Extension Advisor, economic analyst and grain merchant with Cargill, Inc., White House Domestic Policy/Intergovernmental Relations Staff Assistant, Co-founder/Director of the Sacramento Community Gardens Program and author of a forthcoming book based on two years of travel around the world researching and documenting sustainable agriculture. I presently serve as an alternate board member of the International Federation of Organic Agriculture Movements (IFOAM), national steering committee member of the Pesticide Action Network and board member of the midwest-based Organic Growers and Buyers Association and the Wedge Community Food Cooperative.

These diverse experiences have given me an indepth understanding of the promise and problems in developing a sustainable food system. After having visited and documented hundreds of biological, organic, regenerative, biodynamic and other sustainable farms in forty countries, it is clear to me that not only are such practices viable, but they may provide some badly needed answers to many of the problems we are facing with contemporary agriculture.

This was underscored at a just completed Research Colloquia on Sustainable Agriculture sponsored by Michigan State University, one of our nation's leading land grant universities. The remarks of Dr. James Anderson, Dean of the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources summarize the importance of developing sustainable practices as embodied in the Agricultural Productivity Act:

"We have given very little consideration to the externalities. We can't continue at the present rate. We must look at a new technology that will be politically, socially and ecologically acceptable. It is fortuitous that such technology is now available."

Today, I'd like to address two areas. First, utilizing the resources of the International Alliance for Sustainable Agriculture, I'd like to provide an international perspective on some similar legislation and research being carried out in Canada and Europe. Once this is in context, I think you'll see that this legislation simply makes good, sound economic sense. Second, I'd like to point out some of the undiscussed "externalities" so often neglected by economists in policymaking. In this case, however, I will take a really unusual step for an economist and point out several positive externalities that provide additional merit for this legislation.

As far as the first point is concerned, a number of countries have been funding similar investigations for up to four years, many of which have identical components to the Agricultural Productivity Act. Let's begin with Canada. In 1982 the Ministry of Agriculture in Quebec began a five year program providing for research on 12 organic farmers in Quebec, one in each of the twelve agricultural regions of Quebec. The purpose is to obtain baseline data on productivity and income as well as develop cost of production data to determine eligibility for government farm credit. A wide variety of farm types were selected, from greenhouse and vegetable operations, to dairy and grains. After five years, a report will be issued estimating the various costs of production for each specialty.

Since 1979, the German government has made a major commitment to research in all aspects of sustainable agriculture. University of Kassel Professor Hardy Vogtman provided a conservative estimate that at least 4.3 million Deutsche Marks (or $1.5 million) will be spent next year on public research and teaching in biological agriculture, as most narrowly defined. This amount thus excludes related areas such as legumes and insect pests for example. The funding will cover six experimental farms, limited research on 40–50 farms and sustainable agricultural extension services in each state throughout Germany.

The Swiss are spending $650,000 per year on such research, including a major comparative trial of twenty paired organic and conventional farms and 25 unpaired ones, according to Dr. Vogtman. Costs were minimized by utilizing each farm's existing bookkeeping system, a practice limiting the research's accuracy. The project is three years old and the first report has recently been published. The results are quite favorable and the program has now been refunded for another three years.

Dr. Vogtman estimated that Norway, Sweden and Finland are spending approximately $1 million per year on sustainable agriculture research, which is being matched through private contributions. France has just begun a decentralized national Institute of Biological Agriculture, and Austria spends approximately $180,000 per year on biological agriculture research.

One of the most impressive programs may be found in the Netherlands. The Dutch government currently expends approximately 10 million guilders ($3 million) on biological agriculture, according to research director Dr. Pieter Vereijken. An additional $3 million is spent on legume research. The program includes a 72 hectare (180 acre) experiment farm, 3 experimental farms in preparation, on-farm inventory research, a low energy animal farm, and education and extension with two full-time and twenty part-time extension agents.

A $3 million annual expenditure is indeed a major commitment in a country with 15 million people which is the size of New York state. Dr. Vereijken explained the rationale this way:

"We were the first to feel the problems because we have a very advanced agricultural system. We want to continue to live with our land and have the world's highest yields. For this reason, we have made a major commitment to research in biological agriculture."

With such a perspective, I think you can see why we feel the expenditure of $2.1 million for this bill is most reasonable, if not even less than is needed. As an agricultural economist and a taxpayer, I am quite concerned that every dollar we spend on research achieve the highest return possible. This marginal rate of return for certain areas of conventional research is stabilizing and in some cases decreasing after having poured hundreds of millions of dollars over the years. However, the potential rate of return in sustainable agriculture is quite high as we have only invested negligible amounts. Economic logic tells us we should increase our investment in areas such as sustainable agriculture until its marginal rate of return equals others. This is not saying we shouldn't invest in conventional research—only that research into sustainable practices must be expanded.

I'd now like to address some of the externalities of this bill, focusing on three. First, the provision of this funding will have a leverage effect on the entire research establishment. The bill will send a strong message to the research community that Congress believes sustainable practices are a priority and the funding will encourage expanded research within the USDA and land grant universities. The simple existence of the Agricultural Productivity Act has already generated increased research interest of such land grants as the University of Minnesota. For a nominal amount, a great deal of leverage will be achieved, creating a far greater return.

Second, this bill will provide a major psychological boost to the many farmers who feel trapped on a chemical/financial treadmill. The passage of the bill has special importance for the approximately 34,000 organic farmers in this country (Rodale estimate) and the thousands more who are seeking to establish more sustainable practices. They have received minimal assistance in meeting their information needs and this bill represents an important first step in acknowledging the importance of providing this information and ensuring that the USDA will make it a priority. By supporting this bill, Congress will send a strong message both to these farmers and the general public that it is concerned about the future of agriculture and our food supply and that it is committed to investigating and developing sound practices that will allow farmers to continue into the future.

Third, this bill offers us the opportunity to maintain our image as the world's leader in developing new farm technology and practices. Our investment in research and development has reaped benefits many times over. For this reason, countries around the world turn to us for leadership in agriculture, with consequent multiple benefits for our economy. They will continue to do so only if we are at the cutting edge with appropriate, sound practices.

In conclusion, we are now faced with serious economic, environmental, social and health issues related to agriculture. There are no quick, easy fixes or panaceas, but research into sustainable agriculture offers potential answers to many of the problems we are facing and will face tomorrow.

We must now make a choice, for we are at a crossroads. Either we can continue on the same path and allow the problems to fester to perhaps irreversible proportions or we can choose to explore the new path offered by sustainable agriculture.

By supporting the Agriculture Productivity Act, we will be taking an important first step towards an agriculture with a future. A relatively small financial commitment will return itself manyfold and allow the United States to remain a leader in world agriculture.●

369TH VETERANS' ASSOCIATION

● Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I am pleased to be able to note that, with the addition of seven names today, 40 Senators have now cosponsored S. 2258, a bill I introduced on February 6, 1984, to grant a Federal charter to the 369th Veterans' Association.

The rules of the Committee on the Judiciary quite properly require 40 cosponsors of bills to grant Federal charters, before they shall be reported to the full Senate. This is a reasonable requirement as it establishes that there is broad support in the Senate for any such proposal. Now that 40 Senators, including 17 Republicans and 23 Democrats, have agreed to lend their sponsorship to this measure, I look forward to early and favorable action by the Judiciary Committee.

An identical measure, introduced by my friend and colleague from New York, Representative CHARLES B. RANGEL, passed the House of Representatives on November 14, 1983, by vote of 406 to 0.

The association is named for the originally all-black 369th Infantry Regiment, organized in Harlem in New York City in 1916 and dispatched abroad the following year to serve alongside the French Army.

The heroism of the men of the 369th has become the stuff of legend. The regiment was the most highly decorated American unit to serve in the First World War. Cited 11 times for courage under fire, the 369th never lost a foot of ground—and not a single member of the regiment was captured. When new York City welcomed home its veterans after the war, the 369th led the parade down Fifth Avenue.

The 369th Veterans' Association was founded in 1954, in order to preserve and continue this tradition of selfless service and patriotism. It is a nonprofit organization with an impressive history of community service—not just in New York, but across the country.

While the greater part of the association's membership resides in the New York and New Jersey areas, its members also reside in Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, Barbados, West Indies, California, Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Germany, Hawaii, Illinois, Indiana, Jamaica, West Indies, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Puerto Rico, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Switzerland, Tennessee, Texas, Virgin Islands, Virginia, Washington State, and Wisconsin.

Among its many accomplishments, the association has provided counseling to veterans and direct assistance to veterans hospitals. It has also sponsored scholarship and tutorial programs for children in need and a host of vital services for the elderly—including the purchase of medical equipment for senior citizen centers.

The 369th Veterans' Association is organized and operated solely for charitable, educational and patriotic purposes. The association performs activities on a national scale and is unique in its glorious history and the scope of its programs, such that a Federal charter is the appropriate form of incorporation.

The 369th Veterans' Association is an organization that merits the recognition of Congress and the American people. The granting of a Federal charter is a natural and proper gesture.

Not surprisingly, sponsorship of the bill has come from 29 States across the Nation. I would like to express my appreciation for their support to the 40 cosponsors of S. 2258, whose names follow, in alphabetical order.

S. 2258, A BILL TO GRANT A FEDERAL CHARTER TO THE 369TH VETERANS' ASSOCIATION

(Introduced by Senator Daniel P. Moynihan on February 6, 1984—Cosponsors (as of Aug. 8, 1984))

Senators Baker, Bentsen, Boschwitz, Bradley, Burdick, Chiles, DeConcini, Denton, Dodd, Durenberger, Exon, Garn, Gorton, Hart, Hatch, Hawkins, Helms, Hollings, Huddleston, Inouye, Johnston, Kassebaum, Kasten, Kennedy, Lautenberg, Levin, Lugar, Mathias, Matsunaga, Metzenbaum, Mitchell, Pell, Percy, Pressler, Pryor, Sarbanes, Sasser, Stafford, Tsongas, and Wilson.

Total: 41 Senators (24 Democrats; 17 Republicans.)●

Mr. President, I look forward to early passage of the bill, and its signing by the President, hopefully, before the 31st anniversary of the founding of the association on October 6, 1984.

AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION PRESIDENT'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS

● Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, on June 20, 1984, Dr. Joseph F. Boyle of Los Angeles, CA, became president of the American Medical Association at its annual meeting in Chicago, IL. Dr. Boyle is a practitioner of internal medicine and diseases of the chest, and has long been active in physician organizations. He has an excellent record of distinguished service to this Nation.

In his inaugural address to the American Medical Association, Dr. Boyle eloquently described what he believes to be today's challenges to physicians in the United States. There are few, if any, issues of more importance to our country than the provision of health care services and all of us who participate in policy decisions would do well to listen to the advice of physicians who deal with the issues, and more importantly, treat the patients every day. Dr. Boyle's challenge to his colleagues in the medical profession can also serve as a challenge to all of us who, like physicians, serve the public and try to improve the well-being of individuals who place their trust in us.

I request that the text of Dr. Boyle's speech, as well as a short biographical sketch, be printed in the RECORD.

The material follows:

JOSEPH F. BOYLE, M.D., PRESIDENT, AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

Joseph F. Boyle, M.D., a private practitioner of internal medicine and diseases of the chest from Los Angeles, California, became President of the American Medical Association at its Annual Meeting in June 1984.

Elected to the AMA Board of Trustees in 1975, Doctor Boyle served as its Chairman from June 1981 to June 1983. He has long been active in organized medicine at the local, state and national levels. He has served in many elected capacities, including President of the California Medical Association and the Los Angeles County Medical Association, Speaker of the California Medical Association House of Delegates, and Delegate to the AMA House of Delegates.

Born in Jersey City, New Jersey, on November 21, 1924, Doctor Boyle received his M.D. degree from Temple University School of Medicine. His postgraduate work was done in both New Jersey and California. He is a diplomate of the American Board of Internal Medicine.

In addition to being on the staff of several Los Angeles area hospitals, Doctor Boyle has been Associate Clinical Professor of Medicine at the University of Southern California School of Medicine since 1954, and Past President of the California Chapter of the American College of Chest Physicians.

Recent honors include receiving the Distinguished Internist of 1983 Award from the American Society of Internal Medicine, the 1984 Presidential Commendation from the American Psychiatric Association, the title of Temple University Alumni Fellow, and the 1984 Temple University Alumni Association School of Medicine Certificate of Honor. Doctor Boyle serves as Chairman of the Steering Committee for the Health Policy Agenda for the American People.

Doctor Boyle's community activities have included the Los Angeles Area Chamber of Commerce; the California State Chamber of Commerce, where he recently completed a three-year term on its Board of Directors; the State of California Disaster Office; the California State Air Resources Board; President's Advisory Committee on Environmental Quality; and the California Citizens Committee on Tort Reform. He has served as President of the Board of Directors of the Tuberculosis and Health Association of Los Angeles County and is a member of the Board of Directors of the National Organization on Disability.

Doctor Boyle is the author of numerous papers on pulmonary and respiratory diseases.

SPEECH OF DR. JOSEPH F. BOYLE

My theme for you tonight is should we learn to say, "No." Every now and then on the Tonight Show, Johnny Carson plays a game called, "I have the answer. What is the question?" Ed McMahon feeds him an answer; Johnny quips the question.

Tonight, I have an answer for you. The answer is, "In a ten-year period of time, at least one million two hundred ten thousand people in the United States will have died. Over one million one hundred fifty thousand will have their lives shortened. Millions more will have been denied useful, productive and more comfortable lives because medical care had been denied them."

When Johnny does it, he is more irreverent than I will be when I say, "What is the question?" The question is, "What happened when American doctors learned to say 'no' to their patients?"

For over two thousand years, since the time of Hammurabi, doctors of medicine have dedicated themselves to a code of ethics, and although changing times and mores have produced a different set of words and phrases, the underlying bent of our commitment has been to help the sick, to do no harm, to educate the novice and to share medical knowledge with fellow physicians. The code of our medical bond is well summed up by two statements: The World Medical Association in 1948 said, "The health and welfare of patients shall be the first consideration, not allowing economics, politics, race or religion, or any other circumstance to take preference." A statement of the American Medical Association's Judicial Council says that while physicians should be conscious of cost, and not provide or prescribe unnecessary services, social policy expects that concern for the care of the patient will be the physician's first consideration.

Back to the question, the one about what happened when American doctors learned to say "no". The answer I gave you is not a fanciful one. It is culled from data contained in a report by Henry Aaron and William Schwartz writing for the Brookings Institution in a book entitled, "The Painful Prescription." The report is a very thorough, careful and objective evaluation of the system of medical care in the United Kingdom as compared to that in the United States. Their data indicate quite clearly that were the standards for treatment now utilized in the United Kingdom applied to the people in the United States, there would be no fewer than 37,000 excess deaths a year from renal disease, 48,000 from cancer, 40,000 from coronary disease; 138,000 people would be denied the extension of a useful, productive and comfortable life. And that is just some of it.

Of critical importance to this country's physicians is the report's assessment of the attitudes of the United Kingdom's physicians. Doctors there gradually refine standards of care so that they can escape the constant recognition that financial limits compel them to do less than their best. They persuade themselves that patients lose nothing of medical significance when budget limitations force the provision of alternate forms of care, forms less than optimal. For the renal patient who dies, the victim of angina in pain, the person with the mis-diagnosed head injuries, alternate treatments, albeit good for the budget, are not good for them. For the physician who prescribes the alternate treatment under the pressure of resource limits, those pressures allow the doctor to avoid the painful realization that he or she is doing less than the best for patients.

One consultant noted, "The physician has to look at the arguments for not treating a patient in order for the doctor to live with himself and to sleep well at night." In the United States, after twenty years of searching for means to assure access and availability of high quality medical care, and hospital services, to every person in the country, and after eight years of agonizing over how we can reduce the escalation in the cost of care, and promote economy and efficiency in the delivery of health care services, we have progressed to the question of how best to limit access, decrease demand and ration care. If you are pondering the appending of "we have progressed" to the question of reducing care, we can go on to the next query.

For the question before us now is how do we as a profession respond to the challenge of achieving true progress instead of the retrenchment just described. To me, it does not involve learning to say "no" to our patients, but instead requires a rededication to our professional ethics.

It does not involve berating ourselves, donning sackcloth and ashes, reciting hourly acts of contrition. Rather it does involve behaving like professionals in a profession that believes in itself, that believes in its future. It does not involve succumbing to the siren song of the business world, seeking means to enhance profits for personal wealth. No, it involves seeking the means to continue to provide good care for those who entrust their lives and well being to us.

For a few moments, explore with me some of the dimensions of this challenge. Remember we are the profession that helps the sick, does no harm, educates the novice and shares medical knowledge with fellow physicians. We are the people who believe that concern for the care of the patient will be the physician's first consideration. Contrast these ethics with the advice that we now receive from marketing experts, entrepreneurs seeking membership in PPOs, economists, and, unfortunately, an increasing number of doctors of medicine. Their advice says that in today's world the oath of Hippocrates, wherein it states that physicians have a primary responsibility to the individual patient, is irrelevant. These counselors would have us believe that, instead, we should adopt a business ethic.

Our professional ethic says that we are a collegial brotherhood and sisterhood in which our interests are mutually intertwined. A business ethic says, get your share, drive the other fellow to the wall. Professional ethic says that we shall establish standards of what constitutes moral and professional conduct; that we will care for people, regardless of the circumstances, with compassion and concern.

The business ethic was well summed up for me by Uwe Reinhardt, professor of economics at Princeton. Discussing the question, how does medicine and how do hospitals cope with a transformation into an industrial complex, Dr. Reinhardt answered that, in Economics I, he poses the question to his students, "What is a business ethic?" His answer, "A business ethic is to maximize the return on investment to your shareholders without breaking the law." And he noted that he further advises his students that when they are in business they should consider themselves in a race. In that situation, a hundred-yard dash for example, it might be nice social policy to pick up a candy wrapper on the track, but you'd not be likely to win many races. And in business, you do not pick up social trash along the way. Not if you intend to win.

Roger Evans, in a special communication published in JAMA in April 1983 entitled, "Health Care Technology and the Inevitability of Resource Allocation and Rationing Decisions," made it very clear that there is an inherent conflict between the rationing of medical care and resource allocation and the oath of Hippocrates. He says that if the individual responsible for the allocation of resources is the individual physician, then that physician must, perforce, give up responsibility for the individual person. Further, Dr. Evans points out that recent reports indicate that competition can have a negative impact on the quality of care patients receive. He also notes that when the public is exposed to decisions contrary to the interests of the person involved, decisions based on a mix of both medical and social criteria differentially valuing human life, the public will become increasingly irritated and resentful.

Another example, perhaps closer to this House of Delegates, the review of the Health Policy Agenda, showed that several principles clearly speak to the question of professional ethics. The report says primary responsibility for the establishment and implementation of professional standards should rest with the health care profession, and institutions and health care practitioners should function according to codes of ethics that take into account traditions of the profession, moral values of society, and developments in science and medicine. Codes of ethics should be an addition to the requirements of the law and the dictates of personal conscience.

How do we resolve this principle with a possible dilemma to be faced by physicians when, because of DRG reimbursement or other resource limits, they are pressed to either discharge patients from the hospital prematurely or not admit some patients to a hospital at all? Clearly, in the adherence to principles of our profession, physicians should not accept a dictate that they will act other than in the best interest of the patients under their care.

But there are other pressures that make it increasingly difficult for us not to abandon the traditional ethics of our profession. A major pressure, the Federal Trade Commission and the Anti-Trust Division of the United States Department of Justice, have repeatedly asserted that they do not desire to interfere with a profession's need to establish standards for competence of professional conduct designed to protect the public from fraudulent practices, abuse of license or hospital privileges and incompetent practices. But, in every instance, caveats are added which preclude medical societies from imposing sanctions on members who practice blatant quackery, habitually overcharge, practice beyond the scope of their clinical training, experience or competence, or hold themselves out to provide diagnostic and treatment modalities that have no scientific basis and may even be patently dangerous and potentially lethal—and all of this in the name of competition.

Some physicians rail mightily at organized medicine's apparent impotence in the conflict. Legislators and the media often compound the issue by pursuing the theme that physicians think they are above the law and that medicine should be subject to the same rules as any business enterprise. Opportunistic trial attorneys seize upon carefully drawn criteria designed as guidelines for appropriate care and use them against us in the courts during malpractice trials.

The net of all this fuss and fury has produced a loss of professional self-esteem, a decrease in our adherence to ethical standards, and a concomitant precipitous decline in public confidence. And this in a time when the public cries out that it needs to believe in institutions and needs confidence in those who minister to its needs. Is it any wonder that there is a loss of public confidence in its institutions?

I will suggest to you that we have an opportunity as a profession to regain the public's confidence if we are willing to accept the task of leading—leading restoration of simple morality in society beginning with ourselves. We can accomplish this beginning with a rededication to a professional ethic.

Why do we tolerate physicians in practice who after contracting to have their medical educations paid for at public expense then default on their loans or their commitments to public service, or cheat on entrance exams or examinations for licensure?

Should we not insist that medical schools include a mandatory course in ethics in the curriculum when 70 percent of graduates tell us that their training has been less than adequate in helping them deal openly with their patients, identifying conflicts in medical ethical issues and providing awareness of social responsibility?

Why do we, by our silence, seem to condone the practice of some of our members engaged in scientific research who patently falsify their results to advance their own careers?

Have we addressed the question of the ethics involved when physicians engaged in basic scientific research, in the employ of industry, accept the proscription to keep their research secret—not to share the discovery—even though that may mean that a major advance in the diagnosis or treatment of disease may be denied the general public for years, if not forever?

Have we addressed the question of whether or not our teaching institutions sought to accept research grants from industry when restrictions on the use of that research come along with the grant?

Should we not loudly and clearly be encouraging our local medical associations to seek the means whereby they can review fee practices of some of their members, rather than withdrawing from the arena?

Are we willing to pledge substantial portions of our assets to stand behind those scientific societies that are willing to establish standards of practice that will protect the public from the incompetent practitioner?

It is my judgment that if we proceed in a deliberate and conscientious fashion, committing ourselves to an ethical standard for medical practice which is intended to serve our primary goal and protect the interest of individual patients; if we do not succumb to the notion that the individual doctor will become the agent to decrease access or availability or diminish quality in the cause of saving hospitals; if we state clearly that we will not surrender to attorneys or courts the practice of good medicine; if we pledge not to leave to the courts decisions best made by patients and their families and physicians; if we can begin with our own behavior and commitment to provide appropriate role models for medical students and physicians in training; if we seriously address the question of the conflicts between the needs of patients and the needs of corporate enterprise both in the provision of care and the process of research—then we will have taken a long step along the path which leads to real progress in medicine instead of a retreat into mediocrity.

The public has repeatedly told us through opinion polls that they do want someone to establish, monitor and maintain standards for its protection. Likewise public voices repeatedly tell us that the people to whom they look to provide that assurance for them belong to associations of medical doctors. We have a need to believe in ourselves because the public has a need to believe in us.

And in these times of rapidly expanding technology people have an increased need to be treated as individuals—to be personally touched. Can we not show them we care—slow down a little—and just as from time to time we say to those near and dear to us, "I love you," now and then pause and say to our patients, "Hey, I care!"

Each generation marches to its own music. I ask, will ours be a dirge or a processional; a drill or an orchestral; a disorganized cacophony or a blending of concern, love, understanding and caring? Will it be an ending or a beginning? I suggest to you that the choice is ours. I am not so naive as to believe that we can tonight declare the direction that American medicine will take over the next two, five, or ten years. But I do suggest to you that tonight, if we the leadership of this country's physicians declare ourselves, then a direction will be ordained.

From experience, I know that tomorrow, and many tomorrows to come, will find me challenged by a host of interviewer microphones, an army of pencils poised over blank notepads and a galaxy of riveting and probing camera eyes and the people behind these tools of the media who will ask what I said to you tonight and what I meant by it. The most exultant position I could find myself in would be to be able to respond that I actually said nothing, but that you said to me that we have tonight resolved that we are a profession; that our lives are dedicated to the service of humankind; that we have examined ourselves and do declare that we remain committed to caring for people; that technology is a tool that we shall use wisely, but as its master, not as its slave.

Though the opportunity presents itself to enrich our purse, we shall opt instead to enrich our lives as we strive to enhance the lives of those we touch, those who entrust their beings to us. We stand prepared to care for all people simply because we care, and regardless of pressures we will remain advocates for our patients. The welfare of our patients is our agenda, come what may; our code of ethics is the bible by which we will live.

When I am quizzed tomorrow, can I deliver that message on your behalf?●

FOOD FOR PEACE

● Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, this year is the 30th anniversary of the Food for Peace Program. In recognition of this anniversary, 70 Senators and 230 House Members cosponsored a resolution to establish a Food for Peace day. This resolution signed into public law on July 9, 1984.

While the month of July has passed, I would like to include in the RECORD an expression of support and appreciation for this program which I recently received from the U.S. Ambassador to the Kingdom of Morocco expressing his support for this program. I ask that the text of his remarks be included in the RECORD.

The text follows:

FOOD FOR PEACE, 30 YEARS OF OUTREACH TO THE WORLD

(Statement by Joseph Verner Reed)

Thirty years ago, the United States Congress passed Public Law Number 480. It has since become known around the world as "Public Law 480" as its provisions have allowed the rest of the world to share in a modern miracle—the miracle of U.S. agricultural production.

Signed into law on July 10, 1954, by President Dwight D. Eisenhower, Public Law 480 provided the basis for the "Food for Peace" program by extending the fruits of the most productive agricultural sector in the world to those areas where it could help in relief and development. This program has established the United States as the world's largest food donor, providing more nourishment to the world's hungry than all other countries combined.

Here in Morocco, the first Public Law 480 shipments began in 1957 and have continued since then at levels varying according to Morocco's needs. Recognizing the effects of recent years of drought on the Moroccan economy and its farmers, AID Administrator Peter McPherson signed just last week in Rabat an additional supplementary agreement to provide supplies of grain to Morocco this year under a 25 year loan with very favorable terms. This brings to $45 million the amount of grain the Public Law 480 will bring this year to Morocco, one of the largest recipients for 1984.

Apart from its humanitarian purpose, a major goal of Public Law 480 is to help developing countries feed themselves. The law requires that this food be used to help support self-reliance and avoid creating impediments to local agricultural production. Additionally, once Public Law 480 foodstuffs are transferred to a country, the income from their sales on local markets must be used locally to support national development goals. In Morocco, the income from these sales has thus been applied to finance vital development projects. For example, during the past 25 years, Public Law 480 sales have provided important funds for the development of Morocco's forests. During the 1960's Public Law 480 made possible the reforestation of some 120,000 hectares of forest and soil conservation measures on another 120,000 hectares.

In 1984, in response to the most urgent problems of the countryside, the largest single program supported by Public Law 480 sales receipts will be the Emergency Livestock Protection Operation for which 205,000,000 Dirhams has been allocated by the Moroccan government. Other programs to be undertaken in 1984 from Public Law 480 support will be reforestation, soil conservation and dune fixation.

Since its inception in July 1954, the U.S. Food for Peace Program has delivered some 327 million metric tons of agriculture commodities worth over 33,000 million dollars to more than 1,800 million people in 100 countries. During the U.S. fiscal year that ends this September, the United States will spend about 1,500 million dollars to purchase and transport some six million metric tons of some 25 agriculture commodities to more than 80 nations. The major portions of this will go to Southeast Asia and Sub-Sahara Africa where drought and falling food output have created extremely adverse conditions for the peoples of those regions.

Since the 1950's Public Law 480 has always focused on the developing nations. Although many of the world's developing countries still face hunger and malnutrition, as a group they have almost doubled their food output since 1965, due in part to U.S. supported agriculture programs. The Public Law 480 program has shown itself to be a program of hope and accomplishment as former recipients around the world have solved serious food and development problems when their own endeavors have been coupled with the help of Public Law 480. Looking upon the efforts of Morocco in this field I am sure that by working together the United States and Morocco will see Morocco achieve its long term goals in food production.●

NATIONAL PRODUCTIVITY AND INNOVATION ACT

● Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I am pleased with the Senate's approval recently of Senate bill 1841, the National Productivity and Innovation Act. This legislation will allow and promote research and development programs among our Nations' industries in order to compete more effectively in world markets.

This important legislation will allow companies to pool technological resources and develop new products without facing possible antitrust violations. Foreign competitors have been using this practice to improve their products and compete for markets within the United States and around the world. This measure will allow our companies to compete more effectively while still keeping our antitrust laws intact ensuring free enterprise in the American marketplace.

We as a nation cannot afford to restrict the free enterprise system from competing fairly in world markets. I was pleased to support this bill.●

ASSISTANCE TO VICTIMS OF CRIME

● Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I wish to speak in support of the Victims of Crime Assistance Act of 1984. This important legislation provides assistance to the people affected by crime who are often the most forgotten, the victims. The crime victims' assistance fund will provide compensation for the untold suffering of innocent victims of crime. The unique feature of this bill is that the money for this fund would come from the convicted criminals or public donations.

We have experienced recently an example of the almost unbelievable tragedy that violence can cause innocent people. In a McDonald's restaurant in a California suburb not unlike suburbs all over the United States, customers were killed and wounded. We can never do enough for the families of the victims or the survivors to deal with their loss. We can, however, develop methods to lend some form of assistance to law-abiding citizens who were the unfortunate victims of a criminal act.

Mr. President, I hope that this legislation will be carefully considered by the Congress and that my colleagues will join me in expressing their support.●

ARMS CONTROL: HOW TO GET THERE

● Mr. QUAYLE. Mr. President, the ultimate ends of arms control—to reduce the likelihood of war, decrease the cost of maintaining adequate peacetime forces, and lower the destructiveness of war should conflict begin—are simple.

The difficulty comes in agreeing on how best to achieve these ends. Doves frequently argue that our best hope lies in simply trying to stop any and all strategic arms innovation: We must freeze and try to reduce as best we can from existing levels.

Hawks, on the other hand, are more reserved. They are interested in arms control but only if it produces balanced, significant, clearly verifiable cuts. To assure this, they insist that on correcting existing force imbalances before agreements are reached.

The Soviets, meanwhile, do not seem seriously interested in either angle. They would gladly freeze the existing imbalance and maintain their military advantage. Thus, their position on intermediate nuclear missiles in Europe: They must be able to keep most if not all of their new missiles but NATO must not deploy any new ones of their own.

Compounding this lack of negotiations progress, the weapons systems that most control proposals have attempted to limit are now being eclipsed by the development of newer, smaller, less indiscriminate, less vulnerable but also less verifiable systems.

For some these twin trends might suggest that arms control has no future and that arms stability is at risk. Yet, Zbigniew Brzezinski in a Wall Street Journal editorial of Tuesday July 10, 1984, concludes otherwise.

Mr. President, I think it is essential that we begin to examine these questions before we begin to debate arms control matters this fall. I, therefore, ask that Mr. Brzezinski's thought-provoking editorial, "From Arms Control to Controlled Security" be entered into the RECORD at an appropriate spot.

The editorial follows:

[From the Wall Street Journal, July 10, 1984]

FROM ARMS CONTROL TO CONTROLLED SECURITY

(By Zbigniew Brzezinski)

The prospects for a comprehensive and complex U.S.-Soviet arms-control agreement, building on the foundations laid by SALT I and SALT II, are increasingly slim. Indeed, it is quite possible that arms control as we have known it has come to the end of the road. Once the great hope of those who believed that the U.S.-Soviet rivalry could be limited by joint agreement—with some even seeing in arms control the catalyst for a genuinely friendly American-Soviet relationship—comprehensive arms control (on the model of the SALT agreements) is likely to be the victim of the bloody-mindedness of the present Soviet leadership and of the dynamics of the technological revolution.

The present Soviet leadership recently has done something quite remarkable in the history of the U.S.-Soviet competition. It has publicly postulated that there will be no arms-control talks unless the U.S. is prepared to accept a public humiliation and a political defeat: the dismantling of the relatively few Pershing 2s and cruise missiles so far deployed in Western Europe as a response to the hundreds of SS-20s deployed by the Soviet Union over the past several years. In effect, the Soviet Union has made arms control a hostage to the attainment of a truly major geopolitical objective: the severance of the U.S.-European security connection.

A NO-WIN SITUATION

The Soviet demand is thus unacceptable. Even the accommodationists who today dominate the discourse over foreign affairs within a segment of the American body politic reject the Soviet demand, and the Reagan administration enjoys widespread backing here and in Europe in refusing to bow to it. The Soviets have thus backed themselves into a no-win situation, an act of unprecedented diplomatic stupidity.

In order to extricate themselves, they have lately proposed separate negotiations in Vienna on an anti-satellite weapons agreement. President Reagan was wise in responding affirmatively to the proposal for negotiations, but he is equally wise in anticipating no real progress in them.

But in the meantime the hostage is dying. The primary victim of this situation is arms control—not in its unrealistic utopian version but as a modest and practical way of somewhat controlling the spirals of defense spending and weapons accumulation on both sides. The Soviet refusal to negotiate simple means precious time is being lost, and as a result it will be even more difficult in the future to reach a truly ambitious and comprehensive agreement, a better version of SALT II.

This is because the political paralysis in the negotiations is being outpaced by the dynamics of the weapons revolution. The simply fact is that both the U.S. and the Soviet Union are rapidly moving—while the arms-control negotiations remain stalemated—to acquire increasingly sophisticated weapons systems, making existing ICBMs ananchronistic. As pointed out in a recent study in the Naval War College Review by James Westwood: "The 1980s is a time of rapid transition and readjustments to technological changes in missilery. On the horizon are stealth-type bombers launching stealth cruise missiles (ALCM) and precision-guided munitions (PGMs), further obviating the role of ICBMs. Scientific and technological achievements in guidance, navigation, aerodynamics, electronic circuitry and componentry, and in warheads yields-per-warhead-weight appear to be leading rapidly to a downturn, perhaps to an eventual demise of the once-ascendant and now dominant ICBMs of the period 1960 to 1985. This trend holds both in the United States and in the U.S.S.R."

Highly mobile and extraordinarily precise delivery systems are coming into being and are beginning to be deployed. By way of example, the CEP (circular error probabilities) of a Soviet SS-19 has been approximately 1,200 feet; that of a Minuteman III, 700 feet; of an MX, 450 feet; and of a Pershing 2, with terminal guidance, about 100 feet. The latest Soviet missiles also involve similarly impressive operational improvements.

It will be increasingly difficult to impose effective and verifiable limits on these weapons. The verificiation problem is becoming increasingly acute, given the mobility of the new systems and the opportunities for rapid reloading and covert deployment. The question of how to control qualitative improvements plagued SALT II negotiations and, at best, only a partially satisfactory response was developed. Their difficulties pale in comparision to the complexities posed by the new systems. Adequate vertification of both qualitative and quantitative limits would require access to storage facilities and even perhaps to production centers. As a consequence, it is realistic to conclude that for both political and technological reasons, the chances of an truly comprehensive agreement, which can be reliably verified, are rapidly fading.

In that context, we are likely to see renewed attraction to war planners of a first-strike scenario. Since the mid-1950s, acquisition by the Soviets of a respectable nuclear capability meant that a first strike—inherently messy and unpredictable in its consequences—was until recently not an attractive option for either side. A messy attack with large and relatively inaccurate warheads (the only kind possible) would still precipitate an almost equally messy counterattack. But with the deployment of extraordinarily accurate systems, a first strike designed to paralyze the opponent's capacity to respond through the pre-emptive destruction of most of its forces and through the decapitation of its command structure can again become a viable planning option. From an offensive point of view, a sudden attack by highly precise and very numerous nuclear weapons is more profitable than an exchange resulting from a political crisis prompting both sides to gear their forces to maximum alert.

In the years ahead, one can envisage several ways in which nuclear weapons might be used in anger and by deliberation. Four basic variants summarize the range of possibilities: (1) a massive surprise attack; (2) through crisis escalation; (3) by contagion from non-superpower conflicts; (4) by terrorist attack. Of those, in the years ahead probably the fourth is the most likely since it involves a relatively simple operation, and it can be undertaken by a limited group of individuals with little concern for society and motivated by their own peculiar brand of rationality.

But while the employment of a nuclear device in a terrorist attack may be the most likely, for the U.S. a surprise attack poses the greatest danger. It could in one stroke create circumstances beyond our capacity to foresee either its social or historical consequences. Of course such a sudden-attack scenario remains unlikely, but one can disregard it entirely only at the greatest peril. Given the relative openness of American society, the precise location of key U.S. assets can be much more easily ascertained and effectively targeted than those of the Soviets. That makes the U.S. more vulnerable to such a strike, and it would be escapist to assume that Soviet planners would choose to ignore such an option altogether.

Moreover, a bolt out of the blue could create such initial disbelief among the U.S. decision makers that they would be unable to make a prompt response. Even without a special Soviet effort to disrupt or destroy U.S. decision makers, a sudden massive attack would put the American leaders under extraordinary psychological pressure, capable of inducing erratic behavior and hesitation. One can hardly imagine how utterly dumbfounding would be the situation in which the president would find himself awakened in the middle of some night, confronted with the following life-and-death decision tree (as based on public sources):

Time (minutes)

0 Massive attack launched.

1 SLBMs detected.

2 ICBMs detected.

4-6 Confirmation of attack; uncertainty over scale; U.S. decision process begins.

6-10 First SLBMs detonate in High Altitude EMP attack; SAC launched preemptively; confirmation of scale of attack; final U.S. decision process.

12-14 Final window for initiating response; launch under attack.

16-20 Delta SLBMs launched from home ports hit SAC.

20-30 ICBM attack initiated possible X-ray pin-down and begins impact on targets.

How in these circumstances would the president perform? How effective would be the chain of command? How rational would be the choices made in response to initially unbelievable information? Could incoming information regarding the nature of the attack be rationally related to the needed response? We are dealing here with truly sensitive and disturbing operational as well as psychological questions.

The advent of increasingly numerous and accurate systems is making it possible for planners of a strategic attack to envisage a first strike that leaves the opponent strategically crippled, capable of only a spasmodic, disorganized and strategically aimless response—or none at all. This still does not make a first strike attractive from a moral or even political point of view, given the stakes, but the point is that gradually the military attractiveness of this option is again increasing.

Accordingly, with the stalemate in arms control, the enhanced capacity of strategic offense must be offset—and it is likely to be offset by greater reliance on the part of both sides on defensive strategic systems. The Times of London put it correctly when it stated editorially on June 13: "The Soviet Union is now naturally worried about the consequences of a burst in American spending on missile defense. It casts doubt on Soviet plans for offensive systems since the possibility of any missile defense—even an incomplete one—would radically alter the cost calculation of offensive systems. In the long run a defensive program would enhance arms control by reducing the potential gains from building offensive weapons. . . . It is ironic and paradoxical that the age of deterrence has so confused the strategic mentality of many commentators that their reaction to a purely defensive system is to suggest that it increases danger."

The fact is that strategic defense has become feasible not in the sense that it can safeguard society but because it can increasingly complicate the planning and execution of an effective first strike. In other words, strategic defense can somewhat negate the offensive advantages of increasingly sophisticated strike systems, restoring the element of deterrence simply by creating again greater uncertainty as to the consequences of a first strike.

RESPECTIVE VULNERABILITY

For the U.S., it is an especially attractive option for it permits us to exploit the advantages of high technology, an area of U.S. superiority. This provides us with genuine potential for offsetting the military advantages gained in recent years by the Soviet Union, and would put pressure on the Soviet Union to return to serious arms-control negotiations.

But even with such negotiations, the development of some defensive strategic capability will remain desirable. It is often said that an imbalance might arise when one side sees the other side acquiring a relatively invulnerable shield while itself remaining invulnerable. Pre-emption might therefore become tempting. In fact, that is not likely to happen. The acquisition of a defensive strategic capability is not like purchasing an umbrella, which one can unfold against the rain upon leaving the store. It is bound to be a protracted trial-and-error piecemeal process, with both sides experimenting, deploying partially, and adjusting their capabilities, with neither one at any point in the next 15 to 20 years feeling it is truly invulnerable to the other side, even though over time the respective vulnerability of each side to a first strike by the other will gradually be declining.

Through such a process, a measure of reciprocal stability will be acquired and security of both sides will gradually be enhanced, through the process will not yield the kind of restraint in defense expenditures that many have associated with the hoped-for control. But the time has come to lay to rest the expectation that arms control is the secret key to a more amicable American-Soviet relationship or even to the enhancement of mutual security. The maintenance of such security will remain an ambiguous and protracted process requiring unilateral actions by both sides, and increasingly so in the area of strategic defense.●

NAVY LT. GARY SHANK RETURNS HOME

● Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, this is a very special day for the Shank family of Lenexa, KS—special because this is the day they are finally able to lay to rest their son Gary, a lieutenant in the U.S. Navy who was lost in Vietnam on July 23, 1972. Gary was one of eight U.S. military officers missing since the Vietnam war whose remains were recently returned by the Government of North Vietnam.

While Gary will be laid to rest in Johnson County Memorial Garden today, we must never lay to rest our efforts to gain a full accounting of his comrades who are still missing in action or remain prisoners of war in Southeast Asia.

Freedom has always been precious to Americans. It was Lieutenant Shank's display of devotion that has proven instrumental in maintaining that freedom, a quality so essential in shaping this Nation's destiny. Gary and his comrades were never forgotten heroes. This country can never forget nor fail to honor Lieutenant Shank and others still missing who have so courageously earned our highest regard.

Our country is also aware of the deep suffering experienced by the Shank family and other families who still have sons unaccounted for. These families have faced an awesome silence for far too long. While we can never begin to experience the collective pain that the Shank family and others like them have had to endure, we can do all that is humanly possible to gain the fullest possible POW/MIA accounting. We must never forget our obligation to their families.

For relatives of 38 other Kansan families whose sons have not been accounted for and for other families throughout the country, our efforts to locate, identify and bring home the remains of MIA's should serve as confirmation that their sacrifices have not been forgotten. Welcome home Lieutenant Shank.●

BUDGET DEFICITS MUST BE BROUGHT UNDER CONTROL

● Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I wanted to take a few minutes today to discuss the Federal budget and the very serious situation we're facing. As every Member of the Senate is aware, a few short years ago we had a deficit of about $60 billion. I believe that was in fiscal year 1980. Since that time, although the deficit went down only slightly in fiscal year 1981 to about $57 billion, we've been on a path as far as deficits are concerned, that we've simply got to reverse.

The last 2 years have been virtually unbelievable as far as rolling up the red ink is concerned. In fiscal year 1982 we had the largest deficit in the history of the country—$110 billion. This was almost double the previous record of $66 billion set during the administration of former President Ford. Then, Mr. President, last year, we made the $110 billion figure look good, as the deficit rose to a whopping $195 billion. The latest estimates for the coming years are very ominous, Mr. President, since the forecasts are in the $180 billion range.

Not only will the deficits exact a terrible price in terms of higher interest rates, but they will also compound our problems with trying to balance the Federal budget. This is because interest payments on the national debt are getting larger and larger every year. This interest payment must be paid, and is a budget outlay of the Federal Government.

During the recess, Mr. President, I received a letter from Mr. Ralph Weems, president of the American Soybean Association. In his letter, Mr. Weems noted how large and persistent budget deficits hurt American agriculture, not only through higher interest costs, but also how they damage our exports due to the strength of the dollar. In addition, Mr. Weems urged Congress to work in a bipartisan manner to make further, more significant reductions in the Federal budget deficit, including passing a proposed constitutional amendment requiring a balanced Federal budget. I couldn't agree more, Mr. President, with Mr. Weems' call for bipartisanship, and also, the need for the proposed constitutional amendment mandating a balanced budget.

I cosponsored the balanced budget amendment shortly after coming to the Senate, and when it was before the Senate on August 4, 1982, I joined 68 of my colleagues in voting for the proposed amendment. Since the amendment had the necessary two-thirds majority, it was sent to the House, where is failed to gain the two-thirds vote on October 1, 1982. Although this measure has been defeated once in the House, Mr. President, I am very hopeful that we can revisit this issue in the near future, and hopefully, send the measure to the States for ratification. The longer we wait to enact this needed budget reform, Mr. President, the longer it's going to be until we're able to effectively control Federal spending.

Recently, President Reagan presented a list of six priorities. Let me quote him when he cited the first item on his list:

> First, a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget—and we must balance it not by raising the tax rates of hard working Americans, but by insisting that Government spend no more than it takes in.

In addition to the proposed constitutional amendment, Mr. President, I think we should enact a budget freeze. Within the last few years, I've become convinced that a budget freeze, in conjunction with other budget reforms, like the proposed constitutional amendment will hold down Government spending and bring about lower interest rates. The distinguished Senator from South Carolina, Mr. HOLLINGS, offered a budget freeze proposal in 1983, and I joined him in that effort. If my recollection is correct, we got 16 votes in this Chamber. This year, Mr. President, he offered another budget freeze during our consideration of the budget resolution, and he got 38 votes. Additionally, my two distinguished colleagues from Kansas and Iowa, Mrs. KASSEBAUM and Mr. GRASSLEY, offered their version of a budget freeze, and although it failed to pass, it had strong suppport.

Mr. President, I think there is a growing belief that a budget freeze may be part of the answer to runaway deficits. I read in the Wall Street Journal July 6, 1984 where the chairman of the Finance Committee, Mr. DOLE, was quoted as saying that next year might be "the year of the freeze." I'm optimistic, Mr. President, that this idea is one whose time has come. Many, many Members of the Senate are seriously considering this matter, and I think further examination will show that it will be a very effective way to hold down Government spending, and it will show that the Congress is serious about tackling the budget deficits.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to examine several of the budget freeze proposals, and I also ask that the letter I received from Ralph Weems, dated July 2, 1984, be placed in the RECORD.

The letter follows:

ASA WASHINGTON OFFICE,
Washington, DC, July 2, 1984.

Hon. DAVID PRYOR,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR PRYOR: A financial disaster. The best describes what faces American soybean farmers and other independent businessmen unless the Congress and the Administration act now to put our nation's economic house in order. High interest rates and an over-valued dollar are robbing farmers of their competitive export edge and their chance for a profit. It is time for the Congress to act.

Instead of passing counterproductive and costly initiatives which only treat economic symptoms, the times demand a cure for the real disease plaguing our economy—huge federal budget deficits. Only by greatly reducing the federal budget deficit and ultimately balancing the budget can we reduce interest rates, bring about a fair-valued dollar, and restore a favorable economic climate for agriculture.

As much as or more than any sector, American farmers are at the mercy of America's economic policies. As capital intensive as agriculture is, increases in interest rates have a huge direct impact on farmers' cost of production and overall profitability. Each one percent increase in prime interest rates costs American farmers almost $3 billion in net income. For farmers with cash sales over $40,000 annually, a one-percent rise in interest rates costs approximately $2,500. Interest expenses alone account for almost 20 percent of total cash outlays for today's farmer. That is up from less than 10 percent in the early 1970's.

The high-valued dollar is destroying American agriculture's competitive position on world markets. Since January 1983 the price of U.S. soybeans to German, Dutch and British buyers has risen by 70 percent, but almost half of that increase is the result of the rising value of the dollar rather than increases in U.S. farm-gate prices.

The over-valued dollar is making our exports more expensive, imports cheaper, providing production incentives to our foreign competitors, and fueling a dangerous rise in U.S. protectionism. No embargo could have more effect on farm prices, export sales, and farmer income than an over-valued dollar.

American soybean farmers believe it is time for the Congress and the President to put aside partisanship and end high interest rates and the over-valued dollar by greatly reducing current budget deficits and passing a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution. Our current dilemma is not solely the fault of Democrats or Republicans, the Congress, or the President. There is enough blame to go around.

Instead of waiting until after the election while unbridled federal spending continues and thousands go bankrupt, the time to act is now. Federal spending must be cut across-the-board, including funds allocated to agriculture, defense, social services, and public works. Some targeted tax increases may be necessary. A down payment on the deficit is not enough—we need to balance the budget. No doubt the solution will be painful for many Americans, but the benefits to all will far outweight the pain. No farm bill, import barrier, or export subsidy can do as much to help American agriculture or any other sector, as will reasonable interest rates and a fair-valued dollar.

We ask for your support and your leadership in the effort to bring about a sound economy. Nothing would be of more benefit to soybean farmers.

Sincerely,

RALPH WEEMS,
President.●

NRC EMERGENCY EVACUATION PLANS

● Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, in a recent issue of the Long Island daily newspaper, Newsday, there appeared an article on the emergency evacuation plans currently required by the NRC for licensing of nuclear powerplants. I bring this to your attention because it highlights a very crucial issue that is now being reexamined by the NRC for possible changes in the estimates of radiation releases from a severe nuclear accident. Their proposed changes will be announced by early 1985.

The issue in question is commonly referred to in the nuclear community as the source-term estimate. Measurements taken during and after the Three Mile Island accident 5 years ago indicated that radiation releases were substantially less than what would have been predicted from the source-term estimates originating from the 1975 reactor safety study. Since the TMI accident, the NRC and DOE have focused a significant amount of research efforts in studying severe fuel damage and source-term phenomena. Experiments have been performed at several DOE research facilities, including the loss of fluid test [LOFT], power burst facility [PBF], and semiscale, all three of which are located at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

The payoff for such an investment in source-term research is not insignificant. If we can conclude from such experimental evidence that the source-term estimates that are currently used are, in fact, overly conservative and unrealistic, then a reduction in the source-term estimate would be in order. Such a reduction would have far-reaching, favorable impact on our tormented nuclear industry. As the Newsday article indicates, the emergency evacuation requirements could be restricted to a much smaller vicinity of the plant. In situations similar to that now faced by Shoreham, this could well spell the difference between a powerplant that will sit idle, trying to wrestle with unwieldy and unnecessary evacuation requirements, and a plant that will actually operate.

Mr. President, I ask that the Newsday article be made a part of the RECORD.

The article follows:

[From the Newsday (Long Island Newspaper), Aug. 2, 1984]

LESS RADIATION DANGER FROM NUCLEAR POWER

Ever since the shutdown at Three Mile Island five years ago, evidence has been accumulating that the amount of radioactive emissions from a serious nuclear accident is much smaller than previously expected. The findings could enhance the future of nuclear power, because they indicate that a nuclear power plant is a much safer neighbor than many people thought.

"Source terms"—the anticipated radioactive releases from individual plants in the event of an accident—were deliberately overestimated by federal regulators to provide a wide margin of safety. But in actual measurements of radioactive emissions at Three Mile Island, and later inside the containment building itself, the radioactive matter that escaped was less than a thousandth of what had been expected.

If the most recent findings are borne out by subsequent research and applied by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to its emergency planning requirements, the impact on the Long Island Lighting Co.'s Shoreham nuclear power plant could be profound.

Three Mile Island and Shoreham are designed differently: TMI is a pressurized reactor, while Shoreham is a boiling-water reactor. But they are both water-cooled, and that seems to be the crucial factor in holding down emissions. An analysis of the Shoreham-type reactor is now under way.

The NRC currently requires an evacuation plan for the area within a 10-mile radius of a nuclear power plant. That may be unnecessarily large. Robert Bernero, the official in charge of the commission's source-terms re-evaluation, told Newsday's Earl Lane, "It is apparent that the debate now is not whether the terms should be higher or lower, but rather how much lower."

If a 10-mile zone is deemed excessive, the 20-mile zone Suffolk County has prescribed for Shoreham is obviously far more than is needed for the protection of Suffolk's residents. Since the alleged difficulty of evacuating the area around Shoreham has been the key safety issue cited by Suffolk County executive Peter Cohalan and Gov. Mario Cuomo in opposing the plant, the findings should help persuade them to cease their opposition and turn their attention to mitigating its cost.●

A NEW SILVER COIN

● Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, I submit an insightful article that appeared in the August 1984 issue of Coinage magazine.

The article was written by Mr. David Ganz, and is entitled "A New Silver Coin From the U.S. Mint." Mr. Ganz clearly points out the best way to dispose of the 137.5 million ounce strategic stockpile of silver is through the issuance of a silver coin. Forcing that much silver on the market another way has had, and would again have, a devastating downward impact. However, offering the metal to buyers who currently are not in the market and to individuals who are not able to afford large silver bars, will expand the market. Clearly, a coinage method is the only way to appeal to this market.

The most legitimate question under this proposal, "How large will the market be?" is also addressed by Mr. Ganz. He draws a similarity between this coin and the popular 1-ounce gold Krugerrand, which has sold nearly 38 million pieces over the past 14 years. Of course, since the gold and silver markets are different, adjustments are necessary to determine how broad the silver market is.

Using a formula for conversion, Mr. Ganz predicts that if a 25-percent correlation between the gold market and the silver market existed, it would mean 40 million pieces would be purchased annually. If there were only a 10-percent correlation, 16 million pieces would be purchased annually.

This estimate is very similar to one made in a survey prepared last fall by the Silver Institute, in conjunction with the ad hoc committee on American silver. This survey indicated that the market for these coins would be in the range of 25 million ounces a year.

On June 7, 1984, the Senate passed an amendment offered by myself and Senators SYMMS and HUMPHREY, that authorizes the use of 10 million ounces of stockpiled silver to mint a 1-ounce silver coin. There is no doubt in my mind that the coinage method is the best way to dispose of excess silver, and the 10 million ounces proposed in the amendment is an excellent way to test the market for a new silver coin.

The goals of any disposal method are to minimize the impact that the disposal of silver has on the market, maximize the return to the government, and to retain as many benefits of the stockpile as possible. The only disposal method I have found in over 2 years of research that can accomplish these goals in the coinage program.

Mr. President, I ask that the text of Mr. Ganz's article appear in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The article follows:

A NEW SILVER COIN FROM THE U.S. MINT

(By David L. Ganz)

The United States Senate on June 7 authorized by voice vote, a motion by Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, for issuance of 10 million one-ounce silver legal tender coins with the St. Gaudens design last used on $20 gold coins.

A House bill provided for the sale of 10 million ounces of surplus silver. The bills now go to a conference committee where the Senate version is given a 50-50 chance of approval. The Treasury Department approved in principal a one dollar legal tender bullion coin which gives added clout to the coin.

Last time that silver coins were produced by the government for widespread distribution was prior to 1964. When the Coinage Act of 1965 was passed, all silver coinage was suspended except for the half dollar, which became silver-clad.

McClure has been an advocate of silver coinage for more than a dozen years, dating back to when he was a Member of Congress representing Idaho in the House of Representatives. In numerous interviews since 1972, he had advocated use of the precious metal.

Action speaks louder than words, and McClure was among the first to propose a silver bicentennial commemorative coin. Since then, he has annually put forth a series of proposals for silver cartwheels of which this is the latest.

Unlike the others, however, this concept stands a strong chance of passage. The reason has to do with an announced decision by the General Services Administration to eliminate 150 million ounces from the silver stockpile.

With that quantity going onto the market, there would clearly be a major downward impact. That would adversely affect constituents of McClure, namely the mine producers of Idaho, who have only begun recently to recover from years of low prices.

Placing the metal into a bullion market as a legal tender coin is a master-stroke, then—the basic purpose being to offer the metal to buyers who currently are not in the market, and to individuals who would probably not buy silver in 400 ounce bar quantities (the usual minimum in government auction sales).

McClure's strategy is to have the legal tender coin created and produced by the Mint, then sold at a modest mark-up or profit, to a bulk distributor. The distributor would then be charged with creating a secondary market, and a buy and sell pricing structure.

It would be dissimilar to the manner in which J. Aron has set up its gold medallion program, or the way in which Manfra, Tordella & Brooks has an MTB quote or screen price for a variety of coins that it regularly buys and sells.

McClure first linked the bullion piece to the reissuance of a Morgan silver dollar—last produced in 1921—which would have the identical specifications as its predecessor: 1.5 inch diameter, .7734 fine troy ounces of .900 fine silver, and the old design of George Morgan with a contemporary, 1984 date.

The bullion piece would have then become secondary, but a significant part of the program—designed to assist in absorbing 450 million troy ounces in a period of about three years.

As is common, the McClure congressional office requested comments on S. 269 from the Treasury department. Most probably anticipated a negative reaction, but instead it was positive as to both the Morgan dollar, and a bullion coin—with limitations, and proposals for changes and additions, of course.

Treasury now has substantially more experience in producing a "product" as opposed to manufacturing coinage and other items that are incidentally sold to collectors. (Proof sets fit the incidental category.)

Since 1975, for example, the Treasury has made bicentennial proof and uncirculated sets, issued a new Anthony dollar, struck a George Washington commemorative half dollar, participated in a silver and gold three-coin Olympic program, and attempted marketing of gold medallions mandated by Congress.

One thing that they were convinced of was that there was value in a legal tender product, rather than one which was merely a medal. The old issue of "remonetizing" silver was never even broached, as the bureaucracy's memory receded.

Thus, where McClure sought a one ounce coin, the Treasury countered by suggesting that in addition to indicating a single ounce of silver, it ought to have a value of one dollar.

At one time, this suggestion would have had the powers of the Treasury Department up in arms, complaining that it was a trick or guise to remonetize silver, that it would confuse the public and that the monetary system would suffer.

There would have also been claims of confusion in valuing an ounce of silver at a dollar when it has a free market value of $10, to use round numbers.

But all that went out the window, thanks to the Olympic coin program. There, a silver dollar was produced (containing traditional quantities of silver, .7734 troy ounces) with a face value of $1 and a bullion value substantially in excess of that. A $10 gold coin, with nearly a half ounce of gold in it, was also included. (That disparity appears even greater, given a $400 an ounce price for the yellow metal.)

So there appears nothing in prior history that would prevent the program from utilizing a one ounce coin with a one dollar legal tender value. (No one would use the coin as a legal tender, but it would have that nominal value and the Treasury would have to be reimbursed the cost of the metal as well as that value under a complicated bookkeeping system before it could be sold.)

To give the coin pizzazz, McClure conceived of utilizing the well-executed standing Liberty design of Augustus St. Gaudens that previously graced the double eagle. Some modifications in design are necessary of course, but the coin will have instant numismatic recognition.

Just how many will be sold is conjectural. Initial thoughts however on the Treasury's part are that three million pieces will be acquired during the first year. Some other thoughts, including those of experts, are that many more will be the potential market: perhaps upwards of 25 million ounces.

A lot depends on the price of silver. Clearly, the market is not numismatic in its purest form. Rather, it appears that there may be a three to four million piece market among coin collectors for the purely numismatic aspect—and a bullion market that is a lot higher.

The experience with the South African gold Krugerrand, costing for an ounce of gold 40 times the value of the proposed silver one ounce coin, is instructive.

Over the course of the past 14 years, some 38 million Krugerrands have been sold. the average sale recently has been four million pieces a year. Even realizing that gold and silver have different markets. that means that a direct translation (160 million pieces, derived by multiplying value by number of pieces) would be reduced, but by how much.

If the reduction was by 75 percent (that is, that only a 25 percent correlation took place) that would mean 40 million pieces sold. If a 90 percent reduction on that correlation took place, 16 million pieces would be acquired annually.

So the real issue is how the marketing will take place, and the McClure bill contemplates using private marketers capable of both purchasing from the government and then maintaining a secondary market—essential if the coin is to have viability.

Quite clearly, the introduction of such a coin in exciting. How soon it will all be realized is the key.

Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., chairman of the House coinage subcommittee, wants no competition with Olympic issues. Since these silver coins would be without a surcharge, he views them as a direct threat.

They really aren't, any more than the Krugerrand threatens Olympic gold coins. But reality is what is perceived, and an early 1985 date seems the likely target for McClure, assuming that the right vehicle can be found to tack the bill onto.

Tacticians usually seek a bill that will give latitude, but also require action. The stockpile bill is both urgently needed, according to Congressional sources, and likely to pass. That makes it the target.

What will happen remains to be seen, but, this being an election year odds seem strong that the McClure silver bullion coin will become law, and will revolutionize the manner in which American currency is perceived both at home and abroad.●

PINE BLUFF RAILROAD-HIGHWAY DEMONSTRATION PROJECT

● Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I want to commend both the House and Senate Appropriations Committees for including specific funding for a critically needed railroad-highway demonstration project in Pine Bluff, AR, in the fiscal year 1985 transportation appropriations bill.

This funding—$6.2 million in the House bill and $4 million in the Senate bill—is essential so that the Pine Bluff project can move forward, reducing safety problems and easing congestion on the streets of downtown Pine Bluff. Completion of this project will lessen the fears of local officials and citizens that a train might someday prevent a police car or fire engine from reaching an emergency site to save a life or to prevent unnecessary property damage. In addition, it will make it easier for citizens to simply travel about their city.

I find it particularly encouraging and timely that the Appropriations Committees in both the House and the Senate have seen fit to specifically recommend funding for the Pine Bluff project in this bill, since after fiscal 1985, the authorization for these projects lapses. The support demonstrated by these committees serves as clear and convincing evidence of Pine Bluff's need for Federal assistance on this matter.

Mr. President, I have been aware of the need for some positive resolution to Pine Bluff's railroad traffic problems since I became Governor of Arkansas almost a decade ago. Along with the people of Pine Bluff and my colleagues Senator BUMPERS and Congressman ANTHONY, I urge both the House and the Senate to quickly approve these bills.●

TREATIES

ESTATE AND GIFT TAX CONVENTION WITH THE KINGDOM OF DENMARK; TREATY WITH THE KINGDOM OF THAILAND ON COOPERATION IN THE EXECUTION OF PENAL SENTENCES; CARTAGENA CONVENTION FOR THE PROTECTION AND DEVELOPMENT OF MARINE ENVIRONMENT OF THE WILDER CARIBBEAN REGION

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask as in executive session unanimous consent that at 12 noon on Thursday, August 9, the Senate go into executive session to consider three treaties on the Executive Calendar, Calendar Nos. 23, 35, and 36.

I further ask unanimous consent that the treaties be advanced through their various parliamentary stages, up to and including the presentation of the resolutions of ratification, and that all reported conditions to resolutions of ratification, and reservations, be considered agreed to.

I further ask unanimous consent that total debate time be limited to 10 minutes, to be equally divided between the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee and the ranking minority member, or their designees.

Finally, I ask unanimous consent that, immediately following the conclusion or yielding back of debate time, the Senate proceed to vote on the resolutions of ratification and that 1 vote count as 3 votes.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask the distinguished assistant majority leader to withdraw the request temporarily. I have not had this request placed before me until this moment. That is not the Senator's fault. It is not anyone's fault.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I will accept a request to set aside, and consider it later, if it is possible to do so. I apologize to my good friend.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request is withdrawn.

(Later the following occurred:)

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I now renew the request I made as in executive session and ask that the manner in which that unanimous-consent request was stated be printed in the RECORD as I am sending the version to the desk now and I renew my request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The request is as follows:

I ask unanimous consent that at 12 noon on Thursday, August 9, the Senate go into executive session to consider three treaties on the Executive Calendar, Calendar Nos. 23, 35, and 36.

I further ask unanimous consent that the treaties be advanced through their various parliamentary stages, up to an including the presentation of the resolutions of ratification, and that all reported conditions to resolutions of ratification, and reservations, be considered agreed to.

I further ask unanimous consent that total debate time be limited to 10 minutes, to be equally divided between the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee and the ranking minority member, or their designees.

Finally, I ask unanimous consent that immediately following the conclusion or yielding back of debate time, the Senate proceed to vote on the resolutions of ratification and that one vote count as three votes.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that it be in order to request the yeas and nays.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, that would be one vote considered as three votes.

Mr. STEVENS. Yes; that is right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The resolutions of ratification are as follows:

ESTATE AND GIFT TAX CONVENTION WITH THE KINGDOM OF DENMARK

Resolved, (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of the Convention Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Kingdom of Denmark for the Avoidance of Double Taxation and the Prevention of Fiscal Evasion with Respect to Taxes on Estates, Inheritances, Gifts and Certain Other Transfers, signed at Washington on April 27, 1983, subject to the reservation that, notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph 2 of Article 9 (Reductions), the United States and Denmark shall not impose their duties on estates and inheritances with respect to property that passes from a decedent domiciled (within the meaning of Article 4) (Fiscal Domicile)) in Denmark and the United States, respectively, to the spouse of such decedent if, in the case of the determination of Danish tax, the spouse so requests. This provision will not be interpreted to require the United States to exempt interspousal transfers that would not be exempt under U.S. law in force at the time this treaty becomes effective when made by a domiciliary of the United States.

CARTAGENA CONVENTION FOR THE PROTECTION AND DEVELOPMENT OF THE MARINE ENVIRONMENT OF THE WIDER CARIBBEAN REGION

Resolved, (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of the Convention for the Protection and Development of the Marine Environment of the Wider Caribbean Region, done at Cartagena de Indias March 24, 1983.

(Text of resolution of advice and consent to ratification to Treaty Doc. 98-13; treaty calendar no. 36)

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, let me set it aside instead of withdrawing it. If I can bring it up later, I will. If I cannot, I will withdraw it.

CIVIL AERONAUTICS BOARD SUNSET ACT

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate Calendar Order No. 1077, H.R. 5297.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 5297) to amend the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 to terminate certain functions of the Civil Aeronautics Board, to transfer certain functions of the Board to the Secretary of Transportation, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senate will proceed to its immediate consideration.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, S. 2796, the Civil Aeronautics Board Sunset Act of 1984, as reported by the Senate Commerce Committee, is designed to provide for an orderly termination of the authority of the Civil Aeronautics Board [CAB] on January 1, 1985.

As I understand it, one of the primary concerns of the distinguished author of the bill, the junior Senator from Kansas, in introducing this measure and moving it to the Senate floor was that the consumer protection authority of the CAB had not been adequately addressed in the Airline Deregulation Act of 1978 [ADA]. As a result, one of the major purposes of S. 2796 is to transfer to the Department of Transportation on January 1, 1985, the relevant consumer protection authorities, including "* * * the CAB's authority under section 411 of the act, to prevent unfair or deceptive practices or unfair methods of competition in air transportation;"—page 6 of the Senate report.

I want to congratulate the Senator for her leadership in this matter and for taking the steps necessary to insure that the consuming public's interests in our commercial aviation system are properly protected at all times, both before and after January 1, 1985. I do have a couple of questions concerning the distinguished Senator's intent, both as the author of the bill and as chairman of the Aviation Subcommittee, concerning the operation of the bill and the administration of section 411 of DOT.

The committee report of the House of Representatives on H.R. 5297, the House-passed sunset bill, addressed section 411 in very specific terms. At page 5, the House report states:

The CAB is currently considering allegations that large airlines which sell computer reservations systems to travel agents are using their monopoly powers in the CRS industry unlawfully to eliminate competition in the sale of air transportation. More recently, there have been concerns that large carriers will use the right to interline with them as a device to restrain competition unfairly. This could be accomplished by selective refusals to interline, or by selective refusals to interline on reasonable terms, based on competitive considerations. Section 411 furnishes a means of controlling abuses in this area, thereby helping preserve the system of interlining and the major benefits it brings to consumers.

At page 13, the House report further states:

The Committee expects that in administering the authority it will receive from CAB, DOT will continue CAB's policy of encouraging the system of interline transportation. Through the interline system, airlines authorize each other to sell transportation and collect the amount due for interline services. These funds are held in trust and cleared through the Airline Clearing House. A smoothly functioning interline and clearing house system, allowing passengers to purchase transportation on more than one carrier on a single ticket and check baggage through to the traveler's ultimate destination, has provided substantial consumer benefits. DOT should facilitate the continuation of the system.

The Senate report is silent with respect to the consumer benefits of interlining as well as the competitive abuses associated with selective interlining. I think that abuses of the interlining system presents a very serious problem. I believe that the Senate should be heard on the subject and that CAB and DOT should fully understand that we intend that these problems be forthrightly and properly addressed.

It is clear that both the House-passed bill and the Senate bill as reported by the committee contain ample and adequate authority to deal with any abuses of the interlining system and other important aspects of consumer protection. I do, however, feel that we should make clear to both the CAB and DOT what our intent and expectations are with respect to their implementation and administration of this measure.

It is my understanding that prior to January 1, 1985, and the transfer of these authorities to DOT, the CAB's duty, mandate, and responsibilities with respect to the faithful administration of section 411 of the Federal Aviation Act and other applicable law are not changed. The CAB has a continuing responsibility to initiate actions, including issuances of orders and rulemaking, as necessary to protect the interests of the consuming public and to avoid anticompetitive behavior that threatens consumer interests.

By the same token, after January 1, 1985, the Senate fully expects to see DOT complete any consumer protection actions, orders, or rulemakings initiated by CAB and to initiate new consumer protection actions and rulemakings when warranted by the facts.

Is my understanding correct and is it the intent of the distinguished author of the bill that CAB and DOT will initiate and conclude an appropriate rulemaking to assure that competitive and consumer abuses associated with selective interlining by some air carriers is not permitted?

Mrs. KASSEBAUM. The Senator from Alaska raises a number of very important concerns and questions. It is my intent, as the author of S. 2796, that both CAB and DOT take whatever actions are necessary to prevent competitive abuse and to protect the interests of the consuming public in a safe, efficient, and convenient commercial air transportation system.

With respect to the consuming public's interest in the interline system and the critical need to prevent anticompetitive use of the system, I intend and I believe the committee fully intends that both CAB and DOT take all appropriate action, including issuance of orders and initiation of rulemaking, to insure the maintenance of a national air transportation system which serves the consuming public's interests.

As the Senator from Alaska knows, the Senate bill renews statutory authority under sections 102(a)(7), 404a and 411 of the Federal Aviation Act and transfers administration of those provisions to DOT effective January 1, 1985. Since 1938, the CAB has been under a statutory mandate to encourage the development of a national air transportation system. The system which the Board has been directed to encourage is one in which the airlines not only authorize each other, and each other's agents, to sell transportation and collect therefor from the passenger, but also provides for through checking of baggage to the passenger's ultimate destination.

This system provides significant consumer benefits. These include ease of ticketing; the ability to check baggage through to the final destination; convenience in moving unaccompanied children; the ability to use two carriers rather than one when the schedules are more convenient; and, the ability to take advantage of lower fares offered by some carriers. The interline system is also one of the principal factors in providing convenient air services for many of the smaller cities and town and infacilitating the entry of new competitive air carriers. I believe, therefore, that the survival of this interline system is something about which the Congress and the executive branch must be concerned.

It appears that some air carriers may have misinterpreted the Airline Deregulation Act to mean that interlining may be used as an anticompetitive tool. For example, I am informed that some carriers have refused to enter into interline arrangements with new market entrants. Other carriers have opted out of the multilateral interline agreement in favor of agreements which terminate every 30 days unless specifically extended. This latter approach provides significant competitive leverage for larger carriers over smaller carriers because the smaller carriers are more dependent upon the larger carriers for traffic.

It was not and it is not Congress' intent for interlining to become an anticompetitive tool. The intent, as evidenced by the fact that 404a still requires adequate service and section 411 provides for the prevention of unfair trade practices, is to keep the interline system intact but to allow flexibility so that a carrier which chooses not to interline at all may do so. However, if a carrier chooses to interline tickets and/or baggage with one or more air carriers, then that carrier should interline with all other air carriers upon request and on reasonable terms. The terms of these interline arrangements must be fair and reasonable and must not unjustly discriminate against any air carrier. It is also fair to require that each carrier be able to demonstrate that it has the ability to meet its monthly financial obligations under the interline arrangement. These requirements should, in my view, be limited to air carriers operating with more than 56 seats.

With those principles in mind, it is my intent that the CAB immediately begin an investigation into this matter. This investigation should be done in conjunction with DOT and should be aimed at producing whatever rules are necessary to preserve fair and equitable interlining practices. This investigation should be completed as soon as is practical.

In connection with my responsibilities as chairman of the Aviation Subcommittee, I will oversee CAB's and DOT's activities to fulfill our intent on this matter.

Mr. STEVENS. I appreciate the distinguished Senator's response to my question and I concur in your statement on this matter. Your statement provides excellent guidance and direction to the CAB and DOT on how we intend the act to be administered.

AMENDMENT NO. 3654

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment in the nature of a substitute proposed by the distinguished Senator from Oregon [Mr. PACKWOOD] the chairman of the committee, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Alaska [Mr. STEVENS], for Mr. PACKWOOD, proposes an amendment numbered 3654.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Strike all after the enacting clause and substitute the following:

SHORT TITLE

SECTION 1. This Act may be cited as the "Civil Aeronautics Board Sunset Act of 1984".

AMENDMENT OF FEDERAL AVIATION ACT OF 1958

SEC. 2. Except as otherwise expressly provided, whenever in this Act an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 U.S.C. 1301 et seq.).

TERMINATION AND TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS UNDER THE FEDERAL AVIATION ACT OF 1958

SEC. 3. (a) Section 1601(a)(3) is amended by inserting after "Act" the following: "(other than section 204)".

(b) Section 1601(a) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(4) The following provisions of this Act (to the extent such provisions relate to interstate and overseas air transportation) and the authority of the Board with respect to such provisions (to the same extent) shall cease to be in effect on January 1, 1985:

"(A) Sections 401(l) and (m) and 405(b), (c), and (d) of this Act (except insofar as such sections apply to the transportation of mail between two points both of which are within the State of Alaska).

"(B) Section 403 of this Act.

"(C) Section 404 of this Act (except insofar as such section requires air carriers to provide safe and adequate service).

"(5) The following provisions of this Act and the authority of the Board with respect to such provisions shall cease to be in effect on January 1, 1985:

"(A) Section 407(b) and (c) of this Act.

"(B) Section 410 of this Act.

"(C) Section 417 of this Act.

"(D) Section 1002(d), (e), (g), (h), and (i) of this Act (except insofar as any of such sections relate to foreign air transportation).

"(6) Sections 412(a) and (b) of this Act (to the extent such sections relate to interstate and overseas air transportation) and section 414 of this Act (to the extent such section relates to orders made under sections 412(a) and (b) with respect to interstate and overseas air transportation) and the authority of the Secretary of Transportation under such sections (to the same extent) shall cease to be in effect on January 1, 1989.

"(7) Sections 408 and 409 of this Act and section 414 of this Act (relating to such sections 408 and 409) and the authority of the Secretary of Transportation under such sections (to the same extent) shall cease to be in effect on January 1, 1989.

"(8) Sections 401 (l) and (m) and 405 (b), (c), and (d) of this Act (to the extent such sections apply to the transportation of mail between two points both of which are within the State of Alaska) shall cease to be in effect on January 1, 1989.".

(c) Section 1601(b)(1)(D) is amended by inserting after "transportation" the following: "(other than for the carriage of mails between any two points both of which are within the State of Alaska)".

(d) Section 1601(b)(1) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(E) All authority of the Board under this Act which is not terminated under subsection (a) of this section on or before January 1, 1985, and is not otherwise transferred under this subsection is transferred to the Department of Transportation.".

(e) Section 1601(b) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(3) The authority of the Secretary of Transportation under this Act with respect to the determination of the rates for the carriage of mails between any two points both of which are within the State of Alaska is transferred to the Postal Service and such authority shall be exercised through negotiations or competitive bidding. The transfer of authority under this paragraph shall take effect on January 1, 1989.".

TRANSFERS OF FUNCTIONS UNDER OTHER LAWS

SEC. 4. (a) There are hereby transferred to and vested in the Secretary of Transportation all functions, powers, and duties of the Civil Aeronautics Board under the following provisions of law:

(1) The International Air Transportation Fair Competitive Practices Act of 1974 (49 U.S.C. 1159b).

(2) The International Aviation Facilities Act (49 U.S.C. 1151-1160).

(3) The Animal Welfare Act (7 U.S.C 2131 et seq.).

(4) Section 11 of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. 21).

(5) Sections 108(a)(4), 621(b)(5), 704(a)(5), and 814(b)(5) of the Consumer Credit Protection Act (15 U.S.C. 1607(a)(4), 1681s(b)(5), 1691c(a)(5), and 1692l(b)(5)).

(6) Section 382 of the Energy Policy and Conservation Act (89 Stat. 939, 42 U.S.C. 6362).

(7) Section 401 of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 451).

(8) Section 5402 of title 39, United States Code (to the extent such section relates to foreign air transportation and to air transportation between any two points both of which are within the State of Alaska).

(9) Sections 4746 and 9746 of title 10, United States Code.

(10) Section 3 of the Act entitled "An Act to encourage travel in the United States, and for other purposes" (16 U.S.C. 18b).

(b) The transfer of any authority under subsection (a) of this section shall take effect on January 1, 1985.

(c) The authority of the Secretary of Transportation under section 5402 of title 39, United States Code, with respect to air transportation between any two points both of which are within the State of Alaska shall cease to be in effect of January 1, 1989.

COLLECTION OF DATA

SEC. 5. (a) Section 329(b)(1) of title 49, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(1) collect and disseminate information on civil aeronautics (other than that collected and disseminated by the National Transportation Safety Board under title VII of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 U.S.C. 1441 et seq.)) including, at a minimum, information on (A) the origin and destination of passengers in interstate and overseas air transportation (as those terms are used in such Act), and (B) the number of passengers traveling by air between any two points in interstate and overseas air transportation; except that in no case shall the Secretary require an air carrier to provide information on the number of passengers or the amount of cargo on a specific flight if the flight and the flight number under which such flight operates are used solely for interstate or overseas air transportation and are not used for providing essential air transportation under section 419 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958;".

(b) The amendment made by this section shall take effect on January 1, 1985.

REPORTS

SEC. 6. (a) The Secretary of Transportation shall submit a report to the appropriate committees of Congress not later than July 1, 1987, listing (1) transactions submitted to the Secretary for approval under section 408 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958, (2) interlocking relations submitted to the Secretary for approval under section 409 of such Act, and (3) the types of agreements filed with the Secretary of Transportation under section 412 of such Act, and, with respect to such transactions, interlocking relationships, and agreements, those that have been exempted from the operation of the antitrust laws under section 414 of such Act. The Secretary shall recommend whether the authority under such sections 408, 409, 412, and 414 should be retained or repealed with respect to interstate and overseas air transportation and with respect to foreign air transportation.

(b) The Secretary of Transportation and the Postmaster General shall each submit a report to the appropriate committees of Congress not later than July 1, 1987, describing how the Secretary and the Postmaster General have administered their respective authorities to establish rates for the air transportation of mail and setting forth the recommendations of the Secretary and the Postmaster General as to whether the authority to establish rates for the transportation of mail between points within the State of Alaska should continue to be carried out by the Secretary by regulatory ratemaking or by the Postal Service through negotiations or competitive bidding.

INCORPORATION BY REFERENCE

SEC. 7. (a) Section 411 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 is amended by inserting "(a)" after "SEC. 411." and by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"INCORPORATION BY REFERENCE

"(b) Any air carrier may incorporate by reference in any ticket or other written instrument any of the terms of the contract of carriage in interstate and overseas air transportation, to the extent such incorporation by reference is in accordance with regulations issued by the Board.".

(b) Section 411 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 is amended by inserting before subsection (a) (as designated by subsection (a) of this section) the following subsection heading:

"INVESTIGATIONS"

(c) That portion of the table of contents contained in the first section of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 which appears under the center heading

"TITLE IV—AIR CARRIER ECONOMIC REGULATION" is amended by striking out

"Sec. 411. Methods of competition."

and inserting in lieu thereof

"Sec. 411. Methods of competition.
"(a) Investigations.
"(b) Incorporation by reference.".

REFERENCES TO CERTIFICATES OF PUBLIC CONVENIENCE AND NECESSITY

SEC. 8. Any reference in any law to a certificate of public convenience and necessity, or to a certificate of convenience and necessity, issued by the Civil Aeronautics Board shall be deemed to refer to a certificate issued under section 401 or 418 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958.

TRANSFER AND ALLOCATIONS OF APPROPRIATIONS AND PERSONNEL

SEC. 10. (a) The personnel (including members of the Senior Executive Service) employed in connection with, and the assets, liabilities, contracts, property, records, and unexpended balance of appropriations, authorizations, allocations, and other funds employed, held, used, arising from, available to or to be made available in connection with, any function transferred by section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 or section 4 of this Act, subject to section 1531 of title 31, United States Code, shall be transferred to the head of the agency to which such function is transferred for appropriate allocation. Personnel employed in connection with functions so transferred, or transferred in accordance with any other lawful authority, shall be transferred in accordance with any applicable laws and regulations relating to transfer of functions. Unexpected funds transferred pursuant to this subsection shall only be used for the purpose for which the funds were originally authorized and appropriated.

(b) In order to facilitate the transfers made by section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 and section 4 of this Act, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget is authorized and directed, in consultation with the Civil Aeronautics Board and the heads of the agencies to which functions are so transferred, to make such determinations as may be necessary with regard to the functions so transferred, and to make such additional incidental dispositions of personnel, assets, liabilities, contracts, property, records, and unexpended balances of appropriations, authorizations, allocations, and other funds held, used, arising from, available to, or to be made available in connection with, such functions, as may be necessary to resolve disputes between the Civil Aeronautics Board and the agencies to which functions are transferred by section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 and section 4 of this Act.

(c) The Chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board and the Secretary of Transportation shall, beginning as soon as practicable after the date of enactment of this Act, jointly plan for the orderly transfer of functions and personnel pursuant to section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 and section 4 of this Act.

EFFECT ON PERSONNEL

SEC. 11. (a) Employees covered by the merit pay system under chapter 54 of title 5, United States Code, who are transferred under section 10 of this Act of another agency shall have their rate of basic pay adjusted in accordance with section 5402 of such title. With respect to the evaluation period during which such an employee is transferred, merit pay determinations for that employee shall be based on the factors in section 5402(b)(2) of such title as appraised in performance appraisals administered by the Civil Aeronautics Board in accordance with chapter 43 of title 5, United States Code, in addition to those administered by the agency to which the employee is transferred.

(b) With the consent of the Civil Aeronautics Board, the head of each agency to which functions are transferred by section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 or section 4 of this Act is authorized to use the services of such officers, employees, and other personnel of the Board for such period of time as may reasonably be needed to facilitate the orderly transfer of such functions.

SAVINGS PROVISIONS

SEC. 12. (a) All orders, determinations, rules, regulations, permits, contracts, certificates, licenses, and privileges—

(1) which have been issued, made, granted, or allowed to become effective by the President, any agency or official thereof, or by a court of competent jurisdiction, in the performance of any function which is transferred by section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 or section 4 of this Act from the Civil Aeronautics Board to another agency, and

(2) which are in effect on December 31, 1984, shall continue in effect according to their terms until modified, terminated, superseded, set aside, or revoked in accordance with law by the head of the agency to which such function is transferred, or other authorized officials, a court of competent jurisdiction, or by operation of law.

(b) The transfers of functions made by section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 and section 4 of this Act shall not affect any proceedings or any application for any license, permit, certificate, or financial assistance pending at the time such transfers take effect before the Civil Aeronautics Board; but such proceedings and applications, to the extent that they relate to functions so transferred, shall be continued. Orders shall be issued in such proceedings, appeals shall be taken therefrom, and payments shall be made pursuant to such orders, as if such sections 1601(b) and 4 had not been enacted; and orders issued in any such proceedings shall continue until modified, terminated, superseded, or revoked by a duly authorized official, by a court of competent jurisdiction, or by operation of law. Nothing in this subsection shall be deemed to prohibit the discontinuance or modification of any such proceeding under the same terms and conditions and to the same extent that such proceeding could have been discontinued or modified if such sections 1601(b) and 4 had not been enacted.

(c) Except as provided in subsection (e)—

(1) the transfer of any function under section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 or section 4 of this Act shall not affect any suit relating to such function which is commenced prior to the date the transfer takes effect, and

(2) in all such suits, proceedings shall be had, appeals taken, and judgments rendered in the same manner and effect as if section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 and section 4 of this Act had not been enacted.

(d) No suit, action, or other proceeding commenced by or against any officer in his official capacity as an officer of the Civil Aeronautics Board shall abate by reason of the transfer of any function under section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 or section 4 of this Act. No cause of action by or against the Civil Aeronautics Board, or by or against any officer thereof in his official capacity shall abate by reason of the transfer of any function under section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 or section 4 of this Act.

(e) If, before January 1, 1985, the Civil Aeronautics Board, or officer thereof in his official capacity, is a party to a suit relating to a function transferred by section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 or section 4 of this Act then such suit shall be continued with the head of the Federal agency to which the function is transferred.

(f) With respect to any function transferred to another agency by section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 or by section 4 of this Act and exercised after the effective date of such transfer, reference in any Federal law (other than title XVI of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958) to the Civil Aeronautics Board or the Board (insofar as such term refers to the Civil Aeronautics Board), or to any officer or office of the Civil Aeronautics Board, shall be deemed to refer to that agency, or other official or component of the agency, in which such function vests.

(g) In the exercise of any function transferred under section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 or section 4 of this Act, the head of the agency to which such function is transferred shall have the same authority as that vested in the Civil Aeronautics Board with respect to such function, immediately preceding its transfer, and actions of the head of such agency in exercising such function shall have the same force and effect as when exercised by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

(h) In exercising any function transferred by section 1601(b) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 or section 4 of this Act, the head of the agency to which such function is transferred shall give full consideration to the need for operational continuity of the function transferred.

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 13. For purposes of this Act—

(1) the term "agency" has the same meaning such term has in section 551(1) of title 5, United States Code; and

(2) the term "function" means a function, power, or duty.

ACCESS FOR HANDICAPPED PERSONS

SEC. 14. Section 104 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "In the furtherance of such right, the Board or the Secretary, as the case may be, shall consult with the Architectual and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board established under section 502 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, prior to issuing or amending any order, rule, regulation, or procedure that will have a significant impact on the accessibility of commercial airports or commercial air transportation for handicapped persons.".

FURTHERANCE OF THE PUBLIC INTEREST IN AIR TRANSPORTATION

SEC. 15. (a) Section 102 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"STUDIES AND REPORTS

"(c) The Board may, upon its own initiative or upon the reasonable petition of any person directly affected, undertake such studies as may be necessary to determine the extent to which any aspect of air transportation furthers or hinders the public interest as set forth in this section. In undertaking this review, the Board shall conclude its consideration of all relevant factors within 120 days of receipt of the petition. The result of any such study, together with such recommendations as the Board may deem necessary, shall be forwarded to the petitioner, air carrier and appropriate Committees of the Congress.".

(b) That portion of the table of contents of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 that relates to section 102 of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(c) Studies and reports.".

STUDY OF TRANSPORTATION TO AND FROM WASHINGTON DULLES AIRPORT

SEC. 16. (a) The Secretary of Transportation shall study the feasibility of constructing a rail rapid transit line between the West Falls Church, Virginia, station of the Washington, D.C. metrorail system and Dulles International Airport in Virginia. The study shall include, but need not be limited to, a study of the feasibility of heavy rail, light rail, monorail, magnetic levitation systems and any other appropriate transportation systems. The Secretary shall study the feasibility of each such system with and without intermediate stops.

(b) The Secretary shall complete the study required by subsection (a) and transmit the results thereof to Congress not later than one year after the date of enactment of this Act.

AIR SERVICE IN THE STATE OF ALASKA

SEC. 17. (a) Section 419(f)(2) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) with respect to air transportation to any point in Alaska, essential air transportation shall neither be specified at a level of service nor operated with aircraft of lesser seating and cargo capacity than provided for in CAB Order 80-1-167 and its Appendices unless otherwise specified under an agreement between the Department of Transportation and the State of Alaska, after consultation with the community affected.".

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no part of the order of the Civil Aeronautics Board in CAB docket number 38961 (CAB Order 84-6-77) shall enter into effect until after December 31, 1984.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3654) was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask for a third reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is before the Senate and open to further amendment. If there be no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment of the amendment and the third reading of the bill.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall the bill pass?

So the bill (H.R. 5297), as amended, was passed.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider that action.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATIONAL ACT OF 1984

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate Calendar Order No. 914, S. 2341.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2341) to authorize a program to enhance the access to and the quality of vocational education, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill which had been reported from the Committee on Labor and Human Resources with an amendment to strike all after the enacting clause and insert:

That this Act may be cited as the "Vocational Education Act of 1984".

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

SEC. 2. It is the purpose of this Act to—

(1) assist the States to expand, improve, modernize, and develop quality vocational education programs in order to meet the needs of the Nation's existing and future work force for marketable skills and to improve productivity and promote economic growth;

(2) assure that individuals who are inadequately served under vocational education programs are assured access to quality vocational education programs, especially individuals who are disadvantaged, who are handicapped, men and women who are entering nontraditional occupations, adults who are in need of training and retraining, individuals who are single parents or homemakers, individuals with limited English proficiency, and individuals who are incarcerated in correctional institutions;

(3) promote greater cooperation between public agencies and the private sector in preparing individuals for employment, in promoting the quality of vocational education in the States, and in making the vocational system more responsive to the labor market in the States; and

(4) authorize national programs designed to meet designated vocational education needs and to strengthen the vocational education research process.

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 3. (a)(1) There are authorized to be appropriated $880,000,000 for the fiscal year 1985 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the succeeding fiscal years ending prior to October 1, 1989, to carry out the provisions of titles I, II, III (other than section 301(b)), and IV (other than part E) of this Act, relating to State programs.

(2) There are authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for the fiscal year 1985 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the succeeding fiscal years ending prior to October 1, 1989, to carry out programs of consumer and homemaking education under section 301(b).

(b)(1) From the funds appropriated pursuant to subsection (a)(1) for each fiscal year, 2 percent shall be available to carry out the provisions of title IV (other than part E), relating to national programs.

(2) There are authorized to be appropriated $3,700,000 for the fiscal year 1985 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the succeeding fiscal years ending prior to October 1, 1989, to carry out the provisions of part E of title IV, relating to bilingual vocational training.

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 4. As used in this Act:

(1) The term "administration" means activities of a State necessary for the proper and efficient performance of its duties under this Act, including supervision, but not including technical assistance and ancillary services.

(2) The term "area vocational education school" means—

(A) a specialized high school used exclusively or principally for the provision of vocational education to persons who are available for study in preparation for entering the labor market, or

(B) the department of a high school exclusively or principally used for providing vocational education in no less than five different occupational fields to persons who are available for study in preparation for entering the labor market, or

(C) a technical or vocational school used exclusively or principally for the provision of vocational education to persons who have completed or left high school and who are available for study in preparation for entering the labor market, or

(D) the department or division of a junior college or community college or university operating under the policies of the State board and which provides vocational education in no less than five different occupational fields leading to immediate employment but not necessarily leading to a baccalaureate degree, if it is available to all residents of the State or an area of the State designated and approved by the State board, and if, in the case of a school, department, or division described in clause (C) or this clause, it admits as regular students both persons who have completed high school and persons who have left high school.

(3) The term "community-based organization" means any such organization of demonstrated effectiveness described in section 4(5) of the Job Training Partnership Act.

(4) The term "construction" includes construction of new buildings and acquisition, and expansion, remodeling, and alteration of existing buildings, and includes site grading and improvement and architect fees.

(5) The term "cooperative education" means a program of vocational education for individuals who, through written cooperative arrangments between the school and employers, receive instruction, including required academic courses and related vocational instruction by alternation of study in school with a job in any occupational field, but the two experiences must be planned and supervised by the school and employers so that each contributes to the student's education and to his or her employability. Work periods and school attendance may be on alternate half days, full days, weeks, or other periods of time in fulfilling the cooperative program.

(6) The term "criminal offender" means any individual who is charged with or convicted of any criminal offense, including a youth offender or a juvenile offender.

(7) The term "correctional institution" means any—

(A) prison,
(B) jail,
(C) reformatory,
(D) work farm,
(E) detention center, or

(F) halfway house, community-based rehabilitation center, or any other similar institution designed for the confinement or rehabilitation of criminal offenders.

(8) The term "Council" means the National Employers Council on Vocational Education.

(9) The term "curriculum materials" means materials, including materials using advanced learning technology, designed for use in courses of instruction in any occupational field which will be used to prepare individuals for employment at the entry level or to upgrade occupational competencies of individuals previously or presently employed in any occupational field.

(10) The term "disadvantaged" means individuals (other than handicapped individuals) who have economic or academic disadvantages and who require special services and assistance in order to enable them to succeed in vocational education programs, under criteria developed by the Secretary based on objective standards and the most recent available data. Such term includes individuals who are from low-income families, migrants, individuals who have limited English proficiency and individuals who are dropouts from, or who are identified as potential dropouts from, secondary school.

(11) The term "eligible recipient" means a local educational agency or a postsecondary educational institution.

(12) The term "guidance and counseling" means programs designed to develop in children, youth, and adults career awareness, career planning, and career decisionmaking to enable them to make and implement informed educational and occupational choices. The term includes assessments, information provision, counseling, and the coordination of services designed to assist in the choice of, planning for, and achievement in vocational education and in the transition from school to work.

(13) The term "handicapped", when applied to individuals, means individuals who are mentally retarded, hard of hearing, deaf, speech impaired, visually handicapped, seriously emotionally disturbed, orthopedically impaired, or other health impaired persons, or persons with specific learning disabilities, who by reason thereof require special education and related services, and who, because of their handicapping condition, cannot succeed in the regular vocational education program without special education assistance.

(14) The term "homemaker" means an individual who—

(A) is an adult, and

(B) has worked as an adult primarily without remuneration to care for the home and family, and for that reason has diminished marketable skills.

The Secretary may not prescribe the manner in which the States will comply with the application of the definition contained in this paragraph.

(15) The term "local educational agency" means a board of education or other legally constituted local school authority having administrative control and direction of public elementary or secondary schools in a city, county, township, school district, or political subdivision in a State, or any other public educational institution or agency having administrative control and direction of a vocational education program.

(16) The term "low-income family or individual" means such families or individuals who are determined by the Secretary to be low-income according to the latest available data from the Department of Commerce.

(17) The term "postsecondary educational institution" means a nonprofit institution legally authorized to provide postsecondary education within a State for persons sixteen years of age or older, who have graduated from or left elementary or secondary school.

(18) The term "private vocational training institution" means a business or trade school, or technical institution or other technical or vocational school, in any State, which (A) admits as regular students only persons who have completed or left elementary or secondary school and who have the ability to benefit from the training offered by such institution; (B) is legally authorized to provide, and provides within that State, a program of postsecondary vocational or technical education designed to fit individuals for useful employment in recognized occupations; (C) has been in existence for two years or has been specially accredited by the Secretary as an institution meeting the other requirements of this subsection; and (D) is accredited (i) by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or association listed by the Secretary pursuant to this clause, or (ii) if the Secretary determines that there is no nationally recognized accrediting agency or association qualified to accredit schools of a particular category, by a State agency listed by the Secretary pursuant to this clause, or (iii) if the Secretary determines that there is no nationally recognized or State agency or association qualified to accredit schools of a particular category, by an advisory committee appointed by him and composed of persons specially qualified to evaluate training provided by schools of that category, which committee shall prescribe the standards of content, scope, and quality which must be met by those schools and shall also determine whether particular schools meet those standards. For the purpose of this paragraph, the Secretary shall publish a list of nationally recognized accrediting agencies or associations and State agencies which he determines to be reliable authority as to the quality of education or training afforded.

(19) The term "school facilities" means classrooms and related facilities (including initial equipment) and interests in lands on which such facilities are constructed. Such term shall not include any facility intended primarily for events for which admission is to be charged to the general public.

(20) The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Education.

(21) The term "single parent" means an individual who—

(A) is unmarried or legally separated from a spouse, and

(B) has a minor child or children for which the parent has either custody or joint custody.

(22) The term "State" includes, in addition to the several States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

(23) The term "State board" means a State board designated or created by State law as the sole State agency responsible for the administration of vocational education, or for supervision of the administration of vocational education in the State.

(24) The term "State educational agency" means the State board of education or other agency or officer primarily responsible for the State supervision of public elementary or secondary schools, or, if there is no such officer or agency, an officer or agency designated by the Governor or by State law.

(25) The term "vocational education" means organized educational programs which are directly related to the preparation of individuals for paid or unpaid employment, or for additional preparation for a career requiring other than a baccalaureate or advanced degree; and, for purposes of this paragraph, the term "organized education program" means only (A) instruction and counseling related to the occupation or occupations for which the students are in training or instruction and counseling necessary for students to benefit from such training, (B) the acquisition, maintenance, and repair of instructional supplies, teaching aids and equipment (including advanced learning technologies), and (C) the activities of student organizations whenever the activities of such organizations are directly related to vocational education. The term "vocational education" does not mean the construction, acquisition or initial equipment of buildings, or the acquisition or rental of land.

TITLE I—VOCATIONAL EDUCATION ASSISTANCE TO THE STATES

PART A—ALLOTMENT AND ALLOCATION

ALLOTMENT

SEC. 101. (a)(1) From the sums appropriated pursuant to section 3(a)(1), the Secretary shall reserve—

(A) 2 percent for the activities described in title IV; and

(B) 2 percent for the purpose of carrying out section 103.

(2) Subject to the provisions of paragraph (3), from the remainder of the sums appropriated pursuant to section 3(a)(1) and 3(a)(2), the Secretary shall allot to each State for each fiscal year—

(A) an amount which bears the same ratio to 50 percent of the sums being allotted as the product of the population aged fifteen to nineteen inclusive, in the State in the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made and the State's allotment ratio bears to the sum of the corresponding products for all the States;

(B) an amount which bears the same ratio to 20 percent of the sums being allotted as the product of the population aged twenty to twenty-four, inclusive, in the State in the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made and the State's allotment ratio bears to the sum of the corresponding products for all the States;

(C) an amount which bears the same ratio to 15 percent of the sums being allotted as the product of the population aged twenty-five to sixty-five, inclusive, in the State in the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made and the State's allotment ratio bears to the sum of the corresponding products for all the States; and

(D) an amount which bears the same ratio to 15 percent of the sums being allotted as the amounts allotted to the State under clauses (A), (B), and (C) for such years bears to the sum of the amounts allotted to all the States under clauses (A), (B), and (C) for such year.

(3)(A) No State shall receive less than one-half of one percent of the amount available under this subsection for each such fiscal year except that in the case of the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands the minimum allotment shall be $200,000.

(B) No State shall, by reason of the application of the provisions of subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, be allotted more than 150 percent of the allotment of that State in the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made.

(C) For the purpose of this paragraph, the term "State" does not include the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

(b) The amount of any State's allotment under subsection (a) for any fiscal year which the Secretary determines will not be required for such fiscal year for carrying out the program for which such amount has been allotted shall be available, from time to time, for reallotment, on such dates during such year as the Secretary shall fix, on the basis of criteria established by regulation, among other States. Any amount reallotted to a State under this subsection for any fiscal year shall remain available for obligation during the next succeeding fiscal year and shall be deemed to be part of its allotment for the year in which it is obligated.

(c)(1) The allotment ratio for any State shall be 1.00 less the product of—

(A) 0.50; and

(B) the quotient obtained by dividing the per capita income for the State by the per capita income for all the States (exclusive of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands), except that (i) the allotment ratio in no case shall be more than 0.60 or less than 0.40 and (ii) the allotment ratio for Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands shall be 0.60.

(2) The allotment ratios shall be promulgated by the Secretary for each fiscal year between October 1 and December 31 of the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made. Allotment ratios shall be computed on the basis of the average of the appropriate per capita incomes for the three most recent consecutive fiscal years for which satisfactory data are available.

(3) The term "per capita income" means, with respect to a fiscal year, the total personal income in the calendar year ending in such year, divided by the population of the area concerned in such year.

(4) For the purposes of this section, population shall be determined by the Secretary on the basis of the latest estimates available to the Department.

WITHIN STATE ALLOCATION

SEC. 102. (a) Each State shall allocate from its allotment in each fiscal year—

(1) not to exceed 6 percent of the allotment for administrative expenses;

(2) 1 percent of the allotment for the expenses of the State Council on Vocational Education, except that no State may allocate less than $120,000 nor more than $225,000 in each fiscal year for the purpose described in this clause; and

(3) of the remainder of the allotment of the State—

(A) 50 percent shall be available for activities described in title II, and

(B) 50 percent shall be available for activities described in title III.

(b) For the purpose of clause (2) of subsection (a) of this section, the term "State" shall not include the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

INDIAN PROGRAMS

SEC. 103. (a)(1) For the purpose of this section—

(A) the term "Act of April 16, 1934" means the Act entitled "An Act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to arrange with States or territories for the education, medical attention, relief of distress, and social welfare of Indians, and for other purposes", enacted April 16, 1934 (48 Stat. 596; 25 U.S.C. 452-457); and

(B) the term "Hawaiian native" means any individual any of whose ancestors were natives, prior to 1778, of the area which now comprises the State of Hawaii.

(2) From the funds reserved pursuant to section 101(a)(1)(B), the Secretary shall enter into contracts for Indian and Hawaiian native programs in accordance with the provisions of this section.

(b)(1) From the funds reserved pursuant to section 101(a)(1)(B), the Secretary is directed, upon the request of any Indian tribe which is eligible to contract with the Secretary of the Interior for the administration of programs under the Indian Self-Determination Act or under the Act of April 16, 1934, to enter into grants or contracts with any tribal organization of any such Indian tribe to plan, conduct, and administer programs, or portions thereof, which are authorized by and consistent with the purposes of this Act, except that such grants or contracts shall be subject to the terms and conditions of section 102 of the Indian Self-Determination Act and shall be conducted in accordance with the provisions of sections 4, 5, and 6 of the Act of April 16, 1934, which are relevant to the programs administered under this sentence. From any remaining funds reserved pursuant to section 101(a)(1)(B), the Secretary is authorized to enter into an agreement with the Commissioner of the Bureau of Indian Affairs for the operation of vocational education programs authorized by this Act in institutions serving Indians eligible to receive educational benefits as Indians from the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to receive the funds for the purposes described in this paragraph.

(2) For the purposes of this Act, the Bureau of Indian Affairs shall be deemed to be a State board; and all the provisions of this Act shall be applicable to the Bureau as if it were a State board.

(c) From the funds reserved pursuant to section 101(a)(1)(B) and available for this subsection, the Secretary is directed, upon the request of any eligible recipient or any nonprofit private organization which is engaged in furnishing educational services or activities to Hawaiian natives, to enter into contracts with any such eligible recipient or nonprofit private organization to plan, conduct, and administer programs, or portions thereof, which are authorized by and consistent with the provisions of this section for the benefit of Hawaiian natives.

PART B—STATE ORGANIZATIONAL AND PLANNING RESPONSIBILITIES

STATE ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 111. (a)(1) Any State desiring to participate in the vocational education program authorized by this Act shall, consistent with State law, designate or establish a State board of vocational education which shall be the sole State agency responsible for the administration or the supervision of the State vocational education program. The responsibilities of the State board shall include—

(A) the coordination of the development of policy with respect to such programs;

(B) the development in consultation with the State council on vocational education, and the submission to the Secretary, of the State plan required by section 113 and by section 114; and

(C) the consultation with the State council on vocational education and other appropriate State agencies, councils, and individuals involved in the planning and approval as required by sections 113 and 114.

Except with respect to the functions set forth in the preceding sentence, the State board may delegate any of its other responsibilities involving administration, operation, or supervision, in whole or in part, to one or more appropriate State agencies.

(2) Each State shall include a description of any delegation of its functions under paragraph (1) in its State plan, or amendments to such plan, submitted to the Secretary.

(b)(1) Any State desiring to participate in the programs authorized by this Act shall assign at least one individual within the appropriate agency established or designated by the State board under the last sentence of subsection (a)(1) to administer vocational education programs within the State, to work full time to assist the State board to fulfill the purposes of this Act by—

(A) administering the program of vocational education for single parents and homemakers described in section 201(e);

(B) gathering, analyzing, and disseminating data on the adequacy and effectiveness of vocational education programs in the State in meeting the education and employment needs of women (including preparation for employment in technical occupations, new and emerging occupational fields, and occupations regarded as nontraditional for women), and on the status of men and women students and employees in such programs;

(C) reviewing vocational education programs (including career guidance and counseling) for sex stereotyping and sex bias, with particular attention to practices which tend to inhibit the entry of women in high technology occupations, and submitting (i) recommendations for inclusion in the State plan and the progress reports of programs and policies to overcome sex bias and sex stereotyping in such programs, and (ii) an assessment of the State's progress in meeting the purposes of this Act with regard to overcoming sex discrimination and sex stereotyping;

(D) reviewing proposed actions on grants, contracts, and the policies of the State board to ensure that the needs of women are addressed in the administration of this Act;

(E) developing recommendations for programs of information and outreach to women concerning vocational education and employment opportunities for women (including opportunities for careers as technicians and skilled workers in technical fields and new and emerging occupational fields);

(F) providing technical assistance and advice to local educational agencies, postsecondary institutions, and other interested parties in the State, in expanding vocational opportunities for women; and

(G) assisting administrators, instructors, and counselors in implementing programs and activities to increase access for women (including displaced homemakers and single heads of households) to vocational education and to increase male and female students' enrollment in nontraditional programs.

(2) For the purpose of this subsection, the term "State" means any one of the fifty States and the District of Columbia.

(3) Each State shall expend not less than $60,000 in each fiscal year to carry out the provisions of this subsection from the funds made available in section 202(3).

STATE COUNCIL ON VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

SEC. 112. (a) Each State which desires to participate in vocational education programs authorized by this Act for any fiscal year shall establish a State council, which shall be appointed by the Governor or, in the case of States in which the members of the State board of education are elected (including election by the State legislature), by such board, except as provided in clause (5) of this subsection. Each State council shall be composed of eleven individuals so that—

(1) a majority of its membership are individuals who are representative of business and industry in the State;

(2) one of the members appointed under clause (1) is a member of the State job training coordinating council established pursuant to section 122 of the Job Training Partnership Act;

(3) individuals who are representative of secondary vocational education and postsecondary vocational education in the State are members, except that representation under this clause for secondary education and postsecondary education shall be equal;

(4) one individual who is representative of special education;

(5) two individuals who are members from the State legislature, appointed by the legislature, one appointed from each House (or in the case of an unicameral legislature, appointed from the legislature) are members; and

(6) at least one individual who is representative of labor organizations in the State is a member.

(b) The State shall certify the establishment and membership of the State council at least 90 days prior to the beginning of each planning period described in section 113(a)(1).

(c) Each State council shall meet as soon as practical after certification has been accepted by the Secretary and shall select from among its membership a Chair who shall be a nongovernmental representative member of the State council. The time, place, and manner of meeting, as well as council operating procedures and staffing, shall be as provided by the rules of the State council, except that such rules must provide for not less than one public meeting each year at which the public is given an opportunity to express views concerning the vocational education program of the State.

(d)(1) Each State council shall consult with and make recommendations to the State board on policy matters arising out of vocational education programs assisted under this Act and in the development of the State plan submitted under section 113.

(2) Each State council shall review the State plan in accordance with the procedures described in section 114.

(3) Each State council shall—

(A) analyze and report on the distribution of spending for vocational education in the State and on the availability of vocational education activities and services within the State;

(B) furnish consultation to the State board on the establishment of evaluation criteria for vocational education programs within the State;

(C) submit recommendations to the State board on the conduct of vocational education programs conducted in the State which emphasize the use of business concerns and labor organizations;

(D) assess the distribution of financial assistance furnished under this Act, particularly with the analysis of the distribution of financial assistance between secondary vocational education programs and postsecondary vocational education programs;

(E) recommend procedures to the State board to insure and enhance the participation of the public in the provisions of vocational education at the local level within the State, particularly the participation of local employers and local labor organizations; and

(F) report to the State board on the extent to which the individuals described in section 201(b) are provided with equal access to quality vocational education programs.

(e)(1) Each State council is authorized to obtain the services of such professional, technical, and clerical, personnel as may be necessary to enable it to carry out its functions under this Act and to contract for such services as may be necessary to carry out its evaluation functions, independent of programmatic and administrative control by other State boards, agencies, and individuals.

(2) Each State council, in carrying out the provisions in paragraph (1), shall seek and obtain the advice of experts who are knowledgeable in the special education needs of the groups of individuals to be served under this Act, including handicapped, disadvantaged, women, adults, and the incarcerated.

(f) Each State shall make available for the expenses of the State council on vocational education the portion of its allotment required under section 102(a)(2) but not less than $120,000 for each fiscal year.

STATE PLANS

SEC. 113. (a)(1) Any State desiring to receive funds from its allotment for any fiscal year shall submit to the Secretary a State plan for a three-year period in the case of the initial plan and a 2-year period thereafter, together with such annual revisions as the State board determines to be necessary.

(2) The planning periods required by paragraph (1) of this subsection shall be coterminous with the planning program periods required under section 104(a) of the Job Training Partnership Act.

(3) In developing the State plan, the State shall—

(A) assess the current and projected occupational needs within the State;

(B) examine student needs in order to determine how best to improve student skill levels in light of the State's occupational and skill requirements; and

(C) determine the capacity of local educational agencies, with respect to secondary education and postsecondary educational institutions, to deliver the vocational education services necessary to bring student programs in line with the State's occupational and skill needs.

(b) Each such plan shall—

(1) set forth the planned uses of Federal funds available for vocational education for each fiscal year for which the plan is submitted and describe—

(A) how the State will expend funds for the uses described in section 201, together with a description of the use of funds for the purposes described in section 301; and

(B) how the funds available under this Act will expand and improve guidance and counseling activities devoted to enhancing knowledge of vocational education and the job market;

(2) describe the manner in which the State will comply with the criteria required for programs for the handicapped and for the disadvantaged prescribed by section 204;

(3) provide assurances that the State will distribute at least 80 percent of the funds made available for titles II and III to eligible recipients, or combination of eligible recipients, except that the State will distribute 100 percent of the funds available for clauses (1) and (2) of section 202, relating to the disadvantaged and the handicapped, to eligible recipients in accordance with section 203(a);

(4) provide assurances that, in the use of funds available for single parents and homemakers under section 201(b)(3), that the State will emphasize assisting individuals with the greatest financial need, and that in serving homemakers the State will give special consideration to homemakers who because of divorce, separation, or the death or disability of a spouse must prepare for paid employment;

(5) provide assurances that the State will furnish relevant training and vocational education activities to men and women who desire to enter occupations that are not traditionally associated with their sex;

(6) provide assurances that the funds made available by this Act shall be used in such a manner as to improve the technological quality of vocational curricula, equipment, and instructional materials and to increase the ability of vocational students and instructors to meet the challenges of increased technological demands of the workplace;

(7) describe the methods of administration that are necessary for the proper and efficient administration of the assistance provided under titles II and III of this Act;

(8)(A) provide assurances that the State will develop measures for the effectiveness of programs assisted under this Act using evaluative measurements such as—

(i) the occupations to be trained for, which will reflect a realistic assessment of the labor market needs of the State;

(ii) the levels of skills to be achieved in particular occupations, which will reflect the hiring needs of employers; and

(iii) the basic employment competencies to be used in performance outcomes, which will reflect the hiring needs of employers; and

(B) the State will establish appropriate measures for evaluating the effectiveness of programs for the handicapped assisted under this Act;

(9) provide assurances that the State board will cooperate with the State council on vocational education in carrying out its duties under this part;

(10) provide assurances that—

(A) funds will be distributed to eligible recipients on the basis of annual applications,

(B) the State will set forth the procedures to be used in approving such applications, and

(C) any eligible recipient dissatisfied with final action with respect to any application for assistance under this Act will be given reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing;

(11) provide assurances that the State will comply with the distribution of assistance requirements contained in section 203;

(12) describe the criteria for the distribution of assistance required by section 203 and section 302;

(13) provide assurances that, to the extent consistent with the number and location of individuals described in clauses (1) and (2) of section 201(b) in the State who are enrolled in private elementary and secondary schools, provision is made for the participation of such individuals in the vocational education program assisted under title II of this Act;

(14) provide assurances that eligible recipients, in furnishing vocational education services and activities, will equitably serve the special needs of individuals with limited English proficiency;

(15)(A) provide assurances that Federal funds made available under this Act will be used so as to supplement, and to the extent practicable increase the amount of State and local funds that would in the absence of such Federal funds be made available for the uses specified in the State plan, and in no case supplant such State or local funds;

(B) provide assurances that the amount expended from State and local sources for vocational education for handicapped individuals in a State in each fiscal year will be equal to or more than the amount expended from State and local sources for vocational education for handicapped individuals in the State in the fiscal year 1984;

(16) provide assurances that the State will make provision for such fiscal control and fund accounting procedures as may be necessary to assure the proper disbursement of, and accounting for, Federal funds paid to the State (including such funds paid by the State to eligible recipients under this Act); and

(17) provide assurances that, and, where necessary a description of the manner in which, the State board will comply with the other requirements contained in titles I, II, and III of this Act.

APPROVAL

SEC. 114. (a) Each State plan prepared in accordance with the provisions of section 113 shall include all recommendations made by the State council with respect to the plan for vocational education programs which are not incorporated as a part of the plan, along with the reasons of the State board for not incorporating such recommendations in the plan.

(b)(1) Each State plan shall, 60 days before the plan is to be submitted to the Secretary, be furnished to the State legislature of the State for review and comment. If the matters covered by the comments of the State legislature are not covered by the State plan, the State shall submit the comments with the State plan to the Secretary.

(2) If the State legislature is not in session during the period described in paragraph (1), the State board shall submit the plan for review and comment to the next meeting of the State legislature and forward the comments of the State legislature to the Secretary when the comments are received.

(c)(1) Each State plan shall be submitted to the State council on vocational education for review and comment not later than 60 days prior to the submission of the plan to the Secretary.

(2) Whenever the State council disagrees with the reasons set forth by the State board for not incorporating the recommendations of the State council in the State plan, the State council shall append its comments on the State plan to such plan, and the State shall submit the appended comments with the State plan to the Secretary.

(d)(1)(A) The Secretary shall approve any State plan which meets the requirements of section 113 and the other provisions of this Act.

(B) In approving State plans under this section, the Secretary shall consider the comments of the State council submitted as a part of the State plan.

(2) The Secretary shall not make any final determination disapproving any State plan, or any modification thereof, without first affording the State reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing.

TITLE II—PROGRAMS FOR VOCATIONAL EDUCATION OPPORTUNITIES

USES OF FUNDS

SEC. 201. (a) From the portion of the allotment of each State under section 101 available for this title, each State shall provide vocational education services and activities designed to meet the special needs of groups of individuals specified in subsection (b).

(b) Each State shall use the portion of its allotment available for this title in any fiscal year to provide vocational education services and activities designed to meet the special needs of, and to enhance the participation of—

(1) handicapped individuals;

(2) disadvantaged individuals;

(3) individuals who are single parents or homemakers; and

(4) criminal offenders who are serving in a correctional institution.

(c) Each State shall use the portion of its allotment available for this title in any fiscal year for handicapped individuals only for expenditures limited to supplemental or additional staff, equipment, materials, and services not provided to other individuals in vocational education that are essential for handicapped individuals to participate in vocational education, except that each State may use such funds for separate vocational education programs for handicapped individuals if the handicapping conditions of the students require a separate program.

(d) Each State may use the portion of its allotment available for this title for any fiscal year for the improvement of vocational education programs designed to provide equal access to quality vocational education to disadvantaged individuals.

(e) Each State may use the portion of its allotment available for this title to—

(1) provide, subsidize, reimburse or pay for vocational education and training activities, including basic literacy instruction and necessary educational materials, that will furnish single parents and homemakers with marketable skills;

(2) make grants to eligible recipients for expanding vocational education services when this expansion directly increases the eligible recipients' capacity for providing single working parents and homemakers with marketable skills;

(3) make vocational education and training more accessible to single parents and homemakers by assisting them with child care or transportation services or by organizing and scheduling the programs so that such programs are more accessible; and

(4) provide information to single working parents and homemakers to inform them of vocational education programs and related support services.

(f)(1) Each State may use the portion of its allotment available for this title in any fiscal year for basic skills instruction for vocational education students and related to their instructional program whenever the State board determines that such instruction is necessary to carry out the purposes described in subsection (b) of this section.

(2) Each State may use the portion of its allotment available for this title in any fiscal year for the provision of educational training through arrangements with private vocational training institutions where such private institutions can make a significant contribution to obtaining the objectives of the State plan and can provide substantially equivalent training at a lesser cost, or can provide equipment or services not available in public institutions.

(g)(1) Vocational education services and activities described in subsection (b) shall, to the extent practicable, include work-site programs such as cooperative vocational education, work-study, and apprenticeship programs.

(2) Vocational education services and activities described in subsection (b) may include placement services for students who have successfully completed vocational education programs.

DISTRIBUTION OF ASSISTANCE

SEC. 202. Of the amounts made available to each State from the portion of its allotment available for this title for each fiscal year—

(1) 25 percent shall be available for handicapped individuals;

(2) 50 percent shall be available for disadvantaged individuals;

(3) 23 percent shall be available for individuals who are single parents and homemakers; and

(4) 2 percent shall be made available for criminal offenders who are in correctional institutions.

WITHIN STATE ALLOCATION

SEC. 203. (a)(1) The State board shall allocate the 75 percent of the amount allotted to the State and available for this title for vocational education services and activities for the handicapped and the disadvantaged to eligible recipients in accordance with the provisions of this subsection.

(2) Of the amount allocated under this subsection—

(A) 33⅓ percent of such amount shall be allocated to eligible recipients on the basis of the relative number of economically disadvantaged individuals enrolled in each eligible recipient compared to the total number of such individuals enrolled in all eligible recipients within the State;

(B) 33⅓ percent shall be allocated on the basis of the relative number of disadvantaged and handicapped students served in vocational education programs by each eligible recipient within the State in the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made as compared to the total number of such individuals served by all eligible recipients within the State in such year; and

(C) the remainder shall be allocated on the basis of criteria developed by the State which take into account increases in the numbers or percentages of handicapped and disadvantaged students proposed to be served by the eligible recipients within the State, but such criteria shall not penalize eligible recipients which are already serving an equitable number or percentage of such students.

(3)(A) Subject to the limitation contained in clause (C) of paragraph (2) and the second sentence of this subparagraph, for any fiscal year beginning after the first fiscal year in which an eligible recipient receives payments under this title in which an eligible recipient fails to carry out the criteria established for clause (C) of paragraph (2), the State board may, pursuant to uniform criteria established by the State board, reduce the amount of the payments made under this subsection to any such eligible recipient for such fiscal year. No reduction authorized by this paragraph may include a reduction in the allocation criteria required by clause (A) of paragraph (2).

(B) Whenever in any fiscal year the provisions of subparagraph (A) apply, the State board shall allocate the amounts made available by the application of subparagraph (A) to all other eligible recipients within the State (not subject to such subparagraph) on the basis of their original allocations.

(4) Each local educational agency shall use, to the extent feasible, community-based organizations of demonstrated effectiveness, in addition to other eligible recipients, for the use of funds available under this title in areas of the State in which there is an absence of sufficient vocational education facilities or in which the vocational education programs do not adequately address the needs of disadvantaged students, or in which the local educational agency determines that the community-based organization can better serve disadvantaged students.

(5) Each local educational agency is authorized to use funds allocated under paragraph (1) of this subsection for joint projects with one or more other local educational agencies.

(b) The State board shall establish criteria for the distribution of the remaining 25 percent of the amount of the allotment of the State available for this title to eligible recipients within the State for the purposes described in clauses (3) and (4) of section 202.

CRITERIA FOR SERVICES AND ACTIVITIES FOR THE HANDICAPPED AND FOR THE DISADVANTAGED

SEC. 204. (a) The State board shall, with respect to that portion of the allotment distributed in accordance with section 203(a) for vocational education services and activities for handicapped individuals and disadvantaged individuals, provide assurances that—

(1) equal access will be provided to handicapped and disadvantaged individuals in recruitment, enrollment, and placement activities;

(2) equal access will be provided to handicapped and disadvantaged individuals to the full range of vocational programs available to nonhandicapped and nondisadvantaged individuals, including occupationally specific courses of study, cooperative education, and apprenticeship programs; and

(3)(A) vocational education programs and activities for handicapped individuals will be provided in the least restrictive environment in accordance with section 612(5)(B) of the Education of the Handicapped Act and will, whenever appropriate, be included as a component of the individualized education plan required under section 612(4) and section 614(a)(5) of such Act; and

(B) vocational education planning for handicapped individuals will be coordinated between appropriate representatives of vocational education and special education.

(b) Each local educational agency shall, with respect to that portion of the allotment distributed in accordance with section 203(a) for vocational education services and activities for handicapped individuals and disadvantaged individuals, provide information to handicapped and disadvantaged students and parents of such students concerning the opportunities available in vocational education at least one year before the students enter the grade level in which vocational education programs are first generally available in the State, but in no event later than the beginning of the ninth grade, together with the requirements for eligibility for enrollment in such vocational education programs.

(c) Each student who enrolls in vocational education programs and to whom subsection (b) applies shall receive—

(1) assessment of the interests, abilities, and special needs of such student with respect to completing successfully the vocational education program;

(2) special services, including adaptation of curriculum, instruction, equipment, and facilities, designed to meet the needs described in clause (1);

(3) guidance and counseling activities conducted by professionally trained counselors who are associated with the provision of such special services; and

(4) counseling services designed to facilitate the transition from school to postschool employment and career opportunities.

TITLE III—VOCATIONAL EDUCATION PROGRAM IMPROVEMENT, INNOVATION, AND EXPANSION

USES OF FUNDS

SEC. 301. (a) From the portion of the allotment of each State under section 101 available for this title from amounts appropriated pursuant to section 3(a)(1) for each fiscal year, each State may use funds so available for—

(1) the improvement of vocational education programs within the State designed to improve the quality of vocational education, including the provision of technical assistance;

(2) the expansion of vocational education activities necessary to meet the student needs, particularly in economically depressed urban and rural areas of the State in which there are inadequate vocational education programs;

(3) the introduction of new vocational education programs, particularly in economically depressed urban and rural areas of the State;

(4) the creation or expansion of programs to train workers in skilled occupations needed to revitalize businesses and industries or to promote the entry of new businesses and industries into a State or community;

(5) exemplary and innovative programs which stress new and emerging technologies and which are designed to strengthen vocational education services and activities;

(6) guidance and counseling activities conducted by professionally trained counselors in the improvement of vocational education programs within the State;

(7) programs relating to curriculum development in vocational education within the State, including the application of basic skills training;

(8) the expansion and improvement of programs at area vocational education schools; and

(9) the acquisition of equipment and the renovation of facilities necessary to improve or expand vocational education programs within the State.

(b) From the portion of the allotment for each fiscal year under section 101 available under this title from amounts appropriated pursuant to section 3(a)(2) for each fiscal year, each State shall conduct consumer and homemaking education programs.

(c) From the portion of the allotment of each State under section 101 available for this title from amounts appropriated pursuant to section 3(a)(1) for each fiscal year, each State shall use grants for the provision of inservice and preservice training designed to increase the competence of vocational education teachers, counselors, and administrators, including special emphasis on the integration of handicapped and disadvantaged students in regular courses of vocational education.

DISTRIBUTION OF ASSISTANCE

SEC. 302. (a) The State board shall establish criteria for the distribution of the amounts made available for the portion of its allotment available for this title from amounts appropriated pursuant to section 3(a)(1) for each fiscal year, and which are to be distributed among eligible recipients, or combination of eligible recipients. In prescribing criteria under this subsection, the State board shall give special emphasis to economically depressed urban and rural areas of the State and to area vocational education schools serving such areas.

(b)(1) Not less than 30 percent of the amount available for each State under this title in each fiscal year shall be available only for vocational education services and activities at the secondary and postsecondary school level to train and retrain adults.

(2) The set-aside required by paragraph (1) may also be used by the State to comply with the set-aside required by subsection (c).

(c) Not less than 10 percent of the amount available to each State for this title in each fiscal year shall be available only for conducting industry education partnership training programs in high technology occupations.

CRITERIA FOR PROGRAM IMPROVEMENT, INNOVATION, AND EXPANSION

SEC. 303. (a) Subject to the provisions of this title, each State may expend funds available under this title in the manner best suited to carry out the purposes of this Act within the State.

(b) Each State may make use of community-based organizations of demonstrated effectiveness, in addition to eligible recipients, for the use of funds available under this title in areas of the State in which there is an absence of sufficient vocational education facilities or in which the vocational education programs do not adequately address the needs of disadvantaged students or wherever the community-based organization can better serve disadvantaged students.

(c) Any project assisted with funds made available under this title shall be of sufficient size, scope, and quality to give reasonable promise of meeting the vocational education needs of the students involved in the project.

CRITERIA FOR INDUSTRY EDUCATION PARTNERSHIP TRAINING PROGRAMS IN HIGH TECHNOLOGY OCCUPATIONS

SEC. 304. (a) Grants under this section shall be used for industry education partnership training programs in high technology occupations, including vocational education services and activities designed to train skilled workers and technicians in high technology occupations, especially projects to train skilled workers needed to produce, install, operate, and maintain high technology equipment, systems, and processes.

(b) No grant for any industry education partnership training program under this section may be made unless the eligible recipient enters into a grant agreement which contains provisions designed to assure that—

(1) not less than 50 percent of the aggregate costs of programs and projects assisted under this part will be provided from non-Federal sources, and not less than 50 percent of that non-Federal share of aggregate costs in the State will be provided by participating business concerns;

(2) projects assisted under this section will be coordinated with projects assisted under title II; and

(3) projects assisted under this section will be developed with the active participation of the State council established pursuant to section 112.

(c) The non-Federal contribution may be in cash or in kind, fairly evaluated, including but not limited to planning expenses, plant, equipment, and services.

CRITERIA FOR ADULT PROGRAMS AND POSTSECONDARY PROGRAMS FOR ADULTS

SEC. 305. (a) Funds available under this section shall be used to provide, improve, and expand adult and postsecondary vocational education services and activities to train and retrain adults.

(b) Funds used for the purpose described in subsection (a) may be used for services and activities developed in coordination with the State agency administering title III of the Job Training Partnership Act.

(c) Funds for services and activities under this section may be used for—

(1) additional training under title III of the Job Training Partnership Act;

(2) vocational education programs for training or retraining adults, including programs for older Americans and displaced homemakers;

(3) the costs of serving adults in other vocational education programs, including paying the costs of instruction or the costs of keeping school facilities open longer;

(4) individuals who have completed or left high school and who are enrolled in organized programs of study for which credit is given toward an associate or other degree, but which programs are not designed as baccalaureate or higher degree programs; and

(5) individuals who have already entered the labor market, or have completed or left high school, and who are not described in clause (4).

TITLE IV—NATIONAL PROGRAMS

PART A—RESEARCH

RESEARCH OBJECTIVES

SEC. 401. It is the purpose of this part—

(1) to authorize research activities which contribute to improving the access to vocational education programs of individuals who are disadvantaged, who are handicapped, women who are entering nontraditional occupations, adults who are in need of retraining, individuals who are single parents or homemakers, individuals with limited English proficiency, and individuals who are incarcerated in correctional institutions;

(2) to improve the competitive process by which research projects are awarded;

(3) to encourage the dissemination of findings of research projects assisted under this Act to all States; and

(4) to authorize research activities which are readily applicable to the vocational education setting and are of practical application to vocational education administrators, counselors, and instructors and others involved in vocational education.

RESEARCH ACTIVITIES

SEC. 402. (a) In order to carry out the objectives set forth in section 401, the Secretary shall conduct applied research on aspects of vocational education specifically related to this Act. Such research may be conducted through the National Institute of Education or any other division of the Department of Education which the Secretary determines to be appropriate. Such research shall include—

(1) effective methods for providing quality vocational education to handicapped individuals, disadvantaged individuals, men and women in nontraditional fields, adults, individuals who are single parents or homemakers, individuals with limited English proficiency, and individuals who are incarcerated in correctional institutions;

(2) strategies for coordinating local, State, and Federal vocational education, employment training, and economic development programs to maximize their efficacy and for improving worker training and retraining;

(3) the constructive involvement of the private sector in public vocational education;

(4) successful methods of reinforcing and enhancing basic academic skills in vocational settings;

(5) the development of curriculum materials and instructional methods relating to new and emerging technologies, and assessments of the nature of change in the workplace and its effect on individual jobs;

(6) the identification of institutional characteristics which improve the preparation of youth and adults for employment; and

(7) the development of effective methods for providing quality vocational education to individuals of limited English proficiency, including research related to bilingual vocational training.

(b) In addition, the Secretary shall—

(1) operate a clearinghouse for information on activities conducted by the States under titles II and III, and on contracts made by the Secretary pursuant to this section; and compile an annotated bibliography of research, exemplary and innovative program projects, and curriculum development projects assisted with funds made available under this Act;

(2) initiate leadership development and inservice education activities for State and local vocational education instructors, counselors, and administrators; and

(3) support meritorious, unsolicited research proposals from State and local educators relating to the goals of this Act.

(c) The Secretary shall give preference in carrying out the provisions of this part to public and private postsecondary institutions which have demonstrated competencies in conducting vocational education research.

(d) No more than 20 percent of the amount made available under this part in any fiscal year may be awarded to any single recipient of financial assistance under this part.

NATIONAL ASSESSMENT OF VOCATIONAL EDUCATION PROGRAMS ASSISTED UNDER THIS ACT

SEC. 403. (a) The Secretary shall conduct a national assessment of vocational education assisted under this Act, through independent studies and analysis by the National Institute of Education. The assessment shall include descriptions and evaluations of—

(1) the vocational education activities and services delivered to the individuals who benefit from vocational education activities and services assisted under this Act, including the expansion of access to quality vocational education for individuals described in section 201(b) and adults;

(2) the impact of this Act in modernizing the Nation's vocational education system and expanding its capacity to meet the changing needs of the workplace;

(3) the resources needed to meet adequately the Nation's job training needs;

(4) the coordination of vocational education programs with employment training and economic development among the States;

(5) the impact of vocational education programs on the achievement of academic skills and employment opportunities of students;

(6) the coordination of vocational education and postsecondary programing for handicapped and disadvantaged individuals;

(7) the skill and competency levels developed by States pursuant to section 113(b)(8);

(8) the effectiveness of vocational education programs and services for individuals of limited English proficiency; and

(9) the effectiveness of bilingual vocational training, including bilingual vocational instructor training, to address the unmet needs of individuals of limited English proficiency.

The National Institute of Education shall consult with the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate and the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives in the design and implementation of the assessment required by this section. The National Institute of Education shall report to Congress the preliminary results of the assessment required by this section in January and July of 1988, and a final report shall be prepared and submitted to the Congress not later than January 1, 1989.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law or regulation, such reports shall not be subject to any review outside of the Department of Education before their transmittal to the Congress, but the President and the Secretary may make such additional recommendations to the Congress with respect to the assessment as they deem appropriate.

(c) Not more than 20 percent of the amounts available under this part in any fiscal year may be expended to carry out the assessment authorized by this section.

NATIONAL COMPARISON ASSESSMENT

SEC. 404. The Secretary, through the National Institute of Education shall, as part of the National Assessment of Educational Progress required by section 405(k) of the General Education Provisions Act, identify vocational education students among the national sample of students who have attained 17 years of age to enable a comparison to be made over time of the achievements in reading, writing, and arithmetic, by region of the country, and by socioeconomic level of vocational education students and other students.

PART B—COOPERATIVE EMPLOYER EDUCATION PROGRAMS

PROGRAM AUTHORIZED

SEC. 411. (a) From the amounts available for this part under section 451 for each fiscal year, the Secretary is authorized to carry out, directly or through grants to or contracts with State and local educational agencies, postsecondary vocational institutions, institutions of higher education, and other public and private agencies, organizations, and institutions, programs and projects which support—

(1) model programs providing improved access to quality vocational education programs for those individuals described in section 201(b) of this Act and for men and women seeking nontraditional occupations;

(2) examples of successful cooperation between the private sector and public agencies in vocational education, including work experience and apprenticeship programs and programs assisting in the transition from school to work;

(3) programs to overcome national skill shortages, as designated by the Secretary in cooperation with the Secretary of Labor,

Secretary of Defense, and Secretary of Commerce; and

(4) such other activities which the Secretary may designate which are related to the purposes of this Act.

(b) All programs funded by amounts made available by this section shall be—

(1) of direct service to individuals enrolled in such programs; and

(2) capable of wide replication by service providers.

(c) The Secretary shall disseminate the results of the programs and projects assisted under this section in a manner designed to improve the training of teachers, other instructional personnel, counsellors, and administrators who are needed to carry out the purposes of this Act.

PART C—VOCATIONAL EDUCATION AND OCCUPATIONAL INFORMATION DATA SYSTEMS

DATA SYSTEMS AUTHORIZED

SEC. 421. (a)(1) The Secretary shall develop a national vocational education data reporting and accounting system using uniform definitions. The system required by this section shall include information on vocational education—

(A) students (including information on their race, sex, and handicapping condition),

(B) programs,

(C) program completers and leavers,

(D) staff,

(E) facilities, and

(F) expenditures.

(2) In developing the system required by this subsection, the Secretary shall endeavor to make the system compatible with the occupational information data system developed pursuant to subsection (b), with other information systems involving data on programs assisted under the Job Training Partnership Act, and with information collected pursuant to the Education of the Handicapped Act.

(3) Any State receiving assistance under this Act shall cooperate with the Secretary in supplying the information required to be submitted by the Secretary and shall comply in its reports with the vocational education data system developed by the Secretary pursuant to paragraph (1). Each State shall submit the data required to carry out this subsection to the Secretary in whatever form the Secretary requires. Whenever possible, the reporting of data under this paragraph shall include reporting of data by labor market areas within the State.

(4) The Secretary shall every 2 years update the national vocational education information and accounting system and prepare acquisition plans of data for operating the system. In carrying out the requirements under this paragraph, the Secretary shall use scientific sample surveys for the information required, except that the information required with respect to handicapped students shall be furnished in accordance with section 422 of this Act.

(5) The Secretary may conduct special studies on enrollment of disadvantaged students in vocational education programs, on the participation of handicapped students in vocational education programs, and any other similar subjects which the Secretary deems appropriate.

(6) The Secretary shall use 33⅓ percent of the funds available for this part under section 451(3) for the purpose of assisting the States in complying with the data collection requirements of this subsection and shall use 66⅔ percent to carry out subsection (b).

(b)(1) There is established a National Occupational Information Coordinating Committee which shall consist of the Secretary, the Administrator of the National Center of Education Statistics, the Commissioner of Labor Statistics, the Assistant Secretary for Employment and Training, the Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Economic Development, the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower, Reserve Affairs and Logistics), the Under Secretary of Agriculture for Small Community and Rural Development, and the Assistant Secretary of Health and Human Services for Vocational Rehabilitation. The Committee, with funds available to it under section 431(3) shall—

(A) in the use of program data and employment data, improve coordination between, and communication among, administrators and planners of programs authorized by this Act and by the Job Training Partnership Act, employment security agency administrators, research personnel, and employment and training planning and administering agencies at the Federal, State, and local levels;

(B) develop and implement an occupational information system to meet the common occupational information needs of vocational education programs and employment and training programs of the national, State, and local levels, which system shall include data on occupational demand and supply based on uniform definitions, standardized estimating procedures, and standardized occupational classifications;

(C) conduct studies on the effect of technological change on existing or emerging occupations and on the knowledge and job skills which will be required by workers; and

(D) assist State occupational information coordinating committees established pursuant to paragraph (2);

(2) Each State receiving assistance under this Act and under the Job Training Partnership Act shall establish a State occupational information coordinating committee composed of representatives of the State board, the State employment security agency, the State job coordinating council, the agency administering the vocational rehabilitation program, and the State economic development agency. This committee shall, with funds available to it from the National Coordinating Committee established pursuant to paragraph (1)—

(A) implement an occupational information system in the State which will meet the common needs for the planning for, and the operation of, programs of the State board assisted under this Act and of the administering agencies under the Job Training Partnership Act; and

(B) use the occupational information system to implement a career information delivery system.

INFORMATION BASE FOR VOCATIONAL EDUCATION DATA SYSTEM

SEC. 422. The Secretary shall assure that adequate information on the access to vocational education programs by handicapped secondary school students be included in the national vocational education data system, required by section 161 of the Vocational Education Act of 1963 (prior to the repeal made by section 523(a)) and by this part, for the biennial survey. The information base for the biennial survey for the handicapped shall be in 6-digit detail as defined in A Classification of Instructional Programs published by the National Center for Educational Statistics. The survey shall include information with respect to total handicapped enrollment by program, by type of instructional setting, and by type of handicapping condition.

PART D—NATIONAL EMPLOYERS COUNCIL ON VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

COUNCIL ESTABLISHED

SEC. 431. (a)(1) There is established the National Employers Council on Vocational Education. The Council shall consist of twenty-one members appointed by the President.

(2) The members of the Council shall serve for such terms as the President may prescribe. Members of the Council shall be individuals who are owners, chief executives, or chief operating officers of private for-profit business concerns, including health and educational institutions, as well as other executives of business concerns and business associations who have substantial management or policy responsibility, except that at least one member shall be a nonpublic member appointed from among members of the National Commission for Employment Policy established under the Job Training Partnership Act, and not more than 3 members shall be representatives of labor organizations.

(b) The Council shall advise the President, Congress, and the Secretary on—

(1) the effectiveness of this Act or its implementation in achieving the stated purposes of this Act and in providing students with skills that meet needs of employers;

(2) strategies for increasing cooperation between business and vocational education so that training is available for new technologies for which there is a demand;

(3) practical approaches to retraining adult workers, and to enhancing education, business, and labor cooperation in retraining efforts; and

(4) effective ways of providing access to information regarding the market demand for skills that will enable State and local personnel to develop responsive vocational education curricula.

(c) The Council may establish working groups on occupational competencies to provide the Secretary, the President, the Congress, and the States with current information on the types and levels of occupational competencies necessary for entry and sustained productive employment in given jobs or industries, including levels of skills required, and equipment, methods, and facilities needed for the occupation. The Council may establish working groups for the occupations the Council deems important or necessary and may reconstitute such groups as occupational priorities are revised. Members of the working groups shall be appointed by the Council on the advice of national trade and professional associations and labor organizations. Working group members shall be individuals with specific knowledge in the technology and practice of the occupations relevant to the task of the group. The Council may provide the results and recommendations of the working groups to each State council on vocational education and other appropriate State agencies.

(d) The Council may use funds available for this part to obtain the services of staff specialists for working groups who have demonstrated technical skills and instructional ability in the occupations in question.

(e) The Council shall annually conduct a survey and report its findings to the President, the Secretary, and the Congress on how the competency statements provided by the Council have been used by States.

PART E—BILINGUAL VOCATIONAL TRAINING

PROGRAM AUTHORIZED

SEC. 441. (a)(1) It is the purpose of this part to teach vocational skills to limited English proficient adults and out-of-school youth to enable them to obtain the full benefits of the programs offered while they develop competency in the English language.

(2) From amounts appropriated pursuant to section 3(b)(2) in each fiscal year, the Secretary shall carry out, directly or through grants to or contracts with State and local educational agencies, postsecondary vocational institutions, institutions of higher education, and other public and private agencies, organizations, and institutions, programs of bilingual vocational training authorized by this part.

(b) In carrying out the provisions of this part, payments for bilingual vocational training may be used for—

(1) training allowances for out of school youth or adults, who are unemployed or underemployed, and who desire training or retraining to achieve year-around employment;

(2) bilingual vocational instructor training, preservice training for instructors and related personnel, and developmental programs to continue or improve the qualifications of bilingual vocational instructors, including fellowships and traineeships;

(3) the development of instructional materials, methods, and techniques for bilingual vocational education; and

(4) programs to familiarize appropriate State agencies and training institutions with the results and findings of successful programs assisted under this part.

PART F—GENERAL PROVISIONS

DISTRIBUTION OF ASSISTANCE

SEC. 451. Of the amounts available pursuant to section 3(b)(1) for any fiscal year for this title—

(1) 30 percent shall be available for part A;

(2) 33 percent shall be available for part B;

(3) 30 percent shall be available for part C; and

(4) 7 percent shall be available for part D.

TITLE V—GENERAL PROVISIONS

PART A—FEDERAL ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

PAYMENTS

SEC. 501. The Secretary shall pay from its allotment under section 101 to each State for any fiscal year for which the State has a State plan approved in accordance with section 114 (including any amendment to such plan) the Federal share of the costs of carrying out the State plan.

FEDERAL SHARE

SEC. 502. (a) The Federal share for each fiscal year shall be—

(1) 50 percent of the costs of administration of the State plan;

(2) 100 percent of the costs of vocational education services and activities under title II for individuals described in section 201(b)(1) and section 201(b)(2), except that the Federal share shall be 50 percent of the costs of vocational education services and activities under such title for such individuals whenever separate vocational education programs are furnished for disadvantaged or handicapped students described in such subsections;

(3) 100 percent of the costs of vocational education services and activities under title II for individuals described in section 201(b)(3) and section 201(b)(4); and

(4) 50 percent of the costs of vocational education improvement, innovation, and expansion programs under title III.

(b) The non-Federal contribution may be in cash or in kind, fairly evaluated, including but not limited to planning expenses, plant, equipment, and services.

MAINTENANCE OF EFFORT

SEC. 503. (a)(1) Payments for any fiscal year under this Act to a State shall be reduced in accordance with paragraph (2) unless the Secretary finds that the fiscal effort per student, or the aggregate expenditures for vocational education, in that State for the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination was made was not less than 95 percent of such fiscal effort per student or the aggregate expenditures for vocational education for the second preceding fiscal year.

(2) The Secretary shall reduce the amount of the payment of funds under this Act, to which the State otherwise would have been entitled under its allocation, in the exact proportion to which a State fails to meet the requirements of paragraph (1) by falling below 95 percent of the fiscal effort per student or the aggregate expenditures for vocational education (using the measure most favorable to the State), and no such lesser amount shall be used for computing the effort required under paragraph (1) for subsequent years.

(b) The Secretary may waive the requirements of this section for one fiscal year only, upon making a determination that such waiver would be equitable due to exceptional or uncontrollable circumstances affecting the ability of the applicant to meet such requirements, such as a natural disaster or an unforeseen and precipitous decline in financial resources.

WITHHOLDING; JUDICIAL REVIEW

SEC. 504. (a) Whenever the Secretary, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State board, finds that—

(1) the State plan or amendment approved under section 114 has been so changed that it no longer complies with the provisions of this Act; or the Secretary shall notify such State board that no further payments will be made to the State under this Act (or, further payments to the State will be limited to programs under or portions of the State plan not affected by such failure) until satisfied that there will no longer be any failure to comply. Until so satisfied, the Secretary shall make no further payments to such State under this Act (or shall limit payments to programs under, or portions of, the State plan not affected by such failure).

(b) A State board which is dissatisfied with a final action of the Secretary under this section may appeal to the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which the State is located, by filing a petition with such court within sixty days after such final action. A copy of the petition shall be forthwith transmitted by the clerk of the court to the Secretary, or any officer designated by him for that purpose. The Secretary thereupon shall file in the court the record of the proceedings on which action is based, as provided in section 2112 of title 28, United States Code. Upon the filing of such petition, the court shall have jurisdiction to affirm the action of the Secretary or to set aside such action, in whole or in part, temporarily or permanently, but until the filing of the record, the Secretary may modify or set aside his action. The findings of the Secretary as to the facts, if supported by the weight of evidence, shall be conclusive, but the court, for good cause shown, may remand the case to the Secretary to take further evidence, and the Secretary may thereupon make new or modified findings of fact and may modify his previous action, and shall file in the court the record of the further proceedings. Such new or modified findings of fact shall likewise be conclusive if supported by the weight of evidence. The judgment of the court affirming or setting aside, in whole or in part, any action of the Secretary shall be final, subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certiorari certification as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code. The commencement of proceedings under this subsection shall, unless specifically ordered otherwise by the court, operate as a stay of the Secretary's action.

(c)(1) If any eligible recipient is dissatisfied with the final action of the State board or other appropriate State administering agency with respect to approval of its local plan, such eligible recipient may, within sixty days after such final action or notice thereof, whichever is later, file with the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which the State is located a petition for review of that action. A copy of the petition shall be forthwith transmitted by the clerk of the court to the State board or other appropriate State administering agency. The State board or such other agency thereupon shall file in the court the record of the proceeding on which the State board or such other agency based its action, as provided in section 2112 of title 28, United States Code.

(2) The findings of fact by the State board or other appropriate administering agency, if supported by substantial evidence, shall be conclusive; but the court, for good cause shown, may remand the case to the State board or such other agency to take further evidence, and the State board or such other agency may thereupon make new or modified findings of fact and may modify its previous action, and shall certify to the court the record of the further proceedings.

(3) The court shall have jurisdiction to affirm the action of the State board or other appropriate administering agency or to set it aside, in whole or in part. The judgment of the court shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certiorari certification as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code.

(d)(1) The Secretary shall prescribe and implement rules to assure that any hearing conducted under section 434(c) of the General Education Provisions Act in connection with funds made available from appropriations under this Act shall be held within the State of the affected unit of local government or geographic area within the State.

(2) For the purposes of paragraph (1)—

(A) the term "unit of local government" means a county, municipality, town, township, village, or other unit of general government below the State level; and

(B) the term "geographic area within a State" means a special purpose district or other region recognized for governmental purposes within such State which is not a unit of local government.

AUDITS

SEC. 505. Each State shall obtain financial and compliance audits of any funds which the State receives under this Act. Such audits shall be made public within the State on a timely basis. The audits shall be conducted at least every two years by an organization or person independent of an agency administering activities under the Act. The audits shall be conducted in accordance with the Comptroller General's Standard for Audit of Governmental Organizations, Programs, Activities, and Functions.

PART B—TRANSITIONAL AND CONFORMING PROVISIONS

EFFECTIVE DATE

SEC. 521. (a) This Act shall take effect for fiscal years beginning on or after October 1, 1984, except that the authority of the Secretary to prescribe regulations under this Act and the responsibility of States to submit State plans are effective upon the date of enactment of this Act.

(b) Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall prescribe regulations for carrying out the provisions of this Act.

TRANSITION PROVISIONS

SEC. 522. (a) Each State and eligible recipient of financial assistance under this Act, or under the Vocational Education Act of 1963, may expend funds received under this Act or under the Vocational Education Act of 1963 to—

(1) conduct planning for any program or activity authorized under this Act; and

(2) conduct any other activity deemed necessary by the recipient to provide for an orderly transition to the operation of programs under this Act.

(b) On the effective date of this Act, the personnel, property, and records of the National Occupational Information Coordinating Committee established under section 161(b) of the Vocational Education Act of 1963 shall be transferred to the National Occupational Information Coordinating Committee established pursuant to section 421 of this Act.

CONFORMING AMENDMENTS

SEC. 523. (a) The Vocational Education Act of 1963 is repealed.

(b)(1) Section 4 of the Job Training Partnership Act (29 U.S.C. 1501 et seq.) is amended—

TITLE VI—NATIONAL SUMMIT CONFERENCE ON EDUCATION

SHORT TITLE; FINDINGS

SEC. 601. (a) This title may be cited as the "National Summit Conference on Education Act of 1984".

(b) The Congress finds that—

(1) increased economic competition requires the development of a better trained and educated workforce which our educational institutions must provide;

(2) problems and deficiencies in American elementary and secondary education require consideration of possible new directions in setting national education policy; and

(3) there should be a National Summit Conference on Education authorized by law by Congress to provide directions for such policy, and any conference established by the Department of Education should be complementary to the National Summit Conference on Education.

(c) For the purpose of this title, the term "Conference" means the National Summit Conference on Education established by this title.

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 602. There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Education $500,000 for the purpose of conducting a National Summit Conference on Education, in accordance with the provisions of this title.

PARTICIPANTS

SEC. 603. The participants in the Conference shall consist of not more than two hundred individuals. The participants in the Conference shall be representative of teachers, parents, school administrators, school board members, State education officials, State legislators, Governors, students, business, labor, and special populations, including females, racial and ethnic minorities, and the disabled. The participants in the Conference shall be selected so as to provide racial, political, and geographic balance.

SELECTION OF PARTICIPANTS

SEC. 604. The participants in the Conference shall be chosen from among nominees submitted to the Executive Committee (established pursuant to section 605) by organizations representing public and private elementary and secondary education, vocational education, adult education, teacher training, women, racial and ethnic minorities, and the handicapped, as well as from among nominees supplied by organizations representing business, organized labor, parents, libraries, and all levels of government.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

SEC. 605. (a) There shall be an Executive Committee of the Conference consisting of—

(1) two individuals appointed by the President,

(2) two individuals appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives,

(3) two individuals appointed by the Majority Leader of the Senate, and

(4) six individuals appointed by the Governors of the States acting as a group.

The six individuals appointed by the Governors shall be appointed from individuals representing chief State school officers, local and State school boards, State legislatures, and Governors.

(b) The Executive Committee shall be responsible for selecting a presiding officer and for selecting the organizations (described in section 604) to supply a list of nominees for selection as participants in the Conference. Not less than 30 organizations shall be so selected by the Executive Committee. Each organization selected shall nominate at least the number of individuals specified by the Executive Committee for that organization in order to provide the representation required by sections 603 and 604. The Executive Committee shall determine the total number of individuals to be selected for participation, consistent with the requirements of this title.

(c) The Executive Committee shall serve without compensation.

STAFF

SEC. 606. The Executive Committee shall appoint and fix the compensation of such staff as may be necessary, not to exceed the equivalent of four full-time employees. The staff shall assist the Executive Committee in planning, conducting, and completing the work of the Conference. The administrative support for the staff and the Executive Committee shall be the responsibility of the Department of Education in conjunction with the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the Majority Leader of the Senate. The staff and the Executive Committee shall report, through properly established lines of authority, to the Congress.

PROCEDURE

SEC. 607. (a) A majority of participants of the Conference shall constitute a quorum if votes are required. If task forces are created, the majority of task force participants shall constitute a quorum if a vote is required.

(b)(1) The Executive Committee shall select the conference site and shall determine the duration of the Conference. The duration of the Conference shall not exceed six days. Neither the regional meetings (described in section 608(a)) nor the Conference shall meet before January 1, 1985.

(2) The Conference shall prepare and transmit a written record of its recommendations to the President, to the Congress, and to the States not later than October 15, 1985.

AGENDA OF THE CONFERENCE

SEC. 608. (a) The Executive Committee, using data concerning education supplied by the Secretary of Education and by the States, shall develop an agenda for the Conference prior to the Conference. The data will include information furnished to the Secretary from statewide and regional summit conferences devoted to obtaining citizen views about education. The purpose of this agenda shall be to facilitate the development of recommendations on various issues raised by such recently issued education reports as the report of the National Commission on Excellence in Education, the Carnegie Report on American High Schools, the National Science Boards' Report on Mathematics, Science and Technology Education, and others.

(b) The agenda so developed shall take into account that it shall be the purpose of the Conference to create national bipartisan support for education at all levels of government, and to make recommendations for the development of viable local, State, and national intergovernmental and intragovernmental cooperation in education to make the most efficient use of funds from all levels of government.

(c) The agenda shall also provide for procedures for determining national consensus regarding types of strategies to be used and the appropriate levels of government to have primary responsibility for implementing educational policy.

TITLE VII—WOMEN'S EDUCATIONAL EQUITY

PROGRAM AUTHORIZATION

SEC. 701. (a) Section 938 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended to read as follows:

"AUTHORIZATIONS OF APPROPRIATIONS

"SEC. 938. For the purpose of carrying out this part, there are authorized to be appropriated $6,200,000 for the fiscal year 1985, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the succeeding fiscal years ending prior to October 1, 1989.".

(b) Section 937 of such Act is amended by inserting after "1984" a comma and the following: "and every other year thereafter".

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. President, as one of the creators of S. 2341, the Vocational Education Act of 1984, I am pleased to bring this legislation before the Senate.

S. 2341 makes significant and needed revisions in the Federal role in vocational education. Its primary objective is to clearly focus what the Federal law attempts to achieve. In doing so, S. 2341 supports two primary thrusts for Federal vocational assistance: The promotion of access for underserved populations and the support of modernization and improvement.

The Vocational Education Act of 1963, as amended, has been the Federal flagship in vocational education. It has served the system well in providing funds when there were few and in having been the catalyst for increased State and local support for vocational education.

The act, however, has its faults. The report conducted by the National Institute of Education—an evaluation mandated by the 1976 amendments—reached this central conclusion: The Vocational Education Act of 1963, as amended, attempts to accomplish too much with too few resources.

Mr. President, this finding cast a long shadow over our deliberation on the reauthorization of the VEA of 1963. Much is expected of vocational education, and indeed, much is accomplished. Yet, it has become readily apparent that the Federal Act has become all things to all people, and as such, by attempting too much, it has done too little.

The committee was faced with two choices. First, it could continue the current state of affairs, either keep the act essentially unchanged or add to it and thereby ensure that the Federal act would be little more than general, untargeted assistance.

Or, as a second choice, the committee could reshape the act to ensure not only that it stood for something but that it could get something done.

After having held more hearings on vocational education in the last 3 years than on any other educational topic, the subcommittee on education, arts, and humanities, which I chair, decided to take the latter course. The law needed to be redesigned so that its objectives were unmistakable and realizable.

As a result of these hearings and the NIE report, the subcommittee identified access and improvement as the two greatest needs of vocational education across the Nation.

S. 2341 focuses on access because far too many people—the handicapped, the disadvantaged, women, and the incarcerated—are left out of quality vocational education.

Furthermore, the Vocational Education Act of 1984 concentrates equally on program improvement. Too many pleas have been made to the committee that vocational education is in desperate need of support for expansion, innovation and improvement. S. 2341, heeding those pleas, provides significant support for such activities. It symbolizes the belief that vocational education must improve.

Mr. President, this legislation has been developed with the active involvement of our committee members and numerous representatives of vocational education, specifically, and the education community, generally, it enjoys broad support.

Also, S. 2341 removes layers of administrative requirements and bureaucratic complexity. It simplifies the planning process, promotes State discretion in allocating most of the funding, and lightens the burdens on local school districts.

It is more explicit on the requirements for serving the handicapped and the disadvantaged, but it is so because of the weight of accumulated evidence that Federal law in this area must be explicit or else it is not carried out.

To my friends who criticize the alleged inflexibility of S. 2341, I ask them to read this legislation carefully and make comparisons to the existing law. Any objective analysis will come down on S. 2341's side.

I commend the Vocational Education Act of 1984 to my colleagues' attention. It represents a break with the past and a bold step into the future. It recognizes both the interests of individuals and the needs of the system. It deserves support.

I also would like to express my appreciation for the contributions that Senators DOMENICI, CHILES, QUAYLE, and SPECTER have made in suggesting additional language. Their amendments not only are acceptable to the committee but they are welcomed.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I am particularly pleased to bring this reauthorization of the Federal vocational education program to the Senate floor. Like the Senate math/science bill that the House of Representatives has recently passed, the Vocational Education Act of 1984 continues the trend of cooperative efforts within the Committee on Labor and Human Resources regarding education legislation. I am honored to be a primary sponsor of this bill together with Senator STAFFORD and Senator PELL who have labored hard to refine the Federal role in vocational education into manageable and productive proportions.

Since its inception in 1917, the Federal vocational education program has been a categorical program. It is not now and was never meant to be a program of general educational assistance to States and towns. The program was intended to enhance vocational education through a specific Federal contribution to a comprehensive State and local effort. This comprehensive State and local effort was to remain in the hands of State and local officials who were to retain the discretion—the flexibility if you will—to operate State and local programs with State and local money in accordance with State and local priorities. The Federal money and the Federal program were there to help State and local programs, and not to preempt, supplant or dominate them. This was and is an entirely reasonable goal.

However, to serve this end the Federal program must have a focus. Otherwise, the Federal money becomes either a lure by which Federal hegemony is imposed upon State vocational programs or it becomes merely a source of additional funds for vocational administrators. To a degree both predicaments have occurred since the current 1976 law has no adequate focus.

Vocational education is predominantly a State and local responsibility. Over 90 percent of the national budget for vocational education comes from State and local sources. Nevertheless, in recent years a comparatively modest Federal contribution has been accompanied by 53 pages of law and hundreds of pages of regulations that have been used to manipulate State and local vocational education programs, in yet another example of the Federal tail wagging the national dog. The current Federal law contains a smorgasbord of goals and a warren of process and paperwork requirements. Its aims are vague and platitudinous. Its requirements for cooperation, collaboration, and accountability are so dense as to read like some treaty between the East and West. One expects to come across a passage describing the shape of the negotiating table.

On the other hand, once the State vocational administrators have negotiated the many Federal hoops, they receive the Federal money with no clear sense of Federal priorities concerning how this money should be used, in part because everything imaginable is listed as a Federal priority. Simply, the Federal funds become dollars that the administrators can use for projects, items or staff that the State or the town is unable or unwilling to finance. Ironically, the Federal program requires more elaborate State and local vocational bureaucracies and then fuels those bureaucracies with Federal dollars in the name of educational excellence, equity, and above all, flexibility. This hardly makes sense.

In 1981 the National Institute for Education issued a report that criticizes the diffuseness and obtuseness of the Federal vocational education law. Other reports have come since that time, and all of them stress the notion that the Federal Government should concentrate Federal dollars where they will do some tangible good.

With this goal in mind the sponsors of S. 2341 decided to limit the Federal program at the State and local levels to essentially two purposes: First, improving access to quality vocational training for underserved and hard to serve populations, and second, modernizing vocational education facilities and curricula so that they provide people with skills that are marketable in today's more technically advanced economy. There is broad consensus within the vocational education community that these two functions of accessibility and program improvement constitute a proper Federal role in vocational education.

S. 2341 allows the States to use 6 percent of their allotment for State administration. This represents a considerable drop from the portion of the Federal money that many States have been using for administrative expenses. However, we felt strongly that more of the Federal vocation moneys should be going for actual vocational education services.

One percent of the State allotment must go to pay the expenses of a more compact State council on vocational education than is required by current law. In addition to being smaller the new council will also have a business majority. It is our hope that a more focused panel will be better able to advise the State board of education on how to develop and maintain a congruence between vocational education programs and the job market within the State.

The State council must also prepare a plan for the use of Federal vocational funds within the State. This is another departure from current law which requires the State plan to explain the use of all vocational education moneys. The intention with this change is to keep the Federal program concentrated on its dual aims of accessibility and program improvement while giving a clear sign that it is a State and local prerogative and responsibility to design and manage the programs they themselves fund.

S. 2341 eases the burden of paperwork and the Federal manipulation of State and local programs by pruning federally mandated planning requirements. Instead of requiring annual plans that keep administrators virtually constantly at their desks compiling statistics and arranging graphs, the bill mandates an initial 3 year plan and then a plan every 2 years thereafter. Substate plans are not required at all. Local governments must submit only an application to the State providing assurances that they will comply with the Federal program.

Ninety-three percent of the State allotment must be devoted to providing vocational education. Eighty percent must be sent by the State through to local eligible recipients. The money is divided evenly between title II whose primary objective is accessibility, and title III whose primary objective is program improvement.

Title II consists of four set-asides to help the States provide marketable skills to four groups of Americans who have great difficulty getting the training they need for good jobs; handicapped persons, economically and educationally disadvantaged children, prisoners, and single parents and people who have spent their adult lives as homemakers. Helping to make quality vocational education available to these people is title II's primary purpose, but clearly program improvement is also a major purpose since availability means little without quality. The program money for the handicapped and the disadvantaged must be sent through to the local level; while the program money for the prisoners, single parents, and homemakers can be used either for State or local programs.

The single parents' and homemakers' section of title II tracks closely the language of S. 2318, the Single Parents and Homemakers Education Assistance Act, that I introduced with Senator HAWKINS last winter. We desired that vocational education better serve single parents and homemakers. These persons are often women who are struggling alone to raise children or who have been out of the labor paid force—sometimes for decades—and are unable to find work or are relegated to poor paying jobs because their circumstances make difficult or impossible their use of existing vocational training programs.

Altogether S. 2341 devotes $90.4 million for adapting or establishing vocational programs for single parents and homemakers. Also, funds can be used for such support services as transportation and child care so that single parents and homemakers with an absolute need for these services will not be precluding from participating in vocational programs.

The bill also places the administration of the money for single parents and homemakers directly under the State's sex equity coordinator. The sex equity coordinators were first appointed in the 1970's when this position became a requirement under Federal regulations. Although some of these coordinators have managed to make a big difference in their States, little formal authority and virtually no program money have accompanied their job. These deficits have necessarily diminished what the coordinators can do to insure that the special needs of women are met. S. 2341 will make the coordinators administrators as well as advisers within the State administration of vocational education, and therefore, they will become more integrally involved in the management and policy of vocational education programs. The coordinators will also be able to address directly the needs of single parents and displaced homemakers who in our society are among those persons with the greatest financial problems.

The bill also entails an increased emphasis on serving the needs of handicapped persons and disadvantaged children. Too often these Americans are not served because they are deemed to be too hard to serve or it is suspected that they are not as likely to succeed and thus will diminish the success rate of a given program. It seems to me and to other sponsors of this legislation that these should be reason for an increased rather than a diminished effort.

Title III of S. 2341 is devoted to program improvement, innovation and expansion. Thirty percent of the funds under this title must be used to expand, create or modernize programs for adults, and 10 percent must be used for creative partnerships between the business and vocational educational communities. But beyond these requirements, the States have broad latitude to use title III moneys to improve their vocational education programs.

The reindustrialization of America under the current administration will increasingly require vocational programs to modernize their facilities and curricula to keep pace with advancing technologies. Title III is designed to give the States a boost toward this end.

Title IV of the bill improves national programs. A national assessment of vocational education is required. The Secretary of Education is given a discretionary fund to support model programs promoting access for the underserved, public/private sector cooperation, and the overcoming of national skill shortages. The Vocational Education and Occupational Information Data Systems or VEDS is streamlined in part by allowing scientific sample surveys rather than actual counts for all data except that involving handicapped persons.

As a result of an amendment I offered in committee, a National Employers Council on Vocational Education will be established. The original bill included no authorization for a national council even though a National Advisory Council on Vocational Education has been mandated under existing law. The Council was omitted because it seemed to the sponsors that the current program is so diffuse in its membership and purpose that it has not been as effective in assisting either the Secretary or the Congress as it might have been. However, upon reflection I felt that the council like the rest of the Federal Vocational Education Program should be given a focus and a chance to succeed.

The new council is comprised entirely of users. That is the membership is people who will actually employ the graduates of vocational programs. The idea is to give the educators who work in and with the Department of Education a complementary perspective.

Also, the Council will have greater latitude to be incisive because this will be essentially a business council which will say what business thinks is good for the country and for business. Because the Council's opinion will be obviously from a given perspective it will not be tied to the ameliorating and homogenizing requirements of national policy. For example, It would not be proper for there to be a national policy on curricula standards, but there can be no onus against an employers' council producing policy on curricula. In this case it would represent a perspective of the American business community. The National Employers Council is also authorized to establish subcommittees and working groups to consider specific vocational problems associated with business and labor needs and high technology

Finally, we have added a provision revising the existing Federal effort on bilingual vocational training. This section represents something of a milestone thanks to the indispensible help of Senator RANDOLPH. In response to his initiative the committee has made it clear that the Congress intends a language other than English to be used when this is necessary to allow students who do not understand English well to understand the subject matter so that they will not fall behind mainstream students in learning vocational skills. On the other hand, whenever this need is not paramount, English is to be used. For one thing the language of technology in the country and much of the rest of the world is English. In other words, English terms denote the component parts of most widgets. Thus, if a mechanic is to make use of a shop manual, he must know some English. Also, English is the language of this country, and no student can realistically expect the full range of opportunities that this Nation provides if he cannot understand or be understood by the vast majority of his fellow Americans. Therefore, foreign languages should be used in our vocational programs to assist students whose primary language is not English to keep up in their studies with their fellow students and to assist them in an ultimate mastery of our language.

I believe that Senator STAFFORD, Senator PELL, and the rest of the Committee on Labor and Human Resources have fashioned a particularly thoughtful and coherent reauthorization for our national vocational education programs. I am proud to have been a part of this effort and I am greatly pleased with the results. I urge the Senate to support this legislation.

In committee, amendments were added that will establish a National Summit Conference on Education to follow up on last year's conference that was organized by Secretary Bell and attended by the President. The Women's Education Equity Act is also reauthorized. These are worthy additions and I urge my colleagues to support these as well.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I am very pleased to rise in support of S. 2341, the "Vocational Education Act of 1984." I wholeheartedly support vocational education, as it is a very important component of the American educational system.

I am very pleased that today the Senate is taking affirmative action to reauthorize and extend the Federal Vocational Education Program.

Even though the Federal Government provides only 9 percent of total national expenditures for vocational education, this Federal money can make the difference in updating programs so that they reflect the needs of today's industry; in providing extra services for special populations such as disadvantaged, handicapped, and women students, and makes the difference between state of the art equipment in classes and equipment that is sorely in need of replacement. Thus, the Federal commitment to vocational education is important, and I am pleased to reaffirm that commitment today.

Earlier this year Senator CHILES of Florida and I introduced legislation to reauthorize and extend the Vocational Education Program, S. 2360, the Vocational-Technical Education Quality and Equity Act of 1984. This legislation had two purposes: First, to improve the quality of vocational education programs; and second, to increase access to vocational education programs for populations of students who had not previously fully participated in vocational education programs—such as disadvantaged, handicapped, minority and women students.

I am pleased to see that these are the two main purposes behind S. 2341, the Vocational Education Act of 1984, and I congratulate the authors of this legislation for their concern about the quality of vocational education programs and their concern that vocational education programs reach out to provide services for students who would otherwise have great difficulty in obtaining independent employment and gaining self-sufficient lives.

There is a significant difference, however, between the bill introduced earlier this year by Senator CHILES and myself and the bill which we are considering here on the floor today. S. 2360, the Vocational-Technical Education Quality and Equity Act of 1984, required States and localities to complete a fairly rigorous planning process, but then allowed great flexibility in the manner in which States and localities used Federal money to increase vocational education services for disadvantaged, handicapped, minority, and women students and to improve the quality of vocational education programs. On the other hand, S. 2341, which we are considering today, has a more streamlined planning process, and allows less flexibility in the manner in which funds are used. While we all sought the same improvements in vocational education classes and schools, we differed on the best approach to obtain these goals. I note that these differences are not one of party—since both bills were bipartisan efforts—but more one of philosophy and a basic approach toward Federal, State and local relationships.

I expressed my concerns about the differences between our bills to the chairman of the Education Subcommittee, Senator STAFFORD, and the chairman of the full Committee on Labor and Human Resources, Senator HATCH. I would like to tell my colleagues at this point that in every instance I found these two chairmen and their staff to be open to my concerns, understanding, and extremely helpful.

As a result of a series of discussions held over the past few weeks, in a moment I will be offering an amendment to S. 2341, the Vocational Education Act of 1984, and it is my understanding that this amendment is acceptable to the authors of the bill. The purpose of my amendment is twofold: To make it easier for local school districts and vocational schools to provide services for disadvantaged and handicapped students, and to encourage small school districts to work together in providing these services.

This is accomplished by small modifications of the bill language. First, my amendment will allow services to disadvantaged and handicapped students to be provided jointly, or in common, where that is appropriate. Second, my amendment allows the State, where the use of Federal funds will be inefficient or ineffective, the option of withholding formula grants from recipients who would receive less than $1,000 for the entire year. If small districts work together to provide services for disadvantaged and handicapped students, and qualify for a grant of $1,000 or more, they will automatically receive a formula grant. It is my hope that this language will encourage small school districts to work together on a cooperative basis in providing services for disadvantaged and handicapped students.

The changes which I propose will be of most significance and assistance to small rural school districts. In New Mexico there are 33 school districts with enrollments of less than 500. It is often difficult for these smaller districts to comply with some of the administrative requirements and detailed provisions of Federal law. To the degree that we in the Senate are responsive to these concerns and are sensitive to the limitations of small rural school districts when we draft Federal law, we will be aiding and improving the quality of education for these rural students; and this, in the final analysis, is what we are all working together to accomplish.

Mr. President, I would also like to mention at this point that I support the amendment which is being offered today by Senator CHILES. Senator CHILES' amendments will strengthen the planning process for States and localities to guarantee that the Federal money will be used for the purposes of this act. These ideas are also found in S. 2360, which the two of us introduced earlier.

I close my statement by congratulating the sponsors of S. 2341 for their efforts. I know it has been a long and difficult process for the committee in reaching this point, and I thank them for their willingness to address my concerns.

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, as a longtime, active proponent of vocational education, I rise in support of the Vocational Education Act of 1984 as a bill which inspires youth initiative, rescues disoriented unemployed individuals, and solves many of the social problems to which unemployment can lead.

There were several different approaches to restructuring voc-ed programs, offered during the past year. I feel this bill is a good compromise and one that was achieved through a true bipartisan effort.

This legislation will replace the existing Vocational Education Act and will hopefully lead to improved local and State vocational education programs. By providing a new leadership role, S. 2341 will modernize and upgrade the quality of all secondary and postsecondary vocational education.

The bill also increases the funding for disadvantaged, handicapped and other special population groups. Too often the needs of the handicapped and disadvantaged are overlooked; S. 2341 successfully addresses these needs.

The success of cooperative voc-ed programs is clearly exemplified in South Dakota. A large farm implement manufacturing firm in Mitchell had a critical need for 40 additional welders. The Mitchell Area Vocational Technical School was able to promptly respond to this need by training people in the evenings and on weekends.

Another local manufacturer had a need for specialized welders. The Mitchell Vo-Tech School was able to respond by taking one of the company's employees and providing short-term intensive training programs in MIG and TIG welding.

These are two examples of this one school's effective response to the business and employment needs of the community. What does the school get in return? Local businesses and industries have played a major role in the development of Mitchell Vo-Tech by donating hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of equipment to the school. Currently, over 100 businesses and industry leaders serve as advisers to the school. The farm implement company I mentioned earlier located in Mitchell because of the availability of the Mitchell Vo-Tech School.

Through coordination with State and local education agencies, students receive valuable experience and industry is able to hire skilled workers. In this instance and countless others, education and industry cooperatively recognize and respond to training and manpower needs. South Dakota's 90 percent in-State placement rate for postsecondary voc-ed graduates is proof that the programs are working.

Statistics show employers are satisfied with workers trained by voc-ed institutions. Voc-ed programs are meeting the needs not only of students, but also of the communities in which they are employed.

I have long believed that vocational education offers one of the most effective means by which our country can better prepare its work force and effectively utilize the talents and resources of its people. My very first speech in Congress in 1975, on the floor of the House of Representatives was about the need for strengthening vocational education in this Nation. I have continued that fight in the U.S. Senate. I support S. 2341, the Vocational Education Act of 1984 and I urge my colleagues to join in better focusing, redefining and refining congressional intent in the Vocational Education Act.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. President, I have been informed by the Budget Committee that certain sections of S. 2341 need additional clarification.

Specifically, section 521 establishes the effective date as beginning on or after October 1, 1984, except that the authority of the Secretary to prescribe regulations and the responsibility of the States to prepare and submit State plans are effective upon the date of enactment.

The committee intends that any expeditures arising from the Secretary's regulatory function or the States planning responsibilities must come from existing funding.

Furthermore, S. 2341 omitted an effective date for the National Summit Conference on Education. It is the committee's intention that the effective date be on or after October 1, 1984.

Mrs. HAWKINS. Mr. President, I rise in support of S. 2341, the Vocational Education Act of 1984. This measure reauthorizes Federal support of vocational education. In doing so, it is an affirmation of the Federal Government's commitment to vocational training as a primary means of improving job skills and providing greater opportunity for this Nation's working men and women. This bill, however, represents much more than a simple renewal of Federal efforts in this important area of education. With it, we open a new chapter in our attempt to make Federal involvement at all levels more cost effective, less burdensome, and more direct. S. 2341 is a carefully crafted measure designed to reach individuals who need help the most in beginning the climb up America's economic ladder.

As the committee report makes clear, this bill "rests on two pillars: access and quality." The Vocational Education Act of 1984 provides greater access to vocational education for men and women who have been traditionally underserved by vocational education and who are, in the face of rapidly changing economic and social conditions, most in need of marketable job skills. It also provides Federal support to improve the quality of vocational education for all students. This approach is the result of several facts of life that faced the committee during the drafting of S. 2341.

First, the Federal Government's contribution to total vocational education spending in the United States has steadily grown smaller. Although nominal dollars spent each year continue to increase, the Federal Government's share of total spending has declined from over 25 percent in 1966 to only 9.4 percent in 1980. Over the last 18 years, spurred by the Federal Government's support, the States have developed strong vocational educational programs and committed significant resources to this area of education. The State of Florida, as an example, has developed one of the best programs in the Nation. During the 1982-83 school year, Florida spent $544 million in non-Federal funds to support vocational education in our high schools, community colleges, and vocational technical centers. To put that in perspective, spending by just my State of Florida is more than half the total Federal funds authorized in the Vocational Education Act before the Senate today.

Second, the American people have said, "no more" to ever-increasing Government spending as the solution to problems. In the last 20 years, we have learned that throwing money at problems will not solve them. The people have made it clear that they do not believe the simple axiom, "more is better." In numerous tax revolts around the Nation, the taxpayers have loudly declared that they will no longer stand for Government that does not set clear priorities or spends their tax dollars inefficiently.

Thus the committee faced two significant realities: a strong commitment to vocational education by the States that limits the scope of effective Federal involvement, and new budgetary restraints under which all government must live. Consequently, the committee made an important decision about priorities. This bill reflects the committee's decision, one with which I fully agree, that given limited resources and a limited role, our Federal priority must be to help those most in need. It is in this way, serving the people who have been traditionally left behind, that limited Federal dollars can be most effective.

The Vocational Education Act of 1984 identifies five population groups that have been underserved by vocational education in the past. Under the bill, Federal resources will be directed to assist these people. The economically disadvantaged, women who are the sole providers for their families, the physically handicapped, working adults who have been displaced by changing technology, and incarcerated individuals will be the primary recipients of the funds made available by S. 2341. Under this Vocational Education Act, States must use 50 percent of the money made available to them to provide increased access to these target groups.

The second and equally important priority established by S. 2341 is quality improvement. The bill provides that the remaining 50 percent of the funds made available to the States must be used for program improvements that benefit all vocational education students. These funds may be used for such purposes as the development of new curriculum, new course materials, or the purchase of new equipment.

Mr. President, I believe the success of this new approach to vocational education rests on a third pillar—as important as the first two. The virtual elimination of local planning requirements should allow "creativity" to become the third column that supports vocational education policy. This bill frees State and local officials from burdensome paperwork requirements, and I hope, will enable these educators to exercise greater creativity in meeting the needs of their students and communities. As in all education matters, the Federal Government cannot be omniscient. Its proper role is to foster, stimulate, and support locally controlled education initiatives.

Mr. President, the Vocational Education Act of 1984 achieves its basic purpose. Of course, it is not a perfect document and it differs significantly from other bills that have been introduced to reauthorize this program. But, Mr. President, this is the best bill before the Senate. It is a positive step toward more cost effective, less burdensome, and more direct Federal assistance to those most in need. I urge my colleagues to support this measure.

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I am pleased today to rise in recognition of this very important legislation. The Vocational Education Act of 1984, S. 2341, has been carefully examined and reported by the Committee on Labor and Human Resources. I am pleased to support its passage.

This legislation focuses on a critical issue facing many of our citizenry. The Vocational Education Act of 1984 addresses the need to open up vocational education to groups that are traditionally underserved. It provides resources which would result in the improvement and the modernization of vocational education programs. It is timely that vocational education assistance will be provided to States and that programs for vocational education opportunities for individuals from specified groups with special needs also will be provided for. There are other important provisions included in S. 2341: national vocational education programs improvement, innovation, and expansion of national programs, including research and vocational education and occupational information data systems.

The Vocational Education Act of 1984 encompasses the growing challenges and trends in technology advancement. Technology advancement has had a major effect on both the educational system and the workplace. Therefore, it is quite appropriate that this legislation includes special provisions in recognition of the need for industry cooperative programs in high technology occupations. The Committee on Labor and Human Resources has encouraged the use of new and advanced learning technologies, such as computer assisted instruction, for achieving the many objectives of S. 2341.

Mr. President, I am delighted to support this act. Its multifaceted purpose will benefit many. In short, this legislation will provide badly needed assistance to States in the expansion, improvements, and development of quality vocational education programs. S. 2341 assures equal opportunity in vocational education for traditionally underserved populations. The Vocational Education Act of 1984 promotes public and private sector cooperation.

Mr. President, this legislation makes vocational education more responsive to the job market and improves the operation of national vocational education programs. For this and many other reasons, I am pleased to express my support for the Vocational Education Act of 1984.

Thank you, Mr. President.

AMENDMENT NO. 3656

(Purpose: To make certain technical and minor modifications in the bill and to correct a performance standard regulation under the Job Training Partnership Act)

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of Mr. STAFFORD and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Alaska (Mr. STEVENS), for Mr. STAFFORD, proposes an amendment numbered 3656.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 120, line 9, after "develop" insert a comma and the following: "within the National Center for Education Statistics,".

On page 133, line 11, strike out "plan" and insert in lieu thereof "application".

On page 146, after line 13, insert in the following the new title:

TITLE VIII—JOB TRAINING REGULATIONS

REGULATIONS AMENDED

SEC. 801. Section 629.38(e)(2)(iii) of the regulations relating to job training published by the Secretary of Labor on March 15, 1983, is amended to read as follows:

"(iii) Stipulates that full payment for the full unit price will be made only upon completion of training by a participant and placement of the participant into unsubsidized employment in the occupation trained for and at not less than the wage specified in the agreement, or in the case of youth the attainment of other outcomes specified in section 106(b)(2) of the Act.", until the Secretary modifies such regulations in accordance with the provisions of section 169 of the Job Training Partnership Act.

On page 66, in the table of contents, after item "Sec. 701" insert the following:

TITLE VIII—JOB TRAINING REGULATIONS

SEC. 801. Regulations amended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 365b) was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3657

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I send another amendment to the desk on behalf of Mr. STAFFORD and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Alaska [Mr. STEVENS], on behalf of Mr. STAFFORD, for himself, Mr. KENNEDY, Mrs. HAWKINS, and Mr. QUAYLE, proposes an amendment numbered 3657.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 84, line 18, strike out "and".

On page 84, line 22, strike out the period and insert in lieu thereof a semicolon and the word "and".

On page 84, between lines 22 and 23, insert the following:

(D) the adoption of such procedures as the State board considers necessary to implement State level coordination with the State job training coordination council to encourage cooperation in the conduct of their respective programs.

On page 87, between lines 10 and 11, insert the following new subsection;

(c) The State board shall make available to each private industry council established under part A of title I of the Job Training Partnership Act within the State a description of all programs assisted under this Act to be operated by eligible recipients in service delivery areas designated under such part A.

On page 90, line 10, strike out "and".

On page 90, line 14, strike out the period and insert in lieu thereof a semicolon and the word "and".

On page 90, between lines 14 and 15, insert the following:

(C) make recommendations to the State board for cooperation with programs assisted under this Act with programs assisted under the Job Training Partnership Act, and at least once every two years assess the adequacy and effectiveness of the coordination that takes place between vocational education and the Job Training Partnership Act to the extent that the objectives of this Act and the Job Training Partnership Act are compatible.

On page 97, line 5, after "legislature" insert the following: "and the State job training coordinating council".

On page 97, line 6, after "legislature" insert the following: "and the State job training coordinating council".

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3657) was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3658

(Purpose: To permit joint or common services to be provided to disadvantaged and handicapped individuals under the bill, to assure that separate identification of expenditures of the disadvantaged and handicapped at the local level is not required, and to prevent extreme dispersion of assistance)

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, on behalf of Mr. DOMENICI, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Alaska [Mr. STEVENS], for Mr. DOMENICI, proposes an amendment numbered 3658.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 104, between lines 11 and 12, insert the following:

(b)(1)(A) Whenever the State board determines that the distribution of funds, in accordance with subsection (a) of this section, will result, with respect to any eligible recipient, in ineffective programing and use of funds made available under this title, the State board may adopt a de minimis rule under which funds are not allocated to such an eligible recipient and are reallocated under this subsection. The State board may, in carrying out the provisions of this paragraph, apply the rule only to any eligible recipient within the State which is eligible to receive $1,000 or less in any fiscal year.

(B) For the purpose of this paragraph, an eligible recipient includes a joint application under paragraph (5) of subsection (a).

(2) Whenever the State board determines that the rule stated in paragraph (1) of this subsection applies to any eligible recipient, the State board shall allocate the amounts made available by the application of paragraph (1) to other eligible recipients within the State not subject to such paragraph.

On page 104, line 12, strike out "(b)" and insert in lieu thereof "(c)".

On page 104, between lines 16 and 17, insert the following:

(d) Nothing in this title shall be construed to require the State board to identify, separately, expenditures for disadvantaged individuals and for handicapped individuals with respect to eligible recipients within the State.

On page 106, between lines 19 and 20, insert the following:

(d) Whenever the State board determines that it is appropriate, vocational education services and activities for handicapped individuals and disadvantaged individuals may be furnished jointly or in common.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3658) was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3659

(Purpose: To strengthen State assessment of vocational education, and the development and contents of the State plan)

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, on behalf of Mr. CHILES, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Alaska [Mr. STEVENS], for Mr. CHILES, proposes an amendment numbered 3659.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 91, line 23, strike out "and".

On page 91, between lines 23 and 24, insert in lieu thereof the following:

(C) assess the special needs of groups of individuals specified in section 201(b) for access to vocational education and vocational services in terms of labor market needs;

(D) assess the quality of vocational education in terms of—

(i) the pertinence of programs to the workplace and to new and emerging technologies,

(ii) the responsiveness of programs to the current and projected occupational needs in the State,

(iii) the capacity of programs to facilitate entry into, and participation in, vocational education and to ease the school-to-work and secondary-to-postsecondary transition, and

(iv) the technological and educational quality of vocational curricula, equipment, and instructional materials to enable vocational students and instructors to meet the challenges of increased technological demands of the workplace;

On page 91, line 24, strike out "(C)" and insert in lieu thereof "(E)".

On page 92, line 1, beginning with the word "bring", strike out through the period in line 3 and insert in lieu thereof the following: "meet the needs identified through the assessments required by clauses (A) through (D) of this paragraph; and

"(F) determine, for each fiscal year, how the services and activities supported by funds furnished under this Act can be expected to assist the State in meeting the needs identified through the assessments required by clauses (A) through (D) of this paragraph.".

On page 92, strike out lines 5 through 19 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

(1) provide assurances that, and where necessary a description of the manner in which, the State board will comply with the requirements of titles I, II, and III of this Act, including—

(A) a description of the manner in which the State will comply with the criteria required for programs for the handicapped and for the disadvantaged prescribed by section 204;

(B) assurances that the State will comply with the distribution of assistance requirements contained in section 203;

(C) a description of the criteria for the distribution of assistance required by section 203 and section 302;

(D) assurances that, to the extent consistent with the number and location of individuals described in clauses (1) and (2) of section 201(b) in the State who are enrolled in private elementary and secondary schools, provision is made for the participation of such individuals in the vocational education program assisted under title II of this Act;

(2) set forth the planned uses of Federal funds available for vocational education for each fiscal year for which the plan is submitted and describe how the State did carry out the provisions of section 113(a)(3);

On page 93, strike out lines 15 through 21.

On page 93, line 22, strike out "(7)" and insert in lieu thereof "(6)".

On page 94, line 1, strike out "(8)" and insert in lieu thereof "(7)".

On page 94, line 3, strike out "using" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "in meeting the needs identified in the State plan, including".

On page 107, line 23, strike out "and counseling" and insert in lieu thereof a comma and the following: "counseling, and career development".

Mr. CHILES. Mr. President, I would like to offer a series of amendments to the Vocational Education Act of 1984. I understand these amendments are acceptable to the committee.

I would like to express my sincere thanks to the chairman and ranking members of the Education Subcommittee and of the Labor and Human Resources Committee and their staffs for their willingness to work with me on a satisfactory compromise on these amendments. I also want to thank Senator WEICKER and his staff for the valuable assistance they have provided in developing these amendments.

The bill reported by the full committee already contained some marked improvements over the current program and the House version. Structurally, it is significant that the bill places the administrative section, that is, the title that outlines the responsibilities of the States, up front. In addition, the approach of having a separate title and funds for access and another for quality, or program improvement, is also very desirable. These features, which are similar to the Vocational-Technical Education Quality and Equity Act of 1984, introduced by myself and Senator DOMENICI, are important.

Too often, we write legislation that literally spends the money up front, lists all the great things that the funds can be used for, and leaves the process for getting the money out and setting priorities for why we are spending it, way in the back of the bill. The committee bill avoids this.

Too often we craft legislation that pits the special needs of disadvantaged and handicapped populations for access to education against general program improvement for the average student. Again, the committee bill avoids this.

Substantively, the committee bill takes a great step forward in identifying those things—Outreach, special services, guidance and counseling—that are critical to the success of disadvantaged and handicapped students and targeting the funds to these services. The services identified for the disadvantaged and the handicapped, the so-called supplemental services, are educationally sound. They provide a strong companion to what we buy for the Federal dollar for these groups with chapter I and the Education for the Handicapped Act. And when we know exactly what we are buying, in terms of above-and-beyond services for a special population, we are going to be better able to tell what we are accomplishing for them with the money.

Another substantive improvement the committee has made with this bill is to forego the "laundry list" of naming each and every activity the funds can be used for in program improvement. Instead, the committee has wisely moved to a more generic, or concept-oriented, list of program improvement activities that encompasses the full scope of what can and should be done to enhance the quality of voc ed. This also provides flexibility in that you don't have to worry about seeing if each specific use of funds is listed.

I am very hopeful that these aspects of the committee bill will be retained in conference with the House.

I am particularly pleased that the committee worked with me to incorporate the spirit of the amendments I was offering into the amendment they are accepting today. I feel, and I believe the committee and a number of the education groups also agree, that these amendments build on the progress this Senate version makes and enhance the accountability of the program.

The so-called Chiles' accountability amendments simply sought to identify, up front in the State administration title, what our priorities are for access and quality in vocational education. Priorities like these are often stated in the purpose of a piece of legislation. But frequently, they don't find their way into the planning process and the way funds are used. The committee has worked with me on incorporating a mechanism for linking, throughout the bill, our real purposes in providing access and improving quality of vocational programs. The mechanism brings these purposes or priorities into the development of the State plan, review of local applications, and ultimately, how funds are used.

Identifying the priorities for access are easy—they are simply the needs of specific target populations (the disadvantaged handicapped, women, and prisoners) for access to vocational education and special vocational services. It really isn't that difficult either to determine what we mean by "quality" in vocational education. It is programs that are pertinent to the workplace and new technologies, programs that respond to State and local occupational needs, programs that are technologically and educationally sound, and programs where the entry and exit to another program or the job market flows smoothly.

As I said, we have worked out a mechanism for incorporating priorities like this into the bill. First, my amendment states these items as the basis for a State assessment of each of the target populations' needs and of the quality of programs. Once the needs in each area of the assessment are identified, local capacity to meet the needs is determined. This is important because you don't want to plan for spending Federal money without taking into account what is going on in the State. Finally, the States determine how the programs and activities to be supported with the Federal funds will meet those needs.

There's another step to this mechanism, that of setting goals and determining how much progress toward the goals can be made during the period of the State plan. We couldn't reach agreement on incorporating this step into the program at this time. However, it's a direction I think we should be moving, ultimately, in programs like voc ed, math-science, and excellence, where the Federal Government is trying to buy quality and access above and beyond what the States and local education agencies are doing. I hope to work with the committee over time in seeing if we can't adopt more of a goal-setting approach for both accountability and flexibility.

The amendment I am offering here does incorporate the three planning steps I mentioned into the State plan. It ties the uses of funds for the target populations in title II and program improvement in title III to the needs identified by the assessment and how well programs meet the identified needs is the basis for educating programs. That completes the mechanism. I am convinced it means the States and local districts and institutions will be able to identify overall what they are trying to accomplish with the Federal dollar and what they are getting. Ultimately, we will know more at the Federal level what we are accomplishing with the program and how much more could be achieved with additional funds for the program.

I am also very happy that the committee has reached an agreement on the flexibility amendment being offered today by Senator DOMENICI. I think with an accountability mechanism like this in place, we can afford to permit more flexibility to the States and local districts. I understand that my colleague, Senator QUAYLE, will further discuss the issue of flexibility in conference with the House, and I thank the committee for its courtesy in this regard.

It will be a difficult conference because structurally and substantively the House and Senate bills are so different. I am anxious to have the amendments I am offering for accountability and those of my colleague from New Mexico for flexibility accepted in the conference. I think the gains the committee bill with these amendments make are critical to the future success of the Federal voc ed program. I hope the committee will remain receptive to additional flexibility in conference.

This bill has gone a hard road through committee to the Senate floor. Again, I want to thank the committee leaders for their efforts and commend them for their untiring work on the legislation. And, of course, I offer very special thanks to Senators DOMENICI and QUAYLE and their staffs for the cooperation, assistance, and hard work they have contributed to our joint effort.

AMENDMENT NO. 3655

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, on behalf of Senators STAFFORD and PELL, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Alaska [Mr. STEVENS], for Mr. STAFFORD, proposes an amendment numbered 3655.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 99, line 19 before the period, insert a comma and the following: "including the acquisition of modern machinery and tools and the costs of services and activities which apply the latest technological advances to courses of instruction".

On page 100, between lines 7 and 8, insert the following:

"(3) make grants to community-based organizations for the provision of vocational education services to single parents and homemakers, if the State determines that the community-based organization has demonstrated effectiveness in providing comparable or related services to single parents and homemakers, taking into account the demonstrated performance of such an organization in terms of cost, the quality of training and the characteristics of the participants;".

On page 100, line 8, strike out "(3)" and insert in lieu thereof "(4)".

On page 100, line 8, strike out "(4)" and insert in lieu thereof "(5)".

On page 104, line 15, insert before "within" the following: "and to community-based organizations pursuant to section 201(e)(3)".

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3655) was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

AMENDMENT NO. 3660

(Purpose: To provide through joint efforts between eligible recipients and community-based organizations a program of outreach and prevocational services designed primarily to transition severely economically and educationally disadvantaged youth into vocational education and other education and training programs)

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, on behalf of Mr. SPECTER, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Alaska [Mr. STEVENS], for Mr. SPECTER, Mr. HATCH, Mr. STAFFORD, and Mr. PELL, proposes an amendment numbered 3660.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 67, between lines 17 and 18, insert the following:

(3) There are authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for the fiscal-year 1985 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the succeeding fiscal years ending prior to October 1, 1989, to assist the States to carry out programs and services designed to enroll severely economically and educationally disadvantaged youth in vocational education programs or other education and training or for employment, using joint efforts between eligible recipients and community-based organization.

On page 77, line 19, strike out "section" and insert in lieu thereof "sections".

On page 77, line 20, strike out "and 3(a)(2)" and insert in lieu thereof a comma and the following: "3(a)(2), and 3(a)(3)".

On page 81, lines 5 and 6 after "allotment" insert "(other than the amount of the allotment attributable to sums appropriated pursuant to section 3(a)(3))".

On page 98, between lines 10 and 11, insert the following new part:

APPLICATIONS

SEC. 121. (a) Each community-based organization which desires to receive assistance under this part shall prepare jointly with the appropriate eligible recipient and submit an application to the State board at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the State board may require. Each such application shall—

(1) contain an agreement between the community-based organization and the eligible recipients in the area to be served, which includes the designation of fiscal agents established for the program;

(2) provide a description of the uses for which assistance is sought pursuant to section 121(b) together with evaluation criteria to be applied to the program;

(3) provide assurances that the community-based organization will give special consideration to the needs of severely economically and educationally disadvantaged youth ages sixteen through twenty-one, inclusive;

(4) provide assurances that business concerns will be involved, as appropriate, in services and activities for which assistance is sought;

(5) describe the collaborative efforts with the eligible recipients and the manner in which the services and activities for which assistance is sought will serve to enhance the enrollment of severely economically and educationally disadvantaged youth into the vocational education programs; and

(6) provide assurances that the programs conducted by the community-based organization will conform to the applicable standards of performance and measures of effectiveness required of vocational education programs in the State.

USES OF FUNDS

SEC. 122. (a) From the portion of the allotment of each State under section 101 available under this part, each State shall provide financial assistance to joint programs of eligible recipients and community-based organizations within the State for the conduct of special vocational education services and activities described in subsection (b).

(b) Funds provided under this section may be used for—

(1) outreach programs to facilitate the entrance of youth into a program of transitional services and subsequent entrance into vocational education, employment or other education and training;

(2) transitional services such as attitudinal and motivational prevocational training programs;

(3) prevocational educational preparation and basic skills development conducted in cooperation with business concerns;

(4) special prevocational preparations programs targeted in inner-city youth, non-English speaking youth, Appalachian youth, and the youth of other urban and rural areas having a high density of poverty who need special prevocational education programs;

(5) career intern programs;

(6) assessment of students needs in relation to vocational education and jobs; and

(7) guidance and counseling to assist students with occupational choices and with the selection of a vocational education program.

On page 64, in the table of contents, after item "Sec. 114." insert the following:

PART C—STATE ASSISTANCE FOR VOCATIONAL EDUCATION SUPPORT PROGRAMS BY COMMUNITY-BASED ORGANIZATIONS

Sec. 121. Applications.
Sec. 122. Uses of funds.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, today I am introducing an amendment to the Vocational Education Act of 1984, which encompasses some of the provisions of the Vocational Education and Community Based Organizations Act of 1984 which I introduced on February 9 of this year. My amendment authorizes the appropriation of funds for joint efforts between eligible recipients and community based organizations to provide the educational and supportive services needed by severely and educationally disadvantaged youth to enable them to enroll in vocational education program.

It is estimated that as much as 50 percent of black youth are unemployed. Youth from the Hispanic barrios and Appalachian hollows are not far behind in these discouraging statistical reports.

This Nation is experiencing an economic recovery which is not reaching our youth population. At the same time, the small business owners who have 80 percent of the jobs, require employees with skills and work habits that members of the unemployed youth population do not have.

Increased opportunities to secure skills training and motivational training are essential if we are to begin solving this national problem.

On February 9, 1984, I introduced S. 2289, the Vocational Education and Community Based Organizations Act of 1984, which addressed these concerns. The bill coordinated the efforts of community based organizations and local educational agencies to improve and intensify existing vocational education programs by providing prevocational, self-help, motivational training organizations with access to our vocational system.

Shortly, thereafter, S. 2341, the Vocational Education Act of 1984, was introduced by Senator STAFFORD to revise the Vocational Education Act of 1963. In the past months I have worked with the Opportunities Industrialization Centers of America (OIC), the American Vocational Association (AVA), and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources to incorporate the critical concerns of the Vocational Education and Community Based Organizations Act of 1984 into S. 2341.

My amendment is a product of this diligent work, and I commend the OIC and the AVA for their help and expertise. I would personally like to thank the Reverend Leon Sullivan, pastor of the 6,000 member Zion Baptist Church in Philadelphia, and founder and chairman of OIC for his contribution to this effort.

Reverend Sullivan has pioneered in the field of manpower development, employment, and training for about a quarter of a century.

His unique contributions to both the Education and Labor Departments of the Federal Government has been recognized by Presidents from Johnson through to President Reagan—each of whom has visited the OIC and praised its successful track record and demonstrated effectiveness. He was appointed to the Manpower Policy Commission created by the Congress in 1973, and reappointed by Presidents Ford and Carter. As a recognized leader among businessmen, he has served on the boards of General Motors, the Girard Bank, the Mellon Bank, and the Philadelphia Savings & Loan.

As a community leader, he has served on the boards of the United Way and the Boy Scouts, and has received the Public Service Award of the United States, the Philadelphia Award, the Freedom Foundation Award, the Spingarn Award, the U.S. Public Service Award, and the Edwin Dahlberg Peace Award.

This great man and his great contribution toward the solution of the tragic youth crisis in America has unlocked the door of opportunity for disadvantaged young Americans of all races.

This amendment will allow States to improve existing vocational programs through encouragement and funding of State and local proposals which develop new self-help, community based preparation programs that provide prevocational, motivational, attitudinal, and basic skills training. It will also assist in providing prevocational preparation and career guidance targeted to inner-city youth, non-English-speaking barrios, Appalachian youth, and other urban and rural areas having a high density of poverty.

In addition, the amendment provides for cooperation between self-help, community based organizations of demonstrated effectiveness and existing vocational and technical training institutions.

Further, it allows for the provision of intern programs of demonstrated effectiveness in developing cooperative partnerships with business and industry, and vocational education institutions, and which improve the basic skills of prevocational students.

Finally, under this amendment, funds will be provided for outreach programs to facilitate the entrance of youth into a program of transitional services and subsequent entrance into vocational education, employment or other education and training.

The amendment which I am introducing today supplement our Nation's efforts to reach youth ages 16 to 21 who are rapidly becoming a permanent underclass in our society. Former alcohol abusers, ex-offenders, school dropouts, and the juvenile delinquents who are growing in number have been served successfully by community based organizations such as OIC for a number of years, and the indication is that this can be done on a broader scale if our educational system targets special resources to inner cities where the danger and opportunities are the greatest.

This amendment seeks to close a gap which has existed since the passage of the Vocational Education Act of 1963. Presently, nonprofit, self-help, community-based organizations like OIC are not assured participation in vocational education programs.

The exclusion of such organizations is indeed unfortunate, especially when one considers the success record of many community based organizations in providing prevocational training, a service which is essential in light of the alarming rate of functional illiteracy in this country—which the U.S. Department of Education estimates at 26 million.

The business community is deeply concerned with the fact that we are not preparing American youth motivationally and attitudinally for the work force, and that we are not giving them the basic skills needed for the rapid technological changes taking place in our society. It is my hope that this amendment will help correct what is wrong, fill in what has been missing—vocational training opportunities for those who will not make it unless brought into the vocational system by general prevocational preparation.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise in support of the amendment to S. 2341 offered by Senator SPECTER which will authorize a program to enhance the access to quality vocational education programs of disadvantaged students residing principally in poverty areas.

Senator SPECTER's amendment will permit the vocational education system to take advantage of the resources of community based organizations which are uniquely qualified to assist young people in preparing to enter vocational education programs.

Unfortunately, Mr. President, there is a significant number of disadvantaged young men and women in the poverty areas of our cities who are out of school and out of work, and who are disenchanted with and alienated from the regular public and private school systems. The community based organizations have demonstrated in the employment and training programs that they know how to reach out to these youth and assist them in obtaining the benefits of job training programs. The amendment proposed by Senator SPECTER simply extends that capability to the vocational education system.

It has been far too common in our tradition of mass free education to blame failure on the shortcomings of the student and to neglect innovative methods or techniques which could meet each individual student's needs. Reducing economic barriers helps those who can respond well to formal education. But it does little for those, either in or out of school, who cannot make effective use of established patterns.

For all of its merits, the vocational education bill (S. 2341) we are considering is system oriented, and does not adequately address the needs of students the system has already failed to accommodate. Senator SPECTER' amendment would help build a bridge between the system and those students.

Over the years community based organizations such as the Opportunities Industrialization Centers established by the Reverend Leon Sullivan in Philadelphia nearly a quarter of a century ago have demonstrated that these youth are anxious to learn, and to become employed. Regrettably, they frequently lack the basic reading or mathematic skills that are necessary to enter into and profit from structured vocational education programs. Community based organizations have clearly demonstrated through the years in various job training programs that they can provide those skills, along with counseling and other essential motivational prevocational activities.

Senator SPECTER's amendment will give the vocational education program this important outreach assistance. It will provide a vital link which, in too many communities, does not exist between disadvantaged youth and the vocational education program. It will help bring countless youth back into productivity.

Mr. President, I support the amendment of the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania and urge my colleagues to concur in this modest expansion of the vocational education program.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3660) was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3661

(Purpose: To honor the late Congressman Carl Perkins)

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, on behalf of Mr. STAFFORD, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Alaska [Mr. STEVENS], for Mr. STAFFORD, Mr. PELL, Mr. HATCH, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. HUDDLESTON, Mr. FORD, Mr. RANDOLPH, and Mr. EAGLETON, proposes an amendment numbered 3661.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. President, all of us know that Congressman Carl Perkins died last Friday while flying home to his beloved Kentucky hills. As someone who has sat across the table from him on many occasions in House-Senate conferences, I came to know Carl Perkins as a skillful legislator and a persistent champion of educational opportunity.

We are even now in the Senate beginning to feel the magnitude of his absence as the leader in the House on education issues. I suggest that the lives of millions of people will be affected for years to come by his untimely death.

It is often said that, when battling over the details of educational legislation, we should keep in mind the children we are supposed to serve. Carl Perkins never lost sight of the children of America when he advocated school lunches, handicapped laws, and compensatory education for the disadvantaged.

In fact, he was uninterested in personal glory, publicity, or the acclaim of interest groups or lobbyists. His constituency was poor children and their parents, and his motivation in his public service was to help them improve the quality of their lives.

I was looking forward to seeing Carl Perkins in conference with the House on this vocational education bill because I wanted to thank him personally for his leadership last month in House passage of the Senate's math and science bill. Carl Perkins sacrificed his own House version of that legislation in order that the math and science bill, the adult educational bill, the library services bill, and the vocational education bill would have the opportunity to pass this year. The incredible lack of ego involved in his actions on this and other issues stand as a lesson to all of us fortunate enough to serve in the Congress. Again, on this issue, his motivation was to complete as much legislation as possible to help disadvantaged Americans.

One law Congressman Perkins was particularly proud of was the Vocational Education Act of 1963. Indeed, he has come to be known as the "Father of Vocational Education" in many respects. Therefore, in honor of his memory and his contributions to vocational education, I ask that the amendment I am offering which renames our bill the Carl Perkins Vocational Education Act of 1984 be accepted.

Mr. President, this is a modest gesture on the part of the Senate which is intended to indicate our sense of loss over Carl Perkins' passing.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3661) was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. QUAYLE. Mr. President, I am concerned about the requirement for a local application contained in section 113 of S. 2341. Specifically, the bill does not make any explicit statements about what States may or may not require in such applications.

Mr. STAFFORD. The bill does not make any statements because the committee intends the language to maintain the neutrality of the Federal Government with respect to the relationship between local eligible recipients and States. States are not precluded from requiring any information necessary for them to discharge their responsibility under the act.

Mr. QUAYLE. Then, to pick but one example, it would be permissible for States to require of local eligible recipients assurances similar to those States must provide in section 204, regarding the procedures to be used in assuring increased access to quality vocational programs by the disadvantaged and handicapped, and the use of individual planning in such programs where necessary?

Mr. STAFFORD. Let me say this. States are neither precluded from making necessary requirements, nor are they encouraged to establish new requirements in the local application; our silence is simply that—a neutrality which seeks to assure that the Federal Government does not intrude upon the State-local relationship.

Mr. QUAYLE. I thank the Senator.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, last February I introduced the first component of my proposed Volunteers for America Program, the Student Aid Volunteer Earnings Program [SAVE]. This program would create a community service program for young people. Participants would receive the minimum wage, but would contribute one-fourth of their earnings to a special educational trust fund that will be double-matched by the Federal Government and can be used for vocational or college education after they leave the program.

The other two components of the Volunteers for America Program are the citizen-soldier GI bill, which passed the Senate last June, and the American Conservation Corps Act of 1984, which I introduced earlier this month. The key to each of these three programs is that young people devote a period of time to serving their country—in the military, in community service, or in conservation and rehabilitation of public lands—in return for a modest wage and a substantial grant toward vocational or college education when they complete their service. Simply put, young people are given an opportunity to invest in their country, and we, in turn, will invest in their future by contributing to their higher education.

The SAVE legislation is currently before the Education, Arts, and Humanities Subcommittee. While I was prepared to offer this bill as an amendment to the vocational education reauthorization, I understand that a substantial compromise has been reached to ensure passage of this important legislation. Therefore, I have agreed to withhold my amendment and am pleased to receive the assurance of the subcommittee chairman and ranking minority member that the SAVE Program will receive full and complete hearings next year.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. President, the Senator from Ohio has a very interesting proposal. It is something that I believe should be considered during reauthorization of the Higher Education Act in 1985, and I would be very glad to accommodate the Senator and schedule a hearing on his legislation as part of that process.

Mr. PELL. I agree with the chairman of the Education Subcommittee and look forward to the hearing on this matter.

Mrs. HAWKINS. Mr. President, I wonder if the distinguished floor manager of the bill would yield so that I might address a question the chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee.

Mr. STAFFORD. I will yield for that purpose.

Mrs. HAWKINS. I thank the Senator. Mr. President, I would like to inquire of the Senator from Utah, the original author of the program for single parents and homemakers in title II of S. 2341 if he agrees with this Senator on the committee's purpose in creating a special program to serve women. In committee we worked to ensure that women most in need of vocational skills training would benefit from both improved quality and greater access to the vocational education system. In fact, the committee report makes it clear that in the committee's view, "the Federal vocational law must unmistakably point to the need to open up vocational education to groups that are traditionally underserved and to provide resources which would result in the improvement and modernization of vocational education programs." Further, the report makes clear that women, specifically single parents and homemakers, are one such group. With regard to the program for single parents and homemakers our intent is to provide support to strengthen services to populations of women and girls whose need for occupational training is well documented. Our definition of single parents and homemakers includes those most affected by the feminization of poverty in the United States, including more than 4 million displaced homemakers who are struggling to maintain their families.

I believe the committee's purpose here is clear. We hope to ensure that States will utilize program funds to provide child care and transportation, and other supportive services, to ensure women served by this program can fully participate in vocational education and become well prepared for the job market. I believe we agree that these services are necessary for women who are the sole providers for their families to take full advantage of the new instructional programs established under S. 2314. The committee report points out that States are encouraged to provide these support services.

Mr. HATCH. I fully agree with the Senator from Florida on that point. Without some assistance enabling students to actually attend classes or receive instruction the existence of new or improved courses will be of little use to many of the women the courses are intended to help. The committee report does make clear that the States are encouraged to provide supportive services such as child care and transportation. I would stress, however, and I believe the Senator from Florida agrees with me on this point, that the purpose of establishing the program is to prepare women and girls—indeed all single parents and homemakers most in need of assistance—for work that will sustain their families. These programs should be designed to provide women with skills that improve their ability to compete in the labor market and increase their opportunities for long-term, financially rewarding careers. Further, they should provide skills that enable single parents and homemakers to secure jobs that are higher paying than many of the traditional positions now filled by women. After all, the bottom line here is to provide women who are single parents, or who have worked most of their lives in the home and are now forced to enter the labor market, with the skills necessary to not only survive but thrive in our society.

Mrs. HAWKINS. I thank the Senator for clarifying that point. I would only add that I fully agree with him.

Our most important purpose in creating this program is to provide the millions of women who have given so much, and now by necessity must support their families or themselves, with the opportunity to pursue careers in the mainstream of American economic life. I yield back the floor to the manager of the bill.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, would the distinguished floor manager of the bill yield so that I too might ask a question of the Senator from Utah?

Mr. STAFFORD. I will yield for that purpose.

Mr. KENNEDY. I would like to associate myself with the previous remarks of both the chairman of the Labor and Human Resources Committee and the Senator from Florida and I would like to raise one further point. I believe the Senator from Florida has cited the committee's report on the S. 2341 and pointed out that the report makes clear that one of the bill's major purposes is to meet the needs of a number of population groups that we feel have been historically underserved by vocational education. I hope the chairman would agree that the committee's approach has been to lead all the students identified in the bill to economic self-sufficiency. It is clear that the committee bill intends each of the groups identified should be considered in need of Federal assistance in overcoming obstacles to full participation in society. I do not believe the committee intends to favor any one group over another or to imply that, other than perhaps the physically handicapped, any one group faces greater obstacles to employment than the other special populations in the bill. In the same way, each of the groups identified in the bill deserves the same attention from vocational educators.

Mr. HATCH. I very much agree with the Senator from Massachusetts on that point. I believe the committee's purpose is to provide Federal assistance to those most in need of a boost to full and productive participation in American economic life. Further, I believe the committee intends that as we implement this new approach to Federal involvement in vocational education, we should use the Vocational Education Data System to collect information that confirms women and girls are being served in all title II programs. Although the committee clearly established specific definitions for populations eligible for Federal assistance, commonsense makes it clear the programs for the disadvantaged, handicapped, and incarcerated individuals will serve both men and women. Simply because we have created a program for single parents and homemakers does not absolve the States of responsibility to serve women under the other title II programs. This general principle also applies to the adult program in title III.

Mr. KENNEDY. I thank the Senator.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, while we are considering the reauthorization of the Vocational Education Act, I think it is appropriate to review for a moment the accomplishments of the National Center for Research in Vocational Education at Ohio State University. The National Center, of course, has been funded for many years by a competitive grant under the Vocational Education Act. I am proud that this fine Ohio institution has not only successfully competed for the award, but has met with equal success in carrying out its mission. The training, policy development activties, and leadership provided by the staff of the National Center has consistently been of extremely high caliber.

Mr. President, I ask for unanimous consent that the following overview of the activities of the National Center for Research in Vocational Education be printed in the RECORD for the future reference of my colleagues in the Senate.

There being no objection, the overview was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE NATIONAL CENTER FOR RESEARCH IN VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

NATIONAL CENTER PROGRAM

Established in 1965, the National Center for Research in Vocational Education is an administrative unit functioning under the Office of the Provost. Since its inception, it has completed or has underway research, development, training, and information service contracts and grants. While major support is from the Vocational Education Act, it enjoys diverse support from several federal agencies, state governments, and private sources. One hundred and twenty-seven projects are underway or have been completed in 1984. The National Center's 252 employees include 116 professional staff members. The National Center maintains a multi-disciplinary staff composition, reflecting the diversity of its programmatic R&D work. Of the 116 professionals, 25 hold degrees in vocational education; 44, degrees in other educational fields; and 47, degrees in other related disciplines. The mission of the Center is to improve the ability of diverse agencies, institutions, and organizations, to solve educational problems relating to individual career planning, preparation, and progression. The Center fulfills its mission by:

Generating knowledge through research. The Center has institutional support from the National Institute of Education to conduct inquiry on youth employment and the American employability systems.

Developing educational programs and products. Performance-Based Teacher Education is a Center product currently being used in 32 countries, every Canadian province, all the states and five territories of the United States.

Evaluating individual program needs and outcomes. The Center is responsible for improving the quality of evaluation methodology and practice.

Providing information for national planning and policy. The Center provides information for policy makers and administrators at all levels, useful in shaping policies and legislation.

Installing educational programs and products. The Center operates the national dissemination and utilization system for vocational education. Since 1978, over 15,513 persons have participated in 247 field activities to introduce materials and train disseminators and product users.

Operating information systems and services. The Center operates the national information system for vocational, technical, adult and career education. Over the last five years, over 73,825 information requests were received and processed.

Conducting leadership development and training programs. The Center provides leadership development activities through an Advanced Study Center and the National Academy.

Since 1978, the National Academy has conducted 562 conferences in 36 states for 23,431 individuals. Additionally, 202 persons from 44 states, the District of Columbia, Trust Territories and 18 foreign countries have participated in the National Academy In-Residence Program. Twenty-eight Advanced Study Center Fellows (Postdoctoral) from 19 states and one foreign country, representing 14 disciplines and a variety of institutional settings, have conducted research studies and pursued their professional development while in their year's in-residence. This is in addition to 49 professionals who have completed sabbatical leave experiences at the National Center.

BENEFITS FROM THE NATIONAL CENTER FOR RESEARCH IN VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

According to the U.S. Education Department, "while the number of NCRVE products and clients makes any comprehensive measure of its benefits difficult, it has been shown that its products are not only widely used by every State in this Nation, but are utilized by many other Nations, as well. NCRVE studies have consistently anticipated nationwide trends. For example, the Center was conducting work on equity and the handicapped, on economic development and workforce, training, on entrepreneurship education, and on the educational implications of high technology well before these concerns became national priorities. The Center's "need-sensing" mechanisms, as well as its management and quality-control systems, have insured products that are widely sought. Its Clearinghouse, electronic newsletter, users; and, its conferences and training for the 57 State Directors, and the six Curriculum Coordination Center Directors, among others, have substantially expanded and enhanced the national network for program improvement in vocational education."

The U.S. Department of Education in 1983 funded the National Academy of Sciences to complete a study of vocational education which resulted in the report Education for Tomorrow's Jobs. The Report contains sixteen recommendations relating to program improvement—fifteen of which are areas that the National Center has completed research and development and/or is currently conducting activities.

IMPACT OF NATIONAL CENTER

The National Center serves as the hub of various research, dissemination, and improvement networks. It links to the state research coordination units, the regional curriculum centers, to the educational R&D centers and regional laboratories as well as training components in the private sector. It is field-based in many of its activities, and, since 1978, has operated 1,480 field sites in all the states and the District of Columbia with over 55,000 participants. Over 421 publications have been released in the last six years on a cost-recovery basis (excluding journal articles) and staff have made over 2,760 contributions to professional societies, national associations, and the field during and recognitions. Several examples of specific areas of impact can be cited:

COMPREHENSIVE PLANNING

Developed and distributed more than 5,000 copies of six publications describing issues and procedures for planning vocational education programs using information collected for improving the planning process in several states. Developed and published a management information system for vocational education which has been distributed nationwide.

EQUITY AND ACCESS

The publication Vocational Education Sex Equity Strategies has been adopted by state equity coordinators as their primary guide or reference for performing their roles. Over 23,000 publications relating to equity and access have been distributed and a formal network established for the purpose of keeping coordinators abreast of new materials development and to prepare new coordinators.

HANDICAPPED ACCESS

A range of materials and publications have been produced to improve access of handicapped students to secondary/postsecondary vocational education programs including a guide for the development of individual education programs, specific program guides, transition from school to work models, training programs for parent volunteers, an administrator guide and performance-based teacher education modules for preparation and inservice of vocational education personnel who will have responsibility for handicapped students.

BASIC SKILLS

Completed research and distributed publications/materials that describe the (1) basic skills proficiencies of vocational students, (2) skills needed by vocational teachers to integrate basic skills instruction into their regular occupation curriculum, and (3) the impact of alternative learning environments (i.e., classroom, laboratory, work site) on the acquisition and retention of basic skills.

DISPLACED WORKERS

Increased the understanding of the cause and effect of worker displacement, the unique characteristics of displaced individuals, and how both the individual, education and employer can better cope with displacement through community partnerships. Six major publications have been produced and distributed, four national conferences conducted and a major policy forum sponsored in 1983 on the topic involving national and federal leaders across disciplines and departments of government.

CAREER GUIDANCE

Developed the only two comprehensive systems/models for Career Guidance (Rural & Urban), which have been used in over 25 states. Over 4,000 educators have been trained and career guidance teams have been formed in over 100 communities. Over 5,000 products have been distributed. In addition, the area of counselor training has been influenced through the development and testing of the only Comprehensive System of Counselor Competency Based Training. Over 1,500 persons have been trained to use the materials in 49 states, two territories and 87 local communities.

TEACHER EFFECTIVENESS

With more than 130 individualized, competency based modules developed, over 100,000 teachers have been trained with the 600,000 Performance Based Teacher Education modules distributed to over 500 colleges and universities, 700 postsecondary and secondary schools, and over 200 businesses and industries nationwide. The impact of the use of these materials can be measured in terms of the improved caliber of vocational teachers in the areas of planning, reinforcing student skills, individualizing instruction, evaluating student performance, serving the needs of special/exceptional students, and contributing to program improvement and instructional excellence.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION ADMINISTRATOR PREPARATION

Established a consortium of eleven states and developed 27 performance based administrator education modules, of which over 8,000 complete sets have been distributed. Over 30 universities have established preservice and in-service training programs utilizing these materials.

LINKAGES WITH BUSINESS, INDUSTRY AND LABOR

Developed and distributed over 11,000 copies of 21 handbooks and publications for vocational teacher educators, staff development personnel, and administrators to help them involve business, industry, and labor in planning, developing, updating, and evaluating personnel and programs. More than 2,000 individuals have been trained in the use of these materials.

ENTREPRENEURSHIP TRAINING PROGRAMS

Since 1978, a comprehensive set of entrepreneurship curriculum guides have been developed and over 1,500 copies distributed nationwide to assist in the infusion of entrepreneurship education in vocational education at all levels. The National Center is working with states on entrepreneurship education and is operating an electronic mail system to encourage communication among practitioners planning and operating such programs.

APPRENTICESHIP TRAINING

Involved in research, development and instructor training for over eleven years with five joint labor-management Training Funds in five international industries. Over 2,200 instructors and administrators of apprenticeship programs in all 50 states and two Canadian provinces have been trained. These trained personnel work directly with approximately 14,000 apprentices.

POSTSECONDARY VOCATIONAL EDUCATION OFFERINGS

Established a national consortium of postsecondary institutions to improve curriculum development, teacher training and economic development on over 72 campuses in 22 states, enrolling over 500,000 students. Training has been provided to over 1,600 postsecondary teachers/administrators, and 60 private industry leaders through over 40 conferences and workshops.

HIGH TECHNOLOGY

Improved the understanding, potential impact and role of public education related to the growth of high technology in the workplace through national conferences that have attracted over 1,500 post-secondary leaders and hundreds of employers. Six major publications have been developed on such issues as robotics and CAD/CAM of which over 7,000 copies have been distributed. Curriculum guides on how a Community College can increase training and retraining options have been developed and research on how the educational community can better utilize high technology for instructional purposes has been completed.

NATIONAL OCCUPATIONAL INFORMATION COORDINATING COMMITTEE/STATE OCCUPATIONAL INFORMATION COORDINATING COMMITTEES

Provided major assistance in the development of a Standard Occupational Classification (SOC) now being used by all vocational educators, career information specialists, and major users of federal and state career and labor market information. This has been accomplished by conducting major conferences and developing counselor training materials currently used by over 8,000 individuals, which have in effect demonstrated ways in which Labor Market information can be used to improve academic achievement in over 1,000 classrooms.

LEADERSHIP DEVELOPMENT

Since 1978, the National Center has facilitated leadership development activities for 23,431 participants from 36 states. Individualized professional development programs have been developed through the Inresidence Program for 202 participants from 44 states.

DISSEMINATION AND UTILIZATION OF RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT OUTCOMES

Leadership has been provided through the development and operation of a nationwide dissemination network that has facilitated over 55,000 contacts with educators in every state, distributed over 35,500 copies of 44 exemplary products, brochures and research knowledge flyers, and promoted 175 seminars involving 12,500 educators.

PLANNING AND POLICY DEVELOPMENT

Established the most comprehensive longitudinal data base in the United States for examining the effects of vocational education by combining high school transcripts with interview data obtained yearly from approximately 13,000 individuals between the ages of 14-21 at the beginning of the study in 1979.

CLEARINGHOUSE FOR EDUCATIONAL INNOVATIONS

Through its four national clearinghouse operations, the National Center is assisting over 10,000 vocational education teachers and administrators annually at the local, state, and federal levels by providing information that reduces duplication and increases coordination in program improvement activities, by disseminating information about projects, products, and organizations that is comprehensive and targeted to user needs, and by increasing the information access and utilization capacity of state and local program improvement agencies.

EVALUATION

Developed and distributed nearly 10,000 copies of a series of 15 evaluation handbooks to provide practical advice and expanded evaluative techniques to personnel in state and local education agencies to make vocational education more responsive to client needs and to provide a solid basis for program improvement. More than 400 key individuals have been trained to use these handbooks. According to The Vocational Education Study: Final Report (September, 1981) by Dr. Henry David, evaluation activities have been significantly stimulated at state and local levels through these efforts.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, as one of the original sponsors of S. 2341, I am extremely pleased to be able to speak on behalf of its passage today. This is truly landmark legislation. If enacted, it will dramatically reshape the Federal role in vocational education, and more precisely target our limited Federal resources to areas of greatest need. In so doing, it will also enable us to maximize the use of the Federal dollar.

At the outset, I want to emphasize the strong bipartisan support that exists for this legislation. I especially want to acknowledge the strong leadership and fine work of both the chairman of the Labor and Human Resources Committee [Mr. HATCH] and the chairman of the Education Subcommittee [Mr. STAFFORD] and their respective staff. Without their tireless efforts and good spirits, we would not have this important legislation before us today.

To my mind, the most crucial and far-reaching provisions of S. 2341 are to be found in titles II and III of the bill. It is upon those two titles that I would like to focus my remarks.

Title II, programs for vocational education opportunities, provides that 50 percent of the program funds flowing to the States shall be used to assist certain special populations that need greater vocational education and training opportunities.

The set-aside for disadvantaged individuals, for example, targets assistance to students from economically disadvantaged families, school dropouts and potential dropouts, migrants, and persons of limited English-speaking ability. Individuals from each of these groups have disadvantages that often stand in the way of their full and meaningful participation in the American educational system. Very simply, they need special help and special attention if they are to reap the benefits of vocational education and training that will enable them to obtain gainful employment in our economy. These funds constitute 50 percent of the title II allocation, and will, I hope, become an integral part of providing vocational education opportunities for minority youth in our Nation's major cities, where the unemployment rate among such youth continues at the extremely alarming rate of at least 50 percent.

The set-aside for the handicapped, which accounts for another 25 percent of the title II funds, provides Federal financial assistance to address the vocational education and training needs of handicapped individuals. This, too, is a critically important provision if we are ever to enable the handicapped to break the barrier of prejudice that too often prevents them from securing more than the most menial kind of employment. We have worked closely with the chairman of the Subcommittee on the Handicapped [Mr. WEICKER] and his staff to ensure that vocational education opportunities will become more readily available to handicapped individuals, and we are pleased with the provisions of this set-aside in recognizing the need for a greater Federal emphasis to assist the handicapped in job training and preparation.

The set-aside for women's programs, which amounts to 23 percent of the title II funds, provides assistance to ensure sex equity in vocational education programs and to implement special vocational education and training programs for single parents and homemakers who are seeking to enter or reenter the workforce. Of particular importance in this area is preservation of the provisions for a sex equity coordinator in each State, and the stipulation that transportation and child care services can be provided when they are necessary to enable a single parent or homemaker to participate in a vocational education program.

There is, finally, a 2-percent set-aside for vocational education programs for the incarcerated. This provides a small amount of seed money to improve vocational education training for offenders who are in correctional institutions throughout our Nation. The only way we can begin to break the cycle of recidivism in our society is to provide the incarcerated with training in prison that will lead to a job upon release. Failure to provide meaningful job training simply continues the revolving door of in, out, and back into prison that is so prevalent in our society today.

In addition, there is a provision applying to all of title II that requires, wherever practicable, formal classroom instruction to be supplemented by an on-the-job training experience to give the student an understanding of what a job involves, as well as the demands placed upon the individual who holds a job. I have long maintained that a work-related experience should be an integral part of formal vocational education and training. Accordingly, I am encouraged that the version of S. 2341 approved by the full Committee on Labor and Human Resources places a strong emphasis upon a work-related experience, such as cooperative education, work study, or apprenticeships.

Title III, Vocational Education Program Improvement, Innovation, and Expansion, provides that the remaining 50 percent of the funds flowing to the States shall be used to make sure that vocational education and training programs be as up-to-date as possible. It is our intention that they should reflect job requirements, and should utilize the latest modes of instruction. This means modern machinery and tools, and the use of the latest technological advances. It also means courses in new and emerging technologies wherever and whenever necessary.

Program improvement, innovation and expansion are major priorities in S. 2341. Our hope is that the funds provided under title III will spur States and localities to make sure that our vocational education programs are always current in supplying students with the training that can actually lead to a related job in our society.

Title III also recognizes that the need for program improvement, innovation and expansion is especially acute in the economically depressed urban and rural areas of America. It stresses that special attention should be given to these areas in the distribution of title III funds. Our hope is that this will result in a substantial increase in vocational education facilities and services in those areas, and an end to the deplorable situation in which our cities, containing 20 percent of our Nation's population, hold only 7 percent of existing vocational education facilities.

Title III also contains a set-aside of 30 percent to provide, improve and expand adult vocational education and training programs. Our intention is that these services should be available to a series of adults: The unemployed and economically dislocated worker, the displaced homemaker, the older American worker, the underemployed worker, and the person who simply desires a change of occupations.

Well over a year ago I introduced S. 554, the Older Americans Vocational Education Act. That legislation directly addressed the vocational training and retraining needs of the adult worker. I am very pleased that major elements of that legislation have been incorporated in S. 2341.

The older worker faces barriers to employment and reemployment that are not faced by the younger worker. Obsolete job skills, an actual absence of skills, lack of job search skills, and employer discrimination in hiring older persons, particularly when new or additional training is necessary, all operate to the disadvantage of the older worker. I am especially heartened, therefore, that the provisions for this set-aside include a special emphasis upon developing and implementing training and retraining programs that address the plight of the older worker.

Mr. President, this is, in my opinion, an excellent piece of legislation. It seeks to bring vocational education and training services to bear more directly upon a series of critically important concerns. These include the needs of special groups or populations who have traditionally been underserved by vocational education, of areas that lack sufficient vocational education facilities, of programs that need improvement, of new technologies for which vocational education services should be provided, and of an economy where there should be a closer link between training and the workplace.

As I said at the outset, S. 2341 is truly landmark legislation that will, in my opinion, result in a better use of Federal financial resources and better vocational education and training services. It is a bill that has my wholehearted and enthusiastic support, and I urge my colleagues to support its enactment.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. President, I am pleased to be a cosponsor of S. 2341, the Vocational Education Act of 1984.

After more than 40 years combined service in the House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate, I am leaving soon—not to retire, but to go on to other kinds of challenges to which I can then devote more time and energy than I've been able to give in the past.

One of the goals I set for myself when I was first elected to the House in 1932, was to find a way to serve on committees and subcommittees where education issues were addressed and legislative remedies were enacted into law to improve and enhance educational opportunity for the young people of this country.

Coming, as I did, from West Virginia in 1933, during the Nation's agrarian stage of development, vocational education with its intense focus on agricultural technology, as well as its growing emphasis then on other occupational skills training program to help generate jobs to put this country back to work and keep it there—was of vital importance to my rural State. At that time in our Nation's history, we were just emerging from the devastating effects of the Great Depression, and the Congress, under the able leadership of President Franklin Roosevelt, was trying to do everything possible to further the impact of the vocational education laws to improve, enlarge and enhance those porgrams to benefit an economically crippled nation.

I have been privileged to serve in Congress during three major stages in our country's development—the agricultural, the industrial, and now the emerging information, or high technology, stage. The bill that is before us today addresses the needs of vocational education if it is to survive and serve the demands of a high-technology society.

The last few years have been rather stormy for Federal education policy, with budget cuts and major policy shifts that have altered the traditional framework of all education programs, including vocational education.

Mr. President, no matter how dramatic the changes in vocational education programs have been over the past 40 years, the bill that is now before the Senate speaks eloquently. It says that without continued Federal investment, directed toward improving vocational education and keeping it current, the Nation's vocational education programs will not be of sufficient quality to affect or address our national priorities.

This measure represents dramatic changes from what I have come to consider the more traditional approaches to providing quality vocational education programs. It does, as it has historically done, assure equality of opportunity, program reform to assure up-to-date training for youths and adults, and it continues to fund the ever-important consumer and homemaking education projects in the United States.

We are intensely aware that in 1981, this administration made vocational education an immediate target for change. It was proposed, in the President's first budget, that we cause an immediate 20-percent reduction in funding for vocational education, with a total phaseout of all Federal funding for vocational education by 1985. Or, the administration said, perhaps we ought to fold vocational education into a block grant along with 32 other categorical education programs.

The Congress, in its infinite wisdom, rejected the administration's proposals. Vocational education program funding was reduced in the overall reconciliation bill in 1981—but not as drastically as the new administration had hoped.

For 40 years, I have observed that the Federal Government has never hesitated to step in and fill voids in education that States were either unable or unwilling to fill. The Smith-Hughes Act of 1917 was one such action at the Federal level, and it was just the beginning. Over the years, the State and local governments have made resources available to vocational education's demands to an unprecedented degree. Federal dollars now available in 1984 represent no more than 10 percent of the total amount spent on vocational education each year.

It was the original Federal investment that was the incentive for States to provide 90 percent of vocational education's needs, and a continuing Federal investment must be made to assure the State and local commitments to those programs.

Other changes were proposed in 1981 that threatened Federal support for programs that were work related, and which had previously provided incentives to the States to bring them into being and to keep them current.

In 1981, this administration proposed to do away with CETA [Comprehensive Employment and Training Act] which supported vocational education. It did so, with the help of a majority of Congress, and in its place we have the Job Training and Partnership Act, but at much lower appropriations levels.

Such actions, begun with the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1981, resulted in drastic reductions in vocational education appropriations—reducing overall funding levels from $745 million in 1980 to $656 million in 1982.

Reductions in other Federal programs that had a direct impact on vocational education were also begun in 1981. The Education for All Handicapped Act specifically encourages and authorizes the expenditure of funds for vocational education to provide handicapped children with occupational training.

When you consider funding cuts that affect vocational education, you have to include reductions in handicapped education programs too.

The Bilingual Education Act often supports vocational education programs for limited English-speaking children. A substantial portion of Federal student aid funds goes to students in vocational education programs—Pell grants, guaranteed loans and direct student loans are used for this purpose.

Any cuts in impact aid or emergency school assistance impact on the entire school system—including vocational education.

So when you consider Federal policy changes that affect vocational education, they are by no means limited to the Departments of Education and Labor.

Vocational education is an instrument of economic development and, consequently, Federal programs that once supported economic development, such as the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965, the Appalachian Regional Development Act of 1965, and the Tennessee Valley Authority Act of 1933, all focus on the need for vocational education to provide occupational training for local growth opportunities.

The Economic Development and Appalachian Regional Development Acts expenditures are rarely included in government-generated educational statistics, yet they have both been major sources of revenue for the expansion and improvement of the vocational education system in the United States. For example, more than $360 million of ARC development funds have been spent on vocational education facilities, equipment, and demonstration projects since the act was implemented in 1965. The annual investment, however, has dropped from a high of $41 million in 1972 to $18 million in 1979, to less than $6 million in 1982.

The Economic Development Act [EDA] spent less than $4 million in the vocational education schools of this country in 1981, and similarly the Tennessee Valley Authority [TVA] was moving with greater emphasis on skills training until budget cuts took their toll—spent $2.4 million on skills training and vocational education demonstration programs in 1983, but will spend less than $400,000 in 1984.

Over the past 6 or 7 years, under current law, we have heard from our States that the act was overprescriptive, too restrictive, the paper work was burdensome, and was not cost-effective.

We have heard from many witnesses who testified on the reauthorization bill that vocational education as currently structured did not serve several segments of our population—namely, the economically disadvantaged and the handicapped—adequately.

States asked for more discretion in deciding for themselves how best to spend vocational education dollars—since 90 percent of those dollars belonged to the States in the first place. This, in my view, was a reasonable request for more flexibility at the State decisionmaking level—for who knows better than the State and local people what their vocational education needs are, and how best to address them?

In S. 2341 which we will vote on today, there is what we call some good news and some bad news. Obviously we could not send Federal dollars down to the States with absolutely no strings attached. We were in need of a more comprehensive or at least coherent Federal policy for continuing Federal vocational education investments in the States.

This bill is at least a beginning toward a more articulated policy, necessary in a time of limited resources and high Federal deficits.

We have tried to give States more flexibility—more of the decisionmaking authority on how funds will be spent, while still targeting such spending on what we perceive to be programs of national priority and significance.

As we did in 1917, with the Smith-Hughes Act the Federal Government is stepping in to fill a void—or a gap not being filled by States—namely, we instruct the States to better serve the handicapped, the economically disadvantaged, the incarcerated, adults, and displaced homemakers, with special emphasis on equity for women. We tried to do this in a manner that would give more flexibility to States in making their own decisions on spending. In the opinion of some State officials, there is far too much targeting through set-asides, and not enough spending flexibility in the Senate bill. In the opinion of others, there is sufficient flexibility. It may be, that through amendments to the act today, we may alleviate the concerns of those States that see a need for more spending flexibility. I will be attentive to such amendments as they are brought before us.

It is apparent to all of us here, as well as back in our home States, that our changing, turbulent times call for dramatic changes in what were once considered the traditional roles for vocational education to play in preparing young and old alike to survive and prosper in the workplaces of this Nation. Although the new approaches contained in S. 2341 may not turn out to be the final answer, they are a beginning much like the Smith-Hughes Act of nearly 67 years ago. If parts of the whole do not work to benefit the needs of vocational education nationwide, the Congress will act to amend them so that they do. I have every confidence that this is true—and that the Federal concern over vocational education is alive and well in Washington, DC, and that the Federal investment in the future of these programs will continue to grow.

We are only 16 years away from the year 2000—and we must prepare for it so that we always assure that the support is there for the economic stability of individuals, States, and the Nation.

Mr. President, I commend the very able chairman of our Subcommittee on Education, Senator STAFFORD, and our ranking minority member Senator PELL, for their efforts spanning the past 2 years, to bring this bill reauthorizing the Vocational Education Act to completion today. Its passage today is crucial if we are to have sufficient time to convene a conference with the House and send a bill to the President for his signature before the act expires at the end of this fiscal year. I would be remiss if I did not also thank Senator ORRIN HATCH, the chairman of our Committee on Labor and Human Resources for guiding S. 2341 through the committee with a favorable report on the bill that enables us to consider it for passage today.

Mr. President, I sincerely hope that my colleagues will join me in support of S. 2341, and that the bill will pass.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I rise in support of S. 2341, the Vocational Education Act of 1984.

First of all, I would like to commend the members of the Committee on Labor and Human Resources for their work to produce this legislation. In particular, I would like to commend Senators HATCH, STAFFORD, and PELL as well as their staffs, for their energy and persistence in seeing this legislation through the legislative process. I would also like to commend the work of Senators CHILES, QUAYLE, DOMENICI, DODD, and WEICKER for their efforts and contributions to this legislation.

When we introduced this bill back in February of this year, Senator PELL outlined the objectives we hoped to achieve:

First, the targeting of funds to provide vocational opportunities for particular special populations in our society, particularly the economically disadvantaged, the handicapped, persons in correctional institutions and women; second, program improvement to address problems of innovation and emerging technologies; third, emphasis on directing aid to economically depressed urban and rural areas of America; fourth, adult training and retraining; and fifth, an emphasis on work related experience and on-the-job training.

This legislation goes a long way to accomplishing these goals. Title II of the legislation provides programs for vocational education opportunities for historically underserved groups, including the handicapped, disadvantaged, the incarcerated, and individuals who are single parents or homemakers. Additionally, under title II, each State is required to provide for a sex equity coordinator whose responsibility it will be to review vocational education programs to insure equal access for and nonbias against women.

Title III of the bill provides for program improvement, innovation, and expansion. To address the specific needs of economically depressed urban and rural areas, the States are required to give special emphasis to these areas in the distribution of funds. The States are also called upon to give special emphasis to programs devoted to high technology occupations. Title III also provides 30 percent of the funds be provided for the training and retraining of adults. These programs are essential to provide training and retraining for dislocated workers, as well as for displaced homemakers, the underemployed, workers desiring a change of occupation and older workers.

Among the national programs, title IV, essential support for research in vocational education is continued. A program for cooperative employer education programs is authorized which we hope will stimulate and promote effective cooperation with the private sector. Bilingual vocational training is also continued as a national program, as is the vocational education data system [VEDS].

Also included in this legislation is the reauthorization of the Women's Educational Equity Act and authorization of funds to support the important National Summit Conference on Education.

While I believe this legislation goes a long way to achieving the goals of equity and excellence in vocational education, I would like to make a few comments on the direction of this legislation.

First, one of the pillars of this legislation is the recognition of the need to target Federal funds to those persons of greatest need who have been historically underserved in vocational education programs. Since it has been demonstrated that less than 10 percent of the total funds that support vocational education in this country are Federal funds, we should target Federal support to those segments of the population who have the greatest need. These groups have been identified in the legislation. I am gratified that this legislation continues the commitment to serve the most underserved and it is my desire, as we look to a conference with the House, that we hold firm to this commitment.

Second, working through our stafffs, I, along with Senators HATCH, STAFFORD, QUAYLE, and HAWKINS have worked out a set of amendments to promote greater coordination with the Job Training Partnership Act [JTPA]. These amendments, offered by Senator STAFFORD as part of the committee amendments, require an assessment of vocational education and the JTPA program coordination, give the State board authority for implementing vocational education and JTPA coordination provisions at the State level, require that the State plan be submitted to the State job training coordination council for review and comment, and require notification of payments distribution.

These amendments are intended to encourage mutual cooperation among vocational educators and the business community. The need for communication and cooperation between these two entities cannot be overstated. These amendments merely facilitate what is a natural relationship.

Third, I support the amendment to provide that the vocational education data system [VEDS] be collected within the National Center for Education Statistics [NCES]. This amendment comports with current practice that the Secretary collect VEDS data through the NCES. It expresses, however, our desire that such data be collected within this agency and not be transferred to another agency or division within the Department of Education.

On the subject of VEDS, I have learned that the Department of Education has suspended collection of certain VEDS data with respect to handicapped, limited English proficient and disadvantaged populations. The collection of such data has been suspended since 1981.

I am very concerned that such data is no longer being collected in that such data is critical to measuring the success or failure of our programs, especially in light of the emphasis of this legislation on targeting to these very segments of our population.

The suspension of such data, although not directly contravening the letter of the present law which requires that data be collected on "vocational students—including information on their race and sex)," surely violates the spirit of the law which would clearly include the handicapped and disadvantaged within the definition of "students." I would like to hear from the Department on this matter and, if necessary, would like to pursue further Senate action.

Fourth, I was the sponsor of the amendment at the committee level to reauthorize the bilingual Vocational Training Program. This program, in existence since 1974, continues to be among the most successful of the vocational education programs with placement and completion rates as high as 90 percent.

In reauthorizing the Bilingual Vocational Training Program, we made substantial changes in the text of the legislation. We did not, however, change the substance of the basic program which includes: First, bilingual vocational training, second, bilingual vocational instructor training, third, authorization for the development of instructional materials, methods and techniques, and fourth, programs to familiarize appropriate State agencies and other institutions with the other successful programs. Research in bilingual vocational training is continued in this legislation under the research section of the act.

Fifth, with respect to the essential planning process for vocational education programs, I believe we have taken a step back from our current practice of planning. This legislation deletes any provision for local advisory council for vocational education. These councils have provided an important bridge for citizen input into the vocational education planning process. Furthermore, the important State advisory council on vocational education [SACVE] has been reduced in size to 11 members, which resulted in the exclusion of various experts in a wide range of fields and vocations. In committee, we sought and obtained legislative language that required the SACVE to seek the advice of experts knowledgeable of the special need of the targeted populations. I encourage the SACVE's to follow this course. In conference, I urge my colleagues to support the local advisory councils, which are included in the House version.

Sixth, I am concerned with the current provisions for State allocation of funds under this legislation. The criteria established for the distribution of funds provides, weighted on an equal basis:

(1) The relative number of economically disadvantaged individuals; (2) the relative number of disadvantaged and handicapped students served in vocational education in the previous year; and (3) increases in the numbers or percentages of handicapped and disadvantaged students proposed to be served, except that those recipients serving those populations equitably shall not be penalized.

This appears to me to be a difficult, if not impossible, set of criteria to impose on the States for such an important matter as distribution of funds. I urge the conferees, within the parameters of the conference process, to consider more feasible guidelines keeping in mind the goal of better targeting to the underserved populations.

Finally, I would like to make some general comments on the need for a greater emphasis on "quality" vocational education. Throughout the consideration of this legislation, we have heard from witnesses and legislative advocates about the need for a greater emphasis on quality in our vocational education programs. The word "quality," although possessing the most positive of connotations, is, in the final analysis, subject to anybody's interpretation. Like mom and apple pie, who in their right mind can oppose quality vocational education.

That notwithstanding, it has become clear that, at present, our vocational education programs are in need of a new vision and focus. Commenting on how vocational education and training can be responsive to change in the 1980's, Paul Barton, executive vice president of the National Institute for Work and Learning, commented:

> The education and training supply institutions are rooted in an environment that does not particularly encourage a vigorous adjustment to changing needs. It is necessary to change this whole environment. It is necessary to stop the retreat and create a larger awareness of the consequences of the declining effectiveness of labor market mechanisms, of crippling shortages of technicians and engineers, of declining ability to reverse slippages in math and science achievement in the schools, and of the many displaced workers without skills that the still-growing sectors of the economy need.

The answer, among many who agree with this view, has been the call for greater emphasis on quality vocational education. In general, this has been interpreted to mean an emphasis on the basics; that is, the basic skills of reading, writing, computation, and communication skills, an emphasis on basic analytical and problem solving, or higher order skills, and an opportunity for the student to learn about the greater aspects of the vocation, generally described as the "economic enterprise." Acquiring these skills will give the student an opportunity to enter the working world with a broader knowledge and a greater ability to adapt in an evolving technological ERA.

Senator CHILES was very instrumental in addressing some of these concerns in a set of quality amendments which require the assessment of—

> Quality of vocational education in terms of (1) the pertinence to the work place and to new and emerging technologies, (2) the responsiveness of programs to the current and projected occupational needs in the State, (3) the capacity of programs to facilitate entry into, and participation in, vocational education and to ease the school-to-work and secondary to postsecondary transition, and (4) the technological and educational quality of vocational curricula, equipment, and instructional materials to enable vocational students to meet the challenges of increased technological demands of the work place.

These amendments are an important step toward addressing the legitimate concerns for quality vocational education programs. I believe, however, that we need to further evaluate this issue and, if necessary, consider future amendments to integrate some of these concepts into the vocational education structure.

In the long run, however, the answer lies with the vocational education instructor in the classroom. It is his or her ability to integrate these concepts into the curriculum and adapt his or her instruction to the changing demands in the working world which will ultimately answer the call for quality vocational education.

Mr. President, I am gratified that we are reauthorizing the Women's Educational Equity Act [WEEA]. Under the provisions of this legislation, WEEA is reauthorized for 5 years at $6.2 million for 1985 and such sums for future years. This program has had solid bipartisan support since its inception in 1974. Since that time, it has been the vehicle to opening opportunities in math, science, technology, and nontraditional vocational careers to women. I wholeheartedly support the continuation of this program.

And, finally, Mr. President, I support the provision of this legislation which authorizes funding for the National Summit Conference on Education. This legislation authorizes to be appropriated $500,000 for conducting a National Summit Conference on Education. The purpose of this summit conference is to bring together a bipartisan, diverse working group of Americans to discuss how the Federal, State, and local governments can together implement recommendations to improve the quality of education in this country. This summit conference is the logical outgrowth of the national debate which has produced several major reports concerning education quality, such as the National Commission on Excellence in Education's "A Nation at Risk." The National Summit Conference on Education is scheduled to meet in January 1985.

Mr. QUAYLE. Mr. President, today I rise in support of S. 2341, the Vocational Educational Act of 1984, as reported by the Labor and Human Resources Committee. Before commenting on this landmark legislation, I would like to commend Senator STAFFORD, sponsor of the bill and chairman of the Education Subcommittee, for his leadership in shaping legislation that makes needed improvement in the Federal vocational education program. I also wish to commend the chief cosponsor of the bill and ranking minority member of the Education Subcommittee, Senator PELL, and the other cosponsors of S. 2341 which include Senator HATCH, Senator WEICKER, Senator KENNEDY, and Senator DODD. I congratulate the authors of this legislation because, with S. 2341, we are redefining the Federal role in vocational education by promoting national priorities while building on the strengths and accomplishments of the current vocational education system.

Historically, Federal support for vocational education has been a cornerstone upon which the existing vocational education system was built. First, the Morrill Act of 1862 established land-grant colleges, thereby recognizing vocational education as an essential component of our education and training system. In 1917, vocational education was greatly expanded and developed by the Smith-Hughes Act which increased the level of Federal and State funds available for vocational education. The Vocational Educational Act of 1965 restructured the vocational education system and established the goal of improving access for underserved populations.

Although all the goals set out in earlier legislation have not been fully achieved, today we have a mature vocational education system with strong State and local support. States and localities contribute about $7 billion annually for vocational education, which is about 90 percent of the total funds available. The Federal share, about 10 percent or $700 million, is dwarfed by comparison.

The fact that States and localities contribute 90 percent of the funding for vocational education demonstrates that this is a program that is needed and supported below the Federal level. Vocational education is an example of a Federal initiative which has proven to have far-reaching benefits for our Nation.

Against this background of strong Federal, State, and local support, we must consider another equally important factor during this reauthorization, and that is the precarious health of our economy. Funds appropriated for vocational education should not duplicate State and local efforts. There are too few Federal dollars to meet all our competing needs. Scare dollars must serve purposes which are otherwise unmet.

On one hand, we have a tradition of strong Federal support for vocational education while on the other hand, this is a State and local program. Therefore, our challenge is to maintain the Federal leadership role, while maximizing the impact of limited Federal funding, yet avoid unnecessary intrusion into State and local prerogatives.

Within this context, a consensus has developed that the Federal role is to assist States improve the quality of vocational education to make it more responsive to the needs of the labor market. A second responsibility of the Federal Government is to improve access to vocational education for the underserved. And these individuals should have access to programs which are of high quality and relevant to the needs of employers. A third objective is to meet the training and retraining needs of adult workers.

S. 2341 is a concrete plan for meeting these national priorities. I applaud S. 2341 and congratulate its authors. S. 2341 clarifies the basic purposes of Federal aid to vocational education—program improvement and ensuring access to underserved groups. I also wish to thank Senator STAFFORD for accommodating concerns I share regarding making programs more responsive to labor market needs by providing for program evaluation and creating a substantial role for the business sector.

I want to thank the chairman of the Education Subcommittee for including among amendments he is offering today some changes that accommodate concerns of mine. One of those changes will make community-based organizations eligible recipients of funds for providing vocational education services to single working parents and homemakers. Selection of community-based organizations must be done on a competitive basis. In awarding contracts to community-based organizations, States must take into account the demonstrated performance of community-based organizations in terms of cost, the quality of training, and the characteristics of participants.

I would especially like to speak in support of a second amendment that Senator STAFFORD will offer relating to the authorized uses of funds for disadvantaged individuals. This amendment permits funds for the disadvantaged provided under title II to be used for program improvement activities, in addition to activities and services to improve access of the disadvantaged to programs. This is a clarifying amendment to conform the bill with the report language. At this point, I would like to quote the report language:

> Funds for the disadvantaged provided under Title II may also be used for program improvement activities. In this regard, it is the Committee's intention that such activities be designed to insure that vocational education and training courses be as up-to-date as possible. They should reflect job requirements and should utilize the latest modes of instruction. This means modern machinery and tools and the use of the latest technological advances. It also means courses in new and emerging technologies wherever and whenever necessary.

I commend Senator STAFFORD on these changes and I appreciate his responsiveness to my concerns.

I also support amendments being offered today by Senators CHILES and DOMENICI. Both Senators are active supporters of vocational education. Although not on the Labor and Human Resources Committee, earlier this year they jointly introduced a bill containing their own proposal for reauthorizing the Vocational Education Act. Today they are offering amendments that will strengthen and clarify S. 2341. I understand that their amendments are acceptable to the authors of the bill.

I believe that the amendments being offered by Senator CHILES will increase the accountability of Federal funds available under this act. The Chiles amendments clarify the bill language so that it more explicitly links the State planning requirements with the Federal objectives. As ranking minority member of the Budget Committee, Senator CHILES is committed to seeing that legislation contains adequate assurances that Federal funds are effectively used to achieve national priorities.

I also want to commend Senator DOMENICI for offering amendments that clarify administrative requirements of S. 2341. The basic purpose of these amendments is to make it easier for localities to provide services to the handicapped and disadvantaged by streamlining recordkeeping at the local level. These amendments also encourage collaboration among local school districts in providing services to the handicapped and disadvantaged.

While I applaud these and many other aspects of the bill, which time and space prevent me from discussing at length, I must express a reservation about the excessive prescriptiveness of S. 2341. Not every State has the same demographic or economic problems, yet the bill prescribes the level of funds that each State must spend on each targeted population, including the handicapped, the disadvantaged, homemakers and single working parents, adults, and offenders.

I agree that the Federal Government should target funds to groups in greatest need. In my bill to reauthorize the Vocational Education Act, S. 2348, I included provisions to target funds on those most in need. So I do not disagree with the concept of targeting; however, I think we should recognize that States have differing needs. Federal targeting is not incompatible with State flexibility. I support giving States some flexibility among groups with serious labor market problems.

In committee, I spoke in support of freeing up some funds so that States could meet the unique needs of their underserved populations. Now, with the addition of the Chiles amendments, it becomes even more necessary to ensure that States have adequate flexibility to meet the needs that are identified in the State planning process. In this planning process, States are required to identify the needs of their special populations and of the labor market that relate to achieving the goals set out in S. 2341. Having required them to do that in the planning process, we must not then dictate entirely what level of resources will be available for uses specified in the act.

We have achieved some accommodation in permitting flexibility in the use of funds. I want to thank the manager of the bill, Senator STAFFORD, for working with me on that. I also understand that he will work with me in conference to achieve greater flexibility in the level of funds for the set-asides between the House and Senate bills.

Finally, I support an amendment being offered by Senator STAFFORD to change the regulations of the Department of Labor regarding fixed price contracts under the Job Training Partnership Act [JTPA]. Currently, JTPA regulations permit fixed-price contracts to be entirely charged to the 70 percent direct training costs—and none to administration. This gives localities a significant incentive to use fixed-price contracts and it is a very popular approach to providing training.

The problem is that the regulations for JTPA only recognize one performance standard for fixed-price contracts, which is placement. The regulations fail to evaluate fixed-price contracts on the basis of youth competencies. This creates a disincentive to operate the kind of youth programs which do not have placement as an objective; for example, literacy training and training leading to a graduate equivalency degree [GED]. The statute is clear that the achievement of youth competencies should also be recognized. The purpose of the amendment being offered by Senator STAFFORD is to conform the regulations with the requirements of JTPA.

I am a strong supporter of vocational education and I believe there is a role for the Federal Government to play in shaping vocational education to meet our national priorities. Vocational education fulfills a unique role in the education community by teaching the skills—both basic and job-related—which are realistic in the light of actual or anticipated opportunities for gainful employment. Vocational education has long been viewed as an alternative to the college-bound educational track. To be an acceptable alternative, it must offer opportunities of comparable quality and it must have a unique purpose. If not, we will have a discriminatory and redundant two-track system. I believe vocational education should prepare students for a lifetime of productive employment; they should not need a second chance under the Job Training Partnership Act.

I congratulate Senator STAFFORD, Senator PELL, and the other cosponsors of S. 2341, and their staffs for the hard work they did to bring this bill to the floor. I appreciate their efforts and look forward to working with them in conference.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, could we advance the bill to third reading?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment. If there be no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on agreeing to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended.

The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and the third reading of the bill.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 1105, which is H.R. 4164, the House companion bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 4164) to amend the Vocational Education Act of 1963 to strengthen and expand the economic base of the Nation, develop human resources, reduce structural unemployment, increase productivity, and strengthen the Nation's defense capabilities by assisting the States to expand, improve, and update high-quality programs of vocational-technical education, and for other purposes.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move to strike all after the enacting clause in H.R. 4164 and insert in lieu thereof the text of S. 2341 as reported and as amended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Alaska.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment of the amendment and the third reading of the bill.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall it pass?

The bill (H.R. 4164), as amended, was passed, as follows:

Resolved, That the bill from the House of Representatives (H.R. 4164) entitled "An Act to amend the Vocational Education Act of 1963 to strengthen and expand the economic base of the Nation, develop human resources, reduce structural unemployment, increase productivity, and strengthen the Nation's defense capabilities by assisting the States to expand, improve, and update high-quality programs of vocational-technical education, and for other purposes", do pass with the following amendment: Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That this Act may be cited as the "Carl Perkins Vocational Education Act of 1984".

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

SEC. 2. It is the purpose of this Act to—

(1) assist the States to expand, improve, modernize, and develop quality vocational education programs in order to meet the needs of the Nation's existing and future work force for marketable skills and to improve productivity and promote economic growth;

(2) assure that individuals who are inadequately served under vocational education programs are assured access to quality vocational education programs, especially individuals who are disadvantaged, who are handicapped, men and women who are entering nontraditional occupations, adults who are in need of training and retraining, individuals who are single parents or homemakers, individuals with limited English proficiency, and individuals who are incarcerated in correctional institutions;

(3) promote greater cooperation between public agencies and the private sector in preparing individuals for employment, in promoting the quality of vocational education in the States, and in making the vocational system more responsive to the labor market in the States; and

(4) authorize national programs designed to meet designated vocational education needs and to strengthen the vocational education research process.

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 3. (a)(1) There are authorized to be appropriated $880,000,000 for the fiscal year 1985 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the succeeding fiscal years ending prior to October 1, 1989, to carry out the provisions of titles I, II, III (other than section 301(b)), and IV (other than part E) of this Act, relating to State programs.

(2) There are authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for the fiscal year 1985 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the succeeding fiscal years ending prior to October 1, 1989, to carry out programs of consumer and homemaking education under section 301(b).

(3) There are authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for the fiscal year 1985 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the succeeding fiscal years ending prior to October 1, 1989, to assist the States to carry out programs and services designed to enroll severely economically and educationally disadvantaged youth in vocational education programs or other education and training or for employment, using joint efforts between eligible recipients and community-based organization.

(b)(1) From the funds appropriated pursuant to subsection (a)(1) for each fiscal year, 2 percent shall be available to carry out the provisions of title IV (other than part E), relating to national programs.

(2) There are authorized to be appropriated $3,700,000 for the fiscal year 1985 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the succeeding fiscal years ending prior to October 1, 1989, to carry out the provisions of part E of title IV, relating to bilingual vocational training.

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 4. As used in this Act:

(1) The term "administration" means activities of a State necessary for the proper and efficient performance of its duties under this Act, including supervision, but not including technical assistance and ancillary services.

(2) The term "area vocational education school" means—

(A) a specialized high school used exclusively or principally for the provision of vocational education to persons who are available for study in preparation for entering the labor market, or

(B) the department of a high school exclusively or principally used for providing vocational education in no less than five different occupational fields to persons who are available for study in preparation for entering the labor market, or

(C) a technical or vocational school used exclusively or principally for the provision of vocational education to persons who have completed or left high school and who are available for study in preparation for entering the labor market, or

(D) the department or division of a junior college or community college or university operating under the policies of the State board and which provides vocational education in no less than five different occupational fields leading to immediate employment but not necessarily leading to a baccalaureate degree, if it is available to all residents of the State or an area of the State designated and approved by the State board, and if, in the case of a school, department, or division described in clause (C) or this clause, it admits as regular students both persons who have completed high school and persons who have left high school.

(3) The term "community-based organization" means any such organization of demonstrated effectiveness described in section 4(5) of the Job Training Partnership Act.

(4) The term "construction" includes construction of new buildings and acquisition, and expansion, remodeling, and alteration of existing buildings, and includes site grading and improvement and architect fees.

(5) The term "cooperative education" means a program of vocational education for individuals who, through written cooperative arrangements between the school and employers, receive instruction, including required academic courses and related vocational instruction by alternation of study in school with a job in any occupational field, but the two experiences must be planned and supervised by the school and employers so that each contributes to the student's education and to his or her employability. Work periods and school attendance may be on alternate half days, full days, weeks, or other periods of time in fulfilling the cooperative program.

(6) The term "criminal offender" means any individual who is charged with or convicted of any criminal offense, including a youth offender or a juvenile offender.

(7) The term "correctional institution" means any—

(A) prison,

(B) jail,

(C) reformatory,

(D) work farm,

(E) detention center, or

(F) halfway house, community-based rehabilitation center, or any other similar institution designed for the confinement or rehabilitation of criminal offenders.

(8) The term "Council" means the National Employers Council on Vocational Education.

(9) The term "curriculum materials" means materials, including materials using advanced learning technology, designed for use in courses of instruction in any occupational field which will be used to prepare individuals for employment at the entry level or to upgrade occupational competencies of individuals previously or presently employed in any occupational field.

(10) The term "disadvantaged" means individuals (other than handicapped individuals) who have economic or academic disadvantages and who require special services and assistance in order to enable them to succeed in vocational education programs, under criteria developed by the Secretary based on objective standards and the most recent available data. Such term includes individuals who are from low-income families, migrants, individuals who have limited English proficiency and individuals who are dropouts from, or who are identified as potential dropouts from, secondary school.

(11) The term "eligible recipient" means a local educational agency or a postsecondary educational institution.

(12) The term "guidance and counseling" means programs designed to develop in children, youth, and adults career awareness, career planning, and career decision-making to enable them to make and implement informed educational and occupational choices. The term includes assessments, information provision, counseling, and the coordination of services designed to assist in the choice of, planning for, and achievement in vocational education and in the transition from school to work.

(13) The term "handicapped", when applied to individuals, means individuals who are mentally retarded, hard of hearing, deaf, speech impaired, visually handicapped, seriously emotionally disturbed, orthopedically impaired, or other health impaired persons, or persons with specific learning disabilities, who by reason thereof require special education and related services, and who, because of their handicapping condition, cannot succeed in the regular vocational education program without special education assistance.

(14) The term "homemaker" means an individual who—

(A) is an adult, and

(B) has worked as an adult primarily without remuneration to care for the home and family, and for that reason has diminished marketable skills.

The Secretary may not prescribe the manner in which the States will comply with the application of the definition contained in this paragraph.

(15) The term "local educational agency" means a board of education or other legally constituted local school authority having administrative control and direction of public elementary or secondary schools in a city, county, township, school district, or political subdivision in a State, or any other public educational institution or agency having administrative control and direction of a vocational education program.

(16) The term "low-income family or individual" means such families or individuals who are determined by the Secretary to be low-income according to the latest available data from the Department of Commerce.

(17) The term "postsecondary educational institution" means a nonprofit institution legally authorized to provide postsecondary education within a State for persons sixteen years of age or older, who have graduated from or left elementary or secondary school.

(18) The term "private vocational training institution" means a business or trade school, or technical institution or other technical or vocational school, in any State, which (A) admits as regular students only persons who have completed or left elementary or secondary school and who have the ability to benefit from the training offered by such institution; (B) is legally authorized to provide, and provides within that State, a program of postsecondary vocational or technical education designed to fit individuals for useful employment in recognized occupations; (C) has been in existence for two years or has been specially accredited by the Secretary as an institution meeting the other requirements of this subsection; and (D) is accredited (i) by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or association listed by the Secretary pursuant to this clause, or (ii) if the Secretary determines that there is no nationally recognized accrediting agency or association qualified to accredit schools of a particular category, by a State agency listed by the Secretary pursuant to this clause, or (iii) if the Secretary determines that there is no nationally recognized or State agency or association qualified to accredit schools of a particular category, by an advisory committee appointed by him and composed of persons specially qualified to evaluate training provided by schools of that category, which committee shall prescribe the standards of content, scope, and quality which must be met by those schools and shall also determine whether particular schools meet those standards. For the purpose of this paragraph, the Secretary shall publish a list of nationally recognized accrediting agencies or associations and State agencies which he determines to be reliable authority as to the quality of education or training afforded.

(19) The term "school facilities" means classrooms and related facilities (including initial equipment) and interests in lands on which such facilities are constructed. Such term shall not include any facility intended primarily for events for which admission is to be charged to the general public.

(20) The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Education.

(21) The term "single parent" means an individual who—

(A) is unmarried or legally separated from a spouse, and

(B) has a minor child or children for which the parent has either custody or joint custody.

(22) The term "State" includes, in addition to the several States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

(23) The term "State board" means a State board designated or created by State law as the sole State agency responsible for the administration of vocational education, or for supervision of the administration of vocational education in the State.

(24) The term "State educational agency" means the State board of education or other agency or officer primarily responsible for the State supervision of public elementary or secondary schools, or, if there is no such officer or agency, an officer or agency designated by the Governor or by State law.

(25) The term "vocational education" means organized educational programs which are directly related to the preparation of individuals for paid or unpaid employment, or for additional preparation for a career requiring other than a baccalaureate or advanced degree; and, for purposes of this paragraph, the term "organized education program" means only (A) instruction and counseling related to the occupation or occupations for which the students are in training or instruction and counseling necessary for students to benefit from such training, (B) the acquisition, maintenance, and repair of instructional supplies, teaching aids and equipment (including advanced learning technologies), and (C) the activities of student organizations whenever the activities of such organizations are directly related to vocational education. The term "vocational education" does not mean the construction, acquisition or initial equipment of buildings, or the acquisition or rental of land.

TITLE I—VOCATIONAL EDUCATION ASSISTANCE TO THE STATES

PART A—ALLOTMENT AND ALLOCATION

ALLOTMENT

SEC. 101. (a)(1) From the sums appropriated pursuant to section 3(a)(1), the Secretary shall reserve—

(A) 2 percent for the activities described in title IV; and

(B) 2 percent for the purpose of carrying out section 103.

(2) Subject to the provisions of paragraph (3), from the remainder of the sums appropriated pursuant to sections 3(a)(1), 3(a)(2), and 3(a)(3), the Secretary shall allot to each State for each fiscal year—

(A) an amount which bears the same ratio to 50 percent of the sums being allotted as the product of the population aged fifteen to nineteen inclusive, in the State in the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made and the State's allotment ratio bears to the sum of the corresponding products for all the States;

(B) an amount which bears the same ratio to 20 percent of the sums being allotted as the product of the population aged twenty to twenty-four, inclusive, in the State in the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made and the State's allotment ratio bears to the sum of the corresponding products for all the States;

(C) an amount which bears the same ratio to 15 percent of the sums being allotted as the product of the population aged twenty-five to sixty-five, inclusive, in the State in the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made and the State's allotment ratio bears to the sum of the corresponding products for all the States; and

(D) an amount which bears the same ratio to 15 percent of the sums being allotted as the amounts allotted to the State under clauses (A), (B), and (C) for such years bears to the sum of the amounts allotted to all the States under clauses (A), (B), and (C) for such year.

(3)(A) No State shall receive less than one-half of one percent of the amount available under this subsection for each such fiscal year except that in the case of the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands the minimum allotment shall be $200,000.

(B) No State shall, by reason of the application of the provisions of subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, be allotted more than 150 percent of the allotment of that State in the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made.

(C) For the purpose of this paragraph, the term "State" does not include the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

(b) The amount of any State's allotment under subsection (a) for any fiscal year which the Secretary determines will not be required for such fiscal year for carrying out the program for which such amount has been allotted shall be available, from time to time, for reallotment, on such dates during such year as the Secretary shall fix, on the basis of criteria established by regulation, among other States. Any amount reallotted to a State under this subsection for any fiscal year shall remain available for obligation during the next succeeding fiscal year and shall be deemed to be part of its allotment for the year in which it is obligated.

(A) 0.50; and

(B) the quotient obtained by dividing the per capita income for the State by the per capita income for all the States (exclusive of Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands), except that (i) the allotment ratio in no case shall be more than 0.60 or less than 0.40 and (ii) the allotment ratio for Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands shall be 0.60.

(2) The allotment ratios shall be promulgated by the Secretary for each fiscal year between October 1 and December 31 of the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made. Allotment ratios shall be computed on the basis of the average of the appropriate per capita incomes for the three most recent consecutive fiscal years for which satisfactory data are available.

(3) The term "per capita income" means, with respect to a fiscal year, the total personal income in the calendar year ending in such year, divided by the population of the area concerned in such year.

(4) For the purposes of this section, population shall be determined by the Secretary on the basis of the latest estimates available to the Department.

WITHIN STATE ALLOCATION

SEC. 102. (a) Each State shall allocate from its allotment (other than the amount of the allotment attributable to sums appropriated pursuant to section 3(a)(3)) in each fiscal year—

(1) not to exceed 6 percent of the allotment for administrative expenses;

(2) 1 percent of the allotment for the expenses of the State Council on Vocational Education, except that no State may allocate less than $120,000 nor more than $225,000 in each fiscal year for the purpose described in this clause; and

(3) of the remainder of the allotment of the State—

(A) 50 percent shall be available for activities described in title II, and

(B) 50 percent shall be available for activities described in title III.

(b) For the purpose of clause (2) of subsection (a) of this section, the term "State" shall not include the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

INDIAN PROGRAMS

SEC. 103. (a)(1) For the purpose of this section—

(A) the term "Act of April 16, 1934" means the Act entitled "An Act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to arrange with States or territories for the education, medical attention, relief of distress, and social welfare of Indians, and for other purposes", enacted April 16, 1934 (48 Stat. 596; 25 U.S.C. 452-457); and

(B) the term "Hawaiian native" means any individual any of whose ancestors were natives, prior to 1778, of the area which now comprises the State of Hawaii.

(2) From the funds reserved pursuant to section 101(a)(1)(B), the Secretary shall enter into contracts for Indian and Hawaiian native programs in accordance with the provisions of this section.

(b)(1) From the funds reserved pursuant to section 101(a)(1)(B), the Secretary is directed, upon the request of any Indian tribe which is eligible to contract with the Secretary of the Interior for the administration of programs under the Indian Self-Determination Act or under the Act of April 16, 1934, to enter into grants or contracts with any tribal organization of any such Indian tribe to plan, conduct, and administer programs, or portions thereof, which are authorized by and consistent with the purposes of this Act, except that such grants or contracts shall be subject to the terms and conditions of section 102 of the Indian Self-Determination Act and shall be conducted in accordance with the provisions of sections 4, 5, and 6 of the Act of April 16, 1934, which are relevani to the programs administered under this sentence. From any remaining funds reserved pursuant to section 101(a)(1)(B), the Secretary is authorized to enter into an agreement with the Commissioner of the Bureau of Indian Affairs for the operation of vocational education programs authorized by this Act in institutions serving Indians eligible to receive educational benefits as Indians from the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to receive the funds for the purposes described in this paragraph.

(2) For the purposes of this Act, the Bureau of Indian Affairs shall be deemed to be a State board; and all the provisions of this Act shall be applicable to the Bureau as if it were a State board.

(c) From the funds reserved pursuant to section 101(a)(1)(B) and available for this subsection, the Secretary is directed, upon the request of any eligible recipient or any nonprofit private organization which is engaged in furnishing educational services or activities to Hawaiian natives, to enter into contracts with any such eligible recipient or nonprofit private organization to plan, conduct, and administer programs, or portions thereof, which are authorized by and consistent with the provisions of this section for the benefit of Hawaiian natives.

PART B—STATE ORGANIZATIONAL AND PLANNING RESPONSIBILITIES

STATE ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 111. (a)(1) Any State desiring to participate in the vocational education program authorized by this Act shall, consistent with State law, designate or establish a State board of vocational education which shall be the sole State agency responsible for the administration or the supervision of the State vocational education program. The responsibilities of the State board shall include—

(A) the coordination of the development of policy with respect to such programs;

(B) the development in consultation with the State council on vocational education, and the submission to the Secretary, of the State plan required by section 113 and by section 114;

(C) the consultation with the State council on vocational education and other appropriate State agencies, councils, and individuals involved in the planning and approval as required by sections 113 and 114; and

(D) the adoption of such procedures as the State board considers necessary to implement State level coordination with the State job training coordinating council to encourage cooperation in the conduct of their respective programs.

Except with respect to the functions set forth in the preceding sentence, the State board may delegate any of its other responsibilities involving administration, operation, or supervision, in whole or in part, to one or more appropriate State agencies.

(2) Each State shall include a description of any delegation of its functions under paragraph (1) in its State plan, or amendments to such plan, submitted to the Secretary.

(b)(1) Any State desiring to participate in the programs authorized by this Act shall assign at least one individual within the appropriate agency established or designated by the State board under the last sentence of subsection (a)(1) to administer vocational education programs within the State, to work full time to assist the State board to fulfill the purposes of this Act by—

(A) administering the program of vocational education for single parents and homemakers described in section 201(e);

(B) gathering, analyzing, and disseminating data on the adequacy and effectiveness of vocational education programs in the State in meeting the education and employment needs of women (including preparation for employment in technical occupations, new and emerging occupational fields, and occupations regarded as nontraditional for women), and on the status of men and women students and employees in such programs;

(C) reviewing vocational education programs (including career guidance and counseling) for sex stereotyping and sex bias, with particular attention to practices which tend to inhibit the entry of women in high technology occupations, and submitting (i) recommendations for inclusion in the State plan and the progress reports of programs and policies to overcome sex bias and sex stereotyping in such programs, and (ii) an assessment of the State's progress in meeting the purposes of this Act with regard to overcoming sex discrimination and sex stereotyping;

(D) reviewing proposed actions on grants, contracts, and the policies of the State board to ensure that the needs of women are addressed in the administration of this Act;

(E) developing recommendations for programs of information and outreach to women concerning vocational education and employment opportunities for women (including opportunities for careers as technicians and skilled workers in technical fields and new and emerging occupational fields);

(F) providing technical assistance and advice to local educational agencies, postsecondary institutions, and other interested parties in the State, in expanding vocational opportunities for women; and

(G) assisting administrators, instructors, and counselors in implementing programs and activities to increase access for women (including displaced homemakers and single heads of households) to vocational education and to increase male and female students' enrollment in nontraditional programs.

(2) For the purpose of this subsection, the term "State" means any one of the fifty States and the District of Columbia.

(3) Each State shall expend not less than $60,000 in each fiscal year to carry out the provisions of this subsection from the funds made available in section 202(3).

(c) The State board shall make available to each private industry council established under part A of title I of the Job Training Partnership Act within the State a description of all programs assisted under this Act to be operated by eligible recipients in service delivery areas designated under such part A.

STATE COUNCIL ON VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

SEC. 112. (a) Each State which desires to participate in vocational education programs authorized by this Act for any fiscal year shall establish a State council, which shall be appointed by the Governor or, in the case of States in which the members of the State board of education are elected (including election by the State legislature), by such board, except as provided in clause (5) of this subsection. Each State council shall be composed of eleven individuals so that—

(1) a majority of its membership are individuals who are representative of business and industry in the State;

(2) one of the members appointed under clause (1) is a member of the State job training coordinating council established pursuant to section 122 of the Job Training Partnership Act;

(3) individuals who are representative of secondary vocational education and postsecondary vocational education in the State are members, except that representation under this clause for secondary education and postsecondary education shall be equal;

(4) one individual who is representative of special education;

(5) two individuals who are members from the State legislature, appointed by the legislature, one appointed from each House (or in the case of an unicameral legislature, appointed from the legislature) are members; and

(6) at least one individual who is representative of labor organizations in the State is a member.

(b) The State shall certify the establishment and membership of the State council at least 90 days prior to the beginning of each planning period described in section 113(a)(1).

(c) Each State council shall meet as soon as practical after certification has been accepted by the Secretary and shall select from among its membership a Chair who shall be a nongovernmental representative member of the State council. The time, place, and manner of meeting, as well as council operating procedures and staffing, shall be as provided by the rules of the State council, except that such rules must provide for not less than one public meeting each year at which the public is given an opportunity to express views concerning the vocational education program of the State.

(d)(1) Each State council shall consult with and make recommendations to the State board on policy matters arising out of vocational education programs assisted under this Act and in the development of the State plan submitted under section 113.

(2) Each State council shall review the State plan in accordance with the procedures described in section 114.

(3) Each State council shall—

(A) analyze and report on the distribution of spending for vocational education in the State and on the availability of vocational education activities and services within the State;

(B) furnish consultation to the State board on the establishment of evaluation criteria for vocational education programs within the State;

(C) submit recommendations to the State board on the conduct of vocational education programs conducted in the State which emphasize the use of business concerns and labor organizations;

(D) assess the distribution of financial assistance furnished under this Act, particularly with the analysis of the distribution of financial assistance between secondary vocational education programs and postsecondary vocational education programs;

(E) recommend procedures to the State board to insure and enhance the participation of the public in the provisions of vocational education at the local level within the State, particularly the participation of local employers and local labor organizations;

(F) report to the State board on the extent to which the individuals described in section 201(b) are provided with equal access to quality vocational education programs; and

(G) make recommendations to the State board for cooperation with programs assisted under this Act with programs assisted under the Job Training Partnership Act, and at least once every two years assess the adequacy and effectiveness of the coordination that takes place between vocational education and the Job Training Partnership Act to the extent that the objectives of this Act and the Job Training Partnership Act are compatible.

(e)(1) Each State council is authorized to obtain the services of such professional, technical, and clerical, personnel as may be necessary to enable it to carry out its functions under this Act and to contract for such services as may be necessary to carry out its evaluation functions, independent of programmatic and administrative control by other State boards, agencies, and individuals.

(2) Each State council, in carrying out the provisions in paragraph (1), shall seek and obtain the advice of experts who are knowledgeable in the special education needs of the groups of individuals to be served under this Act, including handicapped, disadvantaged, women, adults, and the incarcerated.

(f) Each State shall make available for the expenses of the State council on vocational education the portion of its allotment required under section 102(a)(2) but not less than $120,000 for each fiscal year.

STATE PLANS

SEC. 113. (a)(1) Any State desiring to receive funds from its allotment for any fiscal year shall submit to the Secretary a State plan for a three-year period in the case of the initial plan and a two-year period thereafter, together with such annual revisions as the State board determines to be necessary.

(2) The planning periods required by paragraph (1) of this subsection shall be coterminous with the planning program periods required under section 104(a) of the Job Training Partnership Act.

(3) In developing the State plan, the State shall—

(A) assess the current and projected occupational needs within the State;

(B) examine student needs in order to determine how best to improve student skill levels in light of the State's occupational and skill requirements;

(C) assess the special needs of groups of individuals specified in section 201(b) for access to vocational education and vocational services in terms of labor market needs;

(D) assess the quality of vocational education in terms of—

(i) the pertinence of programs to the workplace and to new and emerging technologies,

(ii) the responsiveness of programs to the current and projected occupational needs in the State,

(iii) the capacity of programs to facilitate entry into, and participation in, vocational education and to ease the school-to-work and secondary-to-postsecondary transition, and

(iv) the technological and educational quality of vocational curricula, equipment, and instructional materials to enable vocational students and instructors to meet the challenges of increased technological demands of the workplace;

(E) determine the capacity of local educational agencies, with respect to secondary education and postsecondary educational institutions, to deliver the vocational education services necessary to meet the needs identified through the assessments required by clauses (A) through (D) of this paragraph; and

"(F) determine, for each fiscal year, how the services and activities supported by funds furnished under this Act can be expected to assist the State in meeting the needs identified through the assessments required by clauses (A) through (D) of this paragraph.".

(b) Each such plan shall—

(1) provide assurances that, and where necessary a description of the manner in which, the State board will comply with the requirements of titles I, II, and III of this Act, including—

(A) a description of the manner in which the State will comply with the criteria required for programs for the handicapped and for the disadvantaged prescribed by section 204;

(B) assurances that the State will comply with the distribution of assistance requirements contained in section 203;

(C) a description of the criteria for the distribution of assistance required by section 203 and section 302;

(D) assurances that, to the extent consistent with the number and location of individuals described in clauses (1) and (2) of section 201(b) in the State who are enrolled in private elementary and secondary schools, provision is made for the participation of such individuals in the vocational education program assisted under title II of this Act;

(2) set forth the planned uses of Federal funds available for vocational education for each fiscal year for which the plan is submitted and described how the State did carry out the provisions of section 113(a)(3);

(3) provide assurances that the State will distribute at least 80 percent of the funds made available for titles II and III to eligible recipients, or combination of eligible recipients, except that the State will distribute 100 percent of the funds available for clauses (1) and (2) of section 202, relating to the disadvantaged and the handicapped, to eligible recipients in accordance with section 203(a);

(4) provide assurances that, in the use of funds available for single parents and homemakers under section 201(b)(3), that the State will emphasize assisting individuals with the greatest financial need, and that in serving homemakers the State will give special consideration to homemakers who because of divorce, separation, or the death or disability of a spouse must prepare for paid employment;

(5) provide assurances that the State will furnish relevant training and vocational education activities to men and women who desire to enter occupations that are not traditionally associated with their sex;

(6) describe the methods of administration that are necessary for the proper and efficient administration of the assistance provided under titles II and III of this Act;

(7)(A) provide assurances that the State will develop measures for the effectiveness of programs assisted under this Act in meeting the needs identified in the State plan, including evaluative measurements such as—

(i) the occupations to be trained for, which will reflect a realistic assessment of the labor market needs of the State;

(ii) the levels of skills to be achieved in particular occupations, which will reflect the hiring needs of employers; and

(iii) the basic employment competencies to be used in performance outcomes, which will reflect the hiring needs of employers; and

(B) the State will, as a component of the measures under subclause (A) of this clause, establish appropriate measures for evaluating the effectiveness of programs for the handicapped assisted under this Act;

(8) provide assurances that the State board will cooperate with the State council on vocational education in carrying out its duties under this part;

(9) provide assurances that—

(A) funds will be distributed to eligible recipients on the basis of annual applications,

(B) the State will set forth the procedures to be used in approving such applications, and

(C) any eligible recipient dissatisfied with final action with respect to any application for assistance under this Act will be given reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing;

(10) provide assurances that eligible recipients, in furnishing vocational education services and activities, will equitably serve the special needs of individuals with limited English proficiency;

(11)(A) provide assurances that Federal funds made available under this Act will be used so as to supplement, and to the extent practicable increase the amount of State and local funds that would in the absence of such Federal funds be made available for the uses specified in the State plan, and in no case supplant such State or local funds;

(B) provide assurances that the amount expended from State and local sources for vocational education for handicapped individuals in a State in each fiscal year will be equal to or more than the amount expended from State and local sources for vocational education for handicapped individuals in the State in the fiscal year 1984; and

(12) provide assurances that the State will make provision for such fiscal control and fund accounting procedures as may be necessary to assure the proper disbursement of, and accounting for, Federal funds paid to the State (including such funds paid by the State to eligible recipients under this Act).

APPROVAL

SEC. 114. (a) Each State plan prepared in accordance with the provisions of section 113 shall include all recommendations made by the State council with respect to the plan for vocational education programs which are not incorporated as a part of the plan, along with the reasons of the State board for not incorporating such recommendations in the plan.

(b)(1) Each State plan shall, 60 days before the plan is to be submitted to the Secretary, be furnished to the State legislature and the State job training coordinating council of the State for review and comment. If the matters covered by the comments of the State legislature and the State job training coordinating council are not covered by the State plan, the State shall submit the comments with the State plan to the Secretary.

(2) If the State legislature is not in session during the period described in paragraph (1), the State board shall submit the plan for review and comment to the next meeting of the State legislature and forward the comments of the State legislature to the Secretary when the comments are received.

(c)(1) Each State plan shall be submitted to the State council on vocational education for review and comment not later than 60 days prior to the submission of the plan to the Secretary.

(2) Whenever the State council disagrees with the reasons set forth by the State board for not incorporating the recommendations of the State council in the State plan, the State council shall append its comments on the State plan to such plan, and the State shall submit the appended comments with the State plan to the Secretary.

(d)(1) The Secretary shall provide technical assistance and guidance to the States in order to assist the States to fulfill the requirements of section 113(a)(3).

(2)(A) The Secretary shall approve any State plan which meets the requirements of section 113 and the other provisions of this Act.

(B) In approving State plans under this section, the Secretary shall consider the comments of the State council submitted as a part of the State plan.

(3) The Secretary shall not make any final determination disapproving any State plan, or any modification thereof, without first affording the State reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing.

PART C—STATE ASSISTANCE FOR VOCATIONAL EDUCATION SUPPORT PROGRAMS BY COMMUNITY-BASED ORGANIZATIONS

APPLICATIONS

SEC. 121. (a) Each community-based organization which desires to receive assistance under this part shall prepare jointly with the appropriate eligible recipient and submit an application to the State board at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the State board may require. Each such application shall—

(1) contain an agreement between the community-based organization and the eligible recipients in the area to be served, which includes the designation of fiscal agents established for the program;

(2) provide a description of the uses for which assistance is sought pursuant to section 121(b) together with evaluation criteria to be applied to the program;

(3) provide assurances that the community-based organization will give special consideration to the needs of severely economically and educationally disadvantaged youth ages sixteen through twenty-one, inclusive;

(4) provide assurances that business concerns will be involved, as appropriate, in services and activities for which assistance is sought;

(5) describe the collaborative efforts with the eligible recipients and the manner in which the services and activities for which assistance is sought will serve to enhance the enrollment of severely economically and educationally disadvantaged youth into the vocational education programs; and

(6) provide assurances that the programs conducted by the community-based organization will conform to the applicable standards of performance and measures of effectiveness required of vocational education programs in the State.

USES OF FUNDS

SEC. 122. (a) From the portion of the allotment of each State under section 101 available under this part, each State shall provide financial assistance to joint programs of eligible recipients and community-based organizations within the State for the conduct of special vocational education services and activities described in subsection (b).

(b) Funds provided under this section may be used for—

(1) outreach programs to facilitate the entrance of youth into a program of transitional services and subsequent entrance into vocational education, employment or other education and training;

(2) transitional services such as attitudinal and motivational prevocational training programs;

(3) prevocational educational preparation and basic skills development conducted in cooperation with business concerns;

(4) special prevocational preparations programs targeted to inner-city youth, non-English speaking youth, Appalachian youth, and the youth of other urban and rural areas having a high density of poverty who need special prevocational education programs;

(5) career intern programs;

(6) assessment of students needs in relation to vocational education and jobs; and

(7) guidance and counseling to assist students with occupational choices and with the selection of a vocational education program.

TITLE II—PROGRAMS FOR VOCATIONAL EDUCATION OPPORTUNITIES

USES OF FUNDS

SEC. 201. (a) From the portion of the allotment of each State under section 101 available for this title, each State shall provide vocational education services and activities designed to meet the special needs of groups of individuals specified in subsection (b).

(b) To meet the needs identified in the State plan, each State shall use the portion of its allotment available for this title in any fiscal year to provide vocational education services and activities designed to meet the special needs of, and to enhance the participation of—

(1) handicapped individuals;

(2) disadvantaged individuals;

(3) individuals who are single parents or homemakers; and

(4) criminal offenders who are serving in a correctional institution.

(c) Each State shall use the portion of its allotment available for this title in any fiscal year for handicapped individuals only for expenditures limited to supplemental or additional staff, equipment, materials, and services not provided to other individuals in vocational education that are essential for handicapped individuals to participate in vocational education, except that each State may use such funds for separate vocational education programs for handicapped individuals if the handicapping conditions of the students require a separate program.

(d) Each State may use the portion of its allotment available for this title for any fiscal year for the improvement of vocational education programs designed to provide equal access to quality vocational education to disadvantaged individuals including the acquisition of modern machinery and tools and the cost of services and activities which apply the latest technological advances to courses of instruction.

(e) Each State may use the portion of its allotment available for this title to—

(1) provide, subsidize, reimburse or pay for vocational education and training activities, including basic literacy instruction and necessary educational materials, that will furnish single parents and homemakers with marketable skills;

(2) make grants to eligible recipients for expanding vocational education services when this expansion directly increases the eligible recipients' capacity for providing single working parents and homemakers with marketable skills;

(3) make grants to community-based organizations for the provision of vocational education services to single parents and homemakers, if the State determines that the community-based organization has demonstrated effectiveness in providing comparable or related services to single parents and homemakers, taking into account the demonstrated performance of such an organization in terms of cost, the quality of training and the characteristics of the participants;

(4) make vocational education and training more accessible to single parents and homemakers by assisting them with child care or transportation services or by organizing and scheduling the programs so that such programs are more accessible; and

(5) provide information to single working parents and homemakers to inform them of vocational education programs and related support services.

(f)(1) Each State may use the portion of its allotment available for this title in any fiscal year for basic skills instruction for vocational education students and related to their instructional program whenever the State board determines that such instruction is necessary to carry out the purposes described in subsection (b) of this section.

(2) Each State may use the portion of its allotment available for this title in any fiscal year for the provision of educational training through arrangements with private vocational training institutions where such private institutions can make a significant contribution to obtaining the objectives of the State plan and can provide substantially equivalent training at a lesser cost, or can provide equipment or services not available in public institutions.

(g)(1) Vocational education services and activities described in subsection (b) shall, to the extent practicable, include work-site programs such as cooperative vocational education, work-study, and apprenticeship programs.

(2) Vocational education services and activities described in subsection (b) may include placement services for students who have successfully completed vocational education programs.

DISTRIBUTION OF ASSISTANCE

SEC. 202. Of the amounts made available to each State from the portion of its allotment available for this title for each fiscal year—

(1) 25 percent shall be available for handicapped individuals;

(2) 50 percent shall be available for disadvantaged individuals;

(3) 23 percent shall be available for individuals who are single parents and homemakers; and

(4) 2 percent shall be made available for criminal offenders who are in correctional institutions.

WITHIN STATE ALLOCATION

SEC. 203. (a)(1) The State board shall allocate the 75 percent of the amount allotted to the State and available for this title for vocational education services and activities for the handicapped and the disadvantaged to eligible recipients in accordance with the provisions of this subsection.

(2) Of the amount allocated under this subsection—

(A) 33⅓ percent of such amount shall be allocated to eligible recipients on the basis of the relative number of economically disadvantaged individuals enrolled in each eligible recipient compared to the total number of such individuals enrolled in all eligible recipients within the State;

(B) 33⅓ percent shall be allocated on the basis of the relative number of disadvantaged and handicapped students served in vocational education programs by each eligible recipient within the State in the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination is made as compared to the total number of such individuals served by all eligible recipients within the State in such year; and

(C) the remainder shall be allocated on the basis of criteria developed by the State which take into account increases in the numbers or percentages of handicapped and disadvantaged students proposed to be served by the eligible recipients within the State, but such criteria shall not penalize eligible recipients which are already serving an equitable number or percentage of such students.

(3)(A) Subject to the limitation contained in clause (C) of paragraph (2) and the second sentence of this subparagraph, for any fiscal year beginning after the first fiscal year in which an eligible recipient receives payments under this title in which an eligible recipient fails to carry out the criteria established for clause (C) of paragraph (2), the State board may, pursuant to uniform criteria established by the State board, reduce the amount of the payments made under this subsection to any such eligible recipient for such fiscal year. No reduction authorized by this paragraph may include a reduction in the allocation criteria required by clause (A) of paragraph (2).

(B) Whenever in any fiscal year the provisions of subparagraph (A) apply, the State board shall allocate the amounts made available by the application of subpara-graph (A) to all other eligible recipients within the State (not subject to such subparagraph) on the basis of their original allocations.

(4) Each local educational agency shall use, to the extent feasible, community-based organizations of demonstrated effectiveness, in addition to other eligible recipients, for the use of funds available under this title in areas of the State in which there is an absence of sufficient vocational education facilities or in which the vocational education programs do not adequately address the needs of disadvantaged students, or in which the local educational agency determines that the community-based organization can better serve disadvantaged students.

(5) Each local educational agency is authorized to use funds allocated under paragraph (1) of this subsection for joint projects with one or more other local educational agencies.

(b)(1)(A) Whenever the State board determines that the distribution of funds, in accordance with subsection (a) of this section, will result, with respect to any eligible recipient, in ineffective programing and use of funds made available under this title, the State board may adopt a de minimis rule under which funds are not allocated to such an eligible recipient and are reallocated under this subsection. The State board may, in carrying out the provisions of this paragraph, apply the rule only to any eligible recipient within the State which is eligible to receive $1,000 or less in any fiscal year.

(B) For the purpose of this paragraph, an eligible recipient includes a joint application under paragraph (5) of subsection (a).

(2) Whenever the State board determines that the rule stated in paragraph (1) of this subsection applies to any eligible recipient, the State board shall allocate the amounts made available by the application of paragraph (1) to other eligible recipients within the State not subject to such paragraph.

(c) The State board shall establish criteria for the distribution of the remaining 25 percent of the amount of the allotment of the State available for this title to eligible recipients and to community-based organizations pursuant to section 201(e)(3) within the State for the purposes described in clauses (3) and (4) of section 202.

(d) Nothing in this title shall be construed to require the State board to identify, separately, expenditures for disadvantaged individuals and for handicapped individuals with respect to eligible recipients within the State.

CRITERIA FOR SERVICES AND ACTIVITIES FOR THE HANDICAPPED AND FOR THE DISADVANTAGED

SEC. 204. (a) The State board shall, with respect to that portion of the allotment distributed in accordance with section 203(a) for vocational education services and activities for handicapped individuals and disadvantaged individuals, provide assurances that—

(1) equal access will be provided to handicapped and disadvantaged individuals in recruitment, enrollment, and placement activities;

(2) equal access will be provided to handicapped and disadvantaged individuals to the full range of vocational programs available to nonhandicapped and nondisadvantaged individuals, including occupationally specific courses of study, cooperative education, and apprenticeship programs; and

(3)(A) vocational education programs and activities for handicapped individuals will be provided in the least restrictive environment in accordance with section 612(5)(B) of the Education of the Handicapped Act and will, whenever appropriate, be included as a component of the individualized education plan required under section 612(4) and section 614(a)(5) of such Act; and

(B) vocational education planning for handicapped individuals will be coordinated between appropriate representatives of vocational education and special education.

(b) Each local educational agency shall, with respect to that portion of the allotment distributed in accordance with section 203(a) for vocational education services and activities for handicapped individuals and disadvantaged individuals, provide information to handicapped and disadvantaged students and parents of such students concerning the opportunities available in vocational education at least one year before the students enter the grade level in which vocational education programs are first generally available in the State, but in no event later than the beginning of the ninth grade, together with the requirements for eligibility for enrollment in such vocational education programs.

(c) Each student who enrolls in vocational education programs and to whom subsection (b) applies shall receive—

(1) assessment of the interests, abilities, and special needs of such student with respect to completing successfully the vocational education program;

(2) special services, including adaptation of curriculum, instruction, equipment, and facilities, designed to meet the needs described in clause (1);

(3) guidance, counseling, and career development activities conducted by professionally trained counselors who are associated with the provision of such special services; and

(4) counseling services designed to facilitate the transition from school to postschool employment and career opportunities.

(d) Whenever the State board determines that it is appropriate, vocational education services and activities for handicapped individuals and disadvantaged individuals may be furnished jointly or in common.

TITLE III—VOCATIONAL EDUCATION PROGRAM IMPROVEMENT, INNOVATION, AND EXPANSION

USES OF FUNDS

SEC. 301. (a) From the portion of the allotment of each State under section 101 available for this title from amounts appropriated pursuant to section 3(a)(1) for each fiscal year, each State may use funds so available to meet the needs identified in the State plan for—

(1) the improvement of vocational education programs within the State designed to improve the quality of vocational education, including the provision of technical assistance;

(2) the expansion of vocational education activities necessary to meet the student needs, particularly in economically depressed urban and rural areas of the State in which there are inadequate vocational education programs;

(3) the introduction of new vocational education programs, particularly in economically depressed urban and rural areas of the State;

(4) the creation or expansion of programs to train workers in skilled occupations needed to revitalize businesses and industries or to promote the entry of new businesses and industries into a State or community;

(5) exemplary and innovative programs which stress new and emerging technologies and which are designed to strengthen vocational education services and activities;

(6) guidance, counseling, and career development activities conducted by professionally trained counselors in the improvement of vocational education programs within the State;

(7) programs relating to curriculum development in vocational education within the State, including the application of basic skills training;

(8) the expansion and improvement of programs at area vocational education schools; and

(9) the acquisition of equipment and the renovation of facilities necessary to improve or expand vocational education programs within the State.

(b) From the portion of the allotment for each fiscal year under section 101 available under this title from amounts appropriated pursuant to section 3(a)(2) for each fiscal year, each State shall conduct consumer and homemaking education programs.

(c) From the portion of the allotment of each State under section 101 available for this title from amounts appropriated pursuant to section 3(a)(1) for each fiscal year, each State shall use grants for the provision of inservice and preservice training designed to increase the competence of vocational education teachers, counselors, and administrators, including special emphasis on the integration of handicapped and disadvantaged students in regular courses of vocational education.

DISTRIBUTION OF ASSISTANCE

SEC. 302. (a) The State board shall establish criteria for the distribution of the amounts made available for the portion of its allotment available for this title from amounts appropriated pursuant to section 3(a)(1) for each fiscal year, and which are to be distributed among eligible recipients, or combination of eligible recipients. In prescribing criteria under this subsection, the State board shall give special emphasis to economically depressed urban and rural areas of the State and to area vocational education schools serving such areas.

(b)(1) Not less than 30 percent of the amount available for each State under this title in each fiscal year shall be available only for vocational education services and activities at the secondary and postsecondary school level to train and retrain adults.

(2) The set-aside required by paragraph (1) may also be used by the State to comply with the set-aside required by subsection (c).

(c) Not less than 10 percent of the amount available to each State for this title in each fiscal year shall be available only for conducting industry education partnership training programs in high technology occupations.

CRITERIA FOR PROGRAM IMPROVEMENT, INNOVATION, AND EXPANSION

SEC. 303. (a) Subject to the provisions of this title, each State may expend funds available under this title in the manner best suited to carry out the purposes of this Act within the State.

(b) Each State may make use of community-based organizations of demonstrated effectiveness, in addition to eligible recipients, for the use of funds available under this title in areas of the State in which there is an absence of sufficient vocational education facilities or in which the vocational education programs do not adequately address the needs of disadvantaged students or wherever the community-based organization can better serve disadvantaged students.

(c) Any project assisted with funds made available under this title shall be of sufficient size, scope, and quality to give reasonable promise of meeting the vocational education needs of the students involved in the project.

CRITERIA FOR INDUSTRY EDUCATION PARTNERSHIP TRAINING PROGRAMS IN HIGH TECHNOLOGY OCCUPATIONS

SEC. 304. (a) Grants under this section shall be used for industry education partnership training programs in high technology occupations, including vocational education services and activities designed to train skilled workers and technicians in high technology occupations, especially projects to train skilled workers needed to produce, install, operate, and maintain high technology equipment, systems, and processes.

(b) No grant for any industry education partnership training program under this section may be made unless the eligible recipient enters into a grant agreement which contains provisions designed to assure that—

(1) not less than 50 percent of the aggregate costs of programs and projects assisted under this part will be provided from non-Federal sources, and not less than 50 percent of that non-Federal share of aggregate costs in the State will be provided by participating business concerns;

(2) projects assisted under this section will be coordinated with projects assisted under title II; and

(3) projects assisted under this section will be developed with the active participation of the State council established pursuant to section 112.

(c) The non-Federal contribution may be in cash or in kind, fairly evaluated, including but not limited to planning expenses, plant, equipment, and services.

CRITERIA FOR ADULT PROGRAMS AND POSTSECONDARY PROGRAMS FOR ADULTS

SEC. 305. (a) Funds available under this section shall be used to provide, improve, and expand adult and postsecondary vocational education services and activities to train and retrain adults.

(b) Funds used for the purpose described in subsection (a) may be used for services and activities developed in coordination with the State agency administering title III of the Job Training Partnership Act.

(c) Funds for services and activities under this section may be used for—

(1) additional training under title III of the Job Training Partnership Act;

(2) vocational education programs for training or retraining adults, including programs for older Americans and displaced homemakers;

(3) the costs of serving adults in other vocational education programs, including paying the costs of instruction or the costs of keeping school facilities open longer;

(4) individuals who have completed or left high school and who are enrolled in organized programs of study for which credit is given toward an associate or other degree, but which programs are not designed as baccalaureate or higher degree programs; and

(5) individuals who have already entered the labor market, or have completed or left high school, and who are not described in clause (4).

TITLE IV—NATIONAL PROGRAMS

PART A—RESEARCH

RESEARCH OBJECTIVES

SEC. 401. It is the purpose of this part—

(1) to authorize research activities which contribute to improving the access to vocational education programs of individuals who are disadvantaged, who are handicapped, women who are entering nontraditional occupations, adults who are in need of retraining, individuals who are single parents or homemakers, individuals with limited English proficiency, and individuals who are incarcerated in correctional institutions;

(2) to improve the competitive process by which research projects are awarded;

(3) to encourage the dissemination of findings of research projects assisted under this Act to all States; and

(4) to authorize research activities which are readily applicable to the vocational education setting and are of practical application to vocational education administrators, counselors, and instructors and others involved in vocational education.

RESEARCH ACTIVITIES

SEC. 402. (a) In order to carry out the objectives set forth in section 401, the Secretary shall conduct applied research on aspects of vocational education specifically related to this Act. Such research may be conducted through the National Institute of Education or any other division of the Department of Education which the Secretary determines to be appropriate. Such research shall include—

(1) effective methods for providing quality vocational education to handicapped individuals, disadvantaged individuals, men and women in nontraditional fields, adults, individuals who are single parents or homemakers, individuals with limited English proficiency, and individuals who are incarcerated in correctional institutions;

(2) strategies for coordinating local, State, and Federal vocational education, employment training, and economic development programs to maximize their efficacy and for improving worker training and retraining;

(3) the constructive involvement of the private sector in public vocational education;

(4) successful methods of reinforcing and enhancing basic academic skills in vocational settings;

(5) the development of curriculum materials and instructional methods relating to new and emerging technologies, and assessments of the nature of change in the workplace and its effect on individual jobs;

(6) the identification of institutional characteristics which improve the preparation of youth and adults for employment; and

(7) the development of effective methods for providing quality vocational education to individuals of limited English proficiency, including research related to bilingual vocational training.

(b) In addition, the Secretary shall—

(1) operate a clearinghouse for information on activities conducted by the States under titles II and III, and on contracts made by the Secretary pursuant to this section; and compile an annotated bibliography of research, exemplary and innovative program projects, and curriculum development projects assisted with funds made available under this Act;

(2) initiate leadership development and inservice education activities for State and local vocational education instructors, counselors, and administrators; and

(3) support meritorious, unsolicited research proposals from State and local educators relating to the goals of this Act.

(c) The Secretary shall give preference in carrying out the provisions of this part to public and private postsecondary institutions which have demonstrated competencies in conducting vocational education research.

(d) No more than 20 percent of the amount made available under this part in any fiscal year may be awarded to any single recipient of financial assistance under this part.

NATIONAL ASSESSMENT OF VOCATIONAL EDUCATION PROGRAMS ASSISTED UNDER THIS ACT

SEC. 403. (a) The Secretary shall conduct a national assessment of vocational education assisted under this Act, through independent studies and analysis by the National Institute of Education. The assessment shall include descriptions and evaluations of—

(1) the vocational education activities and services delivered to the individuals who benefit from vocational education activities and services assisted under this Act, including the expansion of access to quality vocational education for individuals described in section 201(b) and adults;

(2) the impact of this Act in modernizing the Nation's vocational education system and expanding its capacity to meet the changing needs of the workplace;

(3) the resources needed to meet adequately the Nation's job training needs;

(4) the coordination of vocational education programs with employment training and economic development among the States;

(5) the impact of vocational education programs on the achievement of academic skills and employment opportunities of students;

(6) the coordination of vocational education and postsecondary programing for handicapped and disadvantaged individuals;

(7) the skill and competency levels developed by States pursuant to section 113(b)(8);

(8) the effectiveness of vocational education programs and services for individuals of limited English proficiency; and

(9) the effectiveness of bilingual vocational training, including bilingual vocational instructor training, to address the unmet needs of individuals of limited English proficiency.

The National Institute of Education shall consult with the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate and the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives in the design and implementation of the assessment required by this section. The National Institute of Education shall report to Congress the preliminary results of the assessment required by this section in January and July of 1988, and a final report shall be prepared and submitted to the Congress not later than January 1, 1989.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law or regulation, such reports shall not be subject to any review outside of the Department of Education before their transmittal to the Congress, but the President and the Secretary may make such additional recommendations to the Congress with respect to the assessment as they deem appropriate.

(c) Not more than 20 percent of the amounts available under this part in any fiscal year may be expended to carry out the assessment authorized by this section.

NATIONAL COMPARISON ASSESSMENT

SEC. 404. The Secretary, through the National Institute of Education shall, as part of the National Assessment of Educational Progress required by section 405(k) of the General Education Provisions Act, identify vocational education students among the national sample of students who have attained 17 years of age to enable a comparison to be made over time of the achievements in reading, writing, and arithmetic, by region of the country, and by socioeconomic level of vocational education students and other students.

PART B—COOPERATIVE EMPLOYER EDUCATION PROGRAMS

PROGRAM AUTHORIZED

SEC. 411. (a) From the amounts available for this part under section 451 for each fiscal year, the Secretary is authorized to carry out, directly or through grants to or contracts with State and local educational agencies, postsecondary vocational institutions, institutions of higher education, and other public and private agencies, organizations, and institutions, programs and projects which support—

(1) model programs providing improved access to quality vocational education programs for those individuals described in section 201(b) of this Act and for men and women seeking nontraditional occupations;

(2) examples of successful cooperation between the private sector and public agencies in vocational education, including work experience and apprenticeship programs and programs assisting in the transition from school to work;

(3) programs to overcome national skill shortages, as designated by the Secretary in cooperation with the Secretary of Labor, Secretary of Defense, and Secretary of Commerce; and

(4) such other activities which the Secretary may designate which are related to the purposes of this Act.

(b) All programs funded by amounts made available by this section shall be—

(1) of direct service to individuals enrolled in such programs; and

(2) capable of wide replication by service providers.

(c) The Secretary shall disseminate the results of the programs and projects assisted under this section in a manner designed to improve the training of teachers, other instructional personnel, counsellors, and administrators who are needed to carry out the purposes of this Act.

PART C—VOCATIONAL EDUCATION AND OCCUPATIONAL INFORMATION DATA SYSTEMS

DATA SYSTEMS AUTHORIZED

SEC. 421. (a)(1) The Secretary shall develop, within the National Center for Education Statistics, a national vocational education data reporting and accounting system using uniform definitions. The system required by this section shall include information on vocational education—

(A) students (including information on their race, sex, and handicapping condition),

(B) programs,

(C) program completers and leavers,

(D) staff,

(E) facilities, and

(F) expenditures.

(2) In developing the system required by this subsection, the Secretary shall endeavor to make the system compatible with the occupational information data system developed pursuant to subsection (b), with other information systems involving data on programs assisted under the Job Training Partnership Act, and with information collected pursuant to the Education of the Handicapped Act.

(3) Any State receiving assistance under this Act shall cooperate with the Secretary in supplying the information required to be submitted by the Secretary and shall comply in its reports with the vocational education data system developed by the Secretary pursuant to paragraph (1). Each State shall submit the data required to carry out this subsection to the Secretary in whatever form the Secretary requires. Whenever possible, the reporting of data under this paragraph shall include reporting of data by labor market areas within the State.

(4) The Secretary shall every 2 years update the national vocational education information and accounting system and prepare acquisition plans of data for operating the system. In carrying out the requirements under this paragraph, the Secretary shall use scientific sample surveys for the information required, except that the information required with respect to handicapped students shall be furnished in accordance with section 422 of this Act.

(5) The Secretary may conduct special studies on enrollment of disadvantaged students in vocational education programs, on the participation of handicapped students in vocational education programs, and any other similar subjects which the Secretary deems appropriate.

(6) The Secretary shall use 33⅓ percent of the funds available for this part under section 451(3) for the purpose of assisting the States in complying with the data collection requirements of this subsection and shall use 66⅔ percent to carry out subsection (b).

(b)(1) There is established a National Occupational Information Coordinating Committee which shall consist of the Secretary, the Administrator of the National Center of Education Statistics, the Commissioner of Labor Statistics, the Assistant Secretary for Employment and Training, the Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Economic Development, the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower, Reserve Affairs and Logistics), the Under Secretary of Agriculture for Small Community and Rural Development, and the Assistant Secretary of Health and Human Services for Vocational Rehabilitation. The Committee, with funds available to it under section 431(3) shall—

(A) in the use of program data and employment data, improve coordination between, and communication among, administrators and planners of programs authorized by this Act and by the Job Training Partnership Act, employment security agency administrators, research personnel, and employment and training planning and administering agencies at the Federal, State, and local levels;

(B) develop and implement an occupational information system to meet the common occupational information needs of vocational education programs and employment and training programs of the national, State, and local levels, which system shall include data on occupational demand and supply based on uniform definitions, standardized estimating procedures, and standardized occupational classifications;

(C) conduct studies on the effect of technological change on existing or emerging occupations and on the knowledge and job skills which will be required by workers; and

(D) assist State occupational information coordinating committees established pursuant to paragraph (2);

(2) Each State receiving assistance under this Act and under the Job Training Partnership Act shall establish a State occupational information coordinating committee composed of representatives of the State board, the State employment security agency, the State job coordinating council, the agency administering the vocational rehabilitation program, and the State economic development agency. This committee shall, with funds available to it from the National Coordinating Committee established pursuant to paragraph (1)—

(A) implement an occupational information system in the State which will meet the common needs for the planning for, and the operation of, programs of the State board assisted under this Act and of the administering agencies under the Job Training Partnership Act; and

(B) use the occupational information system to implement a career information delivery system.

INFORMATION BASE FOR VOCATIONAL EDUCATION DATA SYSTEM

SEC. 422. The Secretary shall assure that adequate information on the access to vocational education programs by handicapped secondary school students be included in the national vocational education data system, required by section 161 of the Vocational Education Act of 1963 (prior to the repeal made by section 523(a)) and by this part, for the biennial survey. The information base for the biennial survey for the handicapped shall be in 6-digit detail as defined in A Classification of Instructional Programs published by the National Center for Educational Statistics. The survey shall include information with respect to total handicapped enrollment by program, by type of instructional setting, and by type of handicapping condition.

PART D—NATIONAL EMPLOYERS COUNCIL ON VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

COUNCIL ESTABLISHED

SEC. 431. (a)(1) There is established the National Employers Council on Vocational Education. The Council shall consist of twenty-one members appointed by the President.

(2) The members of the Council shall serve for such terms as the President may prescribe. Members of the Council shall be individuals who are owners, chief executives, or chief operating officers of private for-profit business concerns, including health and educational institutions, as well as other executives of business concerns and business associations who have substantial management or policy responsibility, except that at least one member shall be a nonpublic member appointed from among members of the National Commission for Employment Policy established under the Job Training Partnership Act, and not more than 3 members shall be representatives of labor organizations.

(b) The Council shall advise the President, Congress, and the Secretary on—

(1) the effectiveness of this Act or its implementation in achieving the stated purposes of this Act and in providing students with skills that meet needs of employers;

(2) strategies for increasing cooperation between business and vocational education so that training is available for new technologies for which there is a demand;

(3) practical approaches to retraining adult workers, and to enhancing education, business, and labor cooperation in retraining efforts; and

(4) effective ways of providing access to information regarding the market demand for skills that will enable State and local personnel to develop responsive vocational education curricula.

(c) The Council may establish working groups on occupational competencies to provide the Secretary, the President, the Congress, and the States with current information on the types and levels of occupational competencies necessary for entry and sustained productive employment in given jobs or industries, including levels of skills required, and equipment, methods, and facilities needed for the occupation. The Council may establish working groups for the occupations the Council deems important or necessary and may reconstitute such groups as occupational priorities are revised. Members of the working groups shall be appointed by the Council on the advice of national trade and professional associations and labor organizations. Working group members shall be individuals with specific knowledge in the technology and practice of the occupations relevant to the task of the group. The Council may provide the results and recommendations of the working groups to each State council on vocational education and other appropriate State agencies.

(d) The Council may use funds available for this part to obtain the services of staff specialists for working groups who have demonstrated technical skills and instructional ability in the occupations in question.

(e) The Council shall annually conduct a survey and report its findings to the President, the Secretary, and the Congress on how the competency statements provided by the Council have been used by States.

PART E—BILINGUAL VOCATIONAL TRAINING

PROGRAM AUTHORIZED

SEC. 441. (a)(1) It is the purpose of this part to teach vocational skills to limited English proficient adults and out-of-school youth to enable them to obtain the full benefits of the programs offered while they develop competency in the English language.

(2) From amounts appropriated pursuant to section 3(b)(2) in each fiscal year, the Secretary shall carry out, directly or through grants to or contracts with State and local educational agencies, postsecondary vocational institutions, institutions of higher education, and other public and private agencies, organizations, and institutions, programs of bilingual vocational training authorized by this part.

(b) In carrying out the provisions of this part, payments for bilingual vocational training may be used for—

(1) training allowances for out of school youth or adults, who are unemployed or underemployed, and who desire training or retraining to achieve year-around employment;

(2) bilingual vocational instructor training, preservice training for instructors and related personnel, and developmental programs to continue or improve the qualifications of bilingual vocational instructors, including fellowships and traineeships;

(3) the development of instructional materials, methods, and techniques for bilingual vocational education; and

(4) programs to familiarize appropriate State agencies and training institutions with the results and findings of successful programs assisted under this part.

PART F—GENERAL PROVISIONS

DISTRIBUTION OF ASSISTANCE

SEC. 451. Of the amounts available pursuant to section 3(b)(1) for any fiscal year for this title—

(1) 30 percent shall be available for part A;

(2) 33 percent shall be available for part B;

(3) 30 percent shall be available for part C; and

(4) 7 percent shall be available for part D.

TITLE V—GENERAL PROVISIONS

PAYMENTS

SEC. 501. The Secretary shall pay from its allotment under section 101 to each State for any fiscal year for which the State has a State plan approved in accordance with section 114 (including any amendment to such plan) the Federal share of the costs of carrying out the State plan.

FEDERAL SHARE

SEC. 502. (a) The Federal share for each fiscal year shall be—

(1) 50 percent of the costs of administration of the State plan;

(2) 100 percent of the costs of vocational education services and activities under title II for individuals described in section 201(b)(1) and section 201(b)(2), except that the Federal share shall be 50 percent of the costs of vocational education services and activities under such title for such individuals whenever separate vocational education programs are furnished for disadvantaged or handicapped students described in such subsections;

(3) 100 percent of the costs of vocational education services and activities under title II for individuals described in section 201(b)(3) and section 201(b)(4); and

(4) 50 percent of the costs of vocational education improvement, innovation, and expansion programs under title III.

(b) The non-Federal contribution may be in cash or in kind, fairly evaluated, including but not limited to planning expenses, plant, equipment, and services.

MAINTENANCE OF EFFORT

SEC. 503. (a)(1) Payments for any fiscal year under this Act to a State shall be reduced in accordance with paragraph (2) unless the Secretary finds that the fiscal effort per student, or the aggregate expenditures for vocational education, in that State for the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which the determination was made was not less than 95 percent of such fiscal effort per student or the aggregate expenditures for vocational education for the second preceding fiscal year.

(2) The Secretary shall reduce the amount of the payment of funds under this Act, to which the State otherwise would have been entitled under its allocation, in the exact proportion to which a State fails to meet the requirements of paragraph (1) by falling below 95 percent of the fiscal effort per student or the aggregate expenditures for vocational education (using the measure most favorable to the State), and no such lesser amount shall be used for computing the effort required under paragraph (1) for subsequent years.

(b) The Secretary may waive the requirements of this section for one fiscal year only, upon making a determination that such waiver would be equitable due to exceptional or uncontrollable circumstances affecting the ability of the applicant to meet such requirements, such as a natural disaster or an unforeseen and precipitous decline in financial resources.

WITHHOLDING; JUDICIAL REVIEW

SEC. 504. (a) Whenever the Secretary, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State board, finds that—

(1) the State plan or amendment approved under section 114 has been so changed that it no longer complies with the provisions of this Act; or the Secretary shall notify such State board that no further payments will be made to the State under this Act (or, further payments to the State will be limited to programs under or portions of the State plan not affected by such failure) until satisfied that there will no longer be any failure to comply. Until so satisfied, the Secretary shall make no further payments to such State under this Act (or shall limit payments to programs under, or portions of, the State plan not affected by such failure).

(b) A State board which is dissatisfied with a final action of the Secretary under this section may appeal to the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which the State is located, by filing a petition with such court within sixty days after such final action. A copy of the petition shall be forthwith transmitted by the clerk of the court to the Secretary, or any officer designated by him for that purpose. The Secretary thereupon shall file in the court the record of the proceedings on which action is based, as provided in section 2112 of title 28, United States Code. Upon the filing of such petition, the court shall have jurisdiction to affirm the action of the Secretary or to set aside such action, in whole or in part, temporarily or permanently, but until the filing of the record, the Secretary may modify or set aside his action. The findings of the Secretary as to the facts, if supported by the weight of evidence, shall be conclusive, but the court, for good cause shown, may remand the case to the Secretary to take further evidence, and the Secretary may thereupon make new or modified findings of fact and may modify his previous action, and shall file in the court the record of the further proceedings. Such new or modified findings of fact shall likewise be conclusive if supported by the weight of evidence. The judgment of the court affirming or setting aside, in whole or in part, any action of the Secretary shall be final, subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certiorari certification as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code. The commencement of proceedings under this subsection shall, unless specifically ordered otherwise by the court, operate as a stay of the Secretary's action.

(c)(1) If any eligible recipient is dissatisfied with the final action of the State board or other appropriate State administering agency with respect to approval of its local application, such eligible recipient may, within sixty days after such final action or notice thereof, whichever is later, file with the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which the State is located a petition for review of that action. A copy of the petition shall be forthwith transmitted by the clerk of the court to the State board or other appropriate State administering agency. The State board or such other agency thereupon shall file in the court the record of the proceeding on which the State board or such other agency based its action, as provided in section 2112 of title 28, United States Code.

(2) The findings of fact by the State board or other appropriate administering agency, if supported by substantial evidence, shall be conclusive; but the court, for good cause shown, may remand the case to the State board or such other agency to take further evidence, and the State board or such other agency may thereupon make new or modified findings of fact and may modify its previous action, and shall certify to the court the record of the further proceedings.

(3) The court shall have jurisdiction to affirm the action of the State board or other appropriate administering agency or to set it aside, in whole or in part. The judgment of the court shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certiorari certification as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code.

(d)(1) The Secretary shall prescribe and implement rules to assure that any hearing conducted under section 434(c) of the General Education Provisions Act in connection with funds made available from appropriations under this Act shall be held within the State of the affected unit of local government or geographic area within the State.

(2) For the purposes of paragraph (1)—

(A) the term "unit of local government" means a county, municipality, town, township, village, or other unit of general government below the State level; and

(B) the term "geographic area within a State" means a special purpose district or other region recognized for governmental purposes within such State which is not a unit of local government.

AUDITS

SEC. 505. Each State shall obtain financial and compliance audits of any funds which the State receives under this Act. Such audits shall be made public within the State on a timely basis. The audits shall be conducted at least every two years by an organization or person independent of an agency administering activities under the Act. The audits shall be conducted in accordance with the Comptroller General's Standard for Audit of Governmental Organizations, Programs, Activities, and Functions.

PART B—TRANSITIONAL AND CONFORMING PROVISIONS

EFFECTIVE DATE

SEC. 521. (a) This Act shall take effect for fiscal years beginning on or after October 1, 1984, except that the authority of the Secretary to prescribe regulations under this Act and the responsibility of States to submit State plans are effective upon the date of enactment of this Act.

(b) Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall prescribe regulations for carrying out the provisions of this Act.

TRANSITION PROVISIONS

SEC. 522. (a) Each State and eligible recipient of financial assistance under this Act, or under the Vocational Education Act of 1963, may expend funds received under this Act or under the Vocational Education Act of 1963 to—

(1) conduct planning for any program or activity authorized under this Act; and

(2) conduct any other activity deemed necessary by the recipient to provide for an orderly transition to the operation of programs under this Act.

(b) On the effective date of this Act, the personnel, property, and records of the National Occupational Information Coordinating Committee established under section 161(b) of the Vocational Education Act of 1963 shall be transferred to the National Occupational Information Coordinating Committee established pursuant to section 421 of this Act.

CONFORMING AMENDMENTS

TITLE VI—NATIONAL SUMMIT CONFERENCE ON EDUCATION

SHORT TITLE; FINDINGS

SEC. 601. (a) This title may be cited as the "National Summit Conference on Education Act of 1984".

(b) The Congress finds that—

(1) increased economic competition requires the development of a better trained and educated workforce which our educational institutions must provide;

(2) problems and deficiencies in American elementary and secondary education require consideration of possible new directions in setting national education policy; and

(3) there should be a National Summit Conference on Education authorized by law by Congress to provide directions for such policy, and any conference established by the Department of Education should be complementary to the National Summit Conference on Education.

(c) For the purpose of this title, the term "Conference" means the National Summit Conference on Education established by this title.

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 602. There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Education $500,000 for the purpose of conducting a National Summit Conference on Education, in accordance with the provisions of this title.

PARTICIPANTS

SEC. 603. The participants in the Conference shall consist of not more than two hundred individuals. The participants in the Conference shall be representative of teachers, parents, school administrators, school board members, State education officials, State legislators, Governors, students, business, labor, and special populations, including females, racial and ethnic minorities, and the disabled. The participants in the Conference shall be selected so as to provide racial, political, and geographic balance.

SELECTION OF PARTICIPANTS

SEC. 604. The participants in the Conference shall be chosen from among nominees submitted to the Executive Committee (established pursuant to section 605) by organizations representing public and private elementary and secondary education, vocational education, adult education, teacher training, women, racial and ethnic minorities, and the handicapped, as well as from among nominees supplied by organizations representing business, organized labor, parents, libraries, and all levels of government.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

SEC. 605. (a) There shall be an Executive Committee of the Conference consisting of—

(1) two individuals appointed by the President,

(2) two individuals appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives,

(3) two individuals appointed by the Majority Leader of the Senate, and

(4) six individuals appointed by the Governors of the States acting as a group.

The six individuals appointed by the Governors shall be appointed from individuals representing chief State school officers, local and State school boards, State legislatures, and Governors.

(b) The Executive Committee shall be responsible for selecting a presiding officer and for selecting the organizations (described in section 604) to supply a list of nominees for selection as participants in the Conference. Not less than 30 organizations shall be so selected by the Executive Committee. Each organization selected shall nominate at least the number of individuals specified by the Executive Committee for that organization in order to provide the representation required by sections 603 and 604. The Executive Committee shall determine the total number of individuals to be selected for participation, consistent with the requirements of this title.

(c) The Executive Committee shall serve without compensation.

STAFF

SEC. 606. The Executive Committee shall appoint and fix the compensation of such staff as may be necessary, not to exceed the equivalent of four full-time employees. The staff shall assist the Executive Committee in planning, conducting, and completing the work of the Conference. The administrative support for the staff and the Executive Committee shall be the responsibility of the Department of Education in conjunction with the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the Majority Leader of the Senate. The staff and the Executive Committee shall report, through properly established lines of authority, to the Congress.

PROCEDURE

SEC. 607. (a) A majority of participants of the Conference shall constitute a quorum if votes are required. If task forces are created, the majority of task force participants shall constitute a quorum if a vote is required.

(b)(1) The Executive Committee shall select the conference site and shall determine the duration of the Conference. The duration of the Conference shall not exceed six days. Neither the regional meetings (described in section 608(a)) nor the Conference shall meet before January 1, 1985.

(2) The Conference shall prepare and transmit a written record of its recommendations to the President, to the Congress, and to the States not later than October 15, 1985.

AGENDA OF THE CONFERENCE

SEC. 608. (a) The Executive Committee, using data concerning education supplied by the Secretary of Education and by the States, shall develop an agenda for the Conference prior to the Conference. The data will include information furnished to the Secretary from statewide and regional summit conferences devoted to obtaining citizen views about education. The purpose of this agenda shall be to facilitate the development of recommendations on various issues raised by such recently issued education reports as the report of the National Commission on Excellence in Education, the Carnegie Report on American High Schools, the National Science Boards' Report on Mathematics, Science and Technology Education, and others.

(b) The agenda so developed shall take into account that it shall be the purpose of the Conference to create national bipartisan support for education at all levels of government, and to make recommendations for the development of viable local, State, and national intergovernmental and intragovernmental cooperation in education to make the most efficient use of funds from all levels of government.

(c) The agenda shall also provide for procedures for determining national consensus regarding types of strategies to be used and the appropriate levels of government to have primary responsibility for implementing educational policy.

TITLE VII—WOMEN'S EDUCATIONAL EQUITY

PROGRAM AUTHORIZATION

SEC. 701. (a) Section 938 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended to read as follows:

"AUTHORIZATIONS OF APPROPRIATIONS

"SEC. 938. For the purpose of carrying out this part, there are authorized to be appropriated $6,200,000 for the fiscal year 1985, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the succeeding fiscal years ending prior to October 1, 1989.".

(b) Section 937 of such Act is amended by inserting after "1984" a comma and the following: "and every other year thereafter".

TITLE VIII—JOB TRAINING REGULATIONS

REGULATIONS AMENDED

SEC. 801. Section 629.38(e)(2)(iii) of the regulations relating to job training published by the Secretary of Labor on March 15, 1983, is amended to read as follows:

"(iii) Stipulates that full payment for the full unit price will be made only upon completion of training by a participant and placement of the participant into unsubsidized employment in the occupation trained for and at not less than the wage specified in the agreement, or in the case of youth the attainment of other outcomes specified in section 106(b)(2) of the Act."

until the Secretary modifies such regulations in accordance with the provisions of section 169 of the Job Training Partnership Act.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist on its amendments and request a conference with the House of Representatives thereon, and that the Chair be authorized to appoint conferees at a subsequent time.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote on the action of the Senate.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, that does cover both the passage of the bill and the amendment of the title; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. STEVENS. I move to indefinitely postpone consideration of Calendar No. 914, which is S. 2341.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION HEALTH CARE AMENDMENTS OF 1984

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate Calendar No. 929, S. 2514.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will state the bill by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2514) to amend title 38, United States Code, to enhance the management of Veterans' Administration medical treatment programs by providing for the referral of veterans to non-Veterans' Administration entities and arrangements for additional necessary services, to revise and clarify the authority for the furnishing of care for veterans suffering from alcohol or drug dependence, to require the Administrator to establish the position of Associate Director for Post Traumatic Stress Disorder, to require the Administrator to submit a report to Congress regarding programs of the Veterans' Administration providing hospice and respite care to certain veterans, and to authorize the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to provide telecaption television decoders to totally deaf veterans in certain cases, and for other purposes.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill which had been reported from the Committee on Veterans' Affairs with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof:

That (a) this Act may be cited as the "Veterans' Administration Health Care Amendments of 1984".

(b) Except as otherwise specifically provided whenever in this Act an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of title 38, United States Code.

COORDINATION OF VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION-COMMUNITY REFERRAL ASSISTANCE AND SERVICES

SEC. 2. (a) Chapter 73 is amended by adding at the end of subchapter 1 the following new section:

"§ 4120. Coordination of referral assistance and services

"In order to improve the provision, and enhance the management, of health-care and health-related services by the Veterans' Administration and other sources to veterans who are eligible for care under chapter 17 of this title, with a special emphasis on veterans who are 65 years of age or older, and who are determined by the Administrator to be in need of assistance under this section, the Administrator shall designate one organizational unit in each Veterans' Administration health-care facility for the purpose of coordinating the provision of referral assistance, and facilitating and helping to coordinate the provision of such services not at Veterans' Administration expense, to such eligible veterans when such referral is reasonably necessary for the health of such veterans. The Administrator shall carry out this section (1) in a manner consistent (A) with the policy of the United States, set forth in section 409(a) of Public Law 97-306, that the Veterans' Administration shall maintain a comprehensive, nationwide health-care system for the direct provision of quality health-care services to eligible veterans, (B) with the mandate of section 4101(a) of this title that the Department of Medicine and Surgery shall provide a complete medical and hospital service for the medical care and treatment of veterans, and (C) with the United States Government's historic, firm commitment, and moral obligation, as embodied in this title, to provide care for veterans with service-connected disabilities, and (2) in conjunction with local, State, Federal, and private agencies providing and coordinating the provision of services to elderly persons and with other pertinent public and private agencies.".

(b) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 73 is amended by adding after the item relating to section 4119 the following:

"4120. Coordination of referral assistance and services.".

ALCOHOL AND DRUG TREATMENT AND REHABILITATION

SEC. 3. (a) Section 620A is amended—

(1) by striking out "pilot" in subsection (a)(1) both places it appears;

(2) by striking out "fifth" and inserting in lieu thereof "seventh" and by striking out "pilot" in subsection (e);

(3) in subsection (f)—

(A) by inserting "(1)" before "Not"; and

(B) by inserting before the period "prior to the amendment of this section by the Veterans' Administration Health Care Amendments of 1984"; and

(C) by adding at the end of the following new paragraph:

"(2) Not later than March 1, 1986, and March 1, 1987, the Administrator shall report to such committees on the findings and recommendations of the Administrator pertaining to the operation of the program authorized by subsection (a) during the preceding fiscal year and shall include in such report information for such year regarding average duration of participation of veterans, rates of successful rehabilitation, and any changes in average and maximum allowable charges per veteran under contracts entered into by the Veterans' Administration as part of such program."; and

(4) by adding at the end of the following new subsection:

"(h) Not later than 12 months after the date of the enactment of this subsection, the Administrator shall prescribe regulations to provide guidelines for the treatment and rehabilitation of veterans for alcohol or drug dependence or abuse disabilities under this chapter in facilities over which the Administrator has direct jurisdiction. Such guidelines shall include guidance—

"(1) on the duration of such treatment and rehabilitation under this chapter, taking into account the duration of such treatment and rehabilitation in non-Veterans' Administration programs and identifying specifically duration in detoxification, inpatient-acute care, inpatient-rehabilitation and extended care, outpatient care, and followup services; and

"(2) on the provision of referral assistance and the development, implementation, and monitoring of individual treatment plans and followup for veterans receiving such care and treatment.".

(b) Not later than March 1, 1985, and March 1 of each subsequent year, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Senate a report containing a comprehensive survey of the activities during the preceding fiscal year of all Veterans' Administration-operated programs providing treatment and rehabilitation for alcohol or drug dependence or abuse disabilities, identifying, by facility, the number of beds involved, the number of patients and episodes of care (whether inpatient-acute, inpatient-rehabilitation, inpatient-extended, or outpatient), the specific treatment methodologies employed, average lengths of participation, rates of successful rehabilitation, and staffing levels and standards, together with a national summary of such information. The third such report shall also contain information on the effectiveness of such treatment and rehabilitation in light of the regulations prescribed under subsection (h) of section 620A (as added by the amendment made by subsection (a)(4) of this section), including information on diagnostic methodologies employed, use of case-management approaches and discharge planning, lengths of participation, treatment results, methods used for approving, evaluating, and monitoring the use of non-Veterans' Administration facilities under section 620A, and referral and followup activities for veterans discharged from such programs and such facilities.

(c) The section heading of section 620A and the item relating to such section in the table of sections at the beginning of chapter 17 are each amended by striking out the semicolon and "pilot program".

MEDICAL AND REHABILITATIVE DEVICES

SEC. 4. Section 617 is amended—

(1) by redesignating such section as subsection (a); and

(2) by adding at the end of the following new subsection:

"(b) In order to assist in overcoming the handicap of deafness, the Administrator may provide assistive devices, including telecaptioning television decoders, to veterans who are profoundly deaf and entitled to compensation on account of hearing impairment.".

POST-TRAUMATIC-STRESS DISORDER

SEC. 5. (a)(1) In order to enhance the Veterans' Administration's capability to diagnose and treat post-traumatic-stress disorder (hereinafter in this section referred to as "PTSD"), the Chief Medical Director of the Veterans' Administration shall establish in the Department of Medicine and Surgery a Special Committee on Post-Traumatic-Stress Disorder (hereinafter in this section referred to as the "Special Committee") and shall appoint qualified employees of the Department to serve on the Special Committee.

(2) The Special Committee shall assess, and carry out a continuing assessment if, the capacity of the Veterans' Administration to provide diagnosis and treatment to eligible veterans with PTSD and shall advise the Chief Medical Director regarding the development of policies, the provision of guidance, and the coordination of services for the diagnosis and treatment of veterans with PTSD in inpatient PTSD units, other inpatient psychiatric programs, outpatient mental health clinics, and readjustment counseling programs of the Veterans' Administration. The Special Committee shall also make recommendations to the Chief Medical Director for guidance regarding appropriate diagnostic and treatment methods and referral for and coordination of followup care and with respect to the evaluation of PTSD treatment programs, the conduct of research concerning such diagnosis and treatment (taking into account the provisions of subsection (b) of this section), special programs of education and training on PTSD for employees of the Department of Medicine and Surgery and the Department of Veterans' Benefits (also taking into account such provisions), the appropriate allocation of resources for all such activities, and any specific steps that should be taken to improve such diagnosis and treatment and to correct any deficiencies in the operations of inpatient PTSD units.

(b) The Chief Medical Director of the Veterans' Administration shall establish and operate a National Center on PTSD (A) to carry out and promote research into, and the training of health-care and related personnel in, the diagnosis and treatment of veterans with PTSD, and (B) to serve as a resource center for and to promote and to seek to coordinate the exchange of information regarding all research and training activities carried out by the Veterans' Administration, and by other Federal and non-Federal entities, with respect to PTSD.

(c)(1)(A) Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Senate a report on the implementation of subsections (a) and (b).

(B) The report required by subparagraph (A) shall contain—

(i) a list of the members of the Special Committee,

(ii) the assessment of the Chief Medical Director of the Veterans' Administration, after consultation with the Special Committee, regarding the capability of the Veterans' Administration to meet the needs of Vietnam veterans, former prisoners of war, and other eligible veterans for inpatient and outpatient PTSD diagnosis and treatment (both through PTSD inpatient treatment units and otherwise) as well as a description of the results of any evaluations that have been made of PTSD inpatient treatment units in existence on the date of the enactment of this act,

(iii) the plans of the Special Committee for further assessments for the capability of the Veterans' Administration to diagnose and treat veterans with PTSD,

(iii) the plans of the Special Committee for further assessments of the capability of the Veterans' Administration to diagnose and treat veterans with PTSD,

(iv) the recommendations made by the Special Committee to the Chief Medical Director,

(v) a description of the steps taken, plans made (and a timetable for their execution), and resources to be applied to implement subsections (a) and (b), and

(vi) the assessment of the Administrator of the capacity of the Veterans' Adminstration to meet in all geographic areas of the United States the needs described in clause (ii) and any plans and timetable for increasing that capacity (including the costs of such action).

(2) Not later than February 1, 1986, and February 1 of each subsequent year, the Administrator shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Senate a report containing information updating the report or reports submitted under this subsection prior to the submission of such report.

REPORT ON VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION PROGRAMS FOR TERMINALLY ILL VETERANS

SEC. 6. (a) Not later than September 30, 1985, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Senate a report on programs of the Veterans' Administration to furnish palliative care, supportive counseling, and other medical services to terminally ill veterans and, pursuant to section 601(6)(B) of title 38, United States Code, supportive counseling to members of such veterans' families.

(b) The report required by subsection (a) shall include—

(1) a review of Veterans' Administration policies and guidelines on the provision of care, counseling, and services described in subsection (a);

(2) a review of the care, counseling, and services furnished, including the treatment modalities used and services furnished by the Veterans' Administration;

(3) an analysis and a comparison of the care, counseling, and services furnished with respect to terminally ill veterans in hospice and other Veterans' Administration programs, including a comparison of the routine and ancillary services, of the duration of inpatient and outpatient treatment and hospital-based home care, and of the cost of care furnished in such programs;

(4) an explanation of how the care, counseling, and services described in subsection (a) is or will be included in the overall plans of the Veterans' Administration for providing health care to older veterans in the future and the extent to which plans to furnish hospice care are included in such plans;

(5) a review of any steps taken to arrange for the exchange of information between Veterans' Administration facilities providing the care, counseling, and services described in subsection (a) and non-Veterans' Administration facilities providing similar care, counseling, and services; and

(6) proposals for such administrative or legislative action as the Administrator may consider appropriate in light of the information provided in the report.

AUTOMOBILE ADAPTIVE EQUIPMENT

SEC. 7. (a) Subsection (c) of section 1903 is amended to read as follows:

"(c)(1) An eligible person shall not be entitled to adaptive equipment under this chapter for more than two automobiles or other conveyances (A) at any one time, or (B) except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, in any four-year period.

"(2) If, in a case in which the limitation set forth in paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection precludes an eligible person from being entitled to adaptive equipment, the Administrator determines that, due to circumstances beyond the control of the eligible person, one of the automobiles or other conveyances for which adaptive equipment was provided in the applicable four-year period is no longer available for the use of such person, the Administrator may, as a matter of discretion and pursuant to regulations which the Administrator shall prescribe, provide adaptive equipment for such person for an additional automobile or other conveyance during such period.".

(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on October 1, 1984.

(2) In the case of a person who was provided adaptive equipment under chapter 39 of title 38, United States Code, for an automobile or other conveyance after September 30, 1980, but prior to October 1, 1984, and who has available for use such automobile or other conveyance on the date of the enactment of this Act, the first four-year period applicable to such person under subsection (c) of section 1903 of such title (as amended by subsection (a)) shall begin on the most recent date prior to October 1, 1984, on which such individual was provided such equipment.

DEFINITION OF VIETNAM ERA

SEC. 8. Section 101(29) is amended to read as follows:

"(29) The term 'Vietnam era' means (A) the period beginning on August 5, 1964, and ending on May 7, 1975, and (B) the period beginning on February 21, 1961, and ending on May 7, 1975, in the case of a veteran who served in the Republic of Vietnam during such period.".

READJUSTMENT COUNSELING

SEC. 9. (a) Section 612A(g)(2)(B) is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" at the end of clause (i);

(2) by striking out the period at the end of clause (ii) and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon and "and"; and

(3) by adding after clause (ii) the following:

"(iii) assessments of whether or not individuals who—

"(I) are veterans who served on active duty (aa) during World War II or the Korean conflict (with particular emphasis on those who engaged in combat with the enemy), (bb) during any period and who were prisoners of war, or (cc) after May 7, 1975 (with particular emphasis on those who served in areas during periods in which members of the Armed Forces in such areas were subjected to danger from armed conflict comparable to the danger to which members of the Armed Forces have been subjected in combat with the enemy during a period of war), and

"(II) members of the Armed Forces serving on active duty who (aa) served on active duty during World War II or the Korean conflict (with particular emphasis on those who engaged in combat with the enemy) or after May 7, 1975 (with particular emphasis on those who served in areas during periods described in division (I)(cc) of this clause), or (bb) were prisoners of war, need readjustment counseling and, if so, the Administrator's recommendations on the most desirable means by which such needs should be met, taking into account the resources that would be required to meet such needs and specifically whether such persons should be made eligible for readjustment counseling under this section and, if so, what effect that eligibility would have on the availability of such services for Vietnam-era veterans.

The Administrator may submit the assessments and recommendations described in subclause (iii) at any time prior to April 1, 1987.".

(b)(1) Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs and the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the appropriate committees of the Congress a joint report setting forth—

(A) their recommendations, taking into account the extent of the availability of Veterans' Administration resources to provide readjustment counseling to Vietnam-era veterans, on the appropriateness and desirability of extending eligibility for readjustment counseling under section 612A of title 38, United States Code, to individuals who are serving on active duty in the Armed Forces of the United States and (i) who also served on such active duty during the Vietnam era (as defined in section 101(29) of such title (as amended by section 8 of this Act)), or (ii) who also served on active duty after May 7, 1975, in an area during a period in which hostilities (as defined in paragraph (2) of this subsection) occurred in such area;

(B) their determinations as to (I) whether, if eligibility for such readjustment counseling were so extended, the Veterans' Administration and the Department of Defense would enter into an agreement or agreements pursuant to which the Department of Defense would reimburse the Veterans' Administration for such counseling provided to such individuals while serving on active duty, (II) if so, whether or not such reimbursement would be made without the necessity of the Veterans' Administration providing the Department of Defense with the names of the individuals so counseled and, if not, whether or not a requirement that such names be provided would discourage active-duty personnel from requesting such services, and (III) the manner and extend to which the Veterans' Administration and the Department of Defense would undertake to carry out outreach activities to inform such individuals about the availability of such counseling; and

(C) any other information, determinations, or recommendations pertinent to the subject matter of the report that the Administrator and Secretary consider appropriate.

(2) For the purpose of paragraph (1), the term "hostilities" means a situation as to which the Administrator, in consultation with the Secretary, finds that members of the Armed Forces in such situation were subjected to danger from armed conflict comparable to the danger to which members of the Armed Forces have been subjected in combat with the enemy during a period of war.

SECURITY SERVICE PERSONNEL

SEC. 10. (a) Section 218 is amended to read as follows:

"§ 218. Security and law enforcement on property under the jurisdiction of the Veterans' Administration

"(a)(1) The Administrator, with the concurrence of the Attorney General, shall prescribe regulations to provide for the maintenance of law and order and the protection of persons and property on land and in buildings under the jurisdiction of the Veterans' Administration and not under the control of the Administrator of General Services (hereinafter in this section referred to as 'Veterans' Administration property'). Such regulations shall prescribe, but need not be limited to—

"(A) rules for conduct on Veterans' Administration property,

"(B) the penalties, within the limits specified in paragraph (2) of this subsection, for violations of such rules,

"(C) policies with respect to the exercise by Veterans' Administration security service officers of the enforcement and arrest authorities granted in subsection (b) of this section,

"(D) the scope and duration of training that is required for Veterans' Administration security service officers, with particular emphasis on dealing with situations involving patients, and

"(E) rules limiting the carrying and use of weapons by Veterans' Administration security service officers.

The rules prescribed under clause (A) of this paragraph, together with the penalties for violations thereof, shall be posted conspicuously on such property.

"(2) Whoever violates any rule prescribed under paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned not more than six months (or such lesser amount or period of time as the Administrator prescribes in the regulations prescribed under paragraph (1) of this subsection), or both.

"(b) The Administrator may designate employees of the Veterans' Administration as Veterans' Administration security service officers. Such officers shall enforce Federal laws, and the rules prescribed under subsection (a)(1)(A) of this section, on Veterans' Administration property. Any Veterans' Administration security service officer, subject to any restrictions under the regulations prescribed under subsection (a) of this section, may make an arrest, with or without a warrant, for any offense on Veterans' Administration property if (1) such offense occurs in such officer's presence, or (2) such officer has reasonable grounds to believe (A) that the offense constitutes a violation of any law of the United States or of any rule prescribed under subsection (a)(1)(A) of this section, and (B) that the person to be arrested has committed that offense.

"(c) With the agreement of the head of the agency concerned, the Administrator may use the facilities and services of Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies when it is economical and in the public interest to do so.

"(d)(1) Notwithstanding subchapter I of chapter 59 of title 5, the Administrator, pursuant to regulations which the Administrator shall prescribe consistent with paragraph (2) of this subsection, may pay allowances for the purchase of uniforms to any Veterans' Administration security service officer who is required to wear a prescribed uniform in the performance of official duties.

"(2) Allowances that the Administrator may pay under paragraph (1) of this subsection shall not exceed—

"(A) at the time the individual is first employed as a Veterans' Administration security service officer, $400; and

"(B) at the beginning of the first fiscal year that begins after the individual has completed 12 months of service as a Veterans' Administration security service officer and at the beginning of each subsequent fiscal year, $200.".

(b)(1) The provisions of section 218 of title 38, United States Code, other than clause (2) of subsection (a) of such section, as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this Act shall remain in effect until the date on which the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs prescribes the regulations required to be prescribed by subsection (a) of such section as amended by subsection (a) of this section.

(2) The authority of the Administrator to designate officers and employees of the Veterans' Administration to act as special policemen under section 218(a)(2) of such title as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this Act shall remain in effect until the date on which the Administrator first exercises the authority under subsection (b) of section 218 of such title as amended by subsection (a) of this section.

(c) The item relating to such section in the table of sections at the beginning of chapter 3 of such title is amended to read as follows:

"218. Security and law enforcement on property under the jurisdiction of the Veterans' Administration.".

(d) Section 4107(g) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)—

(A) by striking out "or" in clause (A);

(B) by striking out the comma and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon and "or" in subclause (iv) of clause (B); and

(C) by inserting after clause (B) the following new clause:

"(C) of employees providing security services, pursuant to section 18 of this title, in buildings under the jurisdiction of the Administrator (and not under the control of the Administrator of General Services) that are used for the purpose of providing health care,";

(2) by striking out "health-care" each place it appears in paragraphs (2)(A) and (4); and

(3) by inserting "or (C)" after "(B)" in paragraph (4).

COMPTROLLER GENERAL REPORT ON MEDICAL PERSONNEL STAFFING LEVELS

SEC. 11. Section 5010(a)(4)(C) is amended to read as follows:

"(C) Not later than fifteen days after the expiration of the period for the submission of a certification by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget under subparagraph (B) of this paragraph, the Comptroller General shall submit to the appropriate committees of the Congress a report stating the Comptroller General's opinion as to whether the Director has complied with the requirements of such subparagraph in providing such certification and in providing to the Veterans' Administration such funded personnel ceiling.".

REPORT ON FEDERAL GOVERNMENT RESPONSIBILITY TO INDIVIDUALS WHO SERVED WITH VOLUNTARY CIVILIAN ORGANIZATIONS IN VIETNAM

SEC. 12. (a)(1) The purpose of this section is to provide a basis for the executive branch and the Congress to evaluate the question of United States Government responsibility, and alternative approaches, for providing individuals who served for a period of at least thirty days in the Republic of Vietnam during the Vietnam era as employees of voluntary organizations, determined by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, in consultation with the Secretary of Defense, to be organizations which provided significant assistance to the United States Armed Forces in the Republic of Vietnam during the Vietnam era, with Federal and other benefits and services (including, but not limited to, health care and monetary compensation for disabilities which may be related to exposure to dioxin or be the result of traumatic events), either through the Veterans' Administration or otherwise, and for assisting such individuals in connection with disabilities they may have incurred as a result of such service.

(2) In order to carry out the purpose stated in paragraph (1), the Administrator, the Secretary of Defense, and the Secretary of Health and Human Services, not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, shall submit to the appropriate committees of the Congress a joint report on the question of United States Government responsibility and setting forth various alternative approaches (together with comments on the appropriateness and the advantages and disadvantages of each) and any recommendations by such officials for legislative and administrative action with respect thereto, for establishing a program for providing such benefits, services, and assistance to such individuals.

(b) For the purpose of this section, the terms "Armed Forces" and "Vietnam era" have the meanings given such terms in section 101(10) and (29) (as amended by section 8 of this Act), respectively, of title 38, United States Code.

CONTRACT CARE IN PUERTO RICO AND THE VIRGIN ISLANDS

SEC. 13. Section 601(4)(C)(v) is amended by striking out "September 30, 1984," and inserting in lieu thereof "September 30, 1985,".

PAYMENT FOR THERAPEUTIC AND REHABILITATIVE ACTIVITIES

SEC. 14. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no amount of remuneration provided to an individual as a participant in a therapeutic or rehabilitative activity carried out pursuant to section 618 of title 38, United States Code, shall be included in determining annual income for purposes of payments of pension (as defined in section 101(15) of such title).

(b)(1) Subsection (a) shall take effect on October 1, 1984, and shall cease to have effect on December 31, 1987.

(2)(A) In the case of each person who on January 1, 1984, was, or on a subsequent date prior to October 1, 1984, became, a participant in an activity under such section 618 and who either (A) continuously participated in such activity from January 1, 1984, or such subsequent date through September 30, 1984, or (B) terminated such participation for the purpose of entering into more remunerative employment, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs shall pay to such person, from funds in the Veterans' Administration compensation and pension account, an amount equal to the amount of pension (as so defined) that such person would have been eligible to receive by reason of subsection (a) if it had become effective as of January 1, 1984.

(B) This paragraph shall take effect on October 1, 1984.

(c) Not later than February 1, 1987, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Senate a report, with respect to fiscal years 1985 and 1986, on the implementation of subsections (a) and (b). Such report shall contain information regarding the numbers of individuals who participated in activities under such section 618, the numbers of such individuals who are in receipt of Veterans' Administration pension, the costs of excluding payments provided for participation in an activity under such section 618 from countable income for Veterans' Administration pension purpose, and the effect of so excluding such payments on the participation of veterans in such activities. Such report shall also and shall include any recommendations of the Administration for legislative or administrative action in light of information contained in the report.

(d) Section 618 is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(f) Neither a veteran's participation in an activity carried out under this section nor such veteran's receipt of remuneration as a result of such participation shall be considered as a basis for the denial or discontinuance of a total disability rating for purposes of compensation or pension based on the veteran's inability to secure or follow a substantially gainful occupation as a result of disability.".

HEALTH CARE IN REMOTE AREAS

SEC. 15. (a) The Congress finds that—

(1) many veterans with service-connected disabilities and other veterans eligible for certain health-care services from the Veterans' Administration, within the limits of Veterans' Administration facilities, reside in areas of the United States that are geographically remote from health-care facilities over which the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs has direct jurisdiction;

(2) for many such veterans such health-care facilities are geographically inaccessible and for many other such veterans the inconvenience of travel to such facilities discourages them from seeking health-care services from the Veterans' Administration; and

(3) a study conducted by the Administrator of eligible veterans residing in remote areas and these veterans' utilization of Veterans' Administration health-care services would provide useful information on the feasibility and appropriateness of alternative approaches to furnishing health-care services to such veterans.

(b)(1) The Administrator shall carry out a study to develop information about veterans who reside in remote areas and are eligible for health-care services from the Veterans' Administration and to develop alternative approaches that could be adopted to furnish such veterans with such services. In carrying out the study, the Administrator shall—

(A) develop, to the maximum feasible extent, statistics on the number of eligible veterans who, during fiscal year 1985—

(i) reside less than 50 miles from the nearest Veteran's Administration medical facility,

(ii) reside between 50 miles and 100 miles from the nearest Veteran's Administration medical facility,

(iii) reside between 100 miles and 200 miles from the nearest Veteran's Administration medical facility, or

(iv) reside more than 200 miles from the nearest Veteran's Administration medical facility;

(B) develop, by each group of residences described in clause (A), statistics on the numbers of eligible veterans who, during such year—

(i) utilize Veteran's Administration medical facilities,

(ii) receive inpatient care in such facilities (including the typical lengths of stay of such veterans in such facilities),

(iii) receive outpatient care from such facilities, or

(iv) receive followup health-care services from such facilities;

(C) develop such further statistics and gather such additional information as the Administrator considers appropriate to carry out the study; and

(D) develop breakdowns of the statistics described in clauses (A) and (B) with respect to age, service connection, and financial need regarding the applicable veteran populations.

(2) Not later than January 1, 1986, the Administrator shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Senate a full report on such study. Such report shall include—

(A) the statistics and breakdown developed and information gathered pursuant to paragraph (1);

(B) the Administrator's findings on the extent of the need for the Veteran's Administration to increase health-care services in remote areas; and

(C) the Administrator's findings and recommendations regarding the advantages and disadvantages of the Veteran's Administration contracting for and making other arrangements for the furnishing of health-care services to eligible veterans in remote areas.

(3) Not later than July 1, 1986, the Administrator shall submit to such committees a report describing an experimental program that could feasibly be carried out through projects in five remote areas, selected on the basis of the statistics, breakdowns, information, and findings included in the report submitted under paragraph (2), to demonstrate alternative approaches for the Veteran's Administration to furnish health-care services to eligible veterans in remote areas. The report shall also include a description of the health-care services, and a detailed breakdown of the costs for them, that could be furnished under such an experimental program to such veterans in each such area, along with the recommendations (and the reasons therefor) of the Administrator regarding whether any such projects should be carried out and such recommendations for legislative or administrative action as the Administrator considers appropriate in light of the informaton contained in the report.

AMENDMENT NO. 3662

(Purpose: To delete certain provisions involving entitlement spending; to direct the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to modify the reversionary interest of the United States in certain land previously conveyed to the State of California; to modify the Veterans' Administration's State veterans' home matching fund construction grant program to authorize grants for the acquisition of State home facilities; to express the sense of Congress about certain recommendations of the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control relating to the Veterans' Administration health-care system; to authorize the Administrator to modify rates of basic pay for certain psychologists; to name certain Veterans' Administration medical centers; and for other purposes)

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk in behalf of Senators SIMPSON and CRANSTON. It is an amendment to the subcommittee substitute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Alaska [Mr. STEVENS] for Mr. SIMPSON, Mr. CRANSTON, Mr. BOSCHWITZ and Mr. WILSON, proposes an amendment numbered 3662.

(1) On page 15, line 6, strike out "extended" and insert in lieu thereof "inpatient-extended".

(2) On page 23, delete lines 14 through 20.

(3) Redesignate sections 9 through 13 as sections 8 through 12, respectively.

(4) On page 33, lines 15 and 16, strike out "(as amended by section 8 of this Act)".

(5) On page 33, strike out line 22 and all that follows through page 35, line 21.

(6) Redesignate section 15 as section 13.

(7) At the end of the bill, add the following new sections;

USE OF CERTAIN LANDS BY THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA

SEC. 14. (a) Notwithstanding the Act described in subsection (b), the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs shall execute such legal documents as are necessary to permit the use of the real property described in subsection (b) (or any portion of such property) for educational or cultural purposes in addition to the use of such property as a research and medical center and for allied purposes. The Administrator may carry out the preceding sentence subject to such terms and conditions as the Administrator determines are necessary in order to protect interests of the United States.

(b) The real property referred to in subsection (a) is the property transferred to the State of California for the use of the University of California by a quitclaim deed dated December 10, 1948, executed by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs under the Act entitled "An Act to authorize the Administrator of Verterans' Affairs to transfer a portion of the Veterans' Administration center at Los Angeles, California, to the State of California for the use of the University of California", approved June 19, 1948 (62 Stat. 559), and recorded in the land records of the County of Los Angeles, California, at page 307 of book 29032.

(c) Any document executed to carry out subsection (a) shall provide that the property involved shall revert to the United States if it ceases to be used as a research and medical center or for educational or cultural purposes.

ACQUISITION OF BUILDINGS FOR STATE HOME FACILITIES

SEC. 15. Subchapter III of chapter 81 is amended as follows:

(1) Section 5031(c) is amended—

(A) by striking out "term 'construction' means" and inserting "terms 'constructed' and 'construction' refer to"; and

(B) by inserting "the acquisition of existing buildings for use as domiciliary or nursing home care facilities," after "home buildings,";

(2) Section 5032 is amended by inserting "to acquire existing buildings for use as State home facilities for furnishing such care to veterans," after "nursing home care to veterans,"; and

(3) Section 5035(a) is amended—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of clause (7); and

(B) in clause (8),

(I) by striking out "sections 276a through 276a-5 of title 40" and inserting in lieu thereof "the Act of March 3, 1931 (40 U.S.C. 276a—276a-5)"; and

(II) by striking out the period at the end and inserting in lieu thereof a comma and "and"; and

(C) by inserting at the end the following new clause:

"(9) in the case of a project for acquisition of a facility, reasonable assurance that the estimated total costs of acquisition of the facility and of any expansion, remodeling, and alteration of the acquired facility necessary to meet Veterans' Administration standards shall not be greater than the estimated cost of constructing an equivalent new facility.".

SENSE OF THE CONGRESS REGARDING CERTAIN GRACE COMMISSION RECOMMENDATIONS

SEC. 16. (a) The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The Department of Medicine and Surgery of the Veterans' Administration, established by an Act of the Congress, represents a national commitment by the Government to meet the medical needs of eligible veterans, especially those who have been disabled as a result of their military service.

(2)(A) Section 409(a) of Public Law 97-306 states that it is the policy of the United States that the Veterans' Administration "shall maintain a comprehensive, nationwide heath-care system for the direct provision of quality health-care services to eligible veterans".

(B) Section 5010(a)(1) of title 38, United States Code, requires the Veterans' Administration to operate and maintain a total of not less than 90,000 hospital and nursing home beds and such additional beds as may be necessary for the Veterans' Administration to meet its contingency obligations to assist the Department of Defense in times of war or national emergency in caring for the casualities of such war or national emergency.

(3) The President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control (commonly known as and hereinafter referred to as the "Grace Commission") has recommended that Veterans' Administration hospitals reduce the average length of stay of their inpatients to a level comparable to that found in the private sector; however, many Veterans' Administration hospital patients have severe and multiple disabilities requiring extensive treatment.

(4) The Grace Commission has recommended that funds for construction of Veterans' Administration hospitals not already under contract be deleted from the Veterans' Administration budget, that bids be invited from private hospital management companies to lease hospital facilities to the Veterans' Administration under long-term contracts, and that such facilities be managed by private companies under short-term performance contracts.

(5) The Grace Commission has recommended that nursing home construction by the Veterans' Administration be entirely discontinued and that the Veterans' Administration contract for the operation of nursing home care facilities by the private sector.

(6) The Grace Commission has recommended that the Veterans' Administration eliminate such number of Veterans' Administration acute care hospital beds as is necessary to achieve an 80 percent occupancy rate for such beds.

(7) The Grace Commission has recommended that the Veterans' Administration consider converting some underutilized acute health-care facilities to extended health-care facilities and phasing out old hospital facilities which may be in need of replacement or significant reconstruction; however, demographic information compiled by the Veterans' Administration shows a forthcoming major increased demand on the Veterans' Admininstration from the aging veterans of World War II for acute as well as long-term health care.

(8) A joint study of the Grace Commission's recommendations conducted by the Congressional Budget Office and the General Accounting Office and submitted to Congress in February 1984, concluded that the potential deficit reductions that might result in 1985 through 1987 from implementation of the Grace Commission's recommendations would be much smaller than the three-year savings projected by the Commission.

(9) The Congress desires to reassure veterans that the Congress remains firmly committed to an independent and comprehensive, nationwide health-care system within the Veterans' Administration, capable of providing quality care to eligible veterans.

(b) In light of the findings made in subsection (a), it is the sense of the Congress (1) that the aforementioned recommendations of the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control relating to the Veterans' Administration health-care system must be evaluated in light of the national policies described in subsection (a)(2) and in light of the aforementioned factors, and (2) that no action to implement such recommendations should be taken without their policy implications having first been given full and careful consideration, after appropriate hearings, by the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Senate.

AUTHORITY TO ADJUST RATES OF PAY FOR CERTAIN PSYCHOLOGISTS

SEC. 17. Section 4104 is amended—

(1) by inserting "(other than those described in paragraph (3))" after "psychologists" in paragraph (2); and

(2) by striking out "Certified" in paragraph (3) and inserting in lieu thereof "Clinical or counseling psychologists who hold diplomas as diplomates in psychology from an accrediting authority approved by the Administrator, certified".

PROGRAM GUIDE ON ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE

SEC. 18. Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall disseminate to appropriate Veterans' Administration medical facilities and submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Senate a program guide to clarify Veterans' Administration policy regarding the authorization and provision of treatment, including diagnosis, information, outpatient services, hospital care, and nursing home care, of veterans who are eligible for services under title 38, United States Code, and who are suffering from Alzheimer's disease and related neurological diseases.

NAMING OF VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION MEDICAL CENTERS

SEC. 19. (a) The Veterans' Administration Medical Center in Murfreesboro, Tennessee, shall after the date of the enactment of this Act be known and designated as the "Sergeant Alvin C. York Veterans' Administration Medical Center". Any reference to such medical center in any law, regulation, map, document, record, or other paper of the United States shall after such date be deemed to be a reference to the Sergeant Alvin C. York Veterans' Administration Medical Center.

(b) The Veterans Administration Medical Center in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, shall after the date of the enactment of this Act be known and designated as the "Clement J. Zablocki Veterans' Administration Medical Center". Any reference to such medical center in any law, regulation, map, document, record, or other paper of the United States shall after such date be deemed to be a reference to the Clement J. Zablocki Veterans' Administration Medical Center.

Mr. STEVENS. I ask adoption of the Simpson-Cranston amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3662) was agreed to.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I rise to express my strong support of S. 2514, the proposed Veterans' Administration Health Care Amendments of 1984, which was approved unanimously by the Committee on Veterans' Affairs on May 9. The provisions of the bill are designed to maintain and improve the quality and efficiency of health-care services provided by the Veterans' Administration to eligible veterans. I believe the committee bill is fair and reasonable and I would urge that my colleagues join me in assuring its passage. The committee intends that the committee bill would enhance the VA's capability to ensure that eligible veterans with certain complex health-care needs are provided with the most appropriate kinds and levels of care and that such care is provided in a coordinated fashion. The committee bill would also enhance the VA's health-care planning processes by examining the demand for certain kinds of health in health-related services.

INTRODUCTION

On March 30, 1984, as chairman of the Senate Committee on Veterans' Affairs, I introduced S. 2514. As introduced, S. 2514 would have, first, required the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to designate one office at each VA health-care facility to coordinate and arrange for certain health and health-related services in local communities at no expense to the Veterans' Administration; second, required the Administrator to issue regulations related to the care for veterans suffering from alcohol or drug dependence; third, provided the Administrator with specific authority to provide assistive devices for certain hearing impaired veterans, including telecaptioning television decoders; fourth, directed the Administrator to establish the position of Associate Director for Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder [PTSD]; and, fifth, directed the Administrator to submit a report to Congress regarding VA hospice and respite programs for terminally ill and chronically ill veterans. On January 24, 1984, I introduced S. 2210. As introduced, S. 2210 would have revised and clarified the eligibility of certain disabled veterans for automobile adaptive equipment.

On April 11, 1984, the committee held a hearing on these bills and a number of other measures and, on May 9, 1984, the committee met in open session and voted to report favorably S. 2514, with an amendment in the nature of a committee substitute and a title amendment. S. 2514 as reported consists of provisions derived with modifications from S. 2514, S. 2210, S. 2269, amendment No. 2850 to S. 2269, and S. 2278.

HIGHLIGHTS OF S. 2514 AS REPORTED

S. 2514, which I will refer to as the committee bill, contains 14 provisions that would enhance the Veterans' Administration's ability to provide high quality health care services to our Nation's veterans in an efficient manner. The committee bill would require the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to designate one organizational unit in each VA medical facility to help coordinate referrals and facilitate the provision of services not at VA expense when such services are necessary to promote the health of veterans. The committee bill would also extend for 2 years the VA's present discretionary authority to contract with halfway houses and other community-based facilities for the treatment and rehabilitation of veterans with alcohol or drug abuse or dependency disabilities.

It would require the Administrator to prescribe regulations providing guidelines for VA operated treatment and rehabilitation programs for veterans with alcohol or drug dependency or abuse disabilities. It would provide the Administrator with specific discretionary authority to provide hearing impairment assistive devices, including telecaptioning television decorders, to veterans who are profoundly deaf and who are entitled to disability compensation for a hearing impairment. It would require the VA to establish a Special Committee for Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder [PTSD] to assist the Chief Medical Director in developing policies, providing guidance, and coordinating the provision of services for the treatment of veterans with PTSD. It would require the VA to establish a National Center on PTSD to carry out research and training of health care personnel and to coordinate the exchange of information regarding PTSD among all VA and other Federal programs engaged in PTSD research and training activities. It would require the VA to report to Congress on its programs to furnish palliative care or pain relief and supportive care to terminally ill veterans.

It would provide that an eligible veteran may have more than one vehicle at any one time with VA-provided adaptive equipment and provide that the veteran shall not be entitled to automobile adaptive equipment for more than two vehicles in any 4-year period unless, through circumstances beyond the veteran's control, the veteran no longer has the use of one of these two vehicles. It would modify the definition of the Vietnam era to include, in a case of those who served in Vietnam, the period beginning on February 21, 1961 and ending on August 4, 1964. It would require the VA and the Department of Defense to submit a joint report to Congress on issues pertaining to readjustment counseling for active duty military personnel who served in the Vietnam era and for active duty military personnel who served on active duty following the end of the Vietnam era in an area and during the period of hostilities, such as in Beirut and Granada. It would also require the VA, as part of a previously mandated report on the vet center program, to assess and report on whether or not there are needs for readjustment counseling with regard to veterans of prior wars, former prisoners of war, and veterans of post-Vietnam hostilities. It would improve and clarify the VA's authority to provide security on VA property through a force of VA security service officers; authorize a special uniform allowance for such employees; and provide the Administrator with new discretionary authority to increase rates of pay, for recruitment and retention purposes, for such employees.

It would modify the due date of a recurring Comptroller General's report on Office of Management and Budget compliance with statutory requirements related to personnel ceilings for the VA's Department of Medicine and Surgery. It would require the VA, the Department of Defense, and the Department of Health and Human Services to report to Congress on the question of the Federal Government's responsibility with respect to civilians, such as members of the American Red Cross, who worked in Vietnam during the Vietnam era and who may have experienced stressful combat situations or who may have health problems stemming from such experiences. It would extend the VA's authority to provide care for veterans in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands on a contract or fee basis until September 30, 1985. It would require the VA to conduct a 3-year demonstration project for veterans participating in incentive therapy and compensated work therapy programs and who are in receipt of VA pension and 100 percent disability compensation for unemployability. And it would require the VA to develop information about veterans who reside in remote areas and are eligible for VA health-care services.

Mr. President, I should like to highlight briefly some of the provisions of the committee bill, which are derived from S. 2514, as introduced.

COORDINATION OF COMPLEX KINDS AND LEVELS OF CARE

The committee bill contains a number of provisions which are designed to improve the VA's ability to target its resources in an efficient and cost-effective manner to provide the most appropriate kinds and levels of health-care services to veterans with certain complex health-care needs. Section 2 of the bill would improve the provision and enhance the management of health care services to veterans eligible for VA medical care by requiring the VA Administrator to designate one organizational unit in each VA medical facility to help coordinate referrals and facilitate the provision of services not at VA expense when such services are necessary to promote the health of veterans.

Currently social work and volunteer services make appropriate referrals on an individual and case-by-case basis, And since 1975, the VA has participated in the "Working Agreement for the Consortium on Information and Referral Services for Older People" which promotes the exchange of information between the VA and the private sector about services for the elderly. This provision is designed to build on and go beyond such activities by encouraging the development of a systematic effort on the part of each and every VA medical facility to develop a network of communication and cooperation to ensure that elderly and certain other veterans are appropriately referred to and receive health-care and other services necessary to improve their health. This is in no way intended to change the mission of the VA to maintain a comprehensive, nationwide health-care system for eligible veterans. Instead this provision would enhance the VA's ability to develop and implement appropriate links between VA and community-based services, particularly those oriented toward meeting the needs of elderly veterans. By increasing the sharing of such information and establishing such a network, improved referrals and therefore the provision of the most appropriate services can be realized.

Section 3 of the bill would extend for 2 years, until October 1987, the VA's discretionary authority to contract with halfway houses and other community-based facilities for the treatment and rehabilitation of veterans with alcohol or drug abuse or dependency problems, would require the VA to submit two reports to Congress on the use of this authority and would delete references to the program as a pilot program.

Mr. President, there are a wide variety of methods in a number of different settings employed to treat persons with alcohol or drug-related disorders or dependencies. Treatment may be provided in inpatient, outpatient, or intermediate settings. Care in community-based peer oriented programs, such as that provided in halfway houses, is designed to provide an appropriate level of treatment in a supportive environment and aid program participants in making the transition between institutionally based treatment and a return to independent living in their communities. The VA has submitted a report to Congress on the effectiveness of the halfway house pilot program. And the VA has said that it favors an extension of the program. The VA believes that it is in many cases medically advantageous and cost effective to provide care in such facilities as compared with providing care in VA facilities.

I support such an extension, but believe that further study is necessary before making any determination concerning the long-term future of the program. The VA's report to Congress, which was not received until after the committee's April 11 hearing, must be thoroughly analyzed prior to making such a determination. In light of the large number of veterans participating in the program, more than 6,000; the large number of contracts awarded, approximately 280; and the cost involved, an estimated $5.7 million in fiscal year 1984 alone, more information about the quality of care, its effectiveness, potential increases in costs, and its future must be obtained.

Mr. President, the second part of this provision would require the Administrator to prescribe regulations providing guidelines for VA-operated treatment and rehabilitation programs for veterans with alcohol or drug dependence or abuse disabilities. The bill would require the regulations to include guidance on the duration of treatment, kinds of treatment provided, use of individual treatment plans, and followup for veterans receiving care and treatment. And the bill would require the Administrator to submit certain reports to Congress on the activities of all VA alcohol and drug treatment programs.

I am deeply concerned about the large numbers of veterans affected by alcoholism and alcohol-related disorders. According to the VA, defined alcoholics or problem drinkers among hospitalized veterans increased from 20 percent in 1970 to 26 percent in 1980. Defined alcoholics or problem drinkers in the under 35 age group increased from 15 percent in 1970 to 35 percent in 1980. And among hospitalized Vietnam-era veteran alcoholics or problem drinkers increased from 13 percent in 1970 to 38 percent in 1980.

Current VA policies and program manuals do exist which give general direction to the alcohol and drug treatment programs throughout the country. However, given the magnitude of the problem, the impact on the veteran's health, and the implications of the problem for expenditure of VA medical care dollars, it is clear that the VA's efforts must be intensified. Current VA policies and manuals regarding treatment for such veterans are broad and general. No specific policies or guidance exists which addresses those veterans who suffer from alcoholism and have multiple problems, such as multiple medical diagnoses, social and financial problems, and those who are at greater risk for relapses and chronic alcoholism. Such complex cases require careful targeting of appropriate kinds and levels of care.

These regulations would produce more consistency and improvement in efforts to treat veterans with complex alcohol-related problems by encouraging the VA to coordinate treatment for veterans throughout the various stages of treatment—detoxification, inpatient care, outpatient care and followup; promote the use of individualized treatment plans; increase efforts to provide follow-up care; and conduct program evaluations to measure the effectiveness of various treatment methods. This provision is designed to provide the VA with total and complete discretion and flexibility concerning medical policies and treatment methods. The reporting requirements would improve the information and statistics currently available on the numbers and health-care needs of veterans with alcohol and drug-related problems.

Section 5 of the committee bill would require the VA to establish a Special Committee for Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder [PTSD] to assist the Chief Medical Director in developing policies, providing guidance, and coordinating the provision of services for the treatment of veterans with PTSD. The committee would advise the Chief Medical Director on the use of appropriate diagnostic and treatment methods, the evaluation of treatment programs for veterans with PTSD, the conduct of research on PTSD, and the use of special education and treatment training programs for VA employees. The bill would also require the VA to establish a National Center of PTSD to carry out research and training of health care personnel and to coordinate the exchange of information regarding PTSD among all VA and other Federal programs engaged in PTSD research and training activities. And the bill would require the VA to report to Congress on its implementation of this provision.

Mr. President, PTSD is a troubling and complex disorder. Much uncertainty remains about the disorder, the criteria used to diagnose it and the methods used to treat it. Mental health experts both inside and outside the VA are not in complete accord about PTSD. What is known, however, is that PTSD may be associated with combat experience. And there is no mental health disorder that is more service-related. I believe the VA should take the lead in addressing those uncertainties that remain about the diagnosis and treatment of veterans with PTSD.

Local initiatives at 10 individual VA medical centers across the country have resulted in the establishment of inpatient PTSD units to treat veterans whose PTSD is too severe to be dealt with on an outpatient basis. I believe this is both appropriate and desirable. However, the VA has not demonstrated clear administrative support for these initiatives. Central coordination of treatment programs, general guidance on existing treatment methods, and training of an increased number of VA personnel—in vet centers, inpatient psychiatric units, and in the Department of Veterans' benefits—is needed.

It is intended by this provision that the special committee would draw on the expertise of psychiatrists, psychologists, social workers, other readjustment counseling personnel, academic affairs personnel and others to aid the Chief Medical Director in providing the necessary guidance to the field on this most important matter. The national center would serve as the focal point for research and training on PTSD. I believe this would enable the VA to coordinate its research efforts and provide training in an efficient manner. Sufficient resources must be allocated to treatment, research, and training initiatives in a balanced way to encourage improvements in these three endeavors. In its views and estimates on the VA's budget for fiscal year 1985, the committee targeted 180 full-time equivalent employees [FTEE] and a total of an additional $5.8 million to improve the VA's ability to treat veterans suffering from PTSD. I expect the VA will comply with the committee's recommendation and allocate 180 additional FTEE in fiscal year 1985 for activities related to the diagnosis and treatment of PTSD.

Section 6 of the bill would require the VA to report to Congress on its programs to furnish palliative—pain relief—and supportive care to terminally ill veterans, including a review of the kinds of care furnished, the treatment methods used, and an analysis and a comparison of the care provided in hospice and other VA programs, including a comparison of costs of such care. It would also require an explanation of how such care is or will be included in the VA's plans for providing health care to older veterans.

Mr. President, the VA already provides care and supportive counseling for eligible veterans who are terminally ill and counseling for affected family members. In addition, the VA has initiated a number of alternative methods of care for the terminally ill, including hospice and hospice-like programs. One inpatient hospice program, 10 other hospice-like programs, and a number of the VA's hospital-based home care programs provide special treatment for the terminally ill. However, testimony at the committee's April 11, 1984, hearing revealed that the optimal way to care for the terminally ill is still not known. More information and experience is necessary to determine the most effective methods to control pain, to relieve symptoms, to improve functioning and quality of life, and to relieve feelings of isolation.

The purpose of the report would be to require the VA to assess various treatment programs for the terminally ill, including nonhospice and hospice oriented programs and to consider the advantages and disadvantages of each of these methods and levels of palliative care, supportive counseling, other medical services, as well as cost-effectiveness, staffing requirements, and the mix of routine and ancillary services employed. Because there is no consensus at this time among providers, researchers, and policymakers as to the benefits and cost-effectiveness of alternative methods of care for the terminally ill, the committee believes that an evaluation by the VA would further our understanding about the complex needs of such patients.

Mr. President, there are two additional provisions which we are proposing to delete from the committee bill and defer consideration to a more appropriate time, because the first concurrent budget resolution is still pending and these two provisions, sections 8 and 14 would require a waiver of section 401(b)(1) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974 to be obtained before the consideration of the bill would be in order.

In lieu of requesting such a waiver, it is our intention to offer an amendment which would strike those two sections from the bill. Section 8 would modify the definition of the Vietnam era to include, in the case of those who served in Vietnam, the period beginning on February 21, 1961, the date of the first reported deaths of U.S. soldiers in Vietnam from hostile actions, and ending on August 4, 1964, the day before the starting date of the Vietnam era in current law. Section 14 would require the VA to conduct a 3-year demonstration project—and submit a report to Congress on 2 years' experience—for veterans participating in incentive therapy and compensated work therapy programs and who are in receipt of VA pension and 100-percent disability compensation for unemployability. We intend to include these two provisions in S. 2736, the proposed "Veterans' Administration Benefit Rate Increase and Program Improvement Act of 1984," as reported.

We also intend to offer today as part of an accepted committee amendment to S. 2514 several provisions which have been worked out and agreed to by the committee's ranking minority member, my colleague from California, Senator ALAN CRANSTON. These amendments include an initiative by Senators ALAN CRANSTON and PETE WILSON concerning the University of California at Los Angeles, a proposal by Senators RUDY BOSCHWITZ and LARRY PRESSLER pertaining to the acquisition of State veterans' homes; a proposal by Senator DENNIS DECONCINI expressing the sense of the Congress with respect to certain Grace Commission recommendations; a proposal by Senator DAN INOUYE pertaining to the recruitment and retention of VA psychologists; a proposal by Senator HOWARD METZENBAUM concerning eligible veterans suffering from Alzheimer's disease; and two proposals pertaining to the naming of certain VA medical centers.

Section 16 of the committee amendment expressing the sense of the Congress with respect to certain Grace Commission recommendations states that no action to implement such recommendations should be taken without their policy implications having first been given full and careful consideration, after appropriate hearings, by the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Senate. I support the intent of this provision to call for a careful examination by the Congress of the policy implications of management improvements such as those proposed by the Grace Commission. At the same time, I do not believe this provision is in any way intended to discourage thoughtful proposals made by the executive branch, the private sector, the Congressional Budget Office, the General Accounting Office or others for management improvements or cost efficiencies with respect to the Veterans' Administration, especially during a period of constrained fiscal resources. Many VA hospital patients have severe and multiple disabilities requiring inpatient and outpatient services. However, we must bear in mind that this is not solely unique to the VA. The private sector must also provide care for disabled children and adults with individual and multiple impairments and chronic conditions, such as mental retardation, psychiatric disabilities, functional limitations, and other disabilities.

The role of the VA is important in fulfilling its commitment to our Nation's veterans whose disabilities were incurred in or aggravated by military service, especially those whose disabilities are combat related. But we must not diminish the importance of the role played by the private sector in caring for other members of our society who, for other reasons, are also disabled.

Section 18 of the committee amendment would require the VA to disseminate a program guide to VA medical facilities clarifying its policy regarding the authorization and provision of treatment, including diagnosis, information, outpatient services, hospital care and nursing home care, of veterans who are eligible for services under title 38, United States Code, and who are suffering from Alzheimer's disease and related neurological diseases. Mr. President, I would like to clarify certain aspects of this provision. First, this provision does not provide any new authority to furnish, or new eligibility for, health-care services from the VA. Second, the provision also does not mandate the content of the agency policies that would be stated in the guide with respect to the VA's use of its existing statutory authority to provide health-care services with respect to Alzheimer's disease. Instead this provision is designed to result in a clarification of the VA's policy with respect to the treatment of already eligible veterans who may be suffering from Alzheimer's disease.

Mr. President, in concluding I should wish to sincerely thank my friend, the distinguished ranking minority member from California, Senator CRANSTON, for his invaluable help and cooperation on this bill and the other committee members for their contributions.

In addition, I should like to recognize and the thank the very able members of the majority staff for their efforts—my chief counsel and staff director, Anthony Principi, Julie Susman, Cynthia Alpert, a highly professional and dedicated member of my staff who handled much of the work for the hearing and the bill, Vic Raymond, Kathleen McTighe, Tim Smith, Carol DeAngelus, Becky Hucks, Kay Eckhardt, Jody Sanders, and our editorial director, Jim MacRae, as well as members of the capable minority staff—Jonathan Steinberg, Ed Scott, Bill Brew, Babette Polzer, Katy Burdick, Jennifer McCarthy, Ingrid Post and Charlotte Hughes.

I also wish to take the opportunity to extend my good wishes to Katy Burdick of the minority staff, who will soon be leaving the committee to pursue graduate work in the area of public health. I can say with all certainty that she will be truly missed by both sides of the aisle. Her work and professionalism have been of the highest caliber; her dedication has admirable. I am confident that she will excel in all her future endeavors.

Mr. President, I believe the committee has reported out a bill which is well-balanced, and one that meets the needs of our most deserving veterans. On behalf of the entire committee, I urge the Senate's favorable consideration of this bill and amendment.

VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION HEALTH CARE AMENDMENTS OF 1984

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, as the ranking minority member of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, I am delighted to join with my good friend, the distinguished committee chairman [Mr. SIMPSON], in urging our colleagues to give their unanimous approval to the pending measure, S. 2514, the proposed Veterans' Administration Health Care Amendments of 1984, as modified by the amendment offered on behalf of the chairman and myself. I will describe the amendment in more detail at the end of my statement.

Mr. President, S. 2514 as reported by the committee on May 25 incorporates the provisions of a variety of measures, the two principal ones being S. 2514 as introduced by the chairman on March 30, 1984, and S. 2269 which I introduced on February 7, 1984, with the cosponsorship of Senators RANDOLPH, MATSUNAGA, and DECONCINI, and which was subsequently amended by amendment No. 2850. If enacted, this measure will help to maintain and improve the quality and efficiency of health care services provided by the Veterans' Administration to eligible veterans. Although the various provisions of the measure, which I will refer to as the committee bill, are described in detail in the committee's report—Senate Report 98-487—accompanying S. 2514, I would like to highlight some of them.

VA SECURITY SERVICE PROVISIONS

Mr. President, I am very pleased that the committee bill, in section 10, contains a number of provisions derived from legislation I proposed to enable the VA to improve its recruitment, retention, and management of security service personnel. The record is clear: The VA is and has been experiencing significant difficulties in attracting and, more importantly, keeping qualified security personnel. In far too many areas of the country, the VA police force serves as the training ground for individuals who are interested in careers in police or security work but who leave the VA as soon as they acquire the experience they need to obtain jobs with higher pay and greater potential for advancement. The new authorities in the committee bill should go a long way toward helping to solve these problems and, thus, should yield significant improvements in overall security at VA health care facilities.

Mr. President, these provisions would give the Administrator new authorities to modify rates of pay for VA security service officers and to pay a special clothing allowance to uniformed officers. In addition, these provisions would clarify the Administrator's authority to provide for security on VA property and designate individuals to serve as VA security service officers and would require the Administrator, with the concurrence of the Attorney General, to issue regulations relating to these employees, including their authority to make arrests, the content and duration of their training, limitations on their carrying and use of weapons, and certain other law enforcement matters.

More specifically, the provisions in the committee bill—derived from section 6 of S. 2269—relating to rates of pay would provide the Administrator with new authority to increase the rates of basic pay for security service officers where that is necessary either to provide rates of pay competitive with the rates paid by non-Federal employers in the same labor market, to achieve adequate staffing at particular facilities, or to recruit persons with specialized skills. This authority could be exercised on a nationwide, local, or other geographic basis, thereby giving the Administrator maximum flexibility to set rates of pay in response to local situations and conditions.

The other provision in the committee bill that should have the greatest impact on the agency's ability to recruit and retain security service personnel would authorize the Administrator to pay a uniform allowance to those VA security officers required to wear a uniform in the performance of official duties. These provisions—derived from amendment No. 2850 that I submitted on March 27—would authorize the payment of up to a $400 allowance at the time an individual is first employed as a VA security service officer, so as to assist with the purchase of initial uniforms, and a $200 allowance at the beginning of each fiscal year after the individual has completed 12 months with the VA to help these personnel replace and maintain their required uniforms.

In its April 11 testimony, the VA, in endorsing this uniform allowance provision, stated:

> One source of recruitment/retention problems is the low morale and financial hardship resulting from the fact that required uniforms cost much more than the authorized uniform allowance provides. Currently, VA police officers are allowed a flat $125 annually.

The VA went on to note that, in the agency's view, "no one should have to suffer a financial disadvantage in order to work as a VA police officer, and the uniform allowance provisions would help prevent that." I strongly agree with that view and expect that the uniform allowance proposed in the committee bill will help correct this situation.

POST-TRAUMATIC-STRESS DISORDER

Mr. President, although the VA had made some strides in the diagnosis and treatment of post-traumatic-stress disorder [PTSD], I am concerned that the agency could and should be doing much more and doing it in a better coordinated fashion. The efforts to date—principally through the VA's 136 vet centers and the relative handful of PTSD inpatient treatment units, of which there are 10 open at present with an 11th scheduled to open shortly—have lacked any coherent, overall plan.

PTSD is a disorder that is particularly prevalent among veterans and especially so among Vietnam combat veterans. Indeed, combat is one of the stressors identified in the American Psychiatric Association's Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, third edition, as a cause of the disorder. Thus, I believe that the VA has a very strong obligation to be at the forefront of efforts to understand and treat PTSD, just as the agency has in the past taken leadership roles with respect to other conditions, such as spinal cord injuries and amputations, that result from service disproportionately more often than they occur in the civilian population.

To encourage and foster the VA's efforts in this area, the committee has twice urged the VA in committee reports—Senate Report No. 97-89 accompanying S. 921 in the 97th Congress and Senate Report No. 98-145 accompanying S. 578 in the first session of this Congress—to consider seriously the establishment of a national center of excellence where research into diagnosing and treating PTSD would take place and also where training of health-care personnel on diagnosing and treating PTSD would be provided. In addition to the committee's urgings, I have personally pursued, in letters to the VA's Chief Medical Director, the need to establish such a center as well as the need for greater geographic accessibility of PTSD inpatient treatment facilities. The text of this correspondence was included in the RECORD earlier this year—for March 27, 1984, beginning on 4730—and I ask unanimous consent that the text of the most recent response from the VA on this issue, dated April 20, 1984, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION,
DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE AND SURGERY,
Washington, DC, April 20, 1984.

Hon. ALAN CRANSTON,
Ranking Minority Member, Committee on Veterans' Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR CRANSTON: Thank you for your letter of March 23, 1984, continuing our dialogue on the issue of Post-traumatic Stress Disorder inpatient programs.

In my letter of February 22, 1984, I indicated that there is "less than unanimity among our psychiatric staff as to the desirability of these units." The fundamental issue addressed by my comment is that of professional judgment. Many competent VA psychiatrists have differing professional opinions about the best approach to the treatment of Vietnam veterans with severe Post-traumatic Stress Disorder and associated conditions. Some clinicians believe that hospital treatment is the most effective approach to treatment of Post-traumatic Stress Disorder while other clinicians believe that outpatient psychotherapy is a better approach. The staff of Mental Health and Behavioral Sciences Service strongly supports the development of local initiatives for the treatment of Post-traumatic Stress Disorder in the belief, based upon years of experience, that rigidly defined centrally directed treatment programs often fail because they cannot take into account the wide differences between individual VA medical centers, their catchment areas, and their clientele.

The statement in the Vanguard reflects the fact that VA Central Office is committed to supporting local initiatives to develop necessary treatment programs. There is no discussion about "desirability of these programs" in Central Office because there is no disagreement about this question. I believe that these programs are "desirable," but I do not intend to direct their formation according to a prescribed formula from Central Office. In addition, I would point out that exploration of alternative approaches to the treatment of Post-traumatic Stress Disorder such as day hospital programs, outpatient programs, and other programs will be considered as appropriate at individual medical centers.

Concerning the unit at Lyons, New Jersey, it was not mentioned in my last letter because it did not seem to be pertinent to the questions asked of me by you and your staff. The decision to begin development of this unit was made during formation of the 1983 MEDIPP plan.

The discussions concerning the development of a VA center for Post-traumatic Stress Disorder have included a number of members of my staff including Dr. Earl Brown, Dr. Arthur Blank, Dr. John Lopkin and the members of the Administrator's Advisory Group on Readjustment Problems of Vietnam veterans. I have received a preliminary proposal for such a center from the Cleveland VAMC, and I fully expect to make a decision on its implementation within 60 days.

Dr. Arthur Blank participates actively in the Department of Medicine and Surgery's discussions concerning Post-traumatic Stress Disorder. His opinion is regularly sought by members of my staff responsible for treatment, education and research activities.

Interest in the development of a center has been expressed by medical centers which house several of the existing Post-traumatic Stress Disorder units including Bay Pines, Florida, and Menlo Park, California. In addition, because of proposals to provide staff and FTEE for Post-traumatic Stress Disorder units a number of other medical centers have expressed interest informally.

I am enclosing current cost estimates which were prepared concerning the staffing of both treatment units and PTSD centers.

Concerning the designation of a National Resources Center for PTSD raised by Senator Simpson, I must reiterate that I have not designated any VAMC as a National Resource Center for Post-traumatic Stress Disorder. The Topeka VA Medical Center, therefore, has not received additional funds for this purpose. What did, in fact, occur is that the VAMC Topeka agreed to accept referrals nationally for treatment in its Post-traumatic Stress Disorder unit. I do not intend to designate any PTSD unit as the National Resource Center for Post-traumatic Stress Disorder, because I believe that it is preferable to have district or regional resources for Post-traumatic Stress Disorder so that veterans may be treated closer to their homes, families, and jobs.

If the 1985 budget includes 180 FTEE and 5.8 million dollars "to improve the VA's ability to treat veterans suffering from Post-traumatic Stress Disorder," I intend to allocate approximately 90 FTEE and associated dollars to supoort staffing improvements at the existing programs. The remaining 90 FTEE and dollars will be used to support the development of new programs as requests from local medical districts are received.

I trust that you will find this information useful.

Sincerely,

DONALD L. CUSTIS, M.D.,
Chief Medical Director.

COST ESTIMATE POST-TRAUMATIC-STRESS DISORDER UNITS, SENATE BILL 2269

The Department of Medicine and Surgery has developed cost estimates for Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder research, education and clinical care programs as proposed in House Bill 4833. Although the House Bill recommends the development of 15 centers, DM&S expects that between four and six centers will be a more reasonable number.

If, as recommended in Senate Bill 2269 the Veterans Administration is to build only one National "Center for Post-traumatic Stress Disorder" its budget will have to be significantly larger than the budget for six somewhat smaller geographically disbursed centers.

A National Center for Post/traumatic Stress Disorder will also have a more broadly defined responsibility to provide treatment, education, and research concerning all forms of Post-traumatic Stress Disorder. Specifically, such a center will attempt to study and treat veterans from all era's, and selected civilian populations with Post-traumatic Stress Disorder.

Preliminary planning for such a center suggests that it will need between 50 and 75 FTEE and will cost between 3.5–4.5 million dollars per year or 22.5 million dollars for five years.

Although there are some advantages to the development of a single national center for Post-traumatic Stress Disorder such as the development of a "critical mass" of clinical, academic and research oriented professionals, there are also some disadvantages. Development of several somewhat smaller centers for Post-traumatic Stress Disorder will allow better geographic distribution of educational and research expertise, and will enhance our ability to develop new information by allowing several groups to pursue research in differing directions.

H.R. 4833—COST ESTIMATE

Separate four-year cost estimates are provided for (1) PTSD treatment (only) units and (2) PTSD treatment, education and research centers. Attached are the assumptions and rational on which these estimates are based.

PTSD TREATMENT (ONLY) UNITS (COST FOR 1 UNIT)

	Treatment costs per 30-bed unit	Basic clinical training costs	Total treatment and basic training per unit
Year 1	$1,201,053	$31,500	$1,232,553
Year 2	1,201,053	28,900	1,229,953
Year 3	1,201,053	30,600	1,231,653
Year 4	1,201,053	29,300	1,230,353
Total	4,804,212	120,300	4,924,512

PTSD TREATMENT, EDUCATION, AND RESEARCH CENTERS (COST FOR 6 CENTERS)

	Number of centers	Cost			Total cost
		Treatment and basic training	Education	Research
Year 1	2	$2,462,256	$40,000	$550,000	$3,052,256
Year 2	3	3,693,384	60,000	825,000	4,578,384
Year 3	5	6,155,640	100,000	1,375,000	7,630,640
Year 4	6	7,386,768	120,000	1,650,000	9,156,768
Total		19,698,048	320,000	4,400,000	24,418,048

I. ASSUMPTIONS AND COST ESTIMATE FOR TREATMENT (ONLY) UNITS

A. Assumptions

1. Based on available estimates, Vietnam theater veterans with post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) range as high as 750,000 veterans.

2. 10 percent of these veterans, or 75,000 patients, will need care in the future for PTSD or other psychiatric disorders.

3. 10 percent recidivism rate per year.

4. 45-day average length of hospital stay (despite current experience which suggests that 90–180 days is more usual) and 100 percent occupancy.

5. 30-bed treatment units (current range 10–90 beds).

6. An average length of stay of 30 days will allow treatment of 5,475 patients per year.

7. Basic training (e.g., problem recognition, diagnosis and treatment) will be provided at each treatment site.

B. Cost estimates for one unit

Staffing pattern per 30-bed treatment (only) unit:

Type	Salary	FTEE	Cost
Psychiatrist	$80,000	2	$160,000
Psychologist	40,972	2	81,944
Social worker	28,750	2	57,500
Nurses	25,159	15	377,385
Nursing assistants	15,681	9	141,129
RMS	23,761	2	47,522
Vocational rehab	23,761	1	23,761
Educational specialist	40,972	2	81,944
Research coordinator	40,972	1	40,972
Total		36	1,012,157

Additional staffing per unit (4 FTEE outpatient therapists and secretarial support to provide screening, follow-up care, etc.):

Type	Salary	FTEE	Cost
Psychiatrist	$80,000	1	$80,000
Psychologist	40,972	1	40,972
Social worker	28,750	1	28,750
Nurse	25,159	1	25,159
Secretary	14,015	1	14,015
Total		5	[1] 188,896

For a new program, additional costs would include dietetics support, pharmacy support, lab support, etc. Per unit, this would include 41 FTEE and $1,201,053 for clinical services. This includes basic support to research and educational development at each PTSD center (3 FTEE).

Basic clinical education and training for treatment (only) units:

The following estimated funding requirements are based on Professional Services' (116) plan for district Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) Centers which will provide continuing education for both Center staff and other related VA staff. Training of nongovernmental staff will focus on academic health centers and professional societies at both national and regional levels, according to Professional Services' program plan.

	Training of DM&S staff	Training of DVB staff	Training of non-government health personnel	Total (per unit)
Year 1	$21,600	$3,300	$6,600	$31,500
Year 2	14,000	3,300	11,600	28,900
Year 3	14,000	3,300	13,300	30,600
Year 4	14,000	3,300	12,000	29,300
Total	63,600	13,200	43,500	120,300

These estimates are based on a projection of 1,106 training episodes over the 4-year life of the program for VA nongovernmental participants. The total costs include travel and non-travel costs. No FTEE are required.

	Number of centers	Cost per center	Total cost
Education:
Year 1	2	$20,000	$40,000
Year 2	3	20,000	60,000
Year 3	5	20,000	100,000
Year 4	6	20,000	120,000
Total			320,000

	Number of centers	Cost per center	Total cost
Research:
Year 1	2	275,000	550,000
Year 2	3	275,000	825,000
Year 3	5	275,000	1,375,000
Year 4	6	275,000	1,650,000
Total			4,400,000
Summary:
Year 1	2		3,052,256
Year 2	3		4,578,384
Year 3	5		7,630,640
Year 4	6		9,156,768
Total			24,418,048

C. Cost summary per treatment unit by year

	Treatment	Basic training	Total
Year 1	$1,201,053	$31,500	$1,232,553
Year 2	1,201,053	28,900	1,229,953
Year 3	1,201,053	30,600	1,231,653
Year 4	1,201,053	29,300	1,230,353
Total	4,804,212	120,300	4,924,512

II. ASSUMPTIONS AND ESTIMATED COSTS FOR SIX TREATMENT, EDUCATION AND RESEARCH CENTERS

A. Assumptions

1. Education and Research costs are in addition to costs of the basic treatment unit as defined in Section I.

2. Per Center, additional costs above and beyond basic training total $20,000.

3. Research costs per Center include one clinical investigator plus $200,000 in project research funds and support additional direct and indirect projects costs.

4. The schedule of Center start-up will be as follows:

	New centers	Total number in operation
Year 1	2	2
Year 2	1	3
Year 3	2	5
Year 4	1	6

B. Cost estimate

Treatment unit:

	Number of centers	Cost per center [1]	Total cost
Year 1	2	$1,231,128	$2,462,256
Year 2	3	1,231,128	3,693,384
Year 3	5	1,231,128	6,155,640
Year 4	6	1,231,128	7,386,768
Total			19,698,048

[1] Assumes average annual cost of $1,231,128 per center.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, although there has been some progress in recent months toward the establishment of such a national center at the Cleveland VA Medical Center, I remain convinced—especially in view of the committee's prior experience of twice having recommended the establishment of such a center with no results and the lack of certainty regarding the agency's commitment of resources to the proposed center in Cleveland—that a legislative mandate is warranted as a means to help ensure that the center is established and that, thereafter, its operations are afforded a high priority. Such a provision, derived from amendment No. 2850, is contained in section 5 of the committee bill.

In addition to mandating the establishment of a national center for PTSD research and the training of health care personnel in the diagnosis and treatment of this disorder, the committee bill also directs the VA to establish a special, inhouse committee on PTSD to assist the VA's Chief Medical Director in developing policies and providing guidance with respect to, and coordinating the provision of services for, the treatment of veterans with PTSD. Although I can appreciate the VA central office's reluctance to dictate any single approach on how to diagnose and treat veterans suffering from PTSD, I believe it is past time for the agency and the Department of Medicine and Surgery to assume a true leadership role in this area. The PTSD committee that would be mandated by the committee bill is an important step in that direction, and something like it should be established by the Chief Medical Director regardless of whether or not it is ultimately mandated by law.

READJUSTMENT COUNSELING REPORTS

Mr. President, as I described in detail in my introductory remarks on S. 2269, on February 7, 1984, that legislation would have made a number of changes in the criteria for eligibility for VA readjustment counseling services. Chief among these changes were ones to extend such eligibility to veterans who have served since the end of the Vietnam era—May 7, 1975—in combat or combat-like situations. My intent in proposing this change was to provide eligibility for readjustment counseling to individuals who were exposed to hostile fire in situations—such as during the invasion of Grenada or in Beirut—that might lead to readjustment problems following their service.

In addition, because of my view that readjustment problems might also exist among active duty personnel, S. 2269 as introduced would have extended eligibility for readjustment counseling to active duty personnel who served during the Vietnam era or served in combat or combat-like situations since that time.

As is discussed in the committee report accompanying the committee bill, instead of my original proposals, the bill includes, in section 9, provisions mandating two reports. The first, to be submitted by the VA, would assess the need for readjustment counseling among veterans not currently eligible for it, including those who have served since the end of the Vietnam era in combat or combat-like situations and, as I also proposed be included in the report, World War II and Korean conflict veterans, with particular emphasis on combat veterans, and former prisoners of war. The second report, to be submitted jointly by the VA and DOD, would deal with, first, the appropriateness and desirability of extending eligibility for readjustment counseling to certain active duty personnel and, second, if such eligibility is provided, then how it could be implemented in a way that VA and DOD could both accept.

Although I am disappointed that my original proposals to extend eligibility for readjustment counseling to certain veterans and active duty personnel are not going forward at this point, I believe that the two reports that we are mandating will provide a basis for appropriate action at some future time.

HEALTH CARE IN REMOTE AREAS

Mr. President, another provision in the committee bill, section 15, would require the VA to study and report on the issue of the utilization of VA health care facilities by veterans eligible for VA health care who reside in areas remote from such facilities. After the completion and submission of this report, the agency would also be required to submit a subsequent report on a possible experimental program that the VA might pursue to furnish VA care to veterans residing in such areas.

This provision was developed by my good friend from Maine [Mr. MITCHELL] and derives from his bill, S. 523. It is the culmination of his diligent and thoughtful work over the past 2 years on the issue of VA health care for veterans in rural areas. I congratulate Senator MITCHELL for these efforts and for his persistence. Along with him, I look forward to the enactment of this provision and to the VA's pursuit of the mandated study, which is designed to yield important, reliable data about the location, number, and distribution throughout the United States of veterans with various eligibilities for VA care. Once such data are available, the committee will be in a much better position to evaluate VA efforts to date to meet the health care needs of veterans in rural areas and to assess alternative approaches for doing that.

REPORT ON FEDERAL GOVERNMENT ASSISTANCE TO INDIVIDUALS WHO SERVED IN VIETNAM AS CIVILIANS

Mr. President, in response to concerns from a number of non-Federal civilians who served in Vietnam during the Vietnam era with voluntary organizations—principally the Red Cross and the USO—about the effects of their service on their health and the Federal Government response to their concerns, the committee bill, in section 12, contains a provision mandating a joint report from VA, DOD, and HHS on this issue. This provision is derived from section 9 of S. 2269. The required report would evaluate the question of U.S. Government responsibility, and alternative approaches, for providing Federal and other benefits, services, and assistance to these civilians for disabilities that possibly result from certain aspects of their service in Vietnam—such as exposure to agent orange or to particularly traumatic events.

For those who served in Vietnam with the military, there can be no question about the Federal Government's responsibility to address concerns they raise regarding adverse health effects of service in Vietnam—whether as a result of exposure to herbicides such as agent orange or through experiences there. In the case of these former service members, it is also very clear that it is the VA which bears the majority of this responsibility. Thus, our committee has engaged in considerable activity in seeking responsive Federal Government action to deal with concerns regarding the long-term health effects of Vietnam service, with special attention to the question of the long-term health effects of exposure to herbicides, such as agent orange, which were sprayed in Vietnam by the U.S. military as a means of depriving the enemy of cover and food.

In view of the contribution that the individuals who served with voluntary organizations in Vietnam provided to their country and their concerns about the long-term health effects of their Vietnam service that may be related to actions of the Federal Government, I believe that the Federal Government has the responsibility, at least, to evaluate these concerns and consider possible appropriate alternatives—Federal and non-Federal—for addressing them.

I note that this report requirement in no way is intended to prejudge the question of Federal responsibility for assistance or to reflect a judgment by the committee regarding the military or nonmilitary status of any group of civilians who served in Vietnam for the purposes of receiving veterans benefits. A mechanism, the Department of Defense/Civilian Military Review Board, established pursuant to section 401 of Public Law 95-202, already exists to weigh evidence and pass judgment as to whether a particular civilian group's service to the country during a period of war was such that it should be considered military service for the purpose of receiving veterans benefits. The provision in the committee bill is designed neither to circumvent nor influence this separate avenue of redress; rather, I view the issue that this provision is addressing—the question of the existence and extent Federal responsibility to these individuals and the need for an evaluation of alternatives for providing an avenue of redress for them—as entirely separate from the issue of veteran status.

CONTRACT CARE IN PUERTO RICO AND THE VIRGIN ISLANDS

Mr. President, a final health care provision that I wish to comment on, section 13, would provide a 1-year extension—until September 30, 1985—of the VA's authority to provide on a contract basis in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and other territories of the United States, hospital care for non-service-connected disabilities and certain outpatient treatment. This provision was proposed in amendment No. 2850. As is discussed in great detail in the committee report, the issue of how to meet these needs has been discussed and studied since 1978 and various alternatives have been developed. To date, however, the VA has been unable or unwilling to settle on a particular approach for addressing this issue and to take the necessary steps to implement it. As a result, the Congress has had to provide a series of short-term extensions of the contract authority. Although the extension proposed in the committee bill is necessary to ensure the continuity of medical care for certain veterans in the areas concerned, it is essential that the VA develop and submit to the Congress a report containing plans for meeting the future health care needs of veterans in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. It is time to put an end to this lingering indecision.

In this regard, I note that the committee emphasized the importance that it attaches to the need for an overall plan for providing health care in Puerto Rico when, earlier this year in connection with the VA's fiscal year 1985 budget submission, the committee deferred action on the agency's request for the construction of a nursing home in Puerto Rico. In taking this action, the committee expressed the view that it would be unwise to proceed on a piecemeal basis with a single project in Puerto Rico without knowing the priority that the VA would attach to that project in comparison with other possible projects or other veterans' health care funding needs in Puerto Rico.

I remain deeply and strongly committed to the principle that the Federal Government must meet its obligation to those who served the Nation in its hours of need, and I will continue working to ensure that those obligations are met in Puerto Rico no less than anywhere else. To do so in a thoughtful, appropriate fashion, however, requires submission by the VA of a comprehensive plan setting forth and evaluating various alternative approaches for providing health care to veterans in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

AUTO ADAPTIVE EQUIPMENT

Mr. President, in addition, I want to make mention of the provisions of section 7 of S. 2514, relating to automobile adaptive equipment for certain veterans with service-connected disabilities. These provisions are derived from S. 2210 as introduced by the chairman and from a proposal I made at the committee's April 11 hearing. They would generally limit the frequeny with which adaptive equipment is provided to no more than two adaptations in any 4-year period and would allow an eligible veteran to have at any one time VA provided adaptive equipment on two vehicles that are available for his or her use. If, as a result of circumstances beyond the veteran's control, the veteran no longer has the use of one of the VA-equipped vehicles, the provision would authorize the Administrator to provide adaptive equipment for a third vehicle within the applicable 4-year period.

I believe the approach in the committee bill is an improvement over the present situation where, under the adaptive equipment program, a veteran may receive as many as three adaptations in a 2-year period but may never have the use of more than one such adapted vehicle at any one time. The committee bill recognizes the importance and necessity of permitting seriously disabled veterans to have access to a backup means of transportation and represents what I believe is a practical, workable solution to the problems that exist in this program under current law and VA policy. It was a pleasure to work closely with Chairman SIMPSON and the veterans' organizations, principally the Disabled American Veterans and the Paralyzed Veterans of America, in reaching this approach which accommodates all of our concerns.

SIMPSON-CRANSTON AMENDMENT

Mr. President, as I mentioned at the outset of my remarks, I want to discuss the amendment offered to the committee bill on behalf of Chairman SIMPSON and myself. As I will describe in more detail, this amendment would delete two provisions from the bill and would add provisions derived from various other measures.

DELETIONS FROM COMMITTEE BILL

The amendment proposes—solely for the purpose of avoiding a Budget Act problem at this point—the deletion from the committee bill of the two provisions that involve so-called entitlement spending. As the author of those provisions, I want to stress that they are being deleted here solely for a technical purpose and will be pursued in other legislation this year. One provision would modify the starting date of the Vietnam era for title 38 purposes in the case of veterans who actually served in Vietnam prior to August 5, 1964, the starting date for the Vietnam era in current law, and would, among other benefits, result in providing VA pension eligibility under chapter 15 of title 38 to a small number of these veterans. The other provision would require the VA to carry out a demonstration project under which income received by veterans for their participation in a VA incentive or compensated work therapy program would not be counted as income for the purposes of VA pension. In light of the fact that the Congress has not yet adopted a first concurrent resolution on the fiscal year 1985 budget, it would not be in order, under the Congressional Budget Act, to consider these entitlement provisions without a Budget Act waiver. Rather than seek such a waiver, the chairman and I are proposing to delete these two provisions from the committee bill and, instead, to have them added to S. 2736, the proposed Veterans' Administration Benefit Rate Increase and Program Improvement Act of 1984 as ordered favorably reported by our committee on July 25, 1984. Further, because that measure contains cost-of-living increases and other adjustments in VA entitlements, if the first resolution on the fiscal year 1985 budget is not adopted by the time that that measure should come before the Senate, our committee will propose a Budget Act waiver resolution pursuant to section 303(c) of that act.

PROVISIONS OF SIMPSON-CRANSTON AMENDMENT, REVERSIONARY INTEREST IN CERTAIN LAND IN LOS ANGELES

Mr. President, the Simpson-Cranston amendment includes a provision relating to the status of a parcel of land in West Los Angeles, CA. This provision, which closely follows H.R. 2629, legislation introduced by my good friend who represents the congressional district in which the land is located, Mr. BEILENSON, is included in the amendment on behalf of myself and my colleague from California [Mr. WILSON]. All three of us have been working for some months to resolve questions regarding this matter and to bring this legislation before the Senate. I know Senator WILSON shares my satisfaction that we have finally achieved that goal.

The parcel of land in question was originally deeded in 1948 by the VA to the State of California for use by the University of California. The public law which authorized the transfer—Public Law 726, 80th Congress—and the deed entered into pursuant to that law specified that the land was to be used only for a "research and medical center and for allied purposes." In light of the fact that UCLA's medical center and supporting facilities are concentrated in an area north of the subject parcel of land and the bulk of the land has gone unused by the university except for two medical facilities, H.R. 2629 and the provision in the amendment would expand the permissible uses to include educational and cultural purposes. Two such uses under consideration by the university, both of which would be permitted under the proposed expanded uses, are as a site for a plasma physics laboratory and a fine arts center.

Mr. President, although I supported this legislation and sought to have our committee act on H.R. 2629 shortly after it was passed by the House last year, such action has been delayed in response to concerns raised by some administration officials and also by questions about whether some recent uses of the land were in conformance with the restrictions in the existing deed. Finally, as a result of the efforts of many individuals, especially those of the VA's Deputy General Counsel, Robert Coy, who made a site visit to the property and met with university officials about this issue while in Los Angeles recently, the various concerns and questions have been resolved. At the committee's June 27, 1984, hearing, Mr. Coy, in response to my question about his views on the subject of the university's use of the property stated that "for all practical purposes (UCLA is) conforming with the restrictions on the property" and that he was aware of "no further legal issues or restrictions that would impede proceeding with the legislation." Later, on July 11, 1984, the VA's General Counsel, John Murphy, wrote to UCLA Vice Chancellor Elvin Svenson to set forth the agency's view that any concerns about the use being made of the land had been satisfactorily resolved. Thus, Senator WILSON and I are now in a position to urge that this measure proceed, and hence it is included in the Simpson-Cranston amendment.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that various documents pertaining to this matter—my letters to Chairman SIMPSON urging action on this measure, a letter to me from UCLA Chancellor Charles Young, two letters from Joshua A. Muss, executive director of the Property Review Board, relating to the property, and VA General Counsel Murphy's July 11, 1984, letter to UCLA Vice Chancellor Svenson—be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON VETERANS' AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, February 9, 1984.

Hon. ALAN K. SIMPSON,
Chairman, Committee on Veterans' Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR AL: I am writing regarding H.R. 2629, which, as you know, is a measure that was passed by the House on November 8, 1983, and is now pending in our Committee. This legislation, sponsored by my colleague from California, Congressman Beilenson, has the sole, very limited purpose of modifying a restriction on the use of a parcel of land—previously conveyed by the VA to the State of California in 1948—located in West Los Angeles. The land is now occupied by the University of California at Los Angeles.

As far as I am able to determine, this is a noncontroversial measure. If this is indeed the case, in order that the matter may be disposed of in a timely manner, I urge that the members of the Committee be polled and the measure placed on the Senate calendar for action as soon as possible.

Thank you for your continuing cooperation and assistance.

With warm regards,

Cordially,

ALAN CRANSTON,
Ranking Minority Member.

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON VETERANS' AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, March 7, 1984.

Hon. ALAN K. SIMPSON,
Chairman, Veterans' Affairs Committee, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR AL: In follow up to my February 9, 1984, letter regarding H.R. 2629, please find enclosed a copy of a recent letter I've received from UCLA Chancellor Chuck Young on this subject.

In view of the information in Chancellor Young's letter and his expression of UCLA's strong interest in the enactment of H.R. 2629, I again urge that the members of the Committee be polled on this measure as soon as possible.

Thank you for your continuing cooperation and assistance.

With warm regards,

Cordially,

ALAN CRANSTON,
Ranking Minority Member.

Enclosure.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA,
OFFICE OF THE CHANCELLOR,
Los Angeles, CA, February 8, 1984.

Hon. ALAN CRANSTON,
U.S. Senator,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR ALAN: H.R. 2629, introduced by Congressman Beilenson, who represents the district in which UCLA is situated, has unanimously passed the House and awaits action in the Senate Committee on Veterans Affairs. This bill is of critical importance to the University, and I urge you to do everything you can to secure its passage.

The bill relates to property adjacent to UCLA and deeded to it by the Veteran's Administration in 1948. This property was given over wholly to UCLA, but with the restriction that any facilities on it had to be for medical research or related purposes.

The only facilities presently on the site are medically-oriented, but the passage of time and changed circumstances make the further construction of major medical facilities on that site not congruent with its optimal use. Any further medical developments are likely to occur closer to the UCLA Medical Center, for obvious reasons.

In any case, H.R. 2629 simply permits UCLA to use the property for cultural and educational purposes in addition to the medical purposes. UCLA's restricted space, and the location of this property next to Westwood Village, make it the ideal site for a number of possible projects that will complete the growth of this campus.

The bill is supported by the Veterans Administration and the Justice Department, but we understand that for some unknown reason the Office of Management and Budget has not responded to a request for a position, and that this fact is troubling some in the majority.

This bill is vital to us, and we would appreciate any help you can provide. A copy of the House Committee report is enclosed.

Sincerely,

CHARLES E. YOUNG,
Chancellor.

PROPERTY REVIEW BOARD,
Washington, DC, November 22, 1983.

Hon. ALAN SIMPSON,
Chairman, Committee on Veterans' Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I am writing to you about H.R. 2629 which would modify the reversionary interest of the United States in some 35 acres of property given to U.C.L.A. in 1948. This legislation has been referred to your Committee. I am concerned about this legislative proposal which in my opinion is completely inconsistent with sound federal property management.

When the Veterans Administration donated the property to the State of California for U.C.L.A. in 1948, it was specified by Congress that the property would be used for medical research. Only on that basis could Congress justify a transfer of this property from the holdings of the Veterans Administration. U.C.L.A. agreed and a specific development schedule was proposed. However, U.C.L.A. never completely fulfilled those promises.

Significant portions of the property are undeveloped or used for a public parking lot. These uses of the property are unrelated to medical research or any corollary activity. Apparently, U.C.L.A.'s desire to use this property for some commercial or other non-authorized purpose has led to the introduction of this special legislation.

At our request, the GSA has recently sent a representative to inspect the premises. A copy of this report has been sent to the staff of the Committee on Veterans Affairs. GSA estimates the value of this property to be $280 million.

I expect that this legislation will be recognized by the Senate for what it actually does: It relieves U.C.L.A. of its 35-year old obligation. This would set a most unfortunate precedent for other beneficiaries of free federal property transfers who also fail to comply with the terms of the transfer.

I hope that when your Committee considers this proposal you will keep my views in mind. If you or the Committee staff would like to discuss this proposal further, please let me know.

Sincerely,

JOSHUA A. MUSS,
Executive Director.

INSPECTION TRIP REPORT

Re 34.88-acre parcel located in West Los Angeles, California, and transferred to the State of California by Public Law 80-726, dated June 19, 1948.

HAROLD SPADY,
Realty Specialist.

On October 3, 1983, I traveled to Los Angeles to review the utilization of the property cited above. On arrival, I visited the site and offer the following observations.

Site Description: The parcel is bounded by Wilshire Boulevard on the south, Veterans Avenue on the west, a row of residences along Strathmore Drive on the north, and an unnamed alley on the east. Approximate dimensions are 662 feet by 2500 feet. The parcel rises to the north and is heavily wooded over the northern two-thirds.

Improvements: There are three permanent university buildings on the parcel, all located on the northern two-thirds of the property. They consist of a Rehabilitation Center, Warren Hall, which is listed as a Biomedical and Environmental Sciences Building, and a steam plant. The only other permanent structure on the parcel is a Red Cross building located immediately to the south of a fire station on Veterans Avenue. The fire station is situated on a 100-foot x 150 foot parcel deeded to the City of Los Angeles for that purpose in 1945. It is assumed that the Red Cross building is on permitted land.

At the northwest corner of the parcel, along Veterans Avenue, site clearance has begun on approximately three acres for a Center for Health Enhancement and a Clinical Pavillion. There are restricted parking lots in the areas of the Rehabilitation Center, Warren Hall, and the Red Cross building. The southerly one-third of the parcel, with the exception of the Red Cross area, has been paved and is used as a staff and student parking lot.

Neighborhood Data: The area south of the parcel across Wilshire Boulevard is improved with two high-rise office buildings. The area west of the parcel contains the V.A. cemetery. The area north of the property is improved with a mixture of single-family dwellings and condominiums. The area to the east of the parcel is the Westwood shopping area with approximately six square blocks of commercial buildings. An appraisal of land adjacent to the Federal building at 11000 Wilshire Boulevard was done in May of 1983 and set the land value in the area at $200.00 per square foot.

Observations and Comments: After noting the size of the main parking area, the degree of occupancy at the time of the visit, and the capacity of the improvements which the university has on the parcel, it is obvious that parking is not restricted to staff and students involved in the medical education process at the site. It was further noted that while admission to the lot was restricted until 9:00 a.m. on weekdays, after that time, the lot was available to "visitors." Those with permits utilized a mag-card type entry key while "visitors" could gain entry by depositing $2.00 in a coin box located at the Kinrose Avenue gate.

I discussed the parking with the Assistant Building Manager at 11000 Wilshire Boulevard. He indicated that the lot was heavily used by employees of the shops in Westwood shopping area and their customers. He also stated that a shuttle bus ran between the parking lot and the main university campus to the northeast. Finally, he stated that the lot is open evenings and on the weekends and is usually near capacity, even during the summer months when the university has a much reduced attendance.

Based on my observations and the comments from the Assistant Building Manager, it would appear that the parking area (approximately ten acres) is the only portion of the parcel which is not used exclusively for medical related purposes.

HAROLD SPADY.

PROPERTY REVIEW BOARD,
Washington, DC, March 30, 1984.

Mr. ANTHONY J. PRINCIPI,
Chief Counsel, Staff Director, Senate Committee on Veterans' Affairs, Russell Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. PRINCIPI: I am concerned that a letter which I sent to Senator Simpson on November 22, 1983, concerning H.R. 2629 has been misconstrued. The sole purpose of that letter was to provide the Committee with information which I had just received concerning the background and current use of the property. I thought this information would be useful to the Committee in considering the bill.

The letter was not intended to express the Administration's or the Property Review Board's position on the proposed legislation. In rereading the letter in the light of recent events, I realize that it would have been preferable to have omitted the statements of my personal views on this legislation.

Sincerely,

JOSHUA A. MUSS,
Executive Director.

VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION,
OFFICE OF GENERAL COUNSEL,
Washington, DC, July 11, 1984.

Mr. ELVIN V. SVENSON,
Vice Chancellor for Institutional Relations, University of California, Los Angeles, CA.

DEAR MR. SVENSON: I believe the information obtained as a result of your recent meeting in Los Angeles with Mr. Robert Coy, and the subsequent action taken by the university as a result thereof, has for all practical purposes eliminated the concern we had with respect to the potential of a non-conforming use by the University of certain portions of the real estate transferred by the United States on June 14, 1948, to the State of California.

As you are aware, concern has been expressed that some of the parking activities may not have been consistent with the restrictions associated with the transfer of the subject property. We now find, however, that some 94 percent of the utilization of the parking facility is associated with University activities. While all of such usage may not be specifically associated with the research and medical center, alternate parking facilities in other areas of the campus are sharing some of the parking needs of the research and medical center personnel. In other words, if we were to force all research and medical center people to park in the parking lot in question, full utilization of that space would probably occur.

An additional concern was the public parking usage which was authorized by the University as a public service where not required by University needs. It is my understanding that you have tightened up this public parking utilization during the day and any such usage must now be considered minimal.

In light of the above, we have concluded that there is substantial conformance with the restrictions associated with the land transfer, and we see no need for further action by the Veterans Administration at this time in connection with the non-conformance issue.

Sincerely yours,

JOHN P. MURPHY,
General Counsel.

ACQUISITION OF BUILDINGS FOR STATE HOME FACILITIES

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, included in title 38, United States Code, are two programs of assistance to State veterans' home extended-care facilities which provide care to veterans who are eligible for VA care: A program of per diem payments for care provided to veterans in such facilities; and a program of matching grants for the construction, remodeling, or renovation of State veterans' homes. I strongly support both of these State home programs, which I view as vital adjuncts to the VA's overall efforts. I was very pleased that the Congress last year enacted legislation I proposed to provide an overdue increase in the per diem rates paid under the first program.

Included in the amendment, on behalf of my colleague on the committee from Minnesota [Mr. BOSCHWITZ], is a provision, section 15, addressing the other element of VA assistance to the State home program—the matching grant program. Under current law, the VA is authorized to provide matching grants to States for the construction of new nursing home and domiciliary facilities. It is the VA's view that under current law, such grants cannot be made to States for the purpose of purchasing an existing facility in order to convert it to a State veterans' home facility. This limitation seems unnecessarily restrictive, especially at a time when there is significant interest in expanding the State home program in order to help meet the extended health-care needs of an ever-growing population of older veterans. The provision in the committee amendment would remove this restriction in situations where the purchase and adaptation of a facility would not be more costly than new construction, and I am pleased to support this provision.

SENSE OF THE CONGRESS REGARDING CERTAIN GRACE COMMISSION RECOMMENDATIONS

Mr. President, I am also very pleased that the amendment includes a provision, section 16, offered on behalf of my good friend from Arizona [Mr. DECONCINI], myself and Senators RANDOLPH, MATSUNAGA, PELL, SARBANES, HEFLIN, and BURDICK, which will put the Congress on record with reference to certain recommendations of the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control, the so-called Grace Commission. The Grace Commission recommendations at issue all relate to the VA health-care system, and I believe it is vitally important that the Congress express clearly its continuing, full support of the maintenance of a vital, independent VA health-care system and its concern about the implications of recommendations that could undermine that system.

Mr. President, challenges to the VA health-care system are not new, and the recommendations of the Grace Commission in this area are not unprecedented. As in the case of previous challenges to the integrity of the VA health-care system, the Grace Commission's views reflect little understanding or appreciation of the complexities of the VA system or of the implications of proposals to make sweeping changes in it.

Let me be clear—I do not believe that the VA health-care system is without flaws. But I do not believe the relevant debate is over the question of whether the system should be dismantled or altered in fundamental ways. The only way we can effectively meet our national obligation to provide care to veterans disabled during their service, I am firmly convinced, is through the maintenance of a comprehensive, nationwide VA system such as exists at present. To this end, our amendment essentially points out that the Grace Commission recommendations must be viewed in the context of two provisions of law enacted by Congress—expressly requiring the VA to maintain a "comprehensive, nationwide health-care system for the direct provision of quality health-care services to eligible veterans" and also requiring the VA to operate and maintain not less than 90,000 hospital and nursing home beds—and in view of certain facts that the Grace Commission does not seem to have been aware of or taken into account. The provision concludes by expressing the sense of the Congress that the Grace Commission recommendations must be evaluated in light of the national commitment to the VA health-care system and that no action should be taken on those recommendations without their policy implications having been given careful consideration, in the hearing process, by the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of both Houses.

I congratulate Senator DECONCINI for continuing to pursue the resolution he introduced on April 19, 1984, with the cosponsorship of Senators RANDOLPH, MATSUNAGA, and myself—Senate Resolution 364— relating to the Grace Commission's findings in this area and am very pleased that a provision based on this resolution is included in the floor amendment.

AUTHORITY TO ADJUST RATES OF PAY FOR CERTAIN PSYCHOLOGISTS

Mr. President, another provision in the amendment, section 17, would provide the VA Administrator with new authority to modify the rates of basic pay for certain psychologists working in the VA's Department of Medicine and Surgery—DM&S. This provision, which was included in the amendment at my request on behalf of my good friend from Hawaii [Mr. INOUYE] and Senators MATSUNAGA, RANDOLPH, DECONCINI, and MELCHER, is derived from S. 155, legislation introduced by Senator INOUYE.

Under the provisions in the amendment, the VA Administrator, when necessary for recruitment and retention purposes, would be authorized to modify the rates of basic pay for clinical or counseling psychologists working in DM&S who hold diplomas as diplomates in psychology from an accrediting authority approved by the Administrator. The principal such authority is the American Board of Professional Psychology. These are so-called board-certified psychologists. In order to exercise this authority, the Administrator would have to find that increased rates were needed in order to achieve one or more of the following purposes set forth in current section 4107(g)(2) of title 38: First, to provide rates of pay competitive with the rates paid to such individuals by non-Federal employers in the same labor market; second, to achieve adequate staffing at particular facilities; or, third, to recruit persons with specialized skills.

Mr. President, despite my longstanding support for the profession of psychology and the role of the psychologist as an independent health-care provider, I was unable to support S. 155 as introduced. The primary reasons for my position were twofold: First, I was unaware of any data which suggested that the VA was experiencing difficulties in recruiting or retaining board-certified psychologists, and, second, I was unaware of any reason for singling out psychologists, as proposed in S. 155, from other DM&S health-care professionals employed under title 5, United States Code, to receive additional pay, automatically and across the board, for receiving an advanced degree. The distinguished chairman of our committee [Mr. SIMPSON] likewise was not able to support S. 155 as introduced.

Because of my strong interest in the issue of DM&S staffing and my strong conviction about the important role of psychologists in the VA, however, I pursued the issue of the VA's need for board-certified psychologists and became convinced that there may be a problem in this area. Although the VA is not able at this time to state exactly how many such psychologists would be desirable and appropriate within DM&S, the Acting Chief Medical Director has indicated a clear belief that having more board-certified psychologists in DM&S would improve the overall quality of psychological care provided to eligible veterans. In light of this VA position, I worked closely with Senator INOUYE to develop an approach satisfactory to both of us that would provide the Administrator with increased flexibility to modify rates of base pay on a local, national, or other geographic basis as necessary to attract and retain clinical and counseling psychologists with board certifications. Under the compromise added by the floor amendment, clinical and counseling psychologist rates of pay within the Department of Medicine and Surgery would be placed in the same category as rates of pay for licensed vocational or practical nurses and for certified or registered respiratory therapists, and licensed physical therapists working in DM&S. Last year, in Public Law 98-160, the Congress gave the Administrator broad rate-setting authority with respect to those three title 38 health professionals. I am pleased that we were able to develop this compromise and look forward, if the provision is enacted, to the VA's effective and appropriate utilization of it.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of correspondence I have had with the VA on this issue be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the correspondence was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON VETERANS' AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, May 8, 1984.

Dr. DONALD L. CUSTIS,
Chief Medical Director, Veterans' Administration, Washington, DC.

DEAR DON: Recently, a constituent and long-time friend, Dr. Joan Willens, wrote to me regarding S. 155, legislation that would authorize the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to pay incentive pay to VA psychologists who obtain board certification or who receive an additional advanced degree. You will recall that we have previously corresponded about this measure (see my August 23, 1983, letter to you, your September 12, 1983, response, and follow-up correspondence).

In her letter, Dr. Willens noted that "only 7% of VA psychologists have earned their boards". Without reaching any final judgments on the implications of that statement, I am concerned that the VA's having such a small percentage of board-certified psychologists may raise questions about the overall quality of the VA's psychology program. So that I might have a better understanding of this issue, I would appreciate your responses to the following questions:

1.A. How does the percentage of VA psychologists (separately for clinical and other psychologists) who have obtained board certification compare to the percentages of clinical and other psychologists in the profession as a whole?

B. Please provide the same data as in A, with respect to both clinical and other psychologists, for VA facilities as compared to non-VA hospitals (and separately as compared to community mental health centers).

C. What has been DM&S's experience over the past five fiscal years with respect to the percentage of its psychologists that is board certified?

2. Ideally, how many psychologists positions in DM&S should be filled by psychologists who have obtained board certification?

3. Do you believe that being able to provide additional incentives pay for obtaining board certification would improve the VA's ability to attract and retain psychologists with such qualifications?

4. Would providing special authority to utilize the Government Employees Training Act or comparable VA authority (even though there would be no increase in responsibilities for the participants) to pay for the costs of a VA psychologist obtaining board certification improve the VA's ability to retain a higher quality of clinical psychologists? (In this regard, I note that a provision to grant such authority for nurses was included in section 106(2) of S. 2543 as passed by the Senate on June 5, 1980 (copy enclosed).)

5. In light of the fact that VA psychologists are hired under the authority of title 5, United States Code, has the VA requested the Office of Personnel Management to provide authority for increased pay to psychologists who obtain board certification?

Thank you, Don, for your continuing cooperation and assistance.

With warm regards,
Cordially,

ALAN CRANSTON,
Ranking Minority Member.

Enclosure.

VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION,
DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE AND SURGERY,
Washington, DC, June 20, 1984.

Hon. ALAN CRANSTON,
Ranking Minority Member, Committee on Veterans' Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR CRANSTON: Your letter of May 8, 1984, to Donald L. Custis, M.D., asks some specific questions concerning the issue of incentive pay for VA psychologists who obtain board certification. While data are not available for all of the questions you asked, I will attempt to be as comprehensive as possible.

Question 1A. How does the percentage of VA psychologists (separately for clinical and other psychologists) who have obtained board certification compare to the percentages of clinical and other psychologists in the profession as a whole?

Question 1B. Please provide the same data as in A, with respect to both clinical and other psychologists, for VA facilities as compared to non-VA hospitals (and separately as compared to community mental health centers.)

Answer to Questions 1A & 1B: The following data are provided as partial answers to these questions. Information concerning non-VA hospital's level of ABPP certified psychologists is not currently available.

Board Certification—Profession as a Whole: The American Psychological Association just completed a study that indicates that 10.4 percent of doctoral level clinical and counseling member psychologists have completed the ABPP certification process.

Board Certification—VA Psychologists: The Association of VA Chief Psychologists just recently completed a study intended, in part, to answer questions raised by the members of the Senate and directed to the Chief Medical Director. This study involved over 75 percent of VA psycologists. The Association has provided the information presented below:

DIPLOMATE STATUS OF CHIEFS OF PSYCHOLOGY

	Number	Percent
ABDP:
GM-13	1	4.3
GM-14	14	23.3
GM-15	3	18.8
Total	18	18.2
Other boards:
GM-13	2	8.7
GM-14	5	8.3
GM-15	2	12.5
Total	9	9.1

Number of Diplomates on staff at close of FY 1981: ABPP—59 or (5.6 percent); other boards—18 or (1.7 percent).

Number of Diplomates Hired or Transferred in during FY 1982 and FY 1983: ABPP—4; other boards—18.

VA Staff Psychologists Awarded Diplomates during FY 1982 and FY 1983: ABPP—9; other boards—15.

VA Staff Psychologists with Diplomates who Left Stations during FY 1982 and FY 1983: Retired—ABPP, 7; other boards, 1. Resigned—ABPP, 5; other boards, 2. Transferred Out— ABPP, 0; other boards, 1.

Question 1C. What has been DM&S' experience over the past five years with respect to the percentage of its psychologists that are board certified?

Answer. VACO Mental Health and Behavioral Sciences Service indicates that slightly less than 7 percent of clinical and counseling psychologists in the VA have the ABPP. This has remained substantially unchanged over the past five years: 1976—110 Diplomates; 1979—79 Diplomates; 1982—89 Diplomates.

Question 2. Ideally, how many psychologist positions in DM&S should be filled by psychologists who have obtained board certification?

Answer. Ideally, if available, it would be desirable if approximately 1100 of the current 1435 psychologist positions in DM&S represented the highest level of comprehensive psychological functioning in patient care areas. The remaining positions would be occupied by entry-level psychologists requiring greater supervision and expertise.

Question 3. Do you believe that being able to provide additional incentive pay for obtaining board certification would improve the VA's ability to attract and retain psychologists with such qualifications?

Answer. Yes. It is not clear, however, what type of incentive pay would yield the most cost effective results for the desired outcome of encouraging present staff to pursue this goal and to attract and retain individuals with such qualifications. DM&S will continue to study the alternatives.

The following data from the above cited study by the Association of VA Chief Psychologists indicate that various options could have various impacts. For example:

Would you take the ABPP Examination if offered a $2,500 per year bonus? Yes, 56.6 percent; no, 24.6 percent; do not know, 18.8 percent.

Would you take the ABPP Examination if offered a one-time award of $1,000—$2,000? Yes, 24.7 percent; no, 55.3 percent; do not know, 20.0 percent.

Would these methods of recognition help significantly in retaining and recruiting competent staff? Yes, 48.5 percent; no, 33.0 percent; do not know, 18.5.

It should be noted that some VA psychologists are not eligible to take boards, and that others are too senior in their careers to see the value of the extra study, preparation and expense involved in obtaining boards. Although the goal of having staff with the highest credentials is laudable, it is not yet clear what incentive would achieve that goal. Additionally, it is recognized that use of other authorities such as those granted by PL 96-330 and PL 98-160 may contribute to the VA's ability to attract the most qualified psychologists.

Question 4. Would providing special authority to utilize the Government Employees Training Act or comparable VA authority (even though there would be no increase in responsibilities for the participants) to pay for the costs of a VA psychologist obtaining board certification improve VA's ability to retain a higher quality of clinical psychologists? (In this regard, I note that a provision to grant such authority for nurses was included in section 106(2) of S. 2543 as passed by the Senate on June 5, 1980.)

Answer. Undoubtedly a greater number of psychologists would pursue board certification if they would not have to absorb the cost. However, it is unclear whether such an authority would impact on retention. The provision of S. 2543 that you referenced provided for a guaranteed "pay back" in the form of years of service in return for training support to a nurse pursuing a degree. It is questionable to what extent such a provision for "pay back" would be reasonable in the case of psychologists pursuing board certification. Further, many occupations recognize certifying boards and encourage this form of credentialling. In view of this, DM&S would have to consider the impact and potential costliness if such an authority as you suggest were to apply to a number of occupational groups.

Question 5. In light of the fact that VA psychologists are hired under the authority of title 5, United States Code, has the VA requested the Office of Personnel Management to provide authority for increased pay to psychologists who obtain board certification?

Answer. The VA has not requested increased pay for psychologists who obtain board certification because supportive data has not been fully accumulated. VA's authority to approve special rates for direct health care occupations has not been fully implemented. DM&S has not had the opportunity to use the authority for appropriate occupational situations. The Department is aware of the need to study various alternatives to determine which would be most effective and least costly in accomplishing the objective of insuring the VA's employment of well-qualified psychologists to provide quality patient care.

I hope that this information will be of value to you.

Sincerely,

JOHN A. GRONVALL, M.D.,
Acting Chief Medical Director.

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON VETERANS' AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, July 2, 1984.

Dr. JOHN A. GRONVALL,
Acting Cheif Medical Director, Veterans' Administration, Washington, DC.

DEAR JOHN: Thank you for your June 20, 1984, response to my May 8, 1984, letter regarding various issues related to psychologists employed in DM&S. I very much appreciated receiving your detailed answers.

So that I might have a better understanding of the agency's overall position on these issues and on some specific points in your reply, I have a few follow-up questions to some of the answers in your letter. Specifically, I am interested in your answers to the following questions:

1. In answer to question 1B, you note, "Information concerning non-VA hospitals' level of ABPP certified psychologists is not currently available."

A. Do you anticipate that this information will be available in the near future?

B. Is there a basis for estimating whether the level of psychologists with ABPP certification in non-VA hospitals is higher or lower than the level in the profession as a whole (noted as 10.4% in your letter)?

2. In your answer to question 2, you indicated that "it would be desirable if approximately 1100 of the current 1435 psychologist positions in DM&S represented the highest level of comprehensive psychological functioning in patient care areas."

A. Approximately how many of the psychologists in these 1435 positions at present represent that "highest level", and is that term a reference to board certification?

B. Of the psychologists presently in those positions, how many do you believe (i) are eligible to take the ABPP examination; (ii) would actually take the examination, if a salary incentive existed to do so; and (iii) would likely pass the examination and thus obtain board certification?

3. In your answer to question 3, you indicated that "it is recognized that use of other authorities such as those granted by P.L. 96-330 and P.L. 98-160 may contribute to the VA's ability to attract the most qualified psychologists." I agree with this statement and would appreciate further information on how the agency believes such authorities might be used and the timetable for any such action.

4. In your answer to questions 1A and B, you indicated that, at the close of FY 1981, 5.6 percent of VA staff psychologists had ABPP certification. In your answer to question 1C, you indicated that "slightly less than 7% of clinical and counseling psychologists in the VA have the ABPP." What is the relationship between these two percentages?

Thank you, John, for your continuing assistance and cooperation. I would very much appreciate a reply by July 20.

With warm regards,

Cordially,

ALAN CRANSTON,
Ranking Minority Member.

PROGRAM GUIDE ON ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, the Simpson-Cranston amendment also includes a provision offered on behalf of my good friend from Ohio [Mr. METZENBAUM] and derived from S. 2220, legislation he introduced earlier this year relating to VA care for veterans suffering from Alzheimer's disease and related neurological diseases. Although Chairman SIMPSON and I were unable to support S. 2220 as introduced, I am pleased, in light of Senator METZENBAUM'S, as well as my own, strong personal interest in this issue, that we were able to work with him to develop a provision acceptable to all of us which is now included in the amendment.

Mr. President, the provision in the amendment would require the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, within 180 days of the date of the enactment of this measure, to disseminate to appropriate VA health-care facilities and submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs in both Houses a program guide on Alzheimer's disease and related neurological diseases. Such a program guide, which has been under development by the VA for a number of years, would be required to clarify VA policy regarding the authorization and provision of treatment, including diagnosis, information, outpatient services, hospital care, and nursing home care, of veterans who are eligible for such services under title 38, United States Code, and who are suffering from Alzheimer's disease and related neurological diseases. It has been contended by some who are active in working with Alzheimer's victims that there is some confusion at the local VA facility level about agency policy in this regard.

This program guide should help end any such confusion and should provide a basis for more widespread understanding of VA policy in this area.

Mr. President, I want to make two additional points on which our acceptance of this provision is premised. First, this provision does not provide any new authority to furnish, or new eligibility for, health-care services from the VA. Second, the provision also does not mandate the content of the agency policies that would be stated in the guide with respect to the VA's use of its existing statutory authority to provide health-care services with respect to Alzheimer's disease. In essence, the amendment would require the VA to complete work on and disseminate a program guide that has been under development for far too long.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of a November 9, 1982, letter to me from the VA's then Chief Medical Director, Dr. Donald Custis, which discusses the program guide and which was in response to an inquiry I made on behalf of Ms. Joy Glenner, a constituent of mine from San Diego who is very active on matters relating to Alzheimer's disease, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION,
DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE AND SURGERY,
Washington, DC, November 9, 1982.

Hon. ALAN CRANSTON,
Ranking Minority Member, Committee on Veterans' Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR CRANSTON: Thank you for forwarding the inquiry of your constituent Mrs. Joy Glenner regarding VA guidelines for treating veterans with Alzheimer's Disease. Mrs. Glenner's letter is a moving statement regarding the difficulties faced by patients with this disease and their families.

Mrs. Glenner correctly points out that there is a lack of uniformity in the approach to diagnosis and treatment of dementia in both the private sector and in public medical care systems such as the VA. The medical responsibility for the diagnosis and management of this disease is determined by medical staff at our VA medical centers in accordance with the needs of the patients and the availability of resources to the responsible medical centers. Alzheimer's Disease is considered a nonservice-connected disability. A VA Central Office task group is in the process of developing a program guide to assist medical staff in our hospitals to improve the diagnosis and management of Alzheimer's disease and to help pool resources and talents as to better meet patient needs. Educational activities for staff are being conducted on a routine basis.

The VA is conducting research directed to the causes and improved management of this disease at five of our Geriatric Research Educational and Clinical Centers (Bedford/Boston, MA, Minneapolis, MN, Palo Alto, CA, Sepulveda, CA and Seattle, WA) as well as numerous individual medical centers such as the Bronx VAMC. There are no plans to mandate the creation of Alzheimer's research centers in the VA at this time. However, where our medical centers develop expertise in treating this disease, and where patient care needs dictate, it is possible for them to obtain educational and research funds through existing mechanisms.

Management of Alzheimer's disease requires cooperation between professional staff and the family of the patient. Many of our staff are active participants in chapters of Alzheimer's and Related Disorders Association and VA staff at Bedford, MA have helped establish chapters in the community as well as for patients in the VA hospitals.

I appreciate the concern of your constituent for veterans with Alzheimer's Disease.

Sincerely,

DONALD L. CUSTIS, M.D.,
Chief Medical Director.

VA FACILITY NAMINGS

Mr. CRANSTON. Finally, Mr. President, I want to make mention of the amendment provisions for the naming of two VA Medical Centers.

The first, offered by Senators KASTEN and PROXMIRE, would name the VAMC in Milwaukee, WI, after the late Congressman Clement G. Zablocki of Wisconsin, the very distinguished and sorely missed chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs. The second, offered by Senators SASSER and BAKER, would name the VAMC in Murfreesboro, TN, in honor of Sgt. Alvin C. York, the renowned World War I hero and Medal of Honor winner.

Mr. President, as members may know, the Committee on Veterans' Affairs has a committee rule with respect to its policy regarding the naming of VA Medical Centers. Both of these namings meet all of the committee's criteria as they were amended at a committee meeting on July 25, 1984.

CONCLUSION

Mr. President, as always, it has been a great pleasure to work with the chairman [Mr. SIMPSON] and all the members of the committee in the development of legislation to meet important needs of the Nation's veterans.

This bill, as it is before the Senate today, is the result of true bipartisan effort—the type of effort that we on the Veterans' Affairs Committee always strive to put forth. I want to note the hard work of, and to thank, the committee staff members who worked on this legislation: Cindy Alpert, Vic Raymond, Tony Principi, and Julie Susman, on the majority staff; James MacRae who so ably provides editorial support to the committee; and, on the minority staff, Bill Brew, Katy Brudick, Ed Scott, Jon Steinberg, Charlotte Hughes, and Ingrid Post.

I believe S. 2514 as reported and amended is a well-balanced, fully appropriate measure that, if enacted, will be of substantial help to the VA in seeking to fulfill its health-care mission. It has the unanimous support of the members of the Veterans' Affairs Committee and has wide support among the veterans' service organizations. I urge my colleagues to give this measure their full support.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I am proud to support the legislation which will name the Veterans' Administration Medical Center in Murfreesboro, TN, in honor of the late Sgt. Alvin C. York.

For his outstanding combat heroism during World War I, Sergeant York was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, the French Croix de Guerre, and the Tennessee Medal for Valor. Sergeant York is one of Tennessee's most prominent heroes and an illustrious veteran all Americans can admire. The fine Murfreesboro medical facility will provide an appropriate and long overdue memorial to Sergeant York and all brave veterans who have given their talents in the defense of our Republic and the freedoms we cherish.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise in support of S. 2514, the Veterans' Administration Health Care Amendments of 1984.

The chairman of the Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee, Senator SIMPSON, and the ranking minority member, Senator CRANSTON, both are to be commended for their fine work on this legislation.

Mr. President, I believe that S. 2514, which received the unanimous approval of the Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee on May 9, 1984, is meritorious legislation containing many significant provisions that will maintain and improve the quality of health care provided to our Nation's deserving veterans. Our country owes a great debt to its veterans, and we have an obligation to ensure that the Veterans' Administration is always able to meet the health care needs of eligible veterans.

Mr. President I am particularly pleased that S. 2514 contains a provision which would improve the health care provided to veterans suffering from "Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder" [PTSD] through the establishment of a Special Committee for PTSD. This special committee would assist the Chief Medical Director of the Veterans' Administration in developing policies, providing guidance and coordinating care for the treatment of veterans with this service-connected disorder. I am also pleased that this provision would require the Veterans' Administration to establish a National Center for PTSD for the purpose of conducting research and training of health care personnel. In addition, this national center would serve the important function of coordinating the exchange of information pertaining to PTSD among all Federal programs involved in PTSD research.

Mr. President, S. 2514 also contains a provision which requires the Veterans' Administration to report to Congress on the kinds of care provided for the terminally ill and the chronically ill. I believe it is most appropriate that we examine compassionate alternative means of providing care for terminally ill veterans. At a time when many of our Nation's veterans are reaching the age of 65, we must work to ensure that our older veterans are provided with adequate health care.

Mr. President, I therefore support this legislation and commend it to my colleagues.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I rise today to support the passage of S. 2514, the "Veterans' Administration Health Care Amendments of 1984," which is before the Senate at this time. The many excellent provisions which are included in this legislation have been described in detail by the distinguished chairman of the Veterans' Affairs Committee, Senator SIMPSON, and the distinguished ranking member, Senator CRANSTON, so that I don't feel it is necessary for me to discuss most provisions of this bill at length.

I would like to take several minutes, however, to discuss in some detail section 15 of the committee bill as reported by the Veterans' Affairs Committee on May 11, 1984. Section 15 would provide for a study and report on veterans eligible for VA health-care services who reside in areas remote from existing VA medical care facilities and a subsequent report on a possible experimental program to furnish care to the veteran in such areas.

The issue of health-care for rural, geographically remote veterans is one that has held great interest for me for as long as I have been a Member of the Senate. Over 150,000 veterans reside in my State of Maine; according to 1980 Census Bureau figures, 53 percent of all veterans in Maine live in rural areas. And in Maine, statistics clearly demonstrate that rural veterans utilize VA medical facilities significantly less than nonrural veterans.

Recognizing that, I introduced legislation early in this Congress, which would require the Administrator to establish an experimental program to determine the feasibility of furnishing diagnostic services to veterans living in certain areas of Maine. My legislation, S. 253, was the subject of hearings by the Veterans' Affairs Committee on July 13, 1983.

Testimony from that hearing and subsequent information reinforce what is already known about problems facing veterans in acquiring VA health-care in rural areas due to travel distances, adverse weather conditions and the capacity of VA facilities to meet veterans' needs. What I believe those hearings most significantly demonstrated was: First, the lack of reliable data about the location, number, and distribution of veterans in this country and their utilization of VA health-care facilities based on their distance from those facilities; and second, the absence of any creative, concerted, centralized effort by the VA to address, much less improve, its health-care service delivery to this country's geographically remote veteran population.

It is for those reasons that I introduced an amendment during committee markup of S. 2514, on May 9, 1984, to require a VA-study of eligible veterans residing in areas remote from VA health-care facilities and such veterans' use of VA health care. In carrying out the mandated study, the Administrator will develop statistics on the numbers of eligible veterans living various distances from VA facilities and their utilization of VA health-care services during fiscal year 1985. The Administrator will be required to submit to the House and Senate Committees on Veterans' Affairs a full report on the study by January 1, 1986. That report would include the Administrator's findings on the extent of the need for the VA to increase health-care services in rural areas.

Following that, the Administrator would be required to submit to those same committees by July 1, 1986, a report describing in detail an experimental national program that could be carried out in five locations to demonstrate alternative approaches that could be used by the VA to provide health-care services to eligible veterans in remote areas and the Administrator's recommendations as to whether any such projects should be carried out.

I firmly believe that when the VA documents, on a national basis, the utilization of VA health-care services by rural veterans the figures will show what our experience in Maine has already shown. That rural veterans are not using VA health-care services and facilities nearly to the extent of nonrural veterans. And from that documentation will come the realization that new, creative, alternative methods of delivering VA health-care to rural veterans must be instituted in a centrally directed effort by the Administrator if that discrepency is to be changed.

Mr. President before I close, I want to express my gratitude to both the chairman and ranking member of the Veterans' Affairs Committee for their efforts to work with me on this issue, to schedule hearings for my original bill, S. 253, and the topic of rural health-care for America's veterans during the committee's consideration of veterans health-care issues.

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, I support the proposal to allow the Veteran's Administration to extend State home grant moneys to individual States for the acquisition of already-existing facilities. This would apply specifically to domiciliary and nursing home facilities. I urge my colleagues to support this cost-saving measure and I commend the Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee—and in particular, Senators BOSCHWITZ, SIMPSON, and CRANSTON—for bringing this legislation before the Senate today.

Presently, the VA grant moneys that are allocated to States for State home construction must be used for the building of new State homes or the modernization of existing ones. These grants make up approximately 65 percent of State home construction costs. This inflexible guideline means that an individual State is precluded from acquiring a presently unused private facility which might well meet its needs. This is inefficient management of limited Federal and State funds.

At this point, I would like to point out that the new plan would be executed with close VA supervision. Acquired facilities would initially have to meet certain health and safety standards. Also, at the time of acquisition, reasonable assurances must be made that the purchase cost, along with any remodeling or alteration, must not be more than the cost of constructing a new facility. In most cases, these costs should be much less.

It seems apparent that this legislation would do two very beneficial things. First, it would save money by cutting construction costs. Second, and equally significant, it would allow States that need to expand their State home facilities to do so more quickly. This should benefit elderly veterans who are in need of State home care.

All of us know that meeting the health care needs of our veterans will become increasingly more difficult in the years ahead. It is estimated that our 65 and older veterans—now numbering approximately 4 million—will reach 8 million by 1990 and 12 million by the turn of the century. We can expect that rising nursing home and related service costs in the private sector will force more and more elderly veterans to turn to VA and State home facilities. It goes without saying that the 103 nursing homes and 16 veterans homes that are presently staffed by the VA will not meet our needs.

Therefore, State home facilities are likely to come in increasing demand. The measure before us now is a responsible way of confronting this problem. This is not to say that it will do so on its own. However, it is a step in the right direction.

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, I am pleased to act as a cosponsor of this amendment providing assistance to our veterans suffering from Alzheimer's disease. Alzheimer's disease is a form of dementia. It includes memory loss and confusion. It was once dismissed as senility, part of the aging process. Scientists have discovered that there are physical causes for the disease. Many questions remain unanswered but we are making headway.

As we await treatment answers we must do all we can to assist the families of those suffering from this tragic disease. The Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association has done a tremendous job of organizing support groups for the families and friends. This assists with the emotional problem but cannot be an answer to the financial difficulties. We must help ease that burden.

With the passage of this amendment, we would undertake a national policy of counseling, treatment and information programs for our veterans. We also would provide a new category of eligibility for benefits. This addition would assist Alzheimer's victims in meeting costs of hospital and nursing home care.

As a member of the Senate Aging Committee and a Vietnam veteran, I have long been concerned with the needs of our veterans population. By the turn of the century an estimated 12 million veterans will be over 65 years old. I believe it is important to realize the gravity of this situation. At present, the Veterans' Administration operates 172 hospitals and 226 outpatient clinics. These facilities are presently at 95 percent of capacity. The VA must carefully plan for the new influx. With the passage of this amendment we will begin the coordination that is needed for the veterans community to deal with the tragedy of Alzheimer's disease. The health care costs for victims can drive the family into bankruptcy. Those of us in Congress must deal with some difficult health care questions. We are taking a big step forward today. I am pleased to be a part of this effort.

Mr. BOSCHWITZ. Mr. President, on May 24 of this year, I introduced legislation, S. 2715, that takes a simple straightforward step in improving veterans nursing home care.

My legislation, which was cosponsored by my friend from South Dakota, Senator PRESSLER, changes the Veterans' Administration's State Home Program to allow States to use their construction grant money to acquire and renovate already existing facilities.

The State Home Program now pays per diem rates for the care of the vets in the homes, and provides grants for up to 65 percent of the cost for construction or modernization of extended care facilities. This includes both domiciliary and nursing home care. It is a well-run, cost-effective program and my legislation will only improve it by giving States the flexibility to acquire—at much lower cost—an existing nursing home, rather than go to the expense of building a new one from scratch.

Today, I am offering my legislation as an amendment to the health bill because I feel it is very important and timely to make these needed improvements in veterans nursing home care.

Mr. President, in the next 5 years, the makeup of this Nation's veteran population will continue its steady shift. By 1990, this country's over-65 population will change such that 50 percent of the over-65 males will be veterans. And, by the end of the century, the current over-65 vet population of 4 million will grow to almost 9 million. Clearly, this is both an opportunity and a challenge for the veterans' health care system.

Currently, in Minnesota, 20 percent of our elderly are veterans and already 50 percent of the males over 65 are vets. We are also facing an incredible increase in the number of veterans over age 80—the group most likely to need and use long-term care facilities—from 5,500 now to over 600,000 by the year 2000.

Most people who know the circumstances realize that the VA does not have the resources to build the number of nursing homes it will need to handle the aging World War II veterans. We also realize that, even if the resources were available, a short-term solution of major nursing home construction would only leave us with a large number of unused facilities 20 to 30 years down the road. Therefore, we must find a wiser and more prudent way to provide care for these veterans.

I believe this amendment is one such prudent solution. I hope my colleagues will join me in supporting it.

Mr. DENTON. Mr President, the legislation before us today is an important step in providing improved health care to the veterans who have served our country and given of themselves in defense of our national freedom and security. It also exemplifies the dedication of the Veterans' Affairs Committee staff and the cooperation that is necessary on both sides of the aisle of produce legislation that best serves the interests of America's veterans.

The items contained in the legislation are beneficial to the majority of veterans in need of health care, and they provide a needed adjustment of and enhancement to current law. Provisions such as pilot programs for alcohol and drug rehabilitation, telecaptioning television decoders for the deaf, and automobile adaptive equipment for the disabled are necessary to the health and well-being of our veterans.

In addition, the legislation provides for several reports to facilitate the study of problems peculiar to veterans and to assist us in our future legislative efforts. Among the reports are one on community referral coordination by VA facilities in order to assist veterans seek help outside the facility; one on programs that provide for hospice or related health care for terminally ill patients; and one on readjustment counseling for active duty military personnel who served in Vietnam, who have been involved in other areas of hostile activity, or who have been held as prisoners of war.

I am pleased to support legislation that gives attention to recurrent problems among the veterans population.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, I would like to express my strong support for the Veterans' Administration Health Care Amendments of 1984, S. 2514, and the committee amendment thereto. The distinguished chairman of the Veterans' Affairs Committee, Senator SIMPSON, and the extremely able ranking minority member, Senator CRANSTON, have crafted an outstanding bill which will significantly improve, enhance, and expand health care opportunities for our Nation's veterans.

I am particularly pleased that the committee amendment to S. 2514 includes a sense of the Congress resolution relating to certain recommendations made by the Grace Commission on VA health care. After reviewing the Grace Commission's recommendations early this year, I concluded that a number of them had serious policy implications which, if adopted, would have had the effect of eliminating a comprehensive and independent health care system within the Veterans' Administration.

On April 9, 1984, I introduced Senate Resolution 364, a resolution expressing the sense of the Senate that certain specific recommendations of the Grace Commission relating to VA health care be rejected as a matter of national policy. The distinguished ranking minority member of the Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee, Senator CRANSTON, and my colleagues on that committee, Senators RANDOLPH and MATSUNAGA, joined me in introducing that resolution. Subsequently, Senators PELL, SARBANES, BURDICK, and HEFLIN added their names as cosponsors of Senate Resolution 364 and they wish to be cosponsors of provision 16 in the committee amendment relating to the Grace Commission.

The provision included in the committee amendment relating to the Grace Commission's VA health care recommendations represents a compromise among Senators SIMPSON, CRANSTON, and myself. I am pleased that we were able to reach agreement on this issue and believe the sense of Congress resolution contained in the committee amendment achieves the result I intended when I introduced Senate Resolution 364.

The Grace Commission's VA health care recommendations which were of particular concern to me and which are addressed in the sense of Congress resolution are as follows:

First, that funds for construction of Veterans' Administration hospitals not already under contract be deleted from the Veterans' Administration budget, that bids be invited from private hospital management companies to lease hospital facilities to the Veterans' Administration under long-term contracts, and that such facilities be managed by private companies under short-term contracts.

Second, that the Veterans' Administration eliminate such number of Veterans' Administration hospital beds as is necessary to achieve an 80-percent occupancy rate for such beds.

Third, that the Veterans' Administration consider converting some underutilized acute health-care facilities to extended health-care facilities and phasing out old hospital facilities which may be in need of replacement or significant reconstruction.

It was my view that these recommendations posed a threat to the integrity of the VA health care system and were inconsistent with two provisions of existing law; namely, the requirement that the VA maintain a "comprehensive, nationwide health care system for the direct provision of quality health care services to eligible veterans," and the requirement that the VA operate and maintain not less than 90,000 hospital and nursing home beds.

I think all my colleagues would agree that adoption of the aforementioned Grace Commission's recommendations would represent a fundamental change in the way VA health care services have been traditionally delivered to veterans and that they ought not to be implemented without thorough congressional review. That is exactly what the sense of Congress resolution concludes. It states that no action to implement these recommendations should be taken without their policy implications having first been given full and careful consideration, after appropriate hearings, by the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Senate.

I hope adoption of this amendment will reassure veterans that this body remains committed to an independent, quality health care system within the Veterans' Administration.

Again, I thank Senators SIMPSON and CRANSTON for including the sense of Congress resolution in this bill.

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, I rise in support of S. 2514 and to commend my colleagues who sit on the Committee on Veterans' Affairs for their continued, strong support of programs of benefit to our Nation's veterans.

It is all too easy for us to forget the countless sacrifices that those veterans who have served our country, both in time of war and peace, have made in order to preserve this remarkable society in which we are so privileged to live.

The work of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs reminds all of us of the debt that we owe to our veterans. The far-reaching measures that are contained in the Veterans' Administration Health Care Amendments of 1984, which are now before us, represent a substantial, if only a partial, repayment of that debt.

More specifically, Mr. President, I want to extend my gratitude to Senator SIMPSON and Senator CRANSTON, and particularly to Senator MITCHELL, for their cooperation and diligence in developing section 15 of this bill—a section that represents an important first step toward improving the Veterans' Administration's delivery of health care services to eligible veterans who live in remote areas of the country.

Section 15 of S. 2514 gives congressional recognition to the fact that millions of veterans, who are eligible for health care services from existing Veterans' Administration facilities, reside in areas of the country that are geographically remote from these facilities. Recognition is also given to the fact that this geographical disadvantage keeps these veterans from obtaining necessary health-care services from the VA in many, many cases.

Because the Veterans' Administration has not begun to focus on this widespread problem—a problem which impedes the delivery of VA health-care services to eligible rural veterans—this bill requires the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to begin to develop information about rural veterans so that alternative approaches to provide adequate services to these veterans can be developed.

In time, the Administrator is to recommend a pilot program to be carried out in five remote areas of the country to demonstrate the feasibility of alternatives to the current, inequitable system.

Because the need for alternative VA health care services for rural veterans has been brought to the attention of the Congress by the veterans in Aroostook County, ME—where veterans must travel 400 or 500 miles round trip for care at the only VA hospital and outpatient clinic in Maine—it is my intention to work to create one of these pilot programs in Aroostook County.

My involvement in the issue of rural veterans' health care in Aroostook County dates back many years, to my service in the House of Representatives. In 1979, my first year in the Senate, the Hayward-Frazier Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, in Presque Isle, ME, first petitioned the Veterans' Administration for the establishment of an outpatient clinic in Aroostook County. Because the VA believed that it did not have the available resources to meet the needs of those rural veterans, as well as others in Maine and across the country, the request was denied.

Subsequent to that decision, the Aroostook County Veterans Medical Facility Corp. was formed in January of 1980. It has worked long and hard over the past 4 years for the establishment of a diagnostic-care facility in Aroostook County. A year ago, corporation officials were successful in setting up, in conjunction with the VA Medical Center at Togus, ME, a followup care program at the Cary Medical Center in Caribou. Although the VA has canceled this program, a similar followup care alternative for Aroostook County veterans is again in place.

Senator MITCHELL's bill, S. 523, also sought to establish a diagnostic-care facility in Aroostook County in order to meet those veterans continuing needs.

Although much time and effort has gone into trying to force the Veterans' Administration to consider the special circumstances of the rural veteran, we have been blocked at every turn.

Mr. President, although the needs of Maine's 55,000 rural veterans are significant and demand attention, they are by no means unique. Millions of veterans in others rural areas of the country also face the same difficulties that are imposed by time, distance, adverse weather conditions, and the lack of public transportation. These impositions are a special burden upon aged veterans, who, in many instances, may simply be unable to make any long journey.

This is a national problem and I am encouraged that the Committee on Veterans' Affairs also perceives this issue in this light. In my opinion, only by establishing a national system that would be of benefit to all rural veterans can the veterans of Aroostook County, and other rural veterans in Maine, enjoy consistent and accessible extended VA health care. The need for this care is acute in Maine, and I look forward to continuing to work with the committee and the Veterans' Administration in order to expedite the implementation of such a national system that will ultimately be of benefit to Maine's rural veterans.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, today Senators MELCHER, DIXON, HAWKINS, PRESSLER, BINGAMAN, LEAHY, D'AMATO, and HEINZ join me as cosponsors of an amendment which I have offered to this measure that will create a clear national policy directive from the Veterans' Administration regarding the treatment and care of veterans who have been stricken with Alzheimer's disease. I wish to commend the Committee on Veterans' Affairs and, in particular, the distinguished committee chairman, Senator SIMPSON, and the ranking minority member, Senator CRANSTON, for their hard work on this issue and on all matters pertaining to the health and well-being of our Nation's veterans.

Alzheimer's disease, Mr. President, is one of the most serious medical problems we face today.

As many as 4 million people in this country are afflicted by Alzheimer's.

This cruel disease kills 120,000 Americans per year.

It is responsible for an estimated 50 percent of nursing home admissions. Annual medical expenditures for the treatment of Alzheimer's comes to $26 billion.

As our population ages, the statistics will worsen.

But in spite of the growing problem of Alzheimer's disease, it is a fact that the VA hospital system has no national policy at present with regard to veterans suffering from this ailment. Treatment, hospitalization, nursing home care—all of these are available only at the discretion of individual VA hospital directors.

What is the result? The result, Mr. President, is a crazy quilt pattern of services. Some VA hospital directors choose to accept Alzhemier's patients. Those are the lucky ones—and theirs are the lucky families.

But according to the Alzheimer's disease and related disorders association, many veterans are unable to obtain care for Alzheimer's at VA institutions.

Our amendment is intended to do just one thing—to clarify VA policy on Alzheimer's patients. The amendment states simply that the VA produce a program guide which will end any ambiguity regarding the authorization and provision of treatment for veterans suffering from Alzheimer's disease and related neurological diseases.

Mr. President, the devastating statistics I have cited about Alzheimer's disease cannot begin to tell the whole story. The millions of victims, the thousands of deaths, the billions of dollars—none of these numbers carry with them a sense of the human suffering caused by this terrible disease.

As an Alzheimer's victim slowly disintegrates, the collective spirit of his or her loved ones also crumbles. Alzheimer's disease bankrupts families—financially and emotionally.

I am pleased that the Senate has recognized the serious and urgent nature of this problem. In the past year, we have passed legislation to encourage research that may ultimately help make the lives of the victims and their families more livable. I would also like to commend the distinguished Congresswoman from Maine, OLYMPIA SNOWE, who has introduced similar legislation on the House side and who has a longstanding commitment to the defeat of Alzheimer's disease.

Mr. President, this provision is another important step in the direction of coping with a national problem that cannot be ignored.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, I am most pleased that my colleagues on the Veterans' Affairs Committee have agreed that the time has come to recognize and to provide financial incentives to those psychologists in the Veterans' Administration [VA] who have demonstrated exceptional expertise by obtaining national board certification.

My proposal, which has now been incorporated into the larger VA Health Care Act, essentially treats VA psychologists in a manner compatible with their medical colleagues. My original proposal would also have provided the Administrator of the Veterans' Administration with additional authority to provide similar financial incentives for those psychologists who obtained additional advanced educational expertise, such as a master's in public health [MPH], which the Administrator feels is in the best interest of the VA. With our ever-aging veteran population, additional training in gerontology at a school of public health would be advantageous. By mutual agreement, however, that portion of my original proposal (S. 155) has been deleted at this time. However, I look forward to testifying before the Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee on this and related issues next legislative session.

In my judgment, we must continue to ensure that our Nation's veterans will receive the highest quality health care services possible.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the amendment which would direct the Administrator of Veterans' Administration to modify the reversionary interest of the United States in certain lands previously conveyed to the State of California for the use of the University of California. The text of this amendment is identical to a bill, H.R. 2629, introduced by my distinguished colleague from the other body, Mr. BEILENSON of Los Angeles, which was passed unanimously on the floor of the House last November 8. The amendment also enjoys the support of the Veterans' Administration, the Department of Justice, and the Office of Management and Budget.

This is a simple amendment designed to allow the University of California to make better use of a 35-acre parcel of land originally conveyed by the Veterans' Administration in 1948. At that time, conditions were placed on the deed transfer requiring that the property be used for medical research or related purposes only. This legislation, Mr. President, would allow this land to be used for cultural and educational purposes as well as medical. As in the case of the original law granting the property to UCLA, the amendment provides that the property shall revert to the United States if it ceases to be used for the purposes specified by it.

Much has changed on the campus of UCLA since 1948. Its world renowned medical center is located much closer to the heart of campus, a good distance from the property in question. While the only facilities presently on the site are medically oriented, the passage of time and changed circumstances make the further construction of major medical facilities on this site incongruous with its optimal use and extremely unlikely. Additionally, Mr. President, the lack of space on the UCLA campus, and the location of this property next to Westwood Village—a fast growing commercial and cultural mecca—make this property the ideal site for a number of possible projects that will complete the growth of the campus.

Mr. President, this is a simple amendment and it is noncontroversial. I urge its adoption.

Mr. STEVENS. I ask for adoption of the committee substitute as amended by the Simpson-Cranston amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment as amended.

The committee amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and was read the third time.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I now ask the Chair to lay before the Senate Calendar No. 1106, which is H.R. 5168, the House companion bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The bill will be stated by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 5618) to amend title 38, United States Code, to revise and improve Veterans' Administration health programs, and for other purposes.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move to strike all after the enacting clause of H.R. 5618 and insert in lieu thereof the provisions of S. 2514, as the Senate has just amended it.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment. If there be no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed, as follows:

S. 2514

Resolved, That the bill from the House of Representatives (H.R. 5618) entitled "An Act to amend title 38, United States Code, to revise and improve Veterans' Administration health programs, and for other purposes", do pass with the following amendments: Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That (a) this Act may be cited as the "Veterans' Administration Health Care Amendments of 1984".

(b) Except as otherwise specifically provided whenever in this Act an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of title 38, United States Code.

COORDINATION OF VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION-COMMUNITY REFERRAL ASSISTANCE AND SERVICES

SEC. 2. (a) Chapter 73 is amended by adding at the end of subchapter 1 the following new section:

"§ 4120. Coordination of referral assistance and services

"In order to improve the provision, and enhance the management, of health-care and health-related services by the Veterans' Administration and other sources to veterans who are eligible for care under chapter 17 of this title, with a special emphasis on veterans who are 65 years of age or older, and who are determined by the Administrator to be in need of assistance under this section, the Administrator shall designate one organizational unit in each Veterans' Administration health-care facility for the purpose of coordinating the provision of referral assistance, and facilitating and helping to coordinate the provision of such services not at Veterans' Administration expense, to such eligible veterans when such referral is reasonably necessary for the health of such veterans. The Administrator shall carry out this section (1) in a manner consistent (A) with the policy of the United States, set forth in section 409(a) of Public Law 97-306, that the Veterans' Administration shall maintain a comprehensive, nationwide health-care system for the direct provision of quality health-care services to eligible veterans, (B) with the mandate of section 4101(a) of this title that the Department of Medicine and Surgery shall provide a complete medical and hospital service for the medical care and treatment of veterans, and (C) with the United States Government's historic, firm commitment, and moral obligation, as embodied in this title, to provide care for veterans with service-connected disabilities, and (2) in conjunction with local, State, Federal, and private agencies providing and coordinating the provision of services to elderly persons and with other pertinent public and private agencies.".

(b) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 73 is amended by adding after the item relating to section 4119 the following:

"4120. Coordination of referral assistance and services.".

ALCOHOL AND DRUG TREATMENT AND REHABILITATION

SEC. 3. (a) Section 620A is amended—

(1) by striking out "pilot" in subsection (a)(1) both places it appears;

(2) by striking out "fifth" and inserting in lieu thereof "seventh" and by striking out "pilot" in subsection (e);

(3) in subsection (f)—

(A) by inserting "(1)" before "Not"; and

(B) by inserting before the period "prior to the amendment of this section by the Veterans' Administration Health Care Amendments of 1984"; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(2) Not later than March 1, 1986, and March 1, 1987, the Administrator shall report to such committees on the findings and recommendations of the Administrator pertaining to the operation of the program authorized by subsection (a) during the preceding fiscal year and shall include in such report information for such year regarding average duration of participation of veterans, rates of successful rehabilitation, and any changes in average and maximum allowable charges per veteran under contracts entered into by the Veterans' Administration as part of such program."; and

(4) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(h) Not later than 12 months after the date of the enactment of this subsection, the Administrator shall prescribe regulations to provide guidelines for the treatment and rehabilitation of veterans for alcohol or drug dependence or abuse disabilities under this chapter in facilities over which the Administrator has direct jurisdiction. Such guidelines shall include guidance—

"(1) on the duration of such treatment and rehabilitation under this chapter, taking into account the duration of such treatment and rehabilitation in non-Veterans' Administration programs and identifying specifically duration in detoxification, inpatient-acute care, inpatient-rehabilitation and inpatient-extended care, outpatient care, and followup services; and

"(2) on the provision of referral assistance and the development, implementation, and monitoring of individual treatment plans and followup for veterans receiving such care and treatment.".

(b) Not later than March 1, 1985, and March 1 of each subsequent year, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Senate a report containing a comprehensive survey of the activities during the preceding fiscal year of all Veterans' Administration-operated programs providing treatment and rehabilitation for alcohol or drug dependence or abuse disabilities, identifying, by facility, the number of beds involved, the number of patients and episodes of care (whether inpatient-acute, inpatient-rehabilitation, inpatient-extended, or outpatient), the specific treatment methodologies employed, average lengths of participation, rates of successful rehabilitation, and staffing levels and standards, together with a national summary of such information. The third such report shall also contain information on the effectiveness of such treatment and rehabailitation in light of the regulations prescribed under subsection (h) of section 620A (as added by the amendment made by subsection (a)(4) of this section), including information on diagnostic methodologies employed, use of case-management approaches and discharge planning, lengths of participation, treatment results, methods used for approving, evaluating, and monitoring the use of non-Veterans' Administration facilities under section 620A, and referral and followup activities for veterans discharged from such programs and such facilities.

(c) The section heading of section 620A and the item relating to such section in the table of sections at the beginning of chapter 17 are each amended by striking out the semicolon and "pilot program".

MEDICAL AND REHABILITATIVE DEVICES

SEC. 4. Section 617 is amended—

(1) by redesignating such section as subsection (a); and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(b) In order to assist in overcoming the handicap of deafness, the Administrator may provide assistive devices, including telecaptioning television decoders, to veterans who are profoundly deaf and entitled to compensation on account of hearing impairment.".

POST-TRAUMATIC-STRESS DISORDER

SEC. 5. (a)(1) In order to enhance the Veterans' Administration's capability to diagnose and treat post-traumatic-stress disorder (hereinafter in this section referred to as "PTSD"), the Chief Medical Director of the Veterans' Administration shall establish in the Department of Medicine and Surgery a Special Committee on Post-Traumatic-Stress Disorder (hereinafter in this section referred to as the "Special Committee") and shall appoint qualified employees of the Department to serve on the Special Committee.

(2) The Special Committee shall assess, and carry out a continuing assessment of, the capacity of the Veterans' Administration to provide diagnosis and treatment to eligible veterans with PTSD and shall advise the Chief Medical Director regarding the development of policies, the provision of guidance, and the coordination of services for the diagnosis and treatment of veterans with PTSD in inpatient PTSD units, other inpatient psychiatric programs, outpatient mental health clinics, and readjustment counseling programs of the Veterans' Administration. The Special Committee shall also make recommendations to the Chief Medical Director for guidance regarding appropriate diagnostic and treatment methods and referral for and coordination of followup care and with respect to the evaluation of PTSD treatment programs, the conduct of research concerning such diagnosis and treatment (taking into account the provisions of subsection (b) of this section), special programs of education and training on PTSD for employees of the Department of Medicine and Surgery and the Department of Veterans' Benefits (also taking into account such provisions), the appropriate allocation of resources for all such activities, and any specific steps that should be taken to improve such diagnosis and treatment and to correct any deficiencies in the operations of inpatient PTSD units.

(b) The Chief Medical Director of the Veterans' Administration shall establish and operate a National Center on PTSD (A) to carry out and promote research into, and the training of health-care and related personnel in, the diagnosis and treatment of veterans with PTSD, and (B) to serve as a resource center for and to promote and to seek to coordinate the exchange of information regarding all research and training activities carried out by the Veterans' Administration, and by other Federal and non-Federal entities, with respect to PTSD.

(c)(1)(A) Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Senate a report on the implementation of subsections (a) and (b).

(B) The report required by subparagraph (A) shall contain—

(i) a list of the members of the Special Committee,

(ii) the assessment of the Chief Medical Director of the Veterans' Administration, after consultation with the Special Committee, regarding the capability of the Veterans' Administration to meet the needs of Vietnam veterans, former prisoners of war, and other eligible veterans for inpatient and outpatient PTSD diagnosis and treatment (both through PTSD inpatient treatment units and otherwise) as well as a description of the results of any evaluations that have been made of PTSD inpatient treatment units in existence on the date of the enactment of this Act,

(iii) the plans of the Special Commitee for further assessments of the capability of the Veterans' Administration to diagnose and treat veterans with PTSD,

(iv) the recommendations made by the Special Committee to the Chief Medical Director,

(v) a description of the steps taken, plans made (and a timetable for their execution), and resources to be applied to implement subsections (a) and (b), and

(vi) the assessment of the Administrator of the capacity of the Veterans' Administration to meet in all geographic areas of the United States the needs described in clause (ii) and any plans and timetable for increasing that capacity (including the costs of such action).

(2) Not later than February 1, 1986, and February 1 of each subsequent year, the Administrator shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Senate a report containing information updating the report or reports submitted under this subsection prior to the submission of such report.

REPORT ON VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION PROGRAMS FOR TERMINALLY ILL VETERANS

SEC. 6. (a) Not later than September 30, 1985, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Senate a report on programs of the Veterans' Administration to furnish palliative care, supportive counseling, and other medical services to terminally ill veterans and, pursuant to section 601(6)(B) of title 38, United States Code, supportive counseling to members of such veterans' families.

(b) The report required by subsection (a) shall include—

(1) a review of Veterans' Administration policies and guidelines on the provision of care, counseling, and services described in subsection (a);

(2) a review of the care, counseling, and services furnished, including the treatment modalities used and services furnished by the Veterans' Administration;

(3) an analysis and a comparison of the care, counseling, and services furnished with respect to terminally ill veterans in hospice and other Veterans' Administration programs, including a comparison of the routine and ancillary services, of the duration of inpatient and outpatient treatment and hospital-based home care, and of the cost of care furnished in such programs;

(4) an explanation of how the care, counseling, and services described in subsection (a) is or will be included in the overall plans of the Veterans' Administration for providing health care to older veterans in the future and the extent to which plans to furnish hospice care are included in such plans;

(5) a review of any steps taken to arrange for the exchange of information between Veterans' Administration facilities providing the care, counseling, and services described in subsection (a) and non-Veterans' Administration facilities providing similar care, counseling, and services; and

(6) proposals for such administrative or legislative action as the Administrator may consider appropriate in light of the information provided in the report.

AUTOMOBILE ADAPTIVE EQUIPMENT

SEC. 7. (a) Subsection (c) of section 1903 is amended to read as follows:

"(c)(1) An eligible person shall not be entitled to adaptive equipment under this chapter for more than two automobiles or other conveyances (A) at any one time, or (B) except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, in any four-year period.

"(2) If, in a case in which the limitation set forth in paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection precludes an eligible person from being entitled to adaptive equipment, the Administrator determines that, due to circumstances beyond the control of the eligible person, one of the automobiles or other conveyances for which adaptive equipment was provided in the applicable four-year period is no longer available for the use of such person, the Administrator may, as a matter of discretion and pursuant to regulations which the Administrator shall prescribe, provide adaptive equipment for such person for an additional automobile or other conveyance during such period.".

(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on October 1, 1984.

(2) In the case of a person who was provided adaptive equipment under chapter 39 of title 38, United States Code, for an automobile or other conveyance after September 30, 1980, but prior to October 1, 1984, and who has available for use such automobile or other conveyance on the date of the enactment of this Act, the first four-year period applicable to such person under subsection (c) of section 1903 of such title (as amended by subsection (a)) shall begin on the most recent date prior to October 1, 1984, on which such individual was provided such equipment.

READJUSTMENT COUNSELING

SEC. 8. (a) Section 612A(g)(2)(B) is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" at the end of clause (i);

(2) by striking out the period at the end of clause (ii) and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon and "and"; and

(3) by adding after clause (ii) the following:

"(iii) assessments of whether or not individuals who—

"(I) are veterans who served on active duty (aa) during World War II or the Korean conflict (with particular emphasis on those who engaged in combat with the enemy), (bb) during any period and who were prisoners of war, or (cc) after May 7, 1975 (with particular emphasis on those who served in areas during periods in which members of the Armed Forces in such areas were subjected to danger from armed conflict comparable to the danger to which members of the Armed Forces have been subjected in combat with the enemy during a period of war), and

"(II) members of the Armed Forces serving on active duty who (aa) served on active duty during World War II or the Korean conflict (with particular emphasis on those who engaged in combat with the enemy) or after May 7, 1975 (with particular emphasis on those who served in areas during periods described in division (I)(cc) of this clause), or (bb) were prisoners of war, need readjustment counseling and, if so, the Administrator's recommendations on the most desirable means by which such needs should be met, taking into account the resources that would be required to meet such needs and specifically whether such persons should be made eligible for readjustment counseling under this section and, if so, what effect that eligibility would have on the availability of such services for Vietnam-era veterans.

The Administrator may submit the assessments and recommendations described in subclause (iii) at any time prior to April 1, 1987.".

(b)(1) Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs and the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the appropriate committees of the Congress a joint report setting forth—

(A) their recommendations, taking into account the extent of the availability of Veterans' Administration resources to provide readjustment counseling to Vietnam-era veterans, on the appropriateness and desirability of extending eligibility for readjustment counseling under section 612A of title 38, United States Code, to individuals who are serving on active duty in the Armed Forces of the United States and (i) who also served on such active duty during the Vietnam era (as defined in section 101(29) of such title (as amended by section 8 of this Act)), or (ii) who also served on active duty after May 7, 1975, in an area during a period in which hostilities (as defined in paragraph (2) of this subsection) occurred in such area;

(B) their determinations as to (I) whether, if eligibility for such readjustment counseling were so extended, the Veterans' Administration and the Department of Defense would enter into an agreement or agreements pursuant to which the Department of Defense would reimburse the Veterans' Administration for such counseling provided to such individuals while serving on active duty, (II) if so, whether or not such reimbursement would be made without the necessity of the Veterans' Administration providing the Department of Defense with the names of the individuals so counseled and, if not, whether or not a requirement that such names be provided would discourage active-duty personnel from requesting such services, and (III) the manner and extent to which the Veterans' Administration and the Department of Defense would undertake to carry out outreach activities to inform such individuals about the availability of such counseling; and

(C) any other information, determinations, or recommendations pertinent to the subject matter of the report that the Administrator and Secretary consider appropriate.

"(C) policies with respect to the exercise by Veterans' Administration security service officers of the enforcement and arrest authorizes granted in subsection (b) of this section.

"(D) the scope and duration of training that is required for Veterans' Administration security service officers, with particular emphasis on dealing with situations involving patients, and

"(E) rules limiting the carrying and use of weapons by Veterans' Administration security service officers.

The rules prescribed under clause (A) of this paragraph, together with the penalties for violations thereof, shall be posted conspicuously on such property.

"(2) Whoever violates any rule prescribed under paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned not more than six months (or such lesser amount or period of time as the Administrator prescribes in the regulations prescribed under paragraph (1) of this subsection), or both.

"(b) The Administrator may designate employees of the Veterans' Administration as Veterans' Administration security service officers. Such officers shall enforce Federal laws, and the rules prescribed under subsection (a)(1)(A) of this section, on Veterans' Administration property. Any Veterans' Administration security service officers, subject to any restrictions under the regulations prescribed under subsection (a) of this section, may make an arrest, with or without a warrant, for any offense on Veterans' Administration property if (1) such offense occurs in such officer's presence, or (2) such officer has reasonable grounds to believe (A) that the offense constitutes a violation of any law of the United States or of any rule prescribed under subsection (a)(1)(A) of this section, and (B) that the person to be arrested has committed that offense.

"(c) With the agreement of the head of the agency concerned, the Administrator may use the facilities and services of Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies when it is economical and in the public interest to do so.

"(d)(1) Notwithstanding subchapter I of chapter 59 of title 5, the Administrator, pursuant to regulations which the Administrator shall prescribe consistent with paragraph (2) of this subsection, may pay allowances for the purchase of uniforms to any Veterans' Administration security service officer who is required to wear a prescribed uniform in the performance of official duties.

"(2) Allowances that the Administrator may pay under paragraph (1) of this subsection shall not exceed—

"(A) at the time the individual is first employed as a Veterans' Administration security service officer, $400; and

"(B) at the beginning of the first fiscal year that begins after the individual has completed 12 months of service as a Veterans' Administration security service officer and at the beginning of each subsequent fiscal year, $200.".

(b)(1) The provisions of section 218 of title 38, United States Code, other than clause (2) of subsection (a) of such section, as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this Act shall remain in effect until the date on which the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs prescribes the regulations required to be prescribed by subsection (a) of such section as amended by subsection (a) of this section.

(2) The authority of the Administrator to designate officers and employees of the Veterans' Administration to act as special policemen under section 218(a)(2) of such title as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this Act shall remain in effect until the date on which the Administrator first exercises the authority under subsection (b) of section 218 of such title as amended by subsection (a) of this section.

(c) The item relating to such section in the table of sections at the beginning of chapter 3 of such title is amended to read as follows:

"218. Security and law enforcement on property under the jurisdiction of the Veterans' Administration.".

(d) Section 4107(g) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)—

(A) by striking out "or" in clause (A);

(B) by striking out the comma and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon and "or" in subclause (iv) of clause (B); and

(C) by inserting after clause (B) the following new clause:

"(C) of employees providing security services, pursuant to section 218 of this title, in buildings under the jurisdiction of the Administrator (and not under the control of the Administrator of General Services) that are used for the purpose of providing health care,";

(2) by striking out "health-care" each place it appears in paragraphs (2)(A) and (4); and

(3) by inserting "or (C)" after "(B)" in paragraph (4).

COMPTROLLER GENERAL REPORT ON MEDICAL PERSONNEL STAFFING LEVELS

SEC. 10. Section 5010(a)(4)(C) is amended to read as follows:

"(C) Not later than fifteen days after the expiration of the period for the submission of a certification by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget under subparagraph (B) of this paragraph, the Comptroller General shall submit to the appropriate committees of the Congress a report stating the Comptroller General's opinion as to whether the Director has complied with the requirements of such subparagraph in providing such certification and in providing to the Veterans' Administration such funded personnel ceiling.".

REPORT ON FEDERAL GOVERNMENT RESPONSIBILITY TO INDIVIDUALS WHO SERVED WITH VOLUNTARY CIVILIAN ORGANIZATIONS IN VIETNAM

SEC. 11. (a)(1) The purpose of this section is to provide a basis for the executive branch and the Congress to evaluate the question of United States Government responsibility, and alternative approaches, for providing individuals who served for a period of at least thirty days in the Republic of Vietnam during the Vietnam era as employees of voluntary organizations, determined by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, in consultation with the Secretary of Defense, to be organizations which provided significant assistance to the United States Armed Forces in the Republic of Vietnam during the Vietnam era, with Federal and other benefits and services (including, but not limited to, health care and monetary compensation for disabilities which may be related to exposure to dioxin or be the result of traumatic events), either through the Veterans' Administration or otherwise, and for assisting such individuals in connection with disabilities they may have incurred as a result of such service.

(2) In order to carry out the purpose stated in paragraph (1), the Administrator, the Secretary of Defense, and the Secretary of Health and Human Services, not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, shall submit to the appropriate committees of the Congress a joint report on the question of United States Government responsibility and setting forth various alternative approaches (together with comments on the appropriateness and the advantages and disadvantages of each) and any recommendations by such officials for legislative and administrative action with respect thereto, for establishing a program for providing such benefits, services, and assistance to such individuals.

(b) For the purpose of this section, the terms "Armed Forces" and "Vietnam era" have the meanings given such terms in section 101 (10) and (29), respectively, of title 38, United States Code.

CONTRACT CARE IN PUERTO RICO AND THE VIRGIN ISLANDS

SEC. 12. Section 601(4)(C)(v) is amended by striking out "September 30, 1984," and inserting in lieu thereof "September 30, 1985,".

HEALTH CARE IN REMOTE AREAS

SEC. 13. (a) The Congress finds that—

(1) many veterans with service-connected disabilities and other veterans eligible for certain health-care services from the Veterans' Administration, within the limits of Veterans' Administration facilities, reside in areas of the United States that are geographically remote from health-care facilities over which the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs has direct jurisdiction;

(2) for many such veterans such health-care facilities are geographically inaccessible and for many other such veterans the inconvenience of travel to such facilities discourages them from seeking health-care services from the Veterans' Administration; and

(3) a study conducted by the Administrator of eligible veterans residing in remote areas and these veterans' utilization of Veterans' Administration health-care services would provide useful information on the feasibility and appropriateness of alternative approaches to furnishing health-care services to such veterans.

(b)(1) The Administrator shall carry out a study to develop information about veterans who reside in remote areas and are eligible for health-care services from the Veterans' Administration and to develop alternative approaches that could be adopted to furnish such veterans with such services. In carrying out the study, the Administrator shall—

(A) develop, to the maximum feasible extent, statistics on the number of eligible veterans who, during fiscal year 1985—

(i) reside less than 50 miles from the nearest Veterans' Administration medical facility,

(ii) reside between 50 miles and 100 miles from the nearest Veterans' Administration medical facility,

(iii) reside between 100 miles and 200 miles from the nearest Veterans' medical facility, or

(iv) reside more than 200 miles from the nearest Veterans' Administration medical facility;

(B) develop, by each group of residences described in clause (A), statistics on the numbers of eligible veterans who, during such year—

(i) utilize Veterans' Administration medical facilities,

(ii) receive inpatient care in such facilities (including the typical lengths of stay of such veterans in such facilities),

(iii) receive outpatient care from such facilities, or

(iv) receive followup health-care services from such facilities;

(C) develop such further statistics and gather such additional information as the Administrator considers appropriate to carry out the study; and

(D) develop breakdowns of the statistics described in clauses (A) and (B) with respect to age, service connection, and financial need regarding the applicable veteran populations.

(2) Not later than January 1, 1986, the Administrator shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Senate a full report on such study. Such report shall include—

(A) the statistics and breakdown developed and information gathered pursuant to paragraph (1);

(B) the Administrator's findings on the extent of the need for the Veterans' Administration to increase health-care services in remote areas; and

(C) the Administrator's findings and recommendations regarding the advantages and disadvantages of the Veterans' Administration contracting for and making other arrangements for the furnishing of health-care services to eligible veterans in remote areas.

(3) Not later than July 1, 1986, the Administrator shall submit to such committees a report describing an experimental program that could feasibly be carried out through projects in five remote areas, selected on the basis of the statistics, breakdowns, information, and findings included in the report submitted under paragraph (2), to demonstrate alternative approaches for the Veterans' Administration to furnish health-care services to eligible veterans in remote areas. The report shall also include a description of the health-care services, and a detailed breakdown of the costs for them, that could be furnished under such an experimental program to such veterans in each such area, along with the recommendations (and the reasons therefor) of the Administrator regarding whether any such projects should be carried out and such recommendations for legislative or administrative action as the Administrator considers appropriate in light of the information contained in the report.

USE OF CERTAIN LANDS BY THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA

SEC. 14. (a) Notwithstanding the Act described in subsection (b), the Administrator of Veterans' affairs shall execute such legal documents as are necessary to permit the real property described in subsection (b) (or any portion of such property) for educational or cultural purposes in addition to the use of such property as a research and medical center and for allied purposes. The Administrator may carry out the preceding sentence subject to such terms and conditions as the Administrator determines are necessary in order to protect the interests of the United States.

(b) The real property referred to in subsection (a) is the property transferred to the State of California for the use of the University of California by a quitclaim deed dated December 10, 1948, executed by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs under the Act entitled "An Act to authorize the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to transfer a portion of the Veterans' Administration center at Los Angeles, California, to the State of California for the use of the University of California", approved June 19, 1948 (62 Stat. 559), and recorded in the land records of the County of Los Angeles, California, at page 307 of book 29032.

(c) Any document executed to carry out subsection (a) shall provide that the property involved shall revert to the United States if it ceases to be used as a research and medical center or for educational or cultural purposes.

ACQUISITION OF BUILDINGS FOR STATE HOME FACILITIES

SEC. 15. Subchapter III of chapter 81 is amended as follows:

(1) Section 5031(c) is amended—

(A) by striking out "term 'construction' means" and inserting "terms 'constructed' and 'construction' refer to"; and

(B) by inserting "the acquisition of existing buildings for use as domiciliary or nursing home care facilities," after "home buildings,";

(2) Section 5032 is amended by inserting "to acquire existing buildings for use as State home facilities for furnishing such care to veterans," after "nursing home care to veterans,"; and

(3) Section 5035(a) is amended—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of clause (7); and

(B) in clause (8),

(I) by striking out "sections 276a through 276a-5 of title 40" and inserting in lieu thereof "the Act of March 3, 1931 (40 U.S.C. 276a-276a-5)"; and

(II) by striking out the period at the end and inserting in lieu thereof a comma and "and"; and

(C) by inserting at the end the following new clause:

"(9) in the case of a project of acquisition of a facility, reasonable assurance that the estimated total costs of acquisition of the facility and of any expansion, remodeling, and alteration of the acquired facility necessary to meet Veterans' Administration standards shall not be greater than the estimated cost of constructing an equivalent new facility.".

SENSE OF THE CONGRESS REGARDING CERTAIN GRACE COMMISSION RECOMMENDATIONS

SEC. 16. (a) The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The Department of Medicine and Surgery of the Veterans' Administration, established by an Act of the Congress, represents a national commitment by the Government to meet the medical needs of eligible veterans, especially those who have been disabled as a result of their military service.

(2)(A) Section 409(a) of Public Law 97-306 states that it is the policy of the United States that the Veterans' Administration "shall maintain a comprehensive, nationwide health-care system for the direct provision of quality health-care services to eligible veterans".

(B) Section 5010(a)(1) of title 38, United States Code, requires the Veterans' Administration to operate and maintain a total of not less than 90,000 hospital and nursing home beds and such additional beds as may be necessary for the Veterans' Administration to meet its contingency obligations to assist the Department of Defense in times of war or national emergency in caring for the casualties of such war or national emergency.

(3) The President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control (commonly known as and hereinafter referred to as the "Grace Commission") has recommended that Veterans' Administration hospitals reduce the average length of stay of their inpatients to a level comparable to that found in the private sector; however, many Veterans' Administration hospital patients have severe and multiple disabilities requiring extensive treatment.

(4) The Grace Commission has recommended that funds for construction of Veterans' Administration hospitals not already under contract be deleted from the Veterans' Administration budget, that bids be invited from private hospital management companies to lease hospital facilities to the Veterans' Administration under long-term contracts, and that such facilities be managed by private companies under short-term performance contracts.

(5) The Grace Commission has recommended that nursing home construction by the Veterans' Administration be entirely discontinued and that the Veterans' Administration contract for the operation of nursing home care facilities by the private sector.

(6) The Grace Commission has recommended that the Veterans' Administration eliminate such number of Veterans' Administration acute care hospital beds as is necessary to achieve an 80 percent occupany rate for such beds.

(7) The Grace Commission has recommended that the Veterans' Administration consider converting some underutilized acute health-care facilities to extended health-care facilities and phasing out old hospital facilities which may be in need of replacement or significant reconstruction; however, demographic information compiled by the Veterans' Administration shows a forthcoming major increased demand on the Veterans' Administration from the aging veterans of World War II for acute as well as long-term health care.

(8) A joint study of the Grace Commission's recommendations conducted by the Congressional Budget Office and the General Accounting Office and submitted to Congress in February, 1984, concluded that the potential deficit reductions that might result in 1985 through 1987 from implementation of the Grace Commission's recommendations would be much smaller than the three-year savings projected by the Commission.

(9) The Congress desires to reassure veterans that the Congress remains firmly committed to an independent and comprehensive, nationwide health-care system within the Veterans' Administration, capable of providing quality care to eligible veterans.

(b) In light of the findings made in subsection (a), it is the sense of the Congress (1) that the aforementioned recommendations of the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control relating to the Veterans' Administration health-care system must be evaluated in light of the national policies described in subsection (a)(2) and in light of the aforementioned factors, and (2) that no action to implement such recommendations should be taken without their policy implications having first been given full and careful consideration, after appropriate hearings, by the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Senate.

AUTHORITY TO ADJUST RATES OF PAY FOR CERTAIN PSYCHOLOGISTS

SEC. 17. Section 4104 is amended—

(1) by inserting "(other than those described in paragraph (3))" after "psychologists" in paragraph (2); and

(2) by striking out "Certified" in paragraph (3) and inserting in lieu thereof "Clinical or counseling psychologists who hold diplomas as diplomates in psychology from an accrediting authority approved by the Administrator, certified".

PROGRAM GUIDE ON ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE

SEC. 18. Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall disseminate to appropriate Veterans' Administration medical facilities and submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Senate a program guide to clarify Veterans' Administration policy regarding the authorization and provision of treatment, including diagnosis, information, outpatient services, hospital care, and nursing home care, of veterans who are eligible for services under title 38, United States Code, and who are suffering from Alzheimer's disease and related neurological diseases.

NAMING OF VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION MEDICAL CENTERS

SEC. 19. (a) The Veterans' Administration Medical Center in Murfreesboro, Tennessee, shall after the date of the enactment of this Act be known and designated as the "Sergeant Alvin C. York Veterans' Administration Medical Center". Any reference to such medical center in any law, regulation, map, document, record, or other paper of the United States shall after such date be deemed to be a reference to the Sergeant Alvin C. York Veterans' Administration Medical Center.

(b) The Veterans Administration Medical Center in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, shall after the date of the enactment of this Act be known and designated as the "Clement J. Zablocki Veterans' Administration Medical Center". Any reference to such medical center in any law, regulation, map, document, record, or other paper of the United States shall after such date be deemed to be a reference to the Clement J. Zablocki Veterans' Administration Medical Center.

Amend the title so as to read: "An Act to amend title 38, United States Code, to require the Veterans' Administration to develop guidance for the provision of care to veterans suffering from alcohol or drug dependence, to require the Administrator to establish a Special Committee and a National Center for Post-Traumatic-Stress Disorder, and to improve the Veterans' Administration's ability to protect persons and property on its premises; and for other purposes.".

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, on behalf of the chairman of the committee, Mr. SIMPSON, I send to the desk an amendment to the title and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill to amend title 38, United States Code, to require the Veterans' Administration to develop guidance for the provision of care to veterans suffering from alcohol or drug dependence, to require the Administrator to establish a Special Committee and a National Center for Post-Traumatic-Stress Disorder, and to improve the Veterans' Administration's ability to protect persons and property on its premises; and for other purposes.".

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move that the Senate indefinitely postpone Calendar No. 929, which is S. 2514.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CARL ALBERT FEDERAL BUILDING

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate Calendar No. 1085, which is S. 2820.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2820) to name the Federal building in McAlester, Oklahoma, the "Carl Albert Federal Building."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 3663

Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment by Mr. METZENBAUM, which I ask be stated by the clerk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows.

The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. BYRD], for Mr. METZENBAUM, proposes an amendment numbered 3663.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of the bill:

SEC. . That the Federal building located at 550 Main Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, shall hereafter be named and designated as the "John Weld Peck Federal Building". Any reference in a law, map, regulation, document, record, or other paper of the United States to such building shall be held to be a reference to the "John Weld Peck Federal Building".

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to pass S. 2820. It will name the Federal building in McAlester, OK, in honor of Carl Albert. Mr. Albert served in the U.S. Congress for 30 years and attained the highest position in Government ever held by an Oklahoman. He not only served as Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives for 6 years, but twice was just a heartbeat away from the Presidency—first when Vice President Spiro Agnew resigned and again when Vice President Gerald Ford succeeded Richard Nixon. He is the only living former Speaker.

Before becoming Speaker, Mr. Albert had served as majority whip and then as majority leader of the U.S. House of Representatives. He attended Oxford University as a Rhodes scholar.

Of Mr. Albert, present Speaker THOMAS P. "TIP" O'NEILL, who succeeded him in that position, said in a speech in Oklahoma City in May, 1981: "Carl's leadership abilities were evident during one of the worst constitutional crises this country has ever had." He added that Speaker Albert's "trust, composure, intellect and impartiality" had contributed to the country's solidity during the resignation of former President Nixon.

Former President Gerald Ford, speaking at that same meeting in Oklahoma City, said Mr. Albert was "always seeking to do what was in the best interest of our country."

Carl Albert's hometown of McAlester has always been very dear to him. When he retired from Congress in January, 1977, he returned to Bug Tussle, the community near McAlester where he had spent his boyhood. He has continued to be active in church and civic activities in McAlester since his retirement and still has an office in the Federal building. Through the years he spent in Congress, he officed in that building. It is entirely fitting that the name of that building should honor him. The Parkway, a principal street in McAlester in front of the building, is already named for Mr. Albert.

I have known and admired Speaker Albert all of my adult life. One of the things that I most admire about him is that in spite of the high positions which he has occupied, he has never lost his identity with the average man and woman and his sensitivity to their needs and hopes. He is as much at home today in McAlester, OK, with the people he loves as he was on the day he left to first come to Congress.

I again urge my colleagues to join me in voting for this well deserved tribute to Carl Albert.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed, as follows:

S. 2820

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Federal Building in McAlester, Oklahoma, is hereby designated as the "Carl Albert Federal Building". Any reference to such Federal building in any law, regulation, map, document, record, or other paper of the United States shall be deemed to be a reference to the Carl Albert Federal Building.

SEC. 2. The Federal building located at 550 Main Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, shall hereafter be named and designated as the "John Weld Peck Federal Building". Any reference in a law, map, regulation, document, record, or other paper of the United States to such building shall be held to be a reference to the "John Weld Peck Federal Building".

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

SMALL BUSINESS ACT

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of H.R. 4209, the small business spare parts bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 4209) to amend section 15 of the Small Business Act.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist on its amendments and request a conference with the House and that the Chair be authorized to appoint conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to, and the Chair appointed the following conferees: from the Committee on Small Business, Messrs. WEICKER, BOSCHWITZ, GORTON, BUMPERS, and DIXON; from the Committee on Armed Services, Messrs. GOLDWATER, QUAYLE, WILSON, NUNN, and LEVIN.

ORDER FOR H.R. 4222, FEDERAL COURT IMPROVEMENTS ACT, TO BE HELD AT THE DESK

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that H.R. 4222, technical amendments to the Federal Court Improvements Act, be held at the desk pending further disposition.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ADMINISTRATION'S FOOD STAMP PROPOSALS, FISCAL YEAR 1985

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, on behalf of the Reagan administration, I am pleased to introduce the administration's proposals for reforming the Food Stamp Program.

The Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry has held rather extensive hearings on the Food Stamp Program earlier this year. The full committee, along with the Subcommittee on Nutrition, chaired by Senator DOLE, has conducted seven hearings that dealt, in whole or in part, with the Food Stamp Program and recommendations for improving the program. The Food Stamp Program is the largest single program within the Department of Agriculture and, as such, requires a good deal of the committee's time in oversight.

Certainly the administration's bill deals with two of the biggest problems that confront the Food Stamp Program. First, the proposal of the administration would implement a workfare program for able-bodied food stamp recipients. Approximately 40 percent of all food stamp households contain one or more able-bodied adults who would be subject to the community work experience program proposed by the administration.

One of the most consistent descriptions by witnesses who have appeared before the commiteee is the success that workfare programs have experienced in areas that have employed a work-for-benefit program. Indeed, one of the most common complaints from taxpayers is that the able-bodied should be expected to perform some form of work in exchange for their food stamp and other welfare benefits.

While I am pleased that we were able to provide workfare as a local option in 1981, it seems to me that the time has come to move forward toward mandatory workfare for able-bodied recipients in all areas of the country.

The second issue addressed by the administration's bill is that of the error rate in the Food Stamp Program.

Even with the improvements in State administrative performance during the Reagan administration, overissuances in the Food Stamp Program continue to cost taxpayers almost $1 billion annually.

These rates have been excessive. Frankly, much of the problem has been attributable to lack of attention by State administrators. Inasmuch as food stamp benefits are financed 100 percent by the Federal Government, administrators at the State and local level sometimes take the view that "it's not my money, so why bother." Obviously, Federal tax dollars are derived from all taxpayers; State and local officials should be equally prudent when managing federally funded programs as when managing locally financed programs.

The error rate sanction system in the food stamp program is one which, while better than no system, is relatively lenient compared to the sanction systems of other Federal programs.

The General Accounting Office earlier this year noted that the food stamp sanction system "results in proportionately smaller sanctions because of first, its higher target error rate, and second, its specific procedures for calculating sanction amounts based on a percentage of federally reimbursed administrative costs instead of the amount of benefits issued as in the AFDC and SSI Programs." (See "Federal and State Liability for Inaccurate Payments of Food Stamp, AFDC, and SSI Program Benefits," GAO/RCED-84-155, April 25, 1984.)

The administration's proposal addresses these deficiencies by lowering the error rate tolerance from 5 to 3 percent, the same as the AFDC program, and by changing the sanction to be based on the actual amount of benefits over issued in the State, rather than the more lenient penalty of deducting certain administrative costs.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a table outlining the percentage of overissuance errors and the amount of Federal dollars overissued, as reported in the GAO report for all States during the three most recent periods for which information had been obtained.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, in my judgment, the administration's third proposal, to permit categorical eligibility to AFDC recipients, may need to be reassessed in light of a proposal in the deficit reduction bill passed earlier this summer which liberalized eligibility for the AFDC Program. Those higher AFDC income eligibility guidelines could result in participation by households considerably above the present food stamp limit of 130 percent of poverty—currently over $13,000 a year for a family of four.

The administration's proposal is extremely modest. It has a very small budget impact, savings of just over $500 million in fiscal year 1985. There would be no impact whatsoever on actual recipients, except those able-bodied individuals who refuse to accept community service work who would be removed from the program.

Mr. President, the chairman of the Nutrition Subcommittee [Mr. DOLE] and I had discussed the subject of food stamp legislation earlier this year. It appeared questionable whether the committee and the Senate would have an opportunity to consider the administration's bill and other food stamp bills which have been introduced in the Senate. As time becomes even more restricted before adjournment, it looks increasingly unlikely that we will act on food stamp legislation this year. Another reason for this forecast is that the entire Food Stamp Program must be considered for reauthorization next year, thus providing ample opportunity in the near future for needed reforms in the Food Stamp Program.

I should note, however, that the House of Representatives has passed legislation to increase spending for the Food Stamp Program—$1.5 billion over the next 5 years. Apparently, the much talked about concern for the deficit does not apply with regard to spiraling welfare spending. Nonetheless, I thought it prudent to have before the Senate the administration's legislation in the event that some action is yet contemplated during this legislative session.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a copy of the administration's bill, a section-by-section summary of the bill, and a letter of transmittal from John R. Block, Secretary of Agriculture.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2925

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Food Stamp Amendments of 1984".

TITLE I—REFERENCES TO THE FOOD STAMP ACT OF 1977

SEC. 101. Except as otherwise specifically provided, whenever in this Act an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2011, et seq.).

TITLE II—FOOD STAMP BUDGETARY REVISIONS

CATEGORICAL ELIGIBILITY FOR AFDC PARTICIPANTS

SEC. 201. Section 5(j) (7 U.S.C. 2014(j)) is amended by—

(1) striking out "may" and inserting in lieu thereof "shall"; and

(2) striking out everything following "Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 601, et seq.)" and inserting in lieu thereof "to have satisfied the income standard of eligibility prescribed under subsection (c)(1) and the resource limitations prescribed under subsection (g). The Secretary may waive the income eligibility standard prescribed under subsection (c)(2) for households in which all members receive benefits under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act in States where the maximum allowable gross income limit for receipt of such benefits is equal to or less than the standard prescribed in subsection (c)(2).".

WORK REQUIREMENTS AND COMMUNITY WORK EXPERIENCE PROGRAM

SEC. 202. (a) Section 6 (7 U.S.C. 2015) is amended by—

(1) in paragraph (d)(1)—

(A) striking out "eighteen" in the material preceding clause (i) and inserting in lieu thereof "sixteen"; and

(B) striking out "which may include a requirement that, at the option of the State agency," in clause (ii) and inserting in lieu thereof "which shall include a requirement that";

(2) in paragraph (d)(2)—

(A) striking out "a work registration requirement" in clause (A) and inserting in lieu thereof "requirements for employment related activities";

(B) striking out "a dependent child under age six" and all that follows through the end of clause (B) and inserting in lieu thereof "(i) a dependent child under age six except that a State agency may, at its option, require such parent or guardian to comply with the work requirements if the child is age three or over and adequate child care is available, or (ii) of an incapacitated person;"; and

(C) striking out clause (C) and inserting in lieu thereof "(C) a person between ages sixteen and eighteen who is not a head of household;";

(3) redesignating subsections (e) through (h) as (f) through (i), respectively; and

(4) inserting a new subsection immediately following subsection (d) as follows:

"(e)(1) No household shall be eligible for assistance under this Act if it includes a person who is required to comply with the work requirements of subsection (d), or is exempt from those requirements solely because of being subject to and complying with the work requirements of the Federal-State unemployment compensation system, and who refuses to accept an offer from the State agency, or a political subdivision designated by the State agency, to perform work on its behalf in return for compensation consisting of the allotment to which the household is entitled under section 8 of this Act, with each hour of such work entitling that household to a portion of its allotment equal to the higher of the applicable State minimum wage or the Federal minimum hourly rate under the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938.

"(2) The total hours required to be worked by a household in any month shall not exceed in value the household's allotment for such month and the total hours required to be worked by a household member, when added to any other hours worked during any week by such member for compensation (in cash or in kind) in any other capacity, shall not exceed 120 hours per month.

"(3) In the event that any person fails to comply with the requirements of this subsection, neither that person nor the household to which that person belongs shall be eligible to participate in the Food Stamp Program for two months, unless that person or another person in the household satisfies all outstanding community work experience obligations prior to the end of the two-month disqualification period.".

(b) Section 11 (7 U.S.C. 2020) is amended by—

(1) inserting before the period at the end of paragraph (e)(22), as added by section 306 of this Act, "and the community work experience program services necessary to effectuate the provisions of subsection 6(e)"; and

(2) inserting at the end thereof a new subsection as follows:

"(o)(1) The Secretary shall promulgate guidelines pursuant to this subsection which, to the maximum extent practicable, enable a State agency to design and operate a community work experience program for purposes of subsection 6(e) which is compatible and consistent with similar programs operated within the State.

"(2) In establishing the community work experience program services as required under paragraph (e)(22) of this section, the State agency, and any political subdivision designated by the State agency, shall—

"(A) not provide any work that has the effect of replacing or preventing the employment of an individual not participating in the community work experience program;

"(B) provide the same benefits and working conditions that are provided at the job site to employees performing comparable work for comparable hours and

"(C) reimburse participants for actual costs of transportation and other actual costs which are reasonably necessary and directly related to participation in the program, but not to exceed $25 in the aggregate per month.

"(3) Each State agency shall offer community work experience jobs to not less than seventy-five percent of the persons required to accept such employment in any month under subsection 6(e). Each State agency shall be considered to have issued erroneous payments for purposes of subsection 16(d) for the number of households by which it failed to meet the standard established in the preceding sentence with each such erroneous payment being equal to the average allotment for all households containing a member who is required to accept community work experience employment under subsection 6(e).

"(4) For purposes of section 16(a) of this Act, State agency administrative costs shall include reimbursements to participants for work-related expenses as described in paragraph 2(C) of this subsection but not the cost of equipment, tools or materials used by participants or the cost of supervising participants.". (c) Section 20 (7 U.S.C. 2029) is repealed.

STATE AGENCY LIABILITY

SEC. 203. Section 16 (7 U.S.C. 2025) is amended by—

(1) striking out subsections (b) and (c);

(2) in subparagraph (d)(2)(A)—

(A) striking out "exceeds—" and everything that follows through "thereafter," and inserting in lieu thereof "exceeds 3 per centum,";

(B) striking out "or as provided in subparagraph (B)"; and

(C) striking out "paragraph (3)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subparagraph (B)";

(3) revising subparagraph (d)(2)(B) to read as follows:

"(B) The amount by which a State agency's federally-funded share of administrative costs shall be reduced under subparagraph (A) for any fiscal year shall be equal to the product of multiplying the per centum by which its payment error rate exceeds 3 per centum for such fiscal year by the total dollar value of all coupons issued by the State agency for the fiscal year."; and (4) revising paragraph (d)(3) to read as follows:

"(3)(A) For each fiscal year the Secretary shall project the liability of each State agency under this subsection for that fiscal year by determining the State agency's share of the projected national dollar loss due to error rates above 3 per centum on the basis of its share of the national dollar loss due to error rates above 3 per centum for the most recent quality control period for which such rates have been verified by the Secretary in conformance with regulations promulgated pursuant to this subsection. The Secretary shall reduce the State agency's federally funded share of administrative costs by the amount of projected liability determined under the preceding sentence. The State agency shall pay to the Secretary, at such times as the Secretary may require, any amount by which its projected liability exceeds its federally funded share of administrative costs. After the end of the fiscal year the Secretary shall determine the State agency's actual liability under paragraph (2) and the State agency shall either pay to the Secretary the amount by which its actual liability exceeds the projected liability collected under this subsection or receive an adjustment in its federally funded share of administrative costs in the amount by which its projected liability collected under this subsection exceeds its actual liability for the fiscal year.

(B) Each State agency shall perform its responsibility under this Act for effective and efficient administration of the program without respect to the level of federal funding for administrative costs under this section.".

TITLE III—FOOD STAMP ADMINISTRATIVE IMPROVEMENTS

DEFINITION OF THRIFTY FOOD PLAN

Sec. 301. Section 3(o) (7 U.S.C. 2012(o)) is amended in the first sentence by striking out "fifty-four" and inserting in lieu thereof "fifty".

DISQUALIFICATION FOR FRAUD/INTENTIONAL MISREPRESENTATION

Sec. 302. (a) Section 6(b)(1) (7 U.S.C. 2015 (b)(1)) is amended in the first sentence thereof by inserting "after notice and an opportunity for a hearing" immediately after "court or administrative agency".

(b) Section 6(b)(2) (7 U.S.C. 2015 (b)(2)) is amended by striking out "way of administrative hearings, after notice and an opportunity for a hearing at the State level" and inserting in lieu thereof "issuing a notice stating the dates on which the period of ineligibility will begin and end and the basis for the finding of ineligibility and providing an opportunity for a hearing".

USE OF INFORMATION SUBMITTED BY RETAIL STORES

Sec. 303. Section 9(c) (U.S.C. 2018(c)) is amended by inserting immediately before the period at the end of the second sentence "except that such information may be disclosed to and used by State agencies which administer the Special Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants and Children, authorized by section 17 of the Child Nutrition Act of 1966, for purposes of administering the provisions of that Act and the regulations issued pursuant to that Act".

DEFINITION OF "FINANCIAL INSTITUTION"

Sec. 304. Section 10 (7 U.S.C. 2019) is amended by striking out "financial institutions which are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation or the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation" each time it appears therein and inserting in lieu thereof "bank or savings and loan associations".

STATE ADMINISTRATION OF WORK REGISTRATION AND JOB SEARCH

Sec. 305. Section 11(e) (7 U.S.C. 2020(e)) is amended by—

(1) striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (20);

(2) striking out the period at the end of paragraph (21) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and "; and

(3) adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(22) that the State agency shall, pursuant to regulations issued by the Secretary, established the work registration and job research services necessary to effectuate the provisions of subsection 6(d)(1).".

JUDICIAL REVIEWS OF RETAILER/WHOLESALER DISQUALIFICATIONS/CIVIL MONEY PENALTIES

Sec. 306. Section 14(a) (7 U.S.C. 2023(a)) is amended by—

(1) inserting before the period at the end of the eighth sentence "and where such action was taken pursuant to section 12 of this Act the court shall limit its review to whether the violations occurred as charged. The court shall not modify or set aside the sanction imposed by the Secretary unless the administrative record shows that imposition of the sanction was arbitrary, capricious or an abuse of discretion"; and

(2) in the last sentence by—

(A) striking out "During" and inserting in lieu thereof "In the case of State agencies, during";

(B) striking out "an" and inserting in lieu thereof "on"; and

(C) adding a new sentence at the end thereof as follows: "In the case of an administrative action taken pursuant to section 12 of this Act, applications for stays of such action shall be granted only upon a strong showing that the applicant is likely to prevail on the merits of the case.".

TITLE IV—FOOD STAMP TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS

HOMEOWNERSHIP COMPONENT OF SHELTER COSTS

Sec. 401. Section 5(e) (U.S.C. 2014(e)) is amended by—

(1) in the second sentence, striking out "homeownership component" and inserting in lieu thereof "homeowners' costs and maintenance and repairs components"; and

(2) in the fourth sentence, striking out "homeownership costs" and inserting in lieu thereof "homeowners' costs and maintenance and repairs".

CLARIFICATION OF STUDENT ELIGIBILITY

Sec. 402. (a) Section 5(d) (7 U.S.C. 2014(d)) is amended by inserting immediately before "shall be considered such reimbursement" in the proviso of clause (5) "and no portion of any educational loans on which payment is deferred, grants, scholarships, fellowships, veterans' educational benefits, and the like,".

(b) Section 6(e) (7 U.S.C. 2015(e)) is amended by—

(1) striking out clause (C);

(2) inserting "or" immediately before "(D)"; and

(3) striking out "; or (E)" and all that follows through the end of the sentence and inserting a period in lieu thereof.

IMMIGRATION AND NATIONALITY ACT REFERENCE

Sec. 403. Section 6(f)(2) (7 U.S.C. 2015(f)(2)) is amended by striking out "203(2)(7)" and "(8 U.S.C. 1153(a)(7))" in clause (D) and inserting in lieu thereof "207" and "(8 U.S.C. 1157)", respectively.

TITLE V—EFFECTIVE DATE

Sec. 501. The amendments made by Title II of this Act shall be effective October 1, 1984. All other amendments made by this Act shall be effective upon enactment.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, DC, April 26, 1984.

Hon. GEORGE BUSH,
President of the Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: Enclosed for the consideration of the Congress is a bill to amend the Food Stamp Act of 1977, as amended. Also enclosed is a section-by-section analysis explaining the provisions of the bill.

The bill has five titles. Title I provides that, unless otherwise indicated, all references are to the Food Stamp Act of 1977. Title II contains amendments that support the President's Fiscal Year 1985 Budget proposal by achieving approximately $592 million in savings for Fiscal Year 1985. These proposals are discussed in more detail below. Title III contains various proposals for improved program administration. Title IV provides for some technical amendments to the program. Title V sets effective dates for implementing the provisions of the bill.

Title II contains three budgetary provisions. The first provision would impose stricter liability on those States not using effective error reduction strategies. To avoid fiscal liability States would be required to maintain an error rate of three percentum or less. This would give States a greater incentive to reduce errors. Further, States with excessive error rates would share more fiscal responsibility in reimbursing the Federal Government for benefit dollars lost. Savings resulting from this proposal would be $503 million in Fiscal Year 1985 alone.

The second budgetary proposal is designed as a work incentive as well as to assist the unemployed to reenter the job market. We would require States to establish Community Work Experience Programs (CWEP). These programs would encourage able-bodied food stamp recipients to find work in the private sector. If no jobs are available, CWEP participants would perform useful public services, fulfilling community needs that otherwise would not be met with existing public resources. We believe this proposal would primarily reduce costs through the increased income available to CWEP participants finding suitable employment. Further, the Food Stamp Program's CWEP would be designed to be as flexible as possible in order to ease the burden on States. In addition to CWEP, we would amend the work requirements to more closely conform to those in the Aid to Families with Dependent Children Program (AFDC). These changes would reduce the categories of persons exempt from meeting the work requirements and require applicants, as well as participants, to search for jobs.

Our last budgetary proposal would simplify the application process by making AFDC recipients categorically eligible. This would assist these individuals, and reduce the amount of documentation required to certify these applicants, thereby allowing eligibility workers to perform other needed tasks.

We believe these proposals will result in substantial cost reductions. However, enactment of these proposals would not result in a reduction of properly issued benefits to eligible participants. We are also focusing our attention on ways the Department of Agriculture can improve management of the Food Stamp Program within the framework of existing legislative authorities to save additional monies.

A similar letter is being sent to the Speaker of the House.

The Office of Management and Budget advises that the enactment of this proposed legislation would be in accord with the program of the President.

Sincerely,

JOHN R. BLOCK,
Secretary.

SECTION-BY-SECTION SUMMARY—PROPOSED FOOD STAMP AMENDMENTS OF 1984

TITLE I—REFERENCES TO THE FOOD STAMP ACT OF 1977

TITLE II—FOOD STAMP BUDGETARY REVISIONS

Categorical eligibility

Section 201 would amend Section 5 of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 to provide categorical eligibility for those food stamp households in which all members are certified to receive payments under the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) program. Under current law, States have the option of considering households in which all members are certified to receive AFDC payments and which have gross income equal to or less than 130 percent of the poverty line to have met the Program's resource test. This change would exempt households throughout the country in which all members are certified to receive AFDC payments from the Program's net income test, as well as the resource test. Such households would still be subject to nonfinancial eligibility requirements, such as cooperation with State agencies, reporting changes in circumstances, work registration, and job search. The Secretary would be permitted to waive the gross income eligibility test for States which demonstrate that their AFDC income limits for each household size do not exceed 130 percent of the poverty line.

Categorical; eligibility for pure AFDC households advances three key Administration goals for the Food Stamp Program: simplifying administration, emphasizing compatibility with other public assistance programs, and reducing errors in establishing eligibility. By saving time in documenting an applicant's eligibility, State agencies will gain more time to implement techniques for error prevention, detection, and correction. Categorical eligibility of AFDC households would save an estimate $4 million in Fiscal Year 1985 through error reduction and would reduce administrative time for determining the food stamp eligibility of AFDC households, without diminishing overall food stamp assistance to AFDC households.

Work Requirements and Community Work Experience Program

Section 202 would amend section 6 of the Food Stamp Act to establish greater conformity between the food stamp work requirements and those of the AFDC program. The work requirements would be extended to 16- and 17-year old heads of households. This change would assure that 16- and 17-year old heads of households would be treated the same as other heads of households. Also, food stamp applicants would be required to meet job search requirements. Job search is now required of applicants only if State agencies exercise their option to mandate it. Further, food stamp State agencies would be given the same option that AFDC State agnecies have to extend work requirements to caretakers of children between three and six years old when adequate child care is available. Currently, caretakers of children under six years old are exempt from all of the work requirements; also, caretakers of children between six and twelve can refuse offered employment without penalty if adequate child care is not available for those children. Finally, the exemption from the work requirements now provided for students would be deleted.

Section 202 would also amend Section 6, 11, and 20 of the Food Stamp Act to mandate a nationwide community work experience program (CWEP) for the Food Stamp Program. Section 6 would be amended to establish the acceptance and performance of CWEP jobs as eligibility requirements. In order for a household to continue to be eligible to receive food stamps, the members that would have to satisfy the CWEP requirement would be those subject to food stamp work requirements and those who are only exempt because they are complying with the work requirements of the Federal-State unemployment compensation system. The total monthly household food stamp CWEP requirement would be the number of hours obtained by dividing a household's monthly allotment by the higher of the State or Federal minimum wage. However, the maximum CWEP requirement would be 120 hours per month for each covered individual in combination with any other work. This is comparable to the current maximum of 30 hours per week for participants in the Food Stamp Optional Workfare Programs and the number of hours otherwise nonexempt persons must work to be exempt from the food stamp work requirements. Also, failure to report for an interview or perform work without good cause would result in a two-month disqualification period for the household. However, disqualifications could be "cured" by household members who "work off" the value of food stamps received during periods of noncompliance.

Section 11 would be amended to establish the requirement that State agencies operate CWEP programs or delegate the responsibility to political subdivisions within the State. The amendatory language would require the Department's CWEP regulations to be as flexible as possible to permit State agencies to operate food stamp CWEP programs that are compatible with other workfare/CWEP programs the State may have in operation. A State agency could integrate its food stamp CWEP program into such a program with prior approval from the Department. The statutory protections and operating guidelines (including reimbursing participants for actual expenses necessary for performing CWEP work, with a maximum set at $25 a month) would be the same as those currently in Section 20 of the Act for food stamp Optional Workfare Programs. However, the State agency's option to allow a job search period for up to 30 days following the eligibility determination would be deleted. Also, the special funding incentive for State agencies provided from half of demonstrated workfare savings would be deleted. Such incentives are unnecessary if there is a statutory requirement that State agencies administer workfare-type programs. State agencies would receive 50 percent Federal funding of their costs of operating food stamp CWEP programs, including the cost of reimbursing CWEP participants for their work-related expenses, but not including the costs of equipment, tools, materials, or the costs of supervising CWEP participants. This funding could be suspended or cancelled in whole or in part if either the State agency or any of its political subdivisions fail to comply with CWEP administration requirements.

A State agency standard for CWEP performance would be set at 75 percent of covered individuals. Covered individuals are those not exempt from CWEP who participate for a full month. State agencies would be expected to offer jobs to or take action against 75 percent of covered individuals in any month. Failure to meet the performance standard would be considered as issuance to ineligible households for purposes of error rate liability. Section 20 would be struck, thereby deleting the authority and guidelines for operating the food stamp Optional Workfare Programs.

Mandatory CWEP is being proposed because it would benefit both program participants and communities by affording able-bodied food stamp recipients the opportunity to perform useful work. Also, performance of a CWEP job introduces individuals to the work environment and encourages the individuals to find regular employment. Further, the existence of a CWEP requirement acts as deterrent to program participation for those who could work but do not do so through choice. Finally, it is estimated that the proposal would save $85 million in Fiscal Year 1985. Effective administration would realize these savings in two ways: (1) individuals finding regular employment, thus, becoming ineligible or entitled to smaller allotments; and (2) individuals not wanting to work being deterred from participation.

State agency liability

Section 203 would amend Section 16 of the Food Stamp Act to revise the error rate sanction and incentive system effective October 1, 1984. A State with a combined error rate for ineligibility (payments to ineligible households) and overissuances (overpayments to eligible households) which exceeds three percent in Fiscal Year 1985 and subsequent fiscal years would be liable for the dollar value of the excessive errors. The projected amount of any State's liability under this proposal would be deducted from the Federal funding available for that State's administrative costs or would be collected through direct billing during the fiscal year in which the excessive errors occur. In order to calculate the amount of States' liability during the same fiscal year that the errors occur, the Department will project a national error rate dollar loss using a projected national error rate adjusted for the three percent error tolerance and a projected fiscal year's issuances. The national dollar loss will be apportioned among States based on their contribution to the national dollar loss because of error rates above three percent during the most recent quality control period for which federally-adjusted data are available. When the actual quality control data for a fiscal year are received and validated, the amount of States' liability may be adjusted. If the amount of liability is reduced, the difference would be reflected in a State's Federal funding; if increased, the State would be billed for the difference. Because the revised error rate liability system could result in some States losing their Federal funding for administrative costs, the Department would require States to maintain a level of State funding that will permit adequate administration of the program.

We believe that it is appropriate to reduce the threshold for States' error liability to three percent to serve as a strong inducement for States to apply all possible error-reduction techniques and because it is comparable to that of the AFDC program. Further, the proposal would assure that the cost of excessive errors resulting in incorrect eligibility determinations or overpayments will be borne by the States and not the Federal government. Actual error rates are lower in the AFDC and Medicaid programs, where States share program costs. It is equitable to have States share in the costs of errors as they have the responsibility of administering the Food Stamp Program and are, thus, in a position to control errors. We have seen the overpayment error rate drop from 10.4 percent the first half of Fiscal Year 1981 to about 8.2 percent in the same period in Fiscal Year 1983, a 20 percent reduction in two years. But an eight percent error rate is still unacceptably high. Overpayments cost the U.S. taxpayers $900 million in 1983. By improving program administration and reducing the amount of dollars spent in error, we can target funds on those individuals in greatest need and restore public confidence in the program.

Section 203 would further amend Section 16 to make conforming amendments to repeal the incentive system and to eliminate the requirements that the Secretary establish standards for efficient and effective administration and that States report on their actions to meet such standards. Since States would be liable for the cost of excess errors, they must have the latitude to decide upon and implement methods best suited to error reduction in their States.

As a result of this proposal the Federal government expects to collect $483 million from State agencies with excessive error rates in Fiscal Year 1985 plus savings of $20 million from error reduction.

TITLE III—FOOD STAMP ADMINISTRATIVE IMPROVEMENTS

Definition of thrifty food plan

Section 301 would amend Section 3(o) of the Food Stamp Act to change the age range in the 4-person reference family used in calculating the amount of the Thrifty Food Plan. The ages would be 20-50 years old instead of 20-54 years. Such a change is necessary to permit the age categories used for the Thrifty Food Plan to correspond to the age categories used by the National Academy of Sciences—National Research Council in developing the Recommended Dietary Allowances.

The proposal would not result in a significant change in the amount of the Thrifty Food Plan; it would merely standardize the data and facilitate the development of the Plan. When the Thrifty Food Plan was revised in 1983, the food costs for the two groups (adults 20-50 and adults 20-54) were the same. Periodically, the Thrifty Food Plan could become slightly higher or lower using the 20-50 age group. We are unable to project the exact size of such variations, but we are cetain they would be very small. The food consumption patterns for the 20-50 age group and for the 20-54 group are the same for seven of the eleven major food groups used in developing the Thrifty Food Plan. There are only minimal differences in the other four food groups. Finally, the age limit of 54 years for the adult category has no research basis. It was simply the age selected when the Economy Food Plan (the forerunner of the Thrifty Food Plan) was adopted for use in the Food Stamp Program in 1971.

Disqualification for fraud/intentional misrepresentation

Section 302 would amend Section 6(b) of the Food Stamp Act to permit State agencies to disqualify individuals for fraud or intentional misrepresentation without an automatic fraud hearing. Currently, the Act requires that a finding of fraud/intentional misrepresentation be made by a court or the State agency at an administrative hearing prior to the disqualification. Under the proposal, following a determination by a State agency of fraud/intentional misrepresentation, the individual would be notified of the period of disqualification, the basis for the finding of fraud/intentional misrepresentation, the length of the disqualification period, and would be provided an opportunity to request a hearing before the disqualification period begins. A request for a hearing would stay the disqualification until a determination from the hearing upholding the disqualification is reached. If the individual does not request a hearing, disqualification would become effective as stated in the notice. Once the disqualification became effective, whether or not it followed a hearing, the State agency would proceed to recover funds lost through the fraud/intentional misrepresentation and would retain 50 percent of any sums recovered.

This proposal is similar to the procedure in the AFDC program. The proposal could result in a significant reduction in the number of fraud hearings since many individuals choose not to appear at their hearings. Under the current law, the hearing must still be held without the accused being present. There were 12,213 fraud hearings held in Fiscal Year 1982; their outcomes were 10,821 fraud/intentional misrepresentation determinations upheld and only 1,392 reversed. While we have no actual data on how many individuals fail to appear, an audit by the Office of the Inspector General found that many individuals do not appear and one State agency estimated a 50 percent rate of "no-shows". A reduction in the number of fraud hearings would streamline the disqualification process and free State agency personnel for more productive use, yet insure full hearing rights prior to disqualification for those individuals who wish to have hearings.

Use of information submitted by retail stores

Section 303 would amend Section 9(c) of the Food Stamp Act to broaden the permissible use of information submitted from retail stores under this subsection to include assisting State agencies that administer the special supplemental food program for women, infants and children (WIC) in monitoring retail store compliance in that program. Currently, Section 9(c) limits "use or disclosure" of information submitted by retail food stores or wholesale food concerns to purposes directly connected to administration or enforcement of the Food Stamp Program, including audits by the Comptroller General of the United States. This limitation prevents sharing of food stamp retail monitoring information with WIC authorities, even though most of the approximately 50,000 retail stores authorized to participate in the WIC program also participate in the Food Stamp Program. (WIC legislation and regulations lack such constraints on information sharing.) For example, WIC state agencies cannot be informed of potentially high-risk vendors, as may be indicated by a high ratio of food stamp redemptions to total food sales. This amendment enables the Federal government to provide WIC authorities with lists of vendors indentified as being high-risk through analysis of protected information. The amendment is expected to increase the efficiency and effectiveness of retail oversight efforts and contribute to the prevention and detection of fraud, waste and abuse.

Definition of "financial institution"

Section 304 would amend Section 10 of the Food Stamp Act to change the definition of a financial institution to include banks and savings and loan associations which are not federally-insured. The current language ties the definition of a financial institution only to those banks and savings and loan associations which are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) or the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation (FSLIC). However, there are over eight hundred banks that are not insured by the FDIC. In addition, some savings and loan associations are only insured by State organizations. The proposal would permit non-federally insured savings and loan associations and uninsured banks to redeem food stamps since they can provide valuable services to retailers participating in the Food Stamp Program.

State agency administration of work registration and job search

Section 305 would amend Section 11(e) of the Food Stamp Act to identify administration of the program's work requirements as a mandated State agency activity. There are four work requirements which non-exempt food stamp applicants and participants must meet: registering for work, searching for work and reporting on job search efforts, accepting a suitable job is offered, and keeping a job unless there is good cause for quitting. State agencies would be given broad latitude in choosing methods for administering these requirements including whether to do so themselves or to contract with another agency, such as State Employment Security Agencies (SESAs).

The proposal to statutorily mandate State agency administration of the work requirements will help accomplish two of the Administration's goals: stronger work requirements and greater State agency flexibility.

Judical reviews of retailer/wholesaler disqualifications/civil money penalties

Section 306 would amend Section 14(a) of the Food Stamp Act to make two changes in the procedures governing judicial reviews of adverse administrative determinations (disqualifications or imposition of civil money penalties) against retail food stores and wholesale food concerns.

First, the Act would include a clear statement prohibiting courts from reducing the length of disqualification periods or the amount of civil money penalties which have been appropriately assigned based on valid evidence of violations. This prohibition has always been intended by the Congress, as expressed in the 1977 House Report (No. 95-464):

"The Committee wants to go on record as noting that, when there is imposition of disqualification for such period of time as may be determined in accordance with regulations (and the regulations permit disqualification for a reasonable period up to three years) pursuant to section 12 of the bill, the Committee does not intend that, in the trial de novo in the United States district court or State court of the final administrative determination of disqualification, the sanction or period of disqualification imposed would itself be subject to judicial review as several courts have held that it is. See Goodman v. United States, 518 F.2d 505 (5th Cir. 1975) and Cross v. United States, 512 F.2d 1212 (4th Cir. 1975) (en banc). But see Martin v. United States 459 F.2d 300 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 878 (1972) and Save More of Gary, Inc., 442 F.2d 36 (7th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 404 U.S. 987 (1971). The trial de novo as set forth in section 14 should be limited to a determination of the validity of the administrative action, but not of the severity of the sanction. Review of the factual determination that a violation occurred is normal grist for the courts; review of the length of (a) highly discretionary a (sic) sentence of disqualification is not."

In spite of such clear statements of intent, because the Act requires that the judicial review be a trial de novo "in which the court shall determine the validity of the questioned administrative action . . .", some courts have extended their authority beyond a review of the evidence of violations to include a determination of an appropriate sanction. In a case last year (Broad Street Food Market, Inc. v. United States), the judge did not question the validity of the evidence of violations but nevertheless set aside a disqualification and established a civil money penalty. His decision was based on information presented for the first time during the judicial review on the anticipated hardship to the neighborhood of the store subject to disqualification. The decision was reversed upon appeal and the original disqualification reinstated. Stating Congressional intent clearly in the statute should prevent such reversals in the future, thereby averting costly appeals and attendant delays in the disqualification of established violators.

Second, Section 306 would change the conditions appellant retailers and wholesalers must meet in order to obtain judicial stays of administrative penalties. The change would require a petitioning firm to present a strong showing that it is likely to prevail on the merits of the case in order to obtain a stay.

Currently, under Section 14(a), a retail or wholesale firm requesting judicial review of a disqualification or imposition of a civil money penalty can obtain a stay pending a decision by the court merely by showing that irreparable injury would occur. Since disqualifications result in irreparable injury in the overwhelming majority of cases, stays are usually granted; thus, delays of more than a year in implementing disqualifications are not uncommon.

The proposed requirement is a usual condition which all petitioners must establish before stays are granted. It has not been specially created for violating retailers and wholesalers; rather, the current stay criterion (irreparable harm) has been a special condition that has been inordinately favorable to the violating retailers and wholesalers. Since it would be considerably more difficult for a firm to meet the proposed test than to merely show that irreparable injury would occur, fewer stays would be granted resulting in more rapid implementation of disqualifications. Speedier disqualifications would more quickly eliminate abuse by violating retailers and wholesalers as well as serve as general deterrents to retailer/wholesaler abuse.

TITLE IV—FOOD STAMP TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS

Homeownership component of shelter costs

Section 401 would amend Section 5(e) of the Food Stamp Act to delete references to the homeownership component of shelter costs. This term is used in describing the method for calculating the annual adjustments in the standard deduction and the cap on the excess shelter expense deduction, the dependent care deduction, and the combined deduction for shelter and dependent care. The homeownership component consisted of three cost categories: home purchase; financing, taxes, and interest; and the costs of maintenance and repairs. It was one of two components of shelter costs in the Consumer Price Index for all urban consumers (CPI-U). The Bureau of Labor Statistics no longer develops a homeownership component of shelter costs for the CPI-U. Now there are 3 components of shelter costs in the CPI-U: renters' costs, homeowners' costs, and maintenance and repairs. Therefore, the Food Stamp Act references need to be changed prior to the October 1, 1984, deduction adjustments. Comparable terminology would require references to two different components: "homeowners' cost" and "maintenance and repairs."

Replacing "homeownership component of shelter costs" with "homeowners' costs" and "maintenance and repairs" is not expected to produce any change in the food stamp deductions since the same elements are still involved, only in a different combination, but a technical change is necessary so that the standard deduction and the deduction cap can be adjusted in a manner consistent with the language of the Act.

Clarification of student eligibility

Section 402 would amend Section 5(d) of the Food Stamp Act to delete the income exclusions for students' reimbursements. Such reimbursements are now excluded from the income calculations under the general exclusion for all reimbursements. However, the Food Stamp Act includes a specific exclusion for education income (e.g. deferred loans, grants, scholarships, fellowships, veterans' educational benefits) to the extent it is used for tuition and mandatory school fees. All education income used for other purposes (e.g. books, supplies, transportation) is included as income unless the grantor earmarks a portion specifically for such expenses. Some Basic Educational Opportunity Grants (BEOG)/Pell Grants are channeled from the Federal government to students through the institution of higher education. The college, in such cases, estimates educational costs for its students, some of whom then claim that the grant is a reimbursement and, therefore, excluded as income. The Department does not accept this reasoning and does not consider BEOGs/Pell Grants as reimbursements; thus there have been several challenges in court. The proposal to include all student reimbursements as income will ensure equity among all students whether they receive BEOGs/Pell Grants or not, or whether the grant is channeled through a college or provided directly to a student. Also, since the educational costs are variable and difficult to verify, the proposal would result in administrative simplification and error reduction. Including student reimbursements as income is also consistent with previous actions limiting student eligibility.

Section 402 would also amend Section 6(e) of the Food Stamp Act to repeal two of the student provisions of P.L. 97-253, the Food Stamp Act Amendments of 1982. First, the proposal would delete the exception from ineligibility provided by the 1982 Amendments for students responsible for the care of dependent children over age 6 and under 12 for whom adequate child care is not available. The provision is an illogical expansion of student eligibility—if adequate child care were unavailable, the student would be unable to attend classes. Second, the exception from student ineligibility provided for students who are enrolled in college because they participate in a WIN program would be deleted. The 1982 Amendments added an exception from ineligibility for college students who are AFDC recipients. Since there are not WIN participants who are not also AFDC recipients, only the broader exception should be retained.

Immigration and Nationality Act Reference

Section 403 would amend Section 6(f) of the Food Stamp Act to delete the reference to an out-of-date section of the Immigration and Nationality (I&N) Act. The Refugee Act of 1980 amended the I&N Act to delete Section 203(a)(7), thus eliminating the conditional entrant status as a category of aliens who would be admitted to the United States. Those aliens are now considered to be entitled to refugee status under Section 207 of the I&N Act. The proposal, then, would also delete the reference to conditional entrant status pursuant to former Section 203(a)(7) of the I&N Act and refer instead to refugee status under section 207 of the I&N Act.

TITLE V—EFFECTIVE DATE

Section 501 would provide that the effective date for the provisions in Title II of this bill would be October 1, 1984, with all other provisions becoming effective upon enactment.

Mr. STEVENS. I ask for the first reading of this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follow:

A bill (S. 2925) to reduce the cost of and improve the Food Stamp Program, and for other purposes.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask that the bill not be read in its entirety, but I do ask that it be advanced to second reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BYRD. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

The bill will remain at the desk. It will have second reading on the next legislative day.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, for the record, I should state that what is being done here comes under rule 14 of the Standing Rules of the Senate, which is a rule that triggers the placing of a measure on the calendar. The ritual is as we have just done: The first reading is called for and the measure is read for the first time. The second reading is called for, and the objection is made, which sets the measure up for placement on the calendar on the next legislatve day.

Mr. STEVENS. I thank my good friend, the distinguished Democratic leader. That is correct, and we have both performed our functions in that manner. The measure will go to the calendar on the next legislative day, under the normal procedure.

S. 2926—ORDER FOR A BILL TO BE PLACED ON THE CALENDAR

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I send to the desk a bill on behalf of the distinguished Senator from Utah [Mr. HATCH], for himself and Mr. DECONCINI and Mrs. HAWKINS, and I ask that it be placed on the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, there is no objection.

The distinguished Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY] and the distinguished Senator from Utah [Mr. HATCH] had a conversation in the well this evening, and I was there to hear it. They were talking with me, and both agreed that they wanted this bill to go on the calendar. I do acquiesce in the request, based on that conversation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Both Senators said they would not attempt to bring up the measure unless it was totally cleared on both sides.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDER FOR RECESS UNTIL 10:30 A.M. TODAY

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate stands in recess it reconvene at 10:30 a.m. this morning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDER FOR THE RECOGNITION OF CERTAIN SENATORS TODAY

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, following the time for the two leaders under the standing order, I ask unanimous consent that there be special orders entered for not to exceed 15 minutes each for Senators GRASSLEY, PROXMIRE, LEAHY, RANDOLPH, and MOYNIHAN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDER FOR A PERIOD FOR THE TRANSACTION OF ROUTINE MORNING BUSINESS TODAY

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, following that period for special orders, I ask unanimous consent that there be a period for the transaction of routine morning business not to extend beyond the hour of 12 noon during which Senators may make statements not to exceed 5 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, by the unanimous-consent agreement just entered into, at 12 noon the Senate will go into executive session to consider three treaties on the Executive Calendar under a 10-minute total time limitation.

Following the debate or the yielding back of that time, the Senate will conduct one rollcall vote which will count for three rollcall votes on three executive treaties.

Following the treaty votes, it is expected the Senate will turn to the consideration of H.R. 5743, the agriculture appropriations bill.

Also, by unanimous consent, at 2 p.m., the Senate will proceed to 1 hour of debate on the cloture vote on the Wilkinson nomination

At 3 p.m. the cloture vote will occur on the Wilkinson nomination with the mandatory quorum under rule XXII having been waived.

If cloture is invoked on the Wilkinson nomination, the Senate will vote immediately on the confirmation of James Harvie Wilkinson.

The Senate should also be on notice that there has been an announcement or an intention to call up the conference report on the State-Justice-Commerce appropriations bill sometime today.

Mr. President, I have been requested to state that the first vote that we anticipate today will be the vote which should commence at 12:10 p.m. and that under the schedule that we have before us today, we expect a series of votes throughout the day but the first vote should occur at 12:10 p.m.

Is there further business to come before the Senate, may I ask my friend from West Virginia? I may have inartfully stated that one unanimous-consent request to go into executive session. Does he have any further business to come before the Senate?

Mr. BYRD. No; I thank my friend.

RECESS UNTIL 10:30 A.M.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, if there is no further business to come before the Senate, I move that the Senate stand in recess for a few hours until the time previously agreed to.

The motion was agreed to, and, at 1:05 a.m., the Senate recessed until today, Thursday, August 9, 1984, at 10:30 a.m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Wednesday, August 8, 1984

The Chaplain, Rev. James David Ford, D.D., offered the following prayer:

O God, we pray that we may gain a greater appreciation of the beauty and opportunities that are about us each day. In the press of time we too often miss the eternal as we deal with the temporal, we gain the moment and lose the true gifts of Your universe. Raise our vision, O gracious God, to view the unspeakable gifts of Your creation, fill us with the joy of knowing values and new ideas, of opportunity for thought and reflection, of time with friends and communion with Your spirit. May the riches of this day and the blessings of Your presence be with us all. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Sparrow, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1429) a act to amend the Small Business Act to extend and strengthen the small business development center program, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate disagrees to the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 529) an act to revise and reform the Immigration and Nationality Act, and for other purposes, requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. SIMPSON, Mr. THURMOND, Mr. MATHIAS, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. METZENBAUM, and Mr. LEAHY to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with an amendment in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 4280. An act to amend the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 and the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to improve the delivery of retirement benefits and provide for greater equity under private pension plans for workers and their spouses and dependents by taking into account changes in work patterns, the status of marriage as an economic partnership, and the substantial contribution to that partnership of spouses who work both in and outside the home, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate agreed to the following resolution:

S. RES. 428

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow the announcement of the death of the Honorable Carl Perkins, late a Representative from the State of Kentucky.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives and transmit an enrolled copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That when the Senate recesses today, it recess as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased Representative.

PRIVATE CALENDAR

The SPEAKER. This is Private Calendar day. The Clerk will call the first individual bill on the Private Calendar.

RESTORATION OF COASTWISE TRADING PRIVILEGES TO THE VESSEL "LA JOLIE"

The Clerk called the Senate bill (S. 1015) to clear certain impediments to the licensing of the vessel La Jolie for employment in the coastwise trade.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

S. 1015

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, notwithstanding the provision of section 27 of the Merchant Marine Act of 1920 (46 U.S.C. 883), or any other provisions of law to the contrary, the Secretary of the department in which the United States Coast Guard is operating shall cause the vessel La Jolie (Michigan registration number MC 2780 LB) owned by Hugh Lewis, of Union Lake, Michigan, to be documented as a vessel of the United States, upon compliance with the usual requirements, with the privilege of engaging in the coastwise trade so long as such vessel is owned by a citizen of the United States.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof:

That, notwithstanding section 27 of the Merchant Marine Act, 1920 (46 App. U.S.C. 883), the Secretary of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating shall cause the vessel La Jolie, Michigan registration number MC-2807-LB, owned by Hugh Lewis, to be documented as a vessel of the United States with the privilege of engaging in the coastwise trade, on compliance with all other requirements of law.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. CARR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the further call of the Private Calendar.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

MILITARY AUTHORIZATION CONFERENCE

(Mr. MONTGOMERY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, we seem to be totally bogged down in conference on a military authorization bill.

We are tied up on the MX missile and the conference is not even meeting.

There are other items in the bill besides the MX; I would hope the conferees would meet again and start working out differences between the Senate and House at least in other areas and then come back to the MX at a later date.

We have just got to have a military authorization bill. It would be dangerous for our Nation to run the military on a continuing resolution.

Mr. Speaker, we need the President's help and your help to get this conference going again.

TAXING MULTINATIONAL CORPORATIONS

(Mr. DORGAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. Speaker, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, who in my view is one of the least capable Treasury Secretaries we've had in decades, has done it again. Last week he warned State governments that he will propose Federal legislation to force States to change the ways they tax multinational corporations unless the States do so themselves. I wonder sometimes, as I see this Treasury Secretary stagger down these financial streets loaded down with corporate baggage, just how much more he can carry on behalf of corporate America.

I want to make two points about the subject that Mr. Regan has raised.

First, the States have improved their ability to ensure that multinational corporations doing business in their States pay the same tax load that their in-State businesses have been paying for years. Some of those large corporations started raising a fuss when they had to pay their fair share of taxes, and so Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, characteristically, rushed to their side to defend them.

Second, when a bipartisan group of State Governors, legislative leaders and tax administrators got together with Treasury officials and corporate officers to try to develop a compromise on this issue, a report was compiled that included very specific report language agreed to by both the States and the Treasury Department. Following that agreement, Treasury Secretary Regan rushed to a news conference last week and violated that agreement. He took a position contrary to the agreement he had just made and took a position that his own President has opposed in the past. In my judgment, he has demonstrated once again that he belongs back on Wall Street—not in a position of public trust in Washington.

One final thought, Mr. Speaker. If this Treasury Secretary thinks he can come to Congress to try to pass legislation that will restrict the States' taxing authorities, then I say, let him come. Those of us who do care about States' rights will demonstrate to this weak disciple of New Federalism that if you are not pushing the right proposals, and if you are not keeping your word, you are not going to win.

WOMEN ATHLETES BRING HOME THE GOLD AS REAGAN THROWS IN TOWEL ON TITLE IX

(Mrs. SCHROEDER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, American women athletes at the Olympic games are enjoying enormous successes—setting new records and winning medals at every turn.

Ask any athlete—key to those victories are years and years of training and competition.

In passing title IX of the Education Act Amendments of 1972, Congress prohibited schools receiving Federal aid from discriminating on the basis of sex in school programs.

As a result, the number of women in intercollegiate athletic programs jumped from 16,000 in 1972 to over 160,000 today.

You are seeing in Los Angeles the results of title IX enforcement.

There is a move afoot, however, to weaken title IX enforcement. In the wake of the Supreme Court's Grove City decision, which drastically narrows discrimination prohibitions, the Reagan administration has backed off its commitment to equality in education, including athletic training.

Although the House speedily passed the Civil Rights Act of 1984, to remedy the Grove City decision, that bill is held up in the other body.

Later this month the President will have a lavish ceremony, with plenty of media, to welcome the U.S. Olympic medal winners. This is as it should be. The entire country is proud of their accomplishments.

I only wish he was as devoted to enforcing equality in education so that future Olympians will get the training they need.

The American women went all out for victory while Reagan threw in the towel.

U.S. REVERSING COMMITMENT TO VOLUNTARY FAMILY PLANNING

(Mr. PORTER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, Time magazine last week devoted its cover story to the dangers of uncontrolled population growth. It focused on Mexico City's almost unbelievable and unmanagable problems resulting primarily from excessively high birth rates.

On Monday, the U.N. Conference on Population began, appropriately, in Mexico City. I and other Members will be attending later this week as observers, since the White House choose to appoint no Members of Congress to the U.S. delegation.

Nor did the administration consult anyone in Congress in reversing the strong support given by six successive administrations, Republicans and Democrats alike, for voluntary family planning and education programs in developing nations.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, we should and by law do oppose abortion funding both domestically and internationally. Yes, we strongly support free enterprise as an essential to economic growth that ultimately leads to lower birth rates. But in the meantime, developing countries need help with voluntary family planning, and now, tragically, we're indicating to them we're no longer particularly interested in giving it.

PROPOSED TAX FURTHER THREATENS BELEAGUERED COPPER INDUSTRY

(Mr. RUDD asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RUDD. Mr. Speaker, this week I distributed a copper bracelet or memento to every Member of Congress. It was mined and manufactured in Arizona by American workers, and I wish every Member to wear this memento in good health.

Unfortunately, the industry that produced this bracelet—our Nation's copper industry—is severely ailing and needs mending.

In fact, America's copper industry is battling for its life. Yet, despite the critical condition of the patient, Congress is now considering a measure which would destroy the industry.

Specifically, a $30 per ton tax on copper is being considered as a revenue-raising measure within H.R. 5640. This tax would further depress consumption and production levels of copper, forcing more mine closings and laying off thousands of workers, and make us totally dependent on foreign imports.

There are many thousands of copper workers in my State and many, many thousands of others across the Nation with idle hands. Just 2 days ago, we witnessed another mine and smelter closing in Arizona with 500 workers losing their jobs.

Mr. Speaker, they would welcome the opportunity to get back to work, but this proposed tax on copper prohibits their reemployment.

I urge my colleagues support an amendment to delete copper from the list of taxable substances within H.R. 5640.

A PLEA FOR MEMBERS TO SIGN DISCHARGE PETITION TO ALLOW CONSIDERATION OF BALANCED-BUDGET AMENDMENT

(Mr. CRAIG asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute, and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. Speaker, today my colleague, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM], and I in a bipartisan effort will be sending out to all member offices a "Dear Colleague" encouraging all Members, before they leave for the recess, to sign discharge petition No. 10. This will show your support for sending forth from the Judiciary Committee House Joint Resolution 243 which would allow a constitutional amendment to balance the Federal budget and limit taxes to be considered on this floor and to be sent forth to the States for their consideration.

During the August recess numerous national organizations at our urging will be launching a major national media effort across this Nation to encourage the Members of this body, through their constituent encouragement, to sign discharge petition 10 and to allow this most important issue to go forward. We would hope that you would not only sign that discharge petition in the next several days but you would also sign the public honor roll that allows the people of your home district to know that you publicly support the idea of a constitutional amendment to balance the Federal budget and limit taxes.

Mr. Speaker, it is the responsibility of this House to give this most important issue to the American public for their consideration.

SUPPORT URGED FOR EFFORTS OF POSTAL SERVICE OFFICIALS

(Mr. DANNEMEYER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, in recent days there have been several media attacks on the Postmaster General and the Postal Service Board of Governors over the postal workers labor contract impasse and the Service's implementation of a new, lower wage scale for new hires. These new wages are based on comparable private sector wages. Some have even made the ludicrous charge that these actions are coercive, union-busting efforts by Reagan appointees to the Board of Governors. I think it is time we put this matter into proper perspective.

When the U.S. Postal Service was established in 1971 as a quasi-governmental operation, part of the intent was to promote business-like operations, where the managers were committed to a concern for profits and losses. Wages were required by the act that the Congress passed to be comparable to those wages paid in the private sector for similar skills and levels of responsibility.

The advent of competing delivery services adds considerable free market demands on the Postal Service to keep rates competitive and service quality high. With 85 percent of all postal costs being labor costs, the management and the Board of Governors cannot ignore marketplace factors. I think it is high time we stop complaining about high postal rates and then criticize attempts to contain the costs that drive up those rates. We must get behind the current efforts of the Postmaster General and the Board of Governors to apply realistic management principles and competitive wage rates in the operation of the Postal Service. I feel these proposals fairly balance the interests of employees, mailers and the public in general. Its time to stop taking cheap shots at the Postal Service.

THE ANNIVERSARY OF RICHARD NIXON'S RESIGNATION

(Mr. DOWNEY of New York asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute, and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DOWNEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, it is hard to believe that 10 years ago today Richard Nixon resigned his Presidency. You and others were present in the House at that time. I was just a young man campaigning for Congress.

I think it is appropriate that we take time to reflect on those 10 years because it gives us an indication of what is right with this country and what is wrong. What is right, of course, is that we proved ourselves to be a nation of laws and not of men, that no individual was exempt from the law, and that if you undermined the very foundations of our Republic, you would be punished, as Richard Nixon was when he was disgraced and forced to leave the Presidency.

□ 1020

What is wrong with us is that we have a collective amnesia as a nation, we have forgotten and forgiven, apparently, much of what Richard Nixon stood for. Forgotten are the things he did to this Nation, the turmoil he forced us to go through. The "secret" plan for ending the war in Vietnam which cost the lives of 20,000 American boys and countless thousands of Asians before it was implemented.

Today, Nixon is hailed as an elder statesman and his advice seems sound when compared with the nonsense on foreign affairs emanating from the White House. The proof that in the land of the blind the "one-eyed" man is king.

A nation which understands the lessons of history will not be led by the blind or those who purport to speak for them.

HIROSHIMA—39 YEARS AGO

(Mr. WEISS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Speaker, 39 years ago this week an atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima. At 15 minutes past 8 on the morning of August 6, 1945, the bomb bay doors of the Enola Gay opened. Moments later the first atom bomb ever dropped on the Earth exploded above Hiroshima City.

In the words of one survivor, August 6 was "the end of Hiroshima, of Japan, of humankind."

Our nuclear weapons are now thousands of times more destructive than the Hiroshima bomb and our nuclear arsenals thousands of times greater in numbers. The next use of nuclear weapons will bring about the end of civilization as we know it. Its survivors will envy the dead.

Yet, the United States and the Soviet Union continue to edge closer and closer to nuclear annihilation. Still, the United States refuses to renounce the first use of nuclear weapons.

An American poet wrote: "In a dark time, the eyes begin to see."

As we now face one of the darkest periods of the nuclear era, we must begin to see an end to the madness of the nuclear arms race.

Renouncing the first use of nuclear weapons would help put an end to that madness and would bring hope to all of us whose lives are shadowed by the threat of a nuclear holocaust.

THE LATE HONORABLE CARL D. PERKINS

(Mr. HUBBARD asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HUBBARD. Mr. Speaker, yesterday morning more than 3,000 people gathered in the Knott County Central High School gymnasium at Hindman, KY, for the funeral of our beloved friend and colleague, the late Carl Dewey Perkins. There in that eastern Kentucky high school gymnasium, tributes galore were paid to this great American. More than 80 of his congressional colleagues awoke before dawn yesterday to come to the U.S. Capitol, then to Andrews Air Force Base, then to the London, KY, Airport and then an hour and a half drive over to the town of Hindman, KY, the birthplace and home of the late Carl D. Perkins.

Speaker O'NEILL's words at the funeral included, "Thousands have served in Congress, but few have had the impact that Carl Perkins has."

Our majority leader, JIM WRIGHT, referred to Carl Perkins as "a giant of a man in our day." JIM WRIGHT said, "No man has done more for those who needed his help than Carl Perkins did in his 36 years of public service."

I believe our majority leader said it best as he closed his remarks by saying, "Carl, your day is done, your battle won. Well done."

On September 11, the Members of the House will have 4 hours to pay tribute to the late Carl D. Perkins. Those of us from Kentucky appreciate the many colleagues who went to our State yesterday to pay tribute to Carl D. Perkins.

Verna Perkins, Carl's widow, and State representative and Mrs. Carl Christopher Perkins, Carl's son and daughter-in-law have expressed their appreciation for the many, various expressions of sympathy sent to them since last Friday.

RELATING TO EARLY ORGANIZATION OF THE HOUSE FOR THE 99TH CONGRESS

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, I send to the desk a resolution (H. Res. 567) relating to early organization of the House for the 99th Congress, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 567

Resolved, That any organizational caucus or conference in the House for the Ninety-ninth Congress may begin on or after November 28, 1984.

SEC. 2. As used in this resolution, the term "organizational caucus or conference" means a party caucus or conference authorized to be called under section 202(a) of House Resolution 988, Ninety-third Congress, agreed to on October 8, 1974, and enacted into permanent law by chapter III of title I of the Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1975 (2 U.S.C. 29a(a)).

The SPEAKER. The majority leader, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. WRIGHT] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, this has been cleared with the minority leadership. The minority leader agrees with the purpose of this resolution.

As Members will recall, at the beginning of each new Congress before Congress convenes, new Members on both sides of the aisle are brought in for an orientation period. The Republican conference organizes itself, the Democratic caucus organizes itself.

Under existing law, permission for the use of public moneys to conduct these preorganizational conferences has been confined to the time following December 1.

This year because of some time scheduling difficulties, it was thought that it was very helpful to begin these caucuses and conferences on November 28 and all this does is to correct the law in that minor way so as to permit that change to be made.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER RELATING TO SPECIAL ORDERS AND 1-MINUTE SPEECHES

The SPEAKER. After consultation with and concurrence by the minority leader, the Chair announces that he will institute a new policy of recognition for "1-minute" speeches and for special order requests. Beginning September 5, the Chair will alternate recognition for 1-minute speeches between majority and minority Members, in the order in which they seek recognition in the well under present practice from the Chair's right to the Chair's left, with possible exceptions for Members of the leadership and Members having "business" requests. The Chair, of course, reserves the right to limit 1-minute speeches to a certain period of time or to a special place in the program on any given day, with notice to the leadership.

With respect to recognition for "special-order speeches" at the end of legislative business of the day, the Chair will recognize first those Members who wish to address the house for 5 minutes or less, alternating between majority and minority members, otherwise in the order in which those permissions were granted by the House. Thereafter, the Chair will recognize those Members who wish to address the house for longer than 5 minutes up to 1 hour, alternating between majority and minority members in the order in which those permissions were granted by the House.

Thus all Members can continue to obtain permissions to address the House in the same ways as are presently utilized, either by requests made by the acting majority and minority leaders at the end of the day through their respective Cloak Rooms or by individual requests agreed to on the floor for that day or for a future day. For the request to be entertained, it should state "permission to address the House at the conclusion of legislative business, consistent with the Speaker's announced policy of recognition." Thus, Members should be on notice that a special order for more than 5 minutes, although agreed to at a prior time, may be preceded by a series of special orders of 5 minutes or less, or by a longer special order of a Member of the other party.

Further refinements of this policy based upon experience may be announced by the Chair in the future after consultation with the minority leader.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5 of rule I, the Chair announces that he will postpone further proceedings today on each motion to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered, or on which the vote is objected to under clause 4 of rule XV.

Such rollcall votes, if postponed, will be taken later in the day.

AMENDING SENATE AMENDMENT TO H.R. 2878, LIBRARY SERVICES AND CONSTRUCTION ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1983, AND APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES THEREON

Mr. SIMON. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 568) to amend the Senate amendment to H.R. 2878 and to request a conference thereon with the Senate.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. RES. 568

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution the House of Representatives shall be considered to have taken from the Speaker's table the bill, H.R. 2878, with the Senate amendment thereto, to have agreed to the Senate amendment with a further amendment as follows, to have insisted on this amendment and to have requested a Conference thereon with the Senate: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the text of H.R. 2878 as passed by the House and the text of the Committee amendment to H.R. 4066 as reported by the Committee on Education and Labor.

□ 1030

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. ERLENBORN. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SIMON] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ERLENBORN] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SIMON].

Mr. SIMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 4066 authorizes Federal funds to provide partial support for the John W. McCormack Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Massachusetts at Boston. The bill authorizes up to $3 million to be spent over 2 years. Under the committee bill, the Federal funds could be spent over a 3-year period beginning in fiscal year 1985. The funds would remain available until expended.

In addition to the Federal funds, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts will provide $300,000 in the 1984–85 academic year and the university will provide an additional $300,000. The institute was established in the fall of 1983 as a tribute to the public service of former House Speaker John W. McCormack (1962–71).

The McCormack institute is a focal point of the university's commitment to service to Boston, to Massachusetts, and to New England. Its purpose is to identify, marshall, coordinate, and expand the university's efforts toward policy research—particularly on issues of concern to Massachusetts and New England—public service, and public affairs education, both on and off campus. The institute gathers together or supports various distinguished university programs, including the Boston Urban Observatory, the former policy studies center, the urban studies undergraduate program, and the master of science in public affairs. It draws on a multitude of university and outside resources, including those of its neighbors on the harbor campus, the John F. Kennedy Library and the Massachusetts State Archives; the downtown campus with its center for survey research; and the full and varied resources of the Amherst and Worcester campuses of the University of Massachusetts. The institute was developed to facilitate and enhance the university's response to the diverse needs of the Boston metropolitan area, the Commonwealth, and the region.

The organization of the McCormack institute reflects its commitment to applied policy analysis, public service, and educational outreach. The central staff has expertise in government, demographics, survey research, public policy analysis, human resources planning, political behavior, urban affairs, public finance, higher education policy, economics, and public management. Fellows of the McCormack institute add specific expertise as needed.

The institute of public affairs will serve the people of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in diverse yet complementary ways. Through applied research in public policy and consultation with State and local governing bodies, the institute will marshall and exploit university resources to address the needs of the Commonwealth. By instituting a wide-ranging civic education program with particular emphasis on government processes, citizen rights and responsibilities, and public policy issues, the institute will promote informed debate, encourage active participation in governmental affairs, and making public service more understood and more attractive. By serving as home to the university's master of science in public affairs degree program, the institute will formally recruit and train leaders for the Commonwealth in both the public and private sectors. Finally, by developing an ongoing public policy reference collection, the institute will gather together, preserve, and make available to State and local governing bodies the enormous variety of published materials on public issues of concern to the region, materials which are sometimes overlooked or lost in the hectic pace of public life.

The Federal funding being committed to this project is being matched by support from the State and from the university. In addition, the institute plans to raise funds in the private sector. Since its inception, the State and the university have already committed more than $1 million (1.5 million) to the development of the institute in the past 2 years. The proposed Federal assistance is a one-time only authorization of $3 million over a 3-year period. These funds will be used to assist in the development of the ongoing program of the institute and not for construction.

H.R. 4066 was included in H.R. 5240, the Higher Education Amendments of 1984. When I decided not to proceed with further consideration of that legislation during the current session of Congress, it became necessary to act on this bill separately.

I hope that my colleagues will join me and the Massachusetts congressional delegation in supporting this legislation.

Mr. ERLENBORN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this resolution, which would have the House insist on its amendments to H.R. 2878, the Library Services and Construction Act, and include in these amendments the text of a bill the committee reported last week without any hearings. The resolution then requests a conference with the Senate on the library bill.

Despite my support of public libraries and all the benefits they bestow, I am opposed to continued Federal funding for this purpose. Libraries receive only 5 percent of their funding from the Federal Government; the bulk of their support comes from State and local sources. I believe that after 25 years of Federal support, they can and should be funded by the local communities they serve.

The Library Services and Construction Act has essentially met its goal of improving access to library services for all geographic areas in the country. As the committee report on the bill points out, more than 96 percent of the Nation has access to library services now. Clearly the original goal of the act has essentially been achieved. For this reason, the administration requested that the Library Services and Construction Act not be reauthorized. At some point we have to acknowledge that a Federal program has accomplished its mission, that we cannot go on indefinitely funding at taxpayers' expense every program ever authorized by the Congress.

State and local governments have shown an increased willingness to assume the responsibility for maintaining public library services. The limited amount of money provided by the Federal Government is not essential to public libraries. They will not disappear without Federal support. In my view, the money should be used for other programs that rely more heavily on Federal support and do not have a strong, local funding base.

I would also remind my colleagues that H.R. 2878, the bill the resolution now before us would take from the Speaker's table, not only reauthorizes the Library Services and Construction Act, but also expands it. The bill adds two new authorizations in titles V and VI for programs already permitted and conducted under title I. A further concern is the proposal in the library bill to shift to forward funding. This would require a double appropriation of funds in fiscal year 1985. Libraries do not run on an academic year and do not need to contract with teachers, as schools do. For this reason, it is not necessary for libraries to receive their funds on a forward-funded basis as a number of education programs do.

Mr. Speaker, I, for one, am in no hurry to bring the Library Services and Construction Act to conference and see no need for the uncommon legislative procedure called for by the resolution before us. I urge my colleagues to vote against it.

Mr. SIMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I want for just a moment or two to respond to my distinguished colleague from Illinois [Mr. ERLENBORN] for whom I have great respect. But we are adding this John McCormack portion, and let me just add a moment or two of recollection here.

I did not have the privilege of serving under John McCormack, but I had the privilege of meeting him and I would get notes from him scrawled, and slanted uphill, but they had a marvelous spirit to them.

I had the privilege of lecturing at Harvard for one semester and while I was there Speaker McCormack invited me and my family to Jimmy's Harborside Inn, I think was the name of the place, and he was a very, very gracious host. I will always think kindly and remember the inspiration that he gave us.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY].

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the motion of the gentleman from Illinois and I thank him for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I would commend the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SIMON] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ERLENBORN] for their leadership in bringing forward, as part of this motion, the bill (H.R. 4066) which would authorize the John W. McCormack Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Massachusetts at Boston.

Mr. Speaker, I am sadly required to note that the distinguished chairman of the committee, the late Carl Perkins, cannot be here to participate in legislative action on this tribute to the former Speaker. They were close and dear friends, who worked together on most of the important legislative victories of the 1960's. And the gentleman from Kentucky had been consistenly helpful and gracious in moving this measure forward, and chaired the meeting last week at which the bill was favorably reported.

Mr. Speaker, I can think of no greater tribute to former Speaker McCormack than this living, working memorial, dedicated to the study and support of public policy and public service.

I am very honored to represent the Ninth District of Massachusetts, which was the district Speaker McCormack ably served for 42 years. Speaker McCormack was an example to us all; 1 of 12 children in a poor family, his early life was filled with hardship. When Speaker McCormack was in the eighth grade, his life was further complicated by the death of his father, which made it necessary for young John to leave school at age 13 to support his mother and younger brothers. He began by delivering newspapers for $3 a week, moved on to become a messenger for a brokerage house at $3.50 a week, and then took a job as an office boy in a law firm. His employer encouraged him to read law books and learn the law profession. He enthusiastically took advantage of this opportunity and in 1913 was able to pass the bar examination and be admitted to the State bar without even a high school education.

In 1917, he opened his law office and made his first successful bid for elective office in the Massachusetts House of Representatives, where he served two terms, followed by two terms in the State senate, where he was Democratic floor leader. He was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1928 and was appointed to the Ways and Means Committee in 1931. He was an extremely active legislator who was in the forefront of efforts to establish Social Security and win the rights of workingmen through the Wagner Act and the Fair Labor Standards Act. He also led movements to establish the TVA and the Securities and Exchange Commission.

In 1940, John McCormack was chosen as the new majority leader following Sam Rayburn's election as Speaker of the House. In that capacity he was a critical ally to both Presidents Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman, particularly with regard to such major initiatives as the Marshall plan and NATO.

In 1962, McCormack at age 70 became the Speaker of the House of Representatives, where he remained until his retirement from public life in 1970. During that period, he continued to address the needs of our Nation through landmark legislation in the fields of civil rights, education, health care for the elderly, antipoverty initiatives, and numerous other efforts to improve the quality of life for all Americans.

Even though Speaker McCormack officially retired from public service in 1970, he still continued to be there to help his former constituents and others who sought his assistance.

The John W. McCormack Institute of Public Affairs is a most fitting tribute to the lifelong dedication that this great man gave to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the Nation. Certainly it was John McCormack's wish to see our brightest and most talented youth enter into public service and make a lifelong commitment to the improvement and preservation of representative government. This institute will provide a much-needed source of information and incentive for present and future public policymakers.

Mr. Speaker, the McCormack Institute is a focal point of the University of Massachusetts' commitment of service to Boston, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and the country. Its purpose is to identify, marshal, coordinate, and expand the university's efforts toward policy research, public service, and public affairs education both on and off campus.

The institute of public affairs will honor Speaker McCormack and serve the people of New England in diverse yet complementary ways. By instituting a wide-ranging civic education program with particular emphasis on government processes, citizen rights and responsibilities, and public policy issues, the institute will promote informed debate, encourage active participation in governmental affairs, and make public service more understood and more appealing as a career choice.

Mr. Speaker, many times during the course of my own career in public service I have spoken to groups of young people and encouraged them to carefully consider careers in public service. The John W. McCormack Institute would provide a unique opportunity for these students to study, understand, and appreciate the complexities and the realities of public service. I hope my colleagues will join with me in supporting this most fitting tribute to this great man, a tribute that will help present and future public servants to better meet the needs of our Nation and its people.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ERLENBORN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, when I first spoke on this resolution, I did not mention the John W. McCormack School of Public Policy portion of the bill. Let me at this time extemporaneously address this issue.

I supported this portion of the bill when it was considered in committee. I remember with great fondness my service beginning almost 20 years ago in the House when John McCormack was the Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, let me say that he was probably one of the finest Speakers that I have ever served under during those 20 years with the exception of the current Speaker. And my good friend, Carl Albert was also a fine Speaker.

In other words, I have enjoyed my service under the leadership of all three, and I wish the Speaker had heard me say that.

Mr. Speaker, I had just said that my service under John McCormack proved to me that he was one of the finest Speakers that I have ever served under except your own fine leadership.

The SPEAKER. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. ERLENBORN. And that of Carl Albert.

Thank you very much.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SIMON. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Illinois both for his kind reference to Speaker McCormack and the current Speaker of the House.

Let me add just one other small point to what has been said; and that is this Library Services and Construction Act has a small feature in it that could be significant for the Nation; that is to encourage libraries to move on this problem of illiteracy.

Again, this measure originally passed the House 351 to 39; going to conference makes sense and I hope the House will adopt the resolution at this point.

● Mr. DONNELLY. Mr. Speaker, the Resolution before the House today includes the text of H.R. 4066, legislation introduced by Mr. MOAKLEY, on which I am proud to be listed as an original cosponsor.

H.R. 4066 appropriately honors the memory of Speaker John W. McCormack by aiding the establishment of an Institute of Public Affairs in his name at the University of Massachusetts' Boston campus. This is a most fitting tribute to a great yet humble man who cared so deeply for our country and its people. The John W. McCormack Institute of Public Affairs is located within a mile of his birthplace in South Boston. The Institute will be a center of scholarly research, and is a tremendous resource for the surrounding communities which John W. McCormack represented during his remarkable 42-year career in the House. The Institute will be a living memorial to Speaker McCormack's lifelong dedication to public service. Even though he rose to positions of high prestige, John W. McCormack never forgot the day-to-day concerns of the people who elected him to Congress 21 times. After retirement from the House he loved and served so well, Speaker McCormack still continued daily office hours in Boston for his constituents.

His example is one we do well to emulate. I urge the support of all Members of the House for this most deserving and appropriate memorial to Speaker McCormack.●

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SIMON] that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, House Resolution 568.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. ERLENBORN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 3 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the resolution just agreed to.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the provisions of House Resolution 568, the Chair appoints the following conferees: Messrs. HAWKINS, FORD of Michigan, ANDREWS of North Carolina, SIMON, WILLIAMS of Montana, KOGOVSEK, OWENS, HARRISON, ACKERMAN, PENNY, ERLENBORN, JEFFORDS, GOODLING, COLEMAN of Missouri, and PETRI, ROUKEMA, GUNDERSON, and PACKARD.

HIGHER EDUCATION ACT OF 1965 AMENDMENTS

Mr. SIMON. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4477) to amend the Higher Education Act of 1965 to provide grants to the States to establish postsecondary education scholarship programs to encourage outstanding high school graduates to enter the teaching profession, and to establish a national fellowship program for talented teachers, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 4477

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That title V of the Higher Education Act of 1965 is amended by inserting after part D the following new parts E and F:

"PART E—CARL D. PERKINS SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM

"DECLARATION OF PURPOSE; AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

"SEC. 561. (a) It is the purpose of this part to make available, through grants to the States, scholarships during fiscal years 1986 through 1990 to a maximum of ten thousand individuals who are outstanding high school graduates and who demonstrate an interest in teaching, in order to enable and encourage those individuals to pursue teaching careers in education at the elementary or secondary level. Such scholarships shall be referred to as 'Carl D. Perkins Scholarships'.

"(b) There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 1986 and for each of the four subsequent fiscal years for Carl D. Perkins Scholarships to eligible students under this part.

"ALLOCATION AMONG STATES

"SEC. 562. (a) From the sums appropriated pursuant to section 561 for any fiscal year, the Secretary shall allocate to any State an amount which bears as nearly as possible the same ratio to such sums as the number of persons in that State bears to the number of persons in all States.

"(b) For the purpose of this section, the number of persons in a State and in all States shall be determined by the most recently available data from the United States Census Bureau.

"GRANT APPLICATIONS

"SEC. 563. (a) The Secretary is authorized to make grants to States in accordance with the provisions of this part. In order to receive a grant under this part, a State shall submit an application at such time or times, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may prescribe by regulation. Such application shall set forth a program of activities for carrying out the purposes set forth in section 561(a) in such detail as will enable the Secretary to determine the degree to which such program will accomplish such purposes and such other policies, procedures, and assurances as the Secretary may require by regulation.

"(b) The Secretary shall approve an application only if the application—

"(1) describes the selection criteria and procedures to be used by the State in the selection of scholarships under this part which satisfy the provisions of this part;

"(2) describes the outreach effort the State agency intends to use to publicize the availability of Carl D. Perkins Scholarships to high school students in the State;

"(3) provides assurances that each recipient eligible under section 565(b) of this part who receives a Carl D. Perkins Scholarship shall enter into an agreement with the State agency under which the receipient shall—

"(A) within the ten-year period after completing the postsecondary education for which the Carl D. Perkins Scholarship was awarded, teach, for a period of not less than two years for each year for which assistance was received, in a public elementary or secondary school in any State, in a public education program in any State, or in a private nonprofit school located and serving students in a district eligible for assistance pursuant to chapter 1 of the Education Consolidation and Improvement Act of 1981, or, on a full-time basis, handicapped children or children with limited English proficiency in a private nonprofit school, except that, in the case of individuals who teach in a school serving large numbers or high concentrations of economically disadvantaged students, or who teach children with limited English proficiency or handicapped children, the requirements of this subparagraph shall be reduced by one-half;

"(B) provide the State agency evidence of compliance with section 566 of this part as required by the State agency;

"(C) repay all or part of a Carl D. Perkins Scholarship received under section 564 of this part plus interest and, if applicable, reasonable collection fees, in compliance with regulations issued by the Secretary under section 567 of this part, in the event that the conditions of clause (A) are not complied with, except as provided for in section 568 of this part;

"(4) provides that the agreement entered into with recipients shall fully disclose the terms and conditions under which assistance under this part is provided and under which repayment may be required. Such disclosure shall include—

"(A) a description of the procedures required to be established under paragraph (5);

"(B) a description of the appeals procedures required to be established under paragraph (6) under which a recipient may appeal a determination of noncompliance with any provision under this part;

"(5) provides for procedures under which a recipient of assistance received under this part who teaches for less than the period required under paragraph (3)(A) will have the repayment requirements reduced or eliminated consistent with the provisions of sections 567 and 568 of this part;

"(6) provides for appeals procedures under which a recipient may appeal any determination of noncompliance with any provision under this part;

"(7) provides assurances that the State agency shall make particular efforts to attract students from low-income backgrounds or who express a willingness or desire to teach in schools having less than average academic results or serving large numbers of economically disadvantaged students; and

"(8) provides assurances that Carl D. Perkins Scholarships will be awarded without regard to sex, race, handicapping condition, creed, or economic background.

"(c) The selection criteria and procedures to be used by the State shall reflect the present and projected teacher needs of the State, including the demand for and supply of elementary teachers in the State, the demand for and supply of secondary teachers in the State, and the demand for teachers with training in specific academic disciplines in the State.

"(d) In developing the selection criteria and procedures to be used by the State, the State shall solicit the views of State and local educational agencies, private educational institutions, and other interested parties. Such views—

"(1) shall be solicited by means of (A) written comments; and (B) publication of proposed selection criteria and procedures in final form for implementation; and

"(2) may be solicited by means of (A) public hearings on the teaching needs of elementary and secondary schools in the State (including the number of new teachers needed, the expected supply of new teachers, and the shortages in the State of teachers with training in specific academic disciplines); or (B) such other methods as the State may determine to be appropriate to gather information on such needs.

"AMOUNT AND DURATION OF AND RELATION TO OTHER ASSISTANCE

"SEC. 564. (a) Subject to subsection (c), each Carl D. Perkins Scholar shall receive a $5,000 scholarship for each academic year of postsecondary education for study in preparation to become an elementary or secondary teacher. No individual shall receive scholarship assistance for more than four years of postsecondary education, as determined by the State agency.

"(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of title IV of this Act, scholarship funds awarded pursuant to this part shall not be considered in determining eligibility for student assistance under title IV of this Act.

"(c) No individual shall receive a Carl D. Perkins Scholarship under this part in any given year which, when added to assistance received under title IV of this Act shall exceed the cost of attendance, as defined under section 482(d), at the institution the individual is attending.

"SELECTION OF CARL D. PERKINS SCHOLARS

"SEC. 565. (a) Carl D. Perkins Scholars shall be selected by a seven-member statewide panel appointed by the chief State elected official, acting in consultation with the State education agency, or by an existing panel designated by the chief State elected official and approved by the Secretary of Education. The statewide panel shall be representative of school administrators, teachers and parents.

"(b) Selections of Carl D. Perkins Scholars shall be made from students who have graduated or who are graduating from high school and who rank in the top 10 per centum of their graduating class. The State educational agency shall make applications available to high schools in the State and in other locations convenient to applicants, parents and others. The statewide panel shall develop criteria and procedures for the selection of Carl D. Perkins Scholars. Such criteria may include the applicant's high school grade point average, involvement in extracurricular activities, financial need, and expression of interest in teaching as expressed in an essay written by the applicant. The panel may also require the applicant to furnish letters of recommendation from teachers and others.

"SCHOLARSHIP CONDITIONS

"SEC. 566. Recipients of scholarship assistance under this part shall continue to receive such scholarship payments only during such periods that the State agency finds that the recipient is (A) enrolled as a full-time student in an accredited postsecondary institution; (B) pursuing a course of study leading to teacher certification; and (C) maintaining satisfactory progress as determined by the postsecondary institution the recipient is attending.

"SCHOLARSHIP REPAYMENT PROVISIONS

"SEC. 567. Recipients found by the State agency to be in noncompliance with the agreement entered into under section 563(b)(3) of this part shall be required to repay a pro rata amount of the scholarship awards received, plus interest and, where applicable, reasonable collection fees, on a schedule and at a rate of interest to be prescribed by the Secretary by regulations issued pursuant to this part.

"EXCEPTIONS TO REPAYMENT PROVISIONS

"SEC. 568. (a) A recipient shall not be considered in violation of the agreement entered into pursuant to section 563(b)(3)(C) if the recipient (1) returns to a full-time course of study related to the field of teaching at an eligible institution; (2) is serving, not in excess of three years, as a member of the armed services of the United States; (3) is temporarily totally disabled for a period of time not to exceed three years as established by sworn affidavit of a qualified physician; (4) is unable to secure employment for a period not to exceed twelve months by reason of the care required by a spouse who is disabled; (5) is seeking and unable to find full-time employment for a single period not to exceed twelve months; (6) is seeking and unable to find full-time employment as a teacher in a public elementary or secondary school or a public education program; or (7) satisfies the provisions of additional repayment exceptions that may be prescribed by the Secretary in regulations issued pursuant to this part.

"(b) A recipient shall be excused from repayment of any scholarship assistance received under this part if the recipient becomes permanently totally disabled as established by sworn affidavit of a qualified physician.

"FEDERAL ADMINISTRATION OF STATE PROGRAMS; JUDICIAL REVIEW

"SEC. 569. (a) The Secretary shall not finally disapprove any application for a State program submitted under section 563, or any modification thereof, without first affording the State agency submitting the program reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing.

"(b) Whenever the Secretary, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State agency administering a State program approved under this part, finds—

"(1) that the State program has been so changed that it no longer complies with the provisions of this part, or

"(2) that in the administration of the program there is a failure to comply substantially with any such provisions, the Secretary shall notify such State agency that the State will not be regarded as eligible to participate in the program under this part until the Secretary is satisfied that there is no longer any such failure to comply.

"(c)(1) If any State is dissatisfied with the Secretary's final action under subsection (b) or (c), such State may appeal to the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which such State is located. The summons and notice of appeal may be served at any place in the United States. The Secretary shall forthwith certify and file in the court the transcript of the proceedings and the record on which the action was based.

"(2) The findings of fact by the Secretary, if supported by substantial evidence, shall be conclusive; but the court, for good cause shown, may remand the case to the Secretary to take further evidence, and the Secretary may thereupon make new or modified findings of fact and may modify any previous action, and shall certify to the court the transcript and record of further proceedings. Such new or modified findings of fact shall likewise be conclusive if supported by substantial evidence.

"(3) The court shall have jurisdiction to affirm the action of the Secretary or to set it aside, in whole or in part. The judgment of the court shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certiorari or certification as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code.

"PART F—NATIONAL TALENTED TEACHER FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM

"DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

"SEC. 571. It is the purpose of this part to establish a national fellowship program for outstanding teachers.

"AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS; ALLOCATION AMONG STATES

"SEC. 572. There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as necessary for fiscal year 1986 and for each of the four subsequent fiscal years for fellowships to outstanding teachers under this part. Not more than 2½ per centum of these funds shall be used for purposes of administering this part.

"TALENTED TEACHER FELLOWSHIPS

"SEC. 573. (a)(1) Except as provided under paragraph (3), sums available for the purpose of this part shall be used to award two national teacher fellowships to public school teachers teaching in each congressional district of each State, and in the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico; and one such fellowship in Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

"(2) Fellowship awards may not exceed the average national salary of public school teachers in the most recent year for which satisfactory data are available, as determined by the Secretary. Talented teacher fellows may not receive an award for two consecutive years. Subject to the repayment provisions of section 575, talented teacher fellows shall be required to return to a teaching position in their current school district for at least two years following the fellowship award.

"(3) If the appropriation under section 572 is not sufficient to provide the number of fellowships required by paragraph (1) at the level required under paragraph (2), the Secretary shall determine and publish an alternative distribution of fellowships which will permit fellowship awards at that level and which is geographically equitable. The Secretary shall send a notice of such determination to each of the Statewide panels established under section 574.

"(b) Talented teacher fellows may use such awards for such projects for improving public education as the Secretary may approve, including (1) sabbaticals for study, research, travel, or academic improvement; (2) curriculum development; (3) consultation with or assistance to other school districts; (4) development of special, innovative programs; (5) community relations; or (6) model teacher programs and staff development.

"SELECTION OF TALENTED TEACHER FELLOWSHIPS

"SEC. 574. Recipients of talented teacher fellowship in each State shall be selected (in accordance with section 575) by a seven-member Statewide panel appointed by the chief State elected official, acting in consultation with the State educational agency, or by an existing panel designated by the chief State elected official and approved by the Secretary of Education. The Statewide panel shall be representative of school administrators, teachers, parents, and institutions of higher education.

"EVALUATION OF APPLICATIONS

"SEC. 575. (a) An applicant for talented teacher fellowship assistance shall submit proposals for projects under section 573(b), and shall indicate the extent to which the applicant wishes to continue current teaching duties. The applicant shall submit such proposals to the local education agency for comment prior to submission to the Statewide panel (appointed under section 574) for the State within which the project is to be conducted. In evaluating proposals, such Statewide panel shall consult with the local education agency, requesting two recommendations from teaching peers; a recommendation from the principal; and a recommendation of the superintendent on the quality of the proposal and its benefit to the local education agency; and any other criteria for awarding fellowships as is considered appropriate by such Statewide panel. Selections of fellows shall be made in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Education.

"(b) Announcement of awards shall be made in a public ceremony.

"FELLOWSHIP REPAYMENT PROVISIONS

"SEC. 576. Repayment of the award shall be made to the Federal Government in the case of fraud or gross noncompliance.".

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objections.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SIMON] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SIMON].

Mr. SIMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Yesterday, many Members of this body were in the State of Kentucky for the funeral services for Carl Perkins and as fate would have it, we have had for now some months under consideration a Carl D. Perkins Scholarship Program to encourage talented students to get into the field of teaching, a bill which has been reported out by our Committee on Education and Labor.

Let me pay my tribute to the chief sponsor, the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WYDEN] as well as to my colleagues on the other side, particularly the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GUNDERSON] who have helped on this particular piece of legislation.

The bill is basically divided into two parts.

The bill establishes the Carl D. Perkins Scholarship Program to encourage highly qualified students to enter the teaching profession and authorizes teaching fellowships for current classroom teachers. When the Committee on Education and Labor reported H.R. 4477 on June 20, 1984, we had no idea that our beloved colleague, Carl D. Perkins, would not be present today urging the House to adopt this bill which is designed to improve teaching and to improve education in America. This bill has become a fitting memorial—modest but important to the Federal effort to improve teaching and the quality of education available to the Nation's school children.

Carl Perkins was one of the giants of this Congress and on the American education scene. In fact, he was much more than that: He was the common man writ large. He fought for opportunity for people who otherwise would not have had so powerful a champion. His steadfast support of education earned him many awards and recognition too numerous to even summarize. Perhaps the most eloquent statement about Carl Perkins is the immense record of legislative accomplished he leaves us: The Vocational Education Act of 1963, the landmark Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, the Child Nutrition Act of 1966 and his unstinting resistance to the Reagan administration's efforts to reduce funding for the programs under the jurisdiction of his Committee. He also leaves us with a major challenge—to continue the expansion of equality of educational opportunity and to assure that quality accompanies that expansion. He would have it no other way and we should accept no less than Carl Perkins would have demanded and that America's school children require.

I would like to outline the provisions of H.R. 4477.

First, the bill is divided into two parts. The first part is a program of scholarships for outstanding high school students who intend to become teachers. Eligibility is limited to students who graduate in the top 10 percent of their class. Each State administers the program for its graduates, through a seven-member board, and can impose other requirements, such as letters of recommendations, essays, and evidence of extracurricular achievements. The States receive the number of scholarships in proportion to the population of the State to the Nation.

The scholarship carries a $5,000 award, which does not count against any other financial aid, except that the total package cannot be more than the cost of tuition and expenses. The 4-year scholarship is contingent upon the student making satisfactory academic progress in a program that will lead to teacher certification. In exchange for the 4-year scholarship, the recipient is obligated to teach for 8 years, or pay back the scholarsip amount, plus interest and fees. If the scholar teaches disadvantaged, handicapped children or students with low English proficiency, their service requirement will be reduced by one-half.

The second part of the bill establishes a national fellowship for outstanding teachers already serving in the classroom. This program would award two fellowships per congressional district to teachers who apply for the year-long sabbatical. The talented teacher fellowship will be based on the average teacher salary for all teachers in the Nation (currently about $21,000). The awards will allow teachers to study, travel, consult, write, do research, or devlop projects that will improve education. Fellowship recipients will be required to return to their school districts to teach for 2 years.

There is ample evidence that the opportunities for classroom teachers to participate in professional development, or to engage in research or consulting; activities that are important to keep teachers invigorated, and to utilize the rich resource of classroom teachers, are lacking and are sorely needed. This program will not only recognize outstanding teachers, but will also reward them. Moreover, the ultimate beneficiary will be the educational system, for these teachers will be contributing to the improvement of the educational enterprise.

The bill authorizes "such sums" for both the Carl D. Perkins Scholarship Program and the Talented Teacher Fellowship Program for fiscal years 1986-89. The Congressional Budget Office [CBO] estimates that the Perkins Scholars program would involve outlays in fiscal year 1986 or $6.3 million rising to $43.8 million in fiscal year 1989. CBO also estimates that there would be $11 million in outlays for the Fellowship program in fiscal year 1986 increasing to $24 million in fiscal year 1989.

Considering the importance of this to the future of the Nation, this is a step in the right direction. I urge my colleagues to pass this legislation.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to my leader, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ERLENBORN].

Mr. ERLENBORN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to H.R. 4477.

The legislation before us purports to address a problem which we all agree needs to be addressed—the quality of the classroom teacher. Most persons knowledgeable in education believe that increasing the compensation paid to teachers is the most effective means of achieving this goal. H.R. 4477, however, would provide scholarships to high school students to encourage them to pursue teaching careers and would provide fellowships to existing classroom teachers. I doubt whether either of these new Federal categorical programs will be effective in achieving their stated goals.

Let's look at the scholarship program. Under the bill students will be eligible to receive up to $5,000 of assistance per year to pursue academic training leading to certification as a classroom teacher. In exchange, the student will be required to teach for 2 years for each year of assistance received.

Will this new program result in an increase in motivated, dedicated classroom teachers? I doubt it. The teachers going into the field after having received 4 years of scholarships will be facing up to a total of 8 years of what could be considered to be involuntary servitude. The teacher may be frustrated or even burnt out, and will in all likelihood be facing a low salary.

Let me quote for you the remarks of President John F. Kennedy on this subject in 1963:

> Improved research and teacher training are not enough, if good teachers do not choose to teach. Yet present salary schedules in some cases are too low at the start to compete against other positions available to college graduates. In almost all cases they are too low at the top to retain our ablest young teachers. Without sufficient incentive to make teaching a lifetime career, teachers with valuable training and experience but heavy family responsibilities too often become frustrated and drop out of the profession * * *

This quote, ironically, is included in the Merit Pay Task Force Report, which also included the recommendations for the two programs included in H.R. 4477.

I believe that the most effective means of improving the quality of classroom teachers is to increase the compensation they receive. This is the conclusion of the Merit Pay Task Force Report and I would expect that my friends on the other side of the aisle would agree. Where we part company is on the issue of what we, here on the Federal level, should do to address the situation. The proponents of H.R. 4477 apparently believe that the only way to keep the recipients of scholarships in teaching is to threaten them with having to pay back the "scholarships" they receive. I believe the service payback amounts to indentured servitude and could very well result in even greater frustration on the part of the scholarship recipients once they enter the classroom.

I believe that the establishment of the two new Federal programs included in H.R. 4477, could directly result in school districts and States not raising the basic pay of teachers. This could occur if these two, small programs, and those enacted under other bills this year, are perceived as being "the answer" to the problem of inadequately prepared classroom teachers.

In closing, I would like to comment briefly on the way the Committee on Education and Labor has responded to the report, "A Nation at Risk" since it was released. In the past 2 years, the committee has had before it over a dozen bills addressing the problem of improving education. One of these bills, the math and science bill, is awaiting the President's signature. Others were the subject of hearings or were marked up by the committee. Bills in this category include the foreign language bill, H.R. 2708, and the so-called American Defense Education Act. Other bills, such as the Effective Schools Development Grant Act, H.R. 4731, and H.R. 4775, a bill to improve the leadership skills of school administrators, have received no attention whatsoever.

These bills should all have been considered together as a single, comprehensive package addressing the call to action in "A Nation at Risk." The fact that we are proceeding in a piecemeal fashion virtually guarantees that our efforts this year will be duplicative in some areas, while totally neglecting possible initiatives in others. Both the math and science bill and H.R. 4477, for example, provide scholarship assistance to students to encourage them to train as teachers.

Mr. Speaker, although I appreciate the substantial amounts of work that have gone into H.R. 4477, I must oppose the bill.

I urge a "no" vote on the bill.

□ 1050

Mr. SIMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WYDEN], the chief sponsor of this legislation.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. Speaker, in starting, I, in particular, want to thank the chairman, the gentleman from Illinois; the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING]; the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GUNDERSON]; and so many of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle who helped us develop this bipartisan piece of legislation.

I do rise today in support of H.R. 4477, the Talented Teacher Act.

Mr. Speaker, the Talented Teacher Act sends a very simple message across this country, that message is that the Congress of the United States believes that teachers are critically important and that we want to put some of our best and brightest up in front of the classroom and not just in the courtrooms and in the boardrooms.

I think we need to acknowledge the plain fact that today many of our best and brightest young people will not even consider a career in the teaching profession. You walk into a classroom of high school seniors in this country and the bright ones are automatically headed for law and business and medicine and engineering. Thousands of our best and brightest are attracted each year by the prestige, recognition, and financial rewards that these fields offer.

But it is clear to me, Mr. Speaker, that we as a nation cannot afford to let this brain drain from the teaching profession continue.

The bill we have before us today is a modest proposal. It attacks two fundamental problems in American education.

First, recruiting some of our top young people to the teaching profession and second, once we get them, keeping them there. The price tag is also a modest one. The Talented Teacher Act authorizes a total of $200 million for a 4-year experimental program.

Now, this legislation carries out the unanimous recommendations of the bipartisan Congressional Task Force on Merit Pay by offering scholarships to the top high school seniors to go into teaching and fellowships to outstanding teachers to be used for a 1-year sabbatical for study, research, or other professional development.

National Center for Education Statistics predict that there will be a shortage of 37,000 teachers in the United States by 1987. The Talented Teacher Act ensures that the congressional response to this impending crisis will be to get the best people, the best of our young people, to make up for this shortfall.

It is my own view, Mr. Speaker, that without quality teachers everything that is done in American education from high tech equipment, stiff new standards and other educational reforms, all of these other changes lose much of their value if we cannot get top flight teachers in front of our classrooms.

We need to face the facts. Computers do not teach children, teachers teach children.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, let me say that when we introduced this bill back in November 1983—on a bipartisan basis—the gentleman from Illinois, the gentleman from Pennsylvania, myself, and the gentleman from Missouri, we decided that it should in some way honor the man who had been a leader in education in the House of Representatives for the last 17 years, Mr. Carl Perkins, chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor. We all felt, at that time, that the chairman's years of dedicated leadership in this field deserved recognition. That is why we named the scholarships the Carl D. Perkins Scholarships.

In my view, that decision takes on added significance now. The bill we have before us is just but one small way that we can pay tribute to Chairman Perkins' years of compassionate and unrivaled service to this country.

Mr. Speaker, these scholarships and fellowships in the Talented Teacher Act are an extremely modest way that we can give education in this country a needed shot in the arm.

It gives us a chance to take an important step toward insuring that some of our best and brightest young people go into teaching and go on to inspire other American young people.

I urge my colleagues to support it. It is a bill with strong bipartisan support.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GUNDERSON].

Mr. GUNDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I was one of those privileged to serve on the House Education and Labor Subcommittee with jurisdiction over this particular bill. When it first came before our subcommittee I thought this was one of the better intentioned, but more improperly guided missiles we had seen in this Congress. It was trying to help the cause of education in this country by establishing a pilot project that could last 8 or 9 years, giving out 10,000 scholarships each year. It was going to give those scholarships to the best qualified students academically among our high schools to receive a year of free college education if they would take 2 years in teaching.

Well, one could quickly figure, if these people had any of the brains that we hoped they would, by earning these scholarships they would quickly receive 4 years of free academic training, and they would have an 8-year obligation in the school as a teacher. But as soon as their 8 years were up, they would go into the private sector and earn more money.

So, I thought that it was a nice idea, but it simply is not going to solve the problem we have in getting the best people in our country into the teaching field and keeping them.

Clearly, pay is the issue, I think, and we must continue to focus on it as the primary concern. If you want good people to get into teaching and to stay there, we are going to have to raise the pay for our teachers across this country.

But, through the strenuous efforts, diligence, and commitment of the gentleman from Oregon, the sponsor of the bill, and others, we were able to sit down and work out some concerns about this bill. We were able to come up with some various amendments that I think much better direct the bill toward the problem of teacher shortages.

On the one hand, we were able to target the scholarships. On the other hand, we were able to make sure that it truly was a pilot project, that it was not a 9-year experiment.

My first amendment, adopted in the committee, was to require that the State educational agencies would determine the needs for teachers in their particular State. In some States it is math and science. But if you look at some statistics, they will tell you in the early 1990's the critical teacher shortage is going to be at elementary level.

The bill as amended allows each State to determine exactly what their teaching needs are going to be and to use the Carl Perkins scholarships to provide an incentive to get the best young people we have in those disciplines most in need.

My second amendment, agreed to by the committee, and the gentleman from Oregon, was to put a limit of 10,000 scholarships totally over the duration of the program; not 10,000 a year where we would have up to 40,000 scholarships out at one time and that we would have an expenditure of probably around $700 million for the scholarship program alone. We were able to narrow that down, return it to I think what was the author's original intent, which was to make it a pilot project, and save approximately $500 million in the process.

As amended, the bill before us, provides hope—even if in a small way—to get the best people into teaching. It cannot keep them there forever. But it is a start. And without question, it is named after a man we all knew and loved so much.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3½ minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. ROGERS], our great late chairman's neighbor.

Mr. ROGERS. I thank my colleague for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I was among those who attended the funeral of Carl Perkins in Kentucky yesterday, as well as did the gentleman from Pennsylvania and the gentleman from Illinois, among about 100 Members of Congress who traveled there under the leadership of our Speaker. We traveled way back into the hills and hollers of Kentucky, to the home of a true giant in the history of this Congress and I think of the Nation. And certainly a giant in education in this land.

Those who went there, to Hindman, KY, to attend what I thought was a very beautiful ceremony and a fitting tribute to a great patriot, were able to see why Carl Perkins was so committed to education in this land.

I happen to represent the district just immediately to the west of Carl Perkins, but a district that shares many of the same problems that the district that Carl so ably represented all those years suffers from, and that is a lack of education opportunities and a lack of employment opportunities in the hills of Kentucky, and which so many parts of our country suffer from. Carl D. Perkins spent his lifetime, his literal adult lifetime, in the cause of better education and opportunities for those bright young people, whether they be in the hills of Kentucky or the ghettos of New York or somewhere else.

I think it is ironic that this bill is on the floor of the House today, a bill that I think says so much about the life and work of Carl Perkins and the other dedicated souls on this committee and in this Congress who over the years have labored in the vineyards, many times without credit, to improve the lot of young people around this Nation.

The two things this bill does I think no one can argue with—certainly not this Member—a scholarship for a young person, the best and the brightest, to go on and achieve an education that perhaps otherwise they would never have the opportunity to even dream of; and then also to reward those teachers who achieve and who excel in the nurturing of those young minds that our Nation so desperately needs, not to mention the world needs.

So I speak in support of this legislation. I hope it passes overwhelmingly, if nothing more than a great tribute to a neighbor of mine in Kentucky, a friend and a great laborer in the vineyards, Carl Perkins. I think this would be a great tribute and another monument to the memory of a very beloved spirit who trod these halls for those many years, with that loving smile, and that lisp at times, and that grin that seemed somehow to be one sided, but a person in whose great love for this country we are all very proud.

I will say this: I guess many times I differed with Carl Perkins on some philosophical matter or some ideological matter, but I never differed with the dedication of this great man and the love that he poured out for his country and for his people, and it is something we shall always cherish to our dying days.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself whatever time I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I will not dwell on the content of the bill because I believe those colleagues who spoke before me have explained exactly what this piece of legislation does. It is a tribute to our late great chairman, in that his was always an attempt to bring about a cooperative spirit, a bipartisan spirit. He did not want confrontation if he could avoid it.

In this particular piece of legislation, the gentleman from Illinois, the gentleman from Oregon, the gentleman from Wisconsin, the gentleman from Missouri, have all worked together, on both sides of the aisle, to iron out some of the difficulties that some of us saw with the original bill. Although I would prefer a comprehensive approach to deal with the issue of quality education rather than the piecemeal fashion that has evolved, this particular legislation is too important to ignore.

I think there are probably two major reasons why this legislation should be enacted. Probably the most important reason is the fact that we are again told that there will be a significant shortage of teachers in the next few years, a shortage for many reasons. As has been mentioned, it is not the most attractive field to go into, either in terms of compensation or because of the many problems teachers have had to face dealing with lawsuits and redtape.

But I can remember after World War II we were caught in a similar bind. At that particular time after World War II we had a baby boom and, unfortunately, we did not have many certified—let alone well qualified—teachers to fill those slots to take care of the great increase in students. This is probably part of the problem we are facing in education today. Today, not only are we having a great increase in children being born once again, but we are also having a large number of teachers who are reaching retirement age, and that, coupled with the fact that we are having fewer and fewer college students entering the teaching profession, we are again going to be caught short and we are going to have a lot of young people to educate and we are not going to have teachers available who are certified and qualified to do the job. So I think that is one reason.

The second reason, it seems to me is this—part of our job is to do research and then also to establish model programs that State and local governments can look at, and if they see they are good, they can adopt them. We are doing that in this piece of legislation, because if these fellowships and if these scholarships attract good people and keep good people in the teaching profession, I am sure this is something that State governments and local governments may wish to adopt.

So those are the two major reasons, it seems to me, for adopting this legislation.

While I do not contend that H.R. 4477 will solve all of the problems in the teaching profession, it will make notable improvements. This bill addresses two of the most fundamental problems facing the teaching profession—lack of incentives for outstanding students who go into teaching and lack of rewards and recognition for talented teachers who stay in the profession. H.R. 4477 takes great strides toward revitalizing the teaching profession—it recognizes the importance of teachers in the classroom.

I think there are two changes in the committee amendments that make this a better bill. I believe the changes made, namely, substituting State based selection panels for the National Selection Board originally included in the bill will be a major improvement; I believe a State based selection panel will be better able to know the challenges facing education in a particular State than they would be if it were handled by a national board.

I also think it is important to get politics out of this, and therefore by eliminating participation of Senators and Members of the House from the award process it seems to me we are putting the emphasis where it should be placed, and that is on the teachers and on the education profession.

Then last, let me say that I sat next to my great chairman for 6 years as the ranking minority member of his subcommittee; in fact I sat next to him most of my 10 years in Congress, through hearing after hearing including his famous field hearings in his beloved Seventh Congressional District of Kentucky. Even though philosophically we may have differed on occasion, I have never found anyone who was more enjoyable to work with and who tried, as I said earlier, to bring about a consensus so that we did not have confrontation. And so the fact that we are naming the scholarships in this bill, the Carl D. Perkins Scholarship I think is a fitting tribute for a real giant in the field of education, child nutrition, black lung, and many other areas. He was the leader helping those who had no one to speak for them. I thought yesterday, as we sat there and looked over those approximately 3,000 people form his constituency, how appreciative they were because they had someone to speak for them and how important it probably would be for all of us to visit areas such as that, because many of use do not see the same kind of need that Carl saw, because that need was all around him, and we would probably have a better understanding for those who do represent that constituency.

So I think it is very fitting that we pay this tribute to Carl, even though we named these scholarships—and I am thankful for this—we named these scholarships while he was living. So it will be a real tribute to his memory to be giving Carl D. Perkins Scholarships to the brightest and the best, encouraging them to teach not only the brightest and the best but to teach everyone so that all have an equal opportunity for a good education and a decent future.

Mr. SIMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MCCURDY].

Mr. MCCURDY. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I, too, rise in support of this bill, but, more importantly, Mr. Speaker, I wanted to rise and join my colleagues who were in Kentucky yesterday to express our condolences to the Carl Perkins family, but to relate just very briefly what a moving, very emotional, and important experience it was for many of us who did travel to Hindman, KY, as Mr. GOODLING from Pennsylvania mentioned, to be able to see firsthand the country that Carl Perkins not only represented but was a product of. It helps all of us to understand and to appreciate the work and the legend that he really was.

I wanted to join my colleagues, and certainly Mr. SIMON, who has worked very closely with Mr. Perkins for so many years in supporting the legislation and the discussion today, but also to join in and to extend my condolences to the family, and to add what little I can to the strong feelings that were expressed yesterday in Kentucky, and I think have been expressed all week here in this body.

Mr. SIMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from California [Mrs. BURTON].

Mrs. BURTON of California. Mr. Speaker, I was one of those who traveled yesterday to Kentucky, and those of you who know, last year I had a grievous year; my husband and my father died within 2 months. So, for me, it is not an easy thing to do. However, I felt it was most important for me to go because Mr. Perkins was not only my chairman, but he and my husband served for more than 19 years on the committee.

I am also very grateful that the black lung bill that Mr. Perkins and my husband worked on became law. Yesterday, looking through the Kentucky hills, going on a bus for an hour and a half each way, after we deplaned, it was fascinating to see the country. You see, I have never been there before. It shows you how vast our country is and what great people it produces.

I want to say something about the scholarships. I certainly think it is fitting that they be named the Carl Perkins scholarships; he did so much for education.

● Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4477, the Talented Teachers Act, which will establish the Carl D. Perkins scholarship program for outstanding high school students who wish to pursue teaching careers. By requiring students to teach in a designated area for 2 years for every year of scholarship assistance they receive, this program will be an integral part of the vital legacy of our departed colleague and friend, Carl Dewey Perkins, whose unwavering dedication and personal integrity earned him a place of honor among the greatest of those who have served in the U.S. House of Representatives.

While we must mourn the passing of a valued legislative craftsman of historic proportions, we gratefully celebrate his life's work as a faithful, tireless, productive public servant and true representative of those he affectionately accepted as his people.

In a career which spanned more than three decades, Carl Perkins never lost touch with the needs and aspirations of his beloved eastern Kentucky constituents.

Yet his vision extended far beyond a home district and State to encompass the cares and concerns of an entire Nation. His faith in that Nation and his compassionate understanding of America's fundamental commitment to public education and equal opportunity were the inspiration of his passionate, relentless support of those causes.

Our colleague was both a pilgrim and pioneer whose efforts as a Member of this House touched and brightened the lives of millions now living and yet unborn who may never know of the useful life and revered name of Carl D. Perkins.

It is enough, however, that we who remain after him today dedicate ourselves to keeping alive the spark of hope he kindled in the hearts of the disadvantaged and downtrodden that they, too, might attain freedom's fullest blessings.●

● Mr. BIAGGI. Mr. Speaker, I rise to join with my colleagues to express my support for H.R. 4477, the Talented Teacher Act, which will provide long-overdue recognition to the needs of our present and future teachers through providing incentives for students to enter teaching, as well as reward those teachers of high professional caliber.

As a member of the Education and Labor Committee for 15 years, I regret that the sudden passing of our colleague, and our chairman, Carl Perkins, has hastened our consideration of this legislation today. However, I believe that this bill is a fitting tribute to a man who has given unselfishly of himself in order to improve the lives of millions of people in this country, including our teachers.

In essence, this bill creates a two-pronged approach to assisting the teaching profession. First, it provides 10,000 scholarships—which are named for Chairman Perkins—of $5,000 for each of 2 years for high school students who graduate in the top 10 percent of their class.

Second, this bill also provides fellowship aid of an amount equal to the average teacher's pay in the United States to two outstanding teachers in each congressional district. This aid would allow those chosen to participate an opportunity for a year's sabbatical for professional growth experiences, research, and curriculum development. In exchange for this fellowship, teachers would be required to teach for 2 additional years.

The average cost of this bill is modest—$76 million annually—for the expected returns that we will see by its passage into law. Every national study that has been conducted to address the excellence in education question has cited the need for improved incentives for students to enter the teaching profession, combined with methods of encouraging them to remain. I believe that this bill is an effective way of addressing both these problems which deserves our strong support.

When one considers the fact that the average starting salary for a teacher is $13,500, we can ill afford to fail to act swiftly on this measure. The teacher shortage problem is especially acute in New York City, where the average starting salary for teachers is $14,500, slightly above the national average. At the same time, the teacher shortage is acute—with the Board of Education estimating a shortfall of 2,000 teachers for this coming school year. While this bill will not provide a comprehensive solution, it certainly is a first step in the right direction.

This bill enjoys the support of numerous national organizations devoted to the advancement of teaching as a profession, such as the American Federation of Teachers, the National Education Association, the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, the American Association of School Administrators, the American Association of Colleges of Teacher Education, and the National PTA. Clearly, they have joined in support of the need to recognize—and foster—educational excellence at all levels.

I believe that passage of the Talented Teacher Act—and the initiation of Carl D. Perkins Scholarship Program—is a fitting way of continuing the work of our chairman in future generations of teachers by providing young people the tools with which to help them enter the worthy and noble profession of teaching. I urge passage of H.R. 4477.●

● Mr. KOSTMAYER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4477, the Talented Teachers Act, which will establish the Carl Perkins scholarship program.

The Talented Teachers Act is designed to address two problems which have contributed to the decline of educational standards and achievement in our Nation. The first is that we are no longer able to attract the best students to the teaching profession, and the second is our failure to keep the best teachers in our schools.

H.R. 4977 would encourage outstanding students to enter the teaching profession by providing college scholarships for high school seniors who are graduating in the top 10 percent of their class; 10,000 scholarships would be offered during fiscal years 1986 to 1989. Students would agree to teach in a designated area for 2 years for each year of education they receive.

The Talented Teachers Act would also give outstanding teachers opportunities for professional growth by providing fellowships for a year's sabbatical for study or research. Two fellowships would be offered every year in each congressional district to talented teachers chosen by an independent board.

I have cosponsored H.R. 4477, Mr. Speaker, and I support it strongly because it recognizes the importance of teachers in our schools and because it is a pragmatic response to one of the most critical problems which has been identified in numerous reports on education. We are facing the possibility of a severe teacher shortage by 1987, and all of the computer technology and strict new standards in the world will not improve our children's education unless we have enough committed, well-educated teachers to show them the way. The quality of education in America will never rise above mediocrity until we recognize that teaching is a profession, and provide teacher's with competitive salaries and opportunities for professional advancement. The Talented Teacher Act is an important first step toward that goal.

The deficiencies in our educational system have been documented in study after study, and publicized in countless articles and television reports. Now it is time to take action. The Talented Teachers Act is one of the first legislative initiatives to come out of all the blue ribbon studies on education in America, and in my opinion, it is the best so far.

H.R. 4477 is also a tribute to our beloved colleague, the late Carl Perkins, who for years chaired the Education and Labor Committee, and I can think of no more fitting way to honor the memory of a man whose hard work and dedication improved the educational opportunities of millions of young Americans.●

Mr. SIMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 3 minutes, in closing.

Mr. Speaker, just a few comments on what has been said. First, I agree with those who say this is not a substitute for raising pay for teachers; no question about that. That is fundamental.

The one speaker who spoke in opposition to this measure said we have already passed the math-science bill, but we do not need this.

The reality is, we need something beyond math and science. I am one of the chief sponsors of the math-science bill; absolutely we need that. But we also need good third grade teachers; we need good first grade teachers. We need good English teachers. We need good people in other areas.

The second point was made that these people will be teaching only 8 years. The average service for a teacher today is 7 years. Some will stay longer.

Finally, the point that my colleague from Pennsylvania made is an extremely important one. Let me commend him and I also should have included the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COLEMAN] among those I commended earlier for their help on this.

Very shortly we are going to be facing a demand for additional teachers. One of the questions is, Will those teachers come from among the least able or the most able? Right now, wherever you go and talk to the top 10 percent of the high school graduating class. Ask them what they want to become. You will find they want to become doctors, lawyers, engineers, architects, journalists—a variety of things—but very few, if any, will want to become teachers.

This is an attempt to change that in a small way. It is an experiment, frankly. An experiment that cannot do any harm and may do some good, and it may provide an answer to how we move in a better direction, not just the Federal Government; State and local governments also. This is a step in the right direction and I appreciate the bipartisan support we have received on this, Mr. Speaker.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore [Mr. MONTGOMERY]. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SIMON] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4477, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended, and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SIMON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

CONVEYING CERTAIN LANDS FOR RELIGIOUS PURPOSES TO THE ZUNI INDIAN TRIBE

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill, S. 2201, to convey certain lands to the Zuni Indian Tribe for religious purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?

Mr. SCHAEFER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from Arizona to explain briefly this legislation.

Mr. UDALL. I will be happy to.

Mr. Speaker, S. 2201 provides for a somewhat complex arrangement of transferring Federal lands to the Zuni Indian Tribe of New Mexico; of exchanging other Federal lands for State lands which would be held in trust for the Zuni Tribe; and for the acquisition of private lands by the Zuni Tribe. The purpose of this complex arrangement is to secure for the tribe the ownership and possession of a tract of land in east central Arizona which has deep religious significance for the Zuni people.

While the Zuni people, like many other Indian tribes, try to keep their religious and rituals private, they feel so strongly about this tract of land that they have made clear the sacred nature of this land to their people. It is central to their religious beliefs and practices. It, loosely, would correspond to the Christian concept of heaven.

While they are currently given limited access to some of these lands by the private and public owners, their rituals are often restricted by the owners and they cannot secure the private practice of these rituals.

This legislation would permit them to do so.

Mr. SCHAEFER. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

S. 2201

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That for the purpose of securing the following described lands located in the State of Arizona, upon which the Zuni Indians depend and which the Zuni Indians have used since time immemorial for sustenance and the performance of certain religious ceremonies, the following are hereby declared to be part of the Zuni Indian Reservation:

Beginning at the northeast corner of section 26, township 15 north, range 26 east, Gila and Salt River meridian; thence west to the northwest corner of section 28, township 15 north, range 26 east; thence south to the southeast corner of section 16, township 14 north, range 26 east; thence east to the southeast corner of section 14, township 14 north, range 26 east; thence north to the point of beginning.

Also all of sections 26 and 27, township 14 north, range 26 east, Gila and Salt River meridian.

SEC. 2. All lands described in the first section of this Act which are presently owned by the United States are hereby declared to be held in trust for the Zuni Indian Tribe subject to any existing leasehold interests. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to acquire through exchange those lands described in such section which are owned by the State of Arizona, and shall exchange lands under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Land Management within the State of Arizona for said State lands. Such lands will be transferred without cost to the Zuni Indian Tribe and title thereto shall be taken by the United States in trust for the benefit of said tribe.

SEC. 3. The Secretary of the Interior or the Zuni Indian Tribe is authorized to acquire through purchase or exchange the remaining private lands and leasehold interests described within the first section of this Act which are not presently owned by the United States or the State of Arizona, and when acquired, title to such lands shall be held by the United States in trust for the Zuni Indian Tribe.

SEC. 4. The Secretary of the Interior is directed to immediately acquire by voluntary agreement the permanent right of ingress and egress to all lands described in the first section of this Act for the limited purpose of allowing the Zuni Indians to continue to use said lands for traditional religious pilgrimages and ceremonials.

SEC. 5. (a) The Secretary of the Interior shall make available for sale to Apache County, Arizona, land which—

(1) is under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Land Management on the date of enactment of this Act,

(2) is located within the boundaries of Apache County, Arizona, and

(3) consists of a number of acres equal to the number of acres of land that—

(A) are acquired in fee under section 3 by the Secretary of the Interior or the Zuni Indian Tribe, and

(B) are subject to taxation by Apache County, Arizona, on the date of enactment of this Act.

(b)(1) The Secretary of the Interior shall designate the land which is available for sale under subsection (a) by no later than the date which is two years after the date of enactment of this Act. The Secretary of the Interior shall publish in the Federal Register a description of any land so designated.

(2) The designation of land under paragraph (1) shall be subject to any land transfer which is required in order to carry out any relocation pursuant to Public Law 93-531.

(3) Land which is designated by the Secretary of the Interior under paragraph (1) shall be available for sale under subsection (a) during the period which begins on the date which such designation is made and ends on the date which is four years after the date of enactment of this Act.

(c)(1) If Apache County, Arizona, agrees to use any portion of the land purchased under subsection (a) only for public purposes, the price at which such portion of the land shall be sold to Apache County under subsection (a) shall be equal to the lesser of—

(A) the price at which Apache County could acquire such land under the Federal Land Policy Management Act of 1976, or

(B) the price at which Apache County could acquire such land under the Act of June 14, 1926 (44 Stat. 741; chapter 578).

(2) If Apache County, Arizona, does not agree to use a portion of the land purchase by such county under subsection (a) only for public purposes, the price at which such portion of land shall be sold under subsection (a) shall be fair market value of such portion of land determined with regard to the current use of such portion of land on the day preceding the date of such sale.

(d) The provisions of this section shall not delay the transfer of any land under this Act for the benefit of the Zuni Indian Tribe.

SEC. 6. The value of the interest in land conveyed or any funds expended pursuant to this Act or any other sums expended or services rendered gratuitously or otherwise by the United States for the benefit of the Zuni Indian Tribe or its members from 1846 to the present shall not be offset against any award of judgment against the United States which may be rendered in favor of the Zuni Indian Tribe in Docket Numbers 161-79L and 327-81L presently pending before the United States Court of Claims. The Zuni Indian Tribe may encumber its interest in said dockets in order to acquire the lands described in section 3.

SEC. 7. For the purpose of subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, any transfer of private lands or leasehold interests to which section 3 applies shall be deemed to be an involuntary conversion within the meaning of section 1033 of such code.

SEC. 8. Payment being made to any State or local government pursuant to the provisions of section 1601 of title 31, United States Code, on any lands transferred pursuant to section 2 hereof shall continue to be paid as if such transfer had not occurred.

SEC. 9. Notwithstanding section 640d-18(c)(1) of title 25, United States Code, the Secretary of the Interior is directed to discontinue any fencing activity at the area commonly referred to as Big Mountain within the former Joint Use Area for two years after the date of enactment of this Act.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. UDALL

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. UDALL: Strike all of section 9 of S. 2201.

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, this amendment strikes a nongermane Senate amendment to S. 2201. S. 2201 is a bill to provide that certain Federal lands in the State of Arizona shall be held in trust for the Zuni Indian Tribe of New Mexico.

My amendment strikes section 9 of the bill which relates to the land dispute between the Hopi and Navajo Tribes in Arizona. This section directs the Secretary of the Interior to suspend all fencing activities, as required by law and court order, in the Big Mountain area of the disputed lands. The Hopi Tribe strongly objected to this provision.

The Hopi Tribe has, however, agreed to support a 6 month moratorium on such fencing before the district court in return for the deletion of the provision from S. 2201.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. UDALL].

The amendment was agreed to.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the Senate bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection the the request of the gentleman from Arizona.

There was no objection.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the conference report and amendments in disagreement on H.R. 5712, the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1985, and that I may be permitted to insert a table following my remarks on the conference report.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 5712, DEPARTMENTS OF COMMERCE, JUSTICE, AND STATE, THE JUDICIARY, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATION ACT, 1985

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 5712) making appropriations for the Department of Commerce, Justice, and State, the judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

(Job conference report and statement, see proceedings of the House of August 3, 1984.)

Mr. SMITH of Iowa (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the statement be considered as read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH] will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. O'BRIEN] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH].

□ 1120

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, we bring back a conference report which involved 151 amendments. It is not easy at any time to agree to 151 amendments, but we have done so and I think it is a good bill and should be supported.

The conference agreement calls for a total budget authority of $11,520,976,200. This is slightly under the maximum amount that the Senate would be permitted to provide in this bill under their budget resolution. Although that budget resolution has not been agreed upon by both Houses, they felt constrained to stay within that amount.

I have not been officially notified of this, but as I understand it, anyway, if we stay within this amount it would not be vetoed.

So I think that we have brought back as good a bill as we could under the circumstances. I want this bill to become law. It involves some 17 independent agencies, 3 departments of Government, the entire judiciary of the United States, and we need to have this bill enacted rather than putting all of these departments and agencies and the judiciary on a continuing resolution.

This bill is $771,411,800 more than it was when it left the House. However, I would like to point out that most of this addition is caused by the fact that some programs were left out in the House bill. They were knocked out on points of order or just were not included in the bill.

This is very difficult, when we have a number of agencies that have not been authorized on the House side and then we have to deal with them in the appropriations bill. We should not be put in this position, but we have been year after year after year. I would like to do anything that I can to encourage the authorizing committees to get the bills up and get them authorized so that we can deal with the money matters and also not have to be extending their authorizations.

For example, we have a number of things in here like the Federal Trade Commission. That is an important independent agency that has not been authorized for over 2 years. The Economic Development Administration has not been authorized or reauthorized. Neither has the Legal Services Corporation. We need these authorizations.

We have included some money for programs, I will just name five, that were not included in the bill as it left the House. These account for most of the addition over the House level. EDA, for example, is this bill for $228,500,000. It was not in the House passed bill. Legal Services Corporation is $305 million. Additions to the prison system are $13.6 million. The Federal Trade Commission is $64.3 million and the National Endowment for Democracy is $18.5 million. That makes up most of the additions over the House level.

Also, this bill is $390,033,200 over the amount requested by the administration, but I would like to point out that we have added substantially more than that for programs the administration wanted to zero out that neither the House nor the Senate wants to zero out. I will list for my colleagues a few of those.

The Economic Development Administration is in this bill for $200 million for grants. The other $28.5 million in the bill is for salaries and expenses.

The Legal Services Corporation is $305 million. Juvenile Justice Assistance, a very important program is $70.3 million.

The Sea Grant Program is in here for $39 million, and coastal zone management for $34 million. Trade adjustment assistance, which is very important to some areas of the country where they have had difficulty as a result of the recession and imports, is $25 million. Public telecommunications grants is at $24 million and the U.S. Trustees Program is at $9.4 million.

All of those things were left out of the administration's budget, and we were able to accommodate all of those by reducing a large number of items that were in the administration's budget, and shifting the money around.

So I think that we have ended up here with a very, very good bill under the circumstances, and I am asking for its support.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the distinguished gentleman from Iowa, Chairman NEAL SMITH, for extraordinary diligence and determination in delivering this bill to you today in good order. To my friends on the committee and our colleagues in the other body, I say thank you. And to particular staff members John Osthaus, Terry Bevels, and Drew Hiatt, whose efforts are deserving of recognition, I say thank you as well.

When we appeared before you barely 2 months ago, we had a bill of noble purpose and intent stuffed with a bundle of spending excesses. I, along with other colleagues, expressed reservations at that time. I did so in the belief that the committee could have shown more restraint in recommending funding levels for existing programs. In particular, it was my notion that the committee could have taken a more balanced and reasoned approach by giving more thought to actual program requirements and the maintenance of existing program levels based on a through review of past program performance, accomplishments, and shortfalls.

Our efforts in conference with Members of the other body to reach accord on many questions involving funding and programs have met with success. The conferees have shown great restraint in the allocation of funds, have made necessary cuts in accordance with available resources and eliminated excessive spending levels which could have threatened the passage of this bill. What we have now represents a prudent use of available resources balanced against program needs and national objectives. Yet there remain a few areas of substantive disagreement, already identified by the chairman, which deal in some instances with funding levels and in others with various amendments and provisions of the bill.

All in all, this is a good bill, better in many respects than the one we last voted on. The Office of Management and Budget has signaled its satisfaction with the $11.5 billion figure, which is $23,800 less than the ceiling identifying an appropriation not likely to encounter a veto. With that thought in mind and in good faith and conscience, I urge you, my colleagues, to support this bill.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minute to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KILDEE].

Mr. KILDEE. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the chairman of the conference committee, has the conference included the $50,000 death benefit for Federal police and firefighters which was included in H.R. 622, introduced by myself and passed by this House under suspension?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. If the gentleman will yield, yes, it does, and the committee took into consideration the gentleman's arguments in favor of it. I think it passed overwhelmingly, and it is included in the bill.

Mr. KILDEE. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York, [Mr. OTTINGER].

Mr. OTTINGER. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I take this time merely to advise my colleagues that when we reach section 113, $18½ million was added in the conference to the USIA salaries and expenses appropriation, for the National Endowment for Democracy. The House overwhelmingly voted against those funds just 3 months ago.

□ 1130

The procedure to eliminate these funds requires us to vote down the amendment that has been agreed to by the conference for the entire salary account for USIA, $545.8 million, which includes these funds, and then I will offer a preferential motion to recede and concur with the Senate in which I will restore all of the funds for the USIA salaries and expenses except the funds that were earmarked for the National Endowment for Democracy.

While improvements have been made as a result of my effort in the National Endowment for Democracy by the Board and, I think, at the instance of members of the committee, we are still in effect giving an unaccountable amount of funds to the chamber of commerce and the AFL-CIO, the two political parties having been knocked out in the conference, and I do not think that that is a wise thing for us to be doing. It think it has the kind of dangers that in fact did occur with respect to the AFL-CIO funds that were expended to influence an election in Panama. While a provision has been adopted by the Board prohibiting funds to go to political candidates, that by no means eliminates their ability to fund groups within the country that will have the same effect as giving money to the candidates themselves.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OTTINGER. I am glad to yield to my friend and colleague, the gentleman from New York.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, do I understand that it is the gentleman's intention, when this section comes up for review, that the gentleman will be seeking then to eliminate the funding for the National Endowment?

Mr. OTTINGER. That will be the effect of my two actions. It has to be done in two steps. I will first seek to defeat the language that was adopted by the conference and then move to recede and concur with the Senate amendment which has all the funds for the USIA operations but does not have the funds for the National Endowment for Democracy.

Mr. GILMAN. So then, Mr. Speaker, am I correct in stating that the gentleman is generally opposed to the National Endowment for Democracy and does not want to fund it in this bill?

Mr. OTTINGER. The gentleman is correct. As it is presently constituted, as I have told the good chairman of the gentleman's committee, this kind of a program could be set up with proper constraints and with organizations that had real bona fides in the area of foreign affairs. My concern is that both the Chamber and the AFL-CIO, with this kind of a program and without proper accountability, are just bound to continue to get the United States in trouble, and I do not think that is the way we ought to be doing things.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will further yield, I hope that my colleagues will pay special attention to this section of the bill. It is a major initiative on behalf of the administration, on behalf of the Congress, and on behalf of democracy. I would hope that my colleagues would be supportive at the time that this portion of the bill comes before us on the floor.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. OTTINGER. Mr. Speaker, I will say that I have enormous respect for my colleague, the gentleman from New York, and I have deep abiding respect as well for the gentleman from Florida who originally put this language in. We have a disagreement with respect to substance, and I recognize the differing points of view that might be considered valid. But with all the constraints that have been adopted by the Board—and I saw the letter that went out from the gentleman from Florida that describes them in detail—we still had the kind of embarrassing interfences by the AFL-CIO in the internal political process of Panama such that our Ambassador telegraphed that the activities had to be stopped—and we are likely to have that happen time and time again.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MILLER].

Mr. MILLER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

My colleagues will recall that when this appropriation bill was originally before the House on May 31, I offered a 4-percent, across-the-board cut on discretionary spending which was approved by a recorded vote of 208 to 194. I would assume that many of those who voted for that particular cut will wonder about the outcome of that provision in conference.

I want to commend the chairman of the committee and the ranking minority member for holding to the House position the best they could. The reduction that the 4 percent would have achieved would have been $439 million. We are now $369 million below the House bill as it was reported from committee. I would like to have seen the full 4-percent saving, but I think, now that we have more than a 3-percent plus reduction, a $369 million reduction, from the original committee bill, that it is a good achievement, and it is my understanding that the administration is satisfied with the bill's total in this conference report.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is a good conference report, and I intend to vote for it, and I want those who voted for the 4-percent reduction to know that we did not go all the way, but at least we have more than a 3-percent reduction, a $369 million reduction.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER].

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me, and I certainly want to commend my subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH], and my ranking minority member and colleague, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. O'BRIEN], for the fine job that they and the members on both sides of the aisle and both sides of the Rotunda have done in bringing the conference report to the floor.

In the original House version of the bill, there was a provision, adopted by the full Appropriations Committee, dealing with the Minneapolis and New Orleans taxicab problems and the attempt by the FTC to deregulate the taxicab industries in those cities. In the Senate, there was even broader language that was placed in the original bill by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. RUDMAN], which dealt more broadly with the antitrust liabilities of local governments and municipalities, and which attempted to offset the decision in the Boulder case handed down by the Supreme Court 2 years ago.

All these attempts were outgrowths of the failure, I believe, of the House of Representatives to come forward with strong legislation to deal with the financial implications for local governments of the Boulder case. Finally, however, late last month, the House did initiate consideration of what is now H.R. 6027, the Local Governments Antitrust Act of 1984, which we will be voting on later this afternoon under suspension of the rules. In effect H.R. 6027 overrules the Boulder case by providing that municipalities cannot be sued privately for treble damages, but leaves injunctive power in the hands of the Federal courts to deal with cases where municipal government does engage in anticompetitive activities.

In the conference report there remains a provision, the Rudman language having been dropped out, that no FTC actions can be taken against cities without specific authorization. That is a compromise.

But most importantly, what I would like to bring to the attention of the Members of the House is the fact that it is essential that we pass H.R. 6027 this afternoon. It not only clarifies congressional intent and the Boulder decision, but it also by implication addresses the concerns that some of us have with cases that have already been decided since Boulder.

In my home district, Lake County, IL, and the village of Grayslake have had entered against them a judgment for $28.5 million for treble damages, 1½ times the entire annual budget for the county. That decision places upon the average citizen of my county a tremendous tax burden that simply cannot be met.

The legislation we will consider and vote on this afternoon under suspension will, by implication, nullify that treble-damage judgment. The legislation will ensure that evenhanded justice will prevail. If we are going to do away with treble damages in the future, we also have to do away with treble damages in cases which have gone to judgment since the Boulder decision. This would make consistent the treatment of all municipal and local governments for the entire time before and after Boulder. Only by passing H.R. 6027 can this be ensured.

So, Mr. Speaker, I commend the members of the conference committee on which I was privileged to serve for resolution of the Minneapolis and New Orleans matters. And in closing, let me stress to the Members that support for H.R. 6027 this afternoon is essential to protect local governments from unfair and unaffordable treble damage liability and to resolve equitably those judgments entered and cases presently pending since Boulder was decoded 2 years ago.

□ 1140

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LEVITAS].

Mr. LEVITAS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman of the subcommittee for yielding to me.

I take this time in order to advise my colleagues that at the proper time, when we get to amendment No. 39 that is in disagreement, the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee will offer a motion to recede and concur with the Senate language. At that time on behalf of myself and Congressman BROYHILL, I will oppose that motion and ask the Members to vote against that motion. If we defeat that motion, I will then offer an amendment to recede and concur with the Senate with an amendment.

Now, what we are talking about is the Federal Trade Commission, and here we go again. It is now over 2 years since there has been an authorization for the FTC. If we do not follow the procedure that I just outlined, then we will have allowed the Agency to continue to operate without an authorization, or appropriated without authorization of this important Agency, for another third year. We should have the opportunity to discuss the activities of the FTC, and to discuss appropriate oversight and review of Agency rules.

The only way in which we can achieve the result of getting an authorization bill to the floor is to follow this procedure.

The amendment and the procedure which we offer will not cut off funds for the FTC. It will not stop the ongoing rulemaking procedures of the FTC. It will permit the FTC to go forward in everything they do, except the final promulgation of new rules, until such time as they get an authorization through the appropriate process.

I urge my colleagues to support the effort that we are making, to vote no on the motion to recede and concur. Then I urge you to support our efforts to concur with an amendment in order that we may get an authorization at some point on this important Agency and to do so without hamstringing its ability to go forward at the present time.

I thank the chairman for yielding and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS].

Mr. MYERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague from Illinois for yielding the time and rise in support of this conference report, but I also have some questions arising from the program of economic development assistance and this has to do with a community in my district which up until 1980 was recognized as a central city. The community of West Lafayette where Purdue University is located was together with Lafayette, right across the river in the same county, but because of changes in the rules in 1980, the two cities had to file independently after 1980, but also according to new rules promulgated in 1980 a city that has a population working outside the legal limits of the city of more than 40 percent, I believe the rule is, does not qualify for economic assistance.

Now, in this situation, West Lafayette, IN, is a city of about 22,000 people, but intertwined throughout the city outside of the corporate limits, but just across the street in most cases, is Purdue University and Purdue must be outside the city because of Indiana statute, but 60 percent of the population of West Lafayette, the working population, work for Purdue.

The new rules provides that those commuting outside the city are considered commuters. Now, most of them walk or ride a bicycle across the street to go to Purdue.

Yesterday I had a meeting with OMB and other representatives in this situation and they asked that we change the rules in Indiana, that the city consider incorporating Purdue University into the city, which is illegal in the State of Indiana. I suggested in this case that HUD, or whoever made the changes, OMB I think promulgated the changes, had really gone beyond what the intent of Congress was.

Now, my question is on page 10 of the report, it is cited that the conferees are aware of the Department of Commerce Grants Management Procedure Manual which would drastically change EDA's project selection procedure in its evalution, and it goes on.

My question, Mr. Speaker, is there any consideration about cities like West Lafayette, IN, because of a rule change are not not eligible for EDA grants. I asked what was the intent of the rule and they could not come up with it, it seems that up until the 1980's there was no question about this situation, but because OMB or someone changed the rules, now this city is ineligible for these EDA grants.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MYERS. I yield, certainly.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Here is the difficulty we are in. We are dealing with a program that has not been reauthorized for 2 years and it is extremely difficult to in effect extend the authorization and then also appropriate. Generally speaking, what we would like for EDA to do in those difficult circumstances is change as little as possible. I mean, it is not our intent to completely rewrite the law. If we were, we would have put several pages of new provisions in here. So our intent, to the maximum extent possible, is for them to continue as they were under the last year of their authorization.

Now, I do not know exactly where this leaves this, but one of the troubling things in EDA has always been entitlements. Who is included and who is excluded for eligibility and also the fact that they do not have very good figures on figuring criteria, such as unemployment, anyway.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Indiana has expired.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 additional minutes to the gentleman.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, does that answer the question?

Mr. MYERS. Well, yes. I think the situation here is where we have an agency in the Federal Government, OMB, that in the absence of changes of law by Congress has taken upon itself to change the rules in 1980.

The city of West Lafayette is not affected until next year I think under a hold harmless agreement or something, but there is going to be a problem next year, and what I am saying, West Lafayette and Purdue has not changed.

The intent to the rulemaking has not been explained to me and I asked them to come back and explain the rule, what the reason for it, there must be a reason why they changed the rule.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Well, I think the gentleman is entitled to that, I certainly do.

I also think that we ought to get the EDA authorization up and pass it on both sides of the Congress so that it is set and they know exactly how they are supposed to deal with these kinds of questions.

In the meantime, I would rather that they would not change any more rules than is absolutely necessary to effectively operate the agency.

Mr. MYERS. I appreciate the gentleman's response.

I understand there are about 17 other communities in the country that for various reasons come under this same change of rules in the middle of the game. If EDA or whoever it is responsible for these changes, OMB in this case I think, does not make the changes next year, I will be asking this subcommittee to accommodate these situations, because I do not think it is the intent of Congress to make these kinds of changes.

I appreciate the chairman's response.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield for the purpose of inquiry to the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. MORRISON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, first I would like to commend the gentleman for his continued hard work and his success in helping the Legal Services Corporation, and most importantly, its grantees maintain the funding level necessary to try to support the services that I think we all believe are important to the low-income citizens of our country who need access to our justice system.

I would just like to ask the gentleman a few questions about the provisions that are included in the portion of the conference report regarding the Legal Services Corporation.

As I understand it, primarily the language carries forward from last year's appropriation bill the provisions that were in that bill and the restrictions which we discussed here on the floor a year ago are continued, merely updated for the coming fiscal year; is that correct?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Basically that is correct. There were a couple provisions added in the Senate, which were also included.

Mr. MORRISON of Connecticut. Right. I understand in the Senate they made explicit some things that were in the conference report here in the House about the need for the Legal Services Corporation to conform with reprogramming procedures, rather than to be making those changes without coming back to the Congress. is that essentially the case?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. That is correct.

Mr. MORRISON of Connecticut. There is a particular new provision that is in the conference report that was not in the House bill relating to $2 million to be made available to improve the quality of services to elderly Americans. I think that is a valuable new initiative and I wanted to ask just two questions about it.

Now, it is my understanding that it is the intention that these grants go primarily to law schools, but I would like to ask if in addition to law schools or in coordination with law schools that organizations with specific experience in materials and training for people to serve the elderly, such as the National Senior Citizen Law Center and existing regional and statewide training centers can be considered as long as the focus on law schools is not undermined.

□ 1150

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. I would say to the gentleman this: As you agree, apparently, there is a dire lack of appropriate materials for law schools to use, for continuing education courses to use, and for use in clinical programs of law, particularly as it applies to the elderly. The needs seem to have mushroomed faster than they have been met.

So when the members of the subcommittee, and if any of them dispute this they can stand and say so, but when we discussed this with the other body I do not recall that we really mentioned anything other than law schools. We were thinking specifically about law schools.

However, our overriding objective, of course, was to accomplish what is set forth in the bill. We wanted to develop classroom and bar association source materials. We wanted to encourage the private bar to do more in the way of pro bono for the elderly and to have the materials with which to do it. And we wanted to develop clinical programs.

That is the overriding objective and if it clearly would help to meet that objective for someone that is cooperating with a law school to do so, I do not see why that would not be permissible.

However, I do not think we ought to hold up granting applications in order to solicit all over the country and find out how many groups there may be that might want to participate. The primary thing is to get this done and if in doing so some law school is going to cooperate with an agency that obviously has some expertise, I do not think that would exclude that law school application from being approved.

Mr. MORRISON of Connecticut. I thank the gentleman.

Just to reiterate, it seems to me that organizations with a proven track record, and this is not a process of looking for potential applicants, but going to those people who can produce what is needed here promptly and using those agencies, and if some of them are not law schools I hope that a cooperative arrangement can be implemented.

I just have one other question, a very narrow one. The language is just a little bit ambiguous about who it is that might or might not be charged for the use of these materials or to get the materials. As I understand it, law schools or legal services programs or other nonprofit entities would get these materials for free. That is the intention?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. That is correct. We do not want them charging agencies and we do not anticipate we are talking about a large number here. We do not want them to be charging Government agencies and the Congress and so forth. But we do anticipate that probably there will be some continuing education classes that they will need to charge, and then we say it should only more or less cover their costs; it should not be a profitmaking venture.

Mr. MORRISON of Connecticut. I thank the gentleman and I yield back.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL].

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to the conference report on the Commerce, Justice, State, and the judiciary appropriations.

Last May, the Appropriations Committee brought us a bill that was, by any standard, grossly excessive. It envisaged a 13.2-percent increase over last year's spending. Discretionary spending, according to the committee, was supposed to increase a mere 13.4 percent. All that compares to our House-passed budget limit of 3.5 percent in increases for discretionary spending.

That bill was so horrid that even the profligate House gagged on it. Besides a number of points of order against the bill, and $33 million in other reductions, the House accepted a 4-percent across-the-board reduction in the bill. Not counting the reductions made through points of order, the actions of the House reduced the bill to about $11.3 billion—a mere 8.1 percent increase.

But what is especially appalling is that we went to conference with a $11.3 billion bill, countered by the Senate's $11.4 billion. What we now have before us is a $11.5 billion bill, higher than that proposed by either body.

This is what is in this overstuffed conference report: Total spending will increase about 9.7 percent last year's level. Discretionary spending, which was supposed to increase by no more than 3.5 percent under our budget, increases at a 9.8-percent rate. Salaries and expenses account for 58 percent of the cost of this bill. Salaries and expenses increase by 12 percent in this bill. The committee will tell us, of course, that because of the supplemental salaries are actually higher, resulting in a lower percentage rate increase. That, of course, means nothing, since we haven't supplemented fiscal year 1985 wages in this bill, either. The bad news is that when we supplement wages some time next year, this bill will increase again by the same order of magnitude as in the supplemental.

Mr. Chairman, this is our bill most devoted to the costs of the bureaucracy. Those who believe that the bureaucracy desperately needs a 9.8-percent increase in its discretionary spending, and those who believe that our agencies cannot function on less than a 12-percent increase in their salary and expense funds, will be delighted to vote for this bill.

Those who feel as I do, that there just might be one or two positions that could be eliminated, that there may be one or two studies that could be foregone, or that our agencies just might be able to function a little better if they were a little leaner, will certainly vote against this conference report.

Mr. Speaker, a number of our Members voted for the House budget resolution. Some have since declared themselves heroes of the Republic and proclaimed that they voted to save $184 billion.

If those Members now vote for this bill they will have reneged on their promise and they will have to give back their hero badges. Their constituents will ask, and so will their opponents, why they are voting to raise deficits and to violate the House's own budget.

Those who can explain a "yes" vote on this bill I suppose will be eligible for the refrigerator sales force, Alaska division.

This conference report is an assault on the taxpayers' pockets and an insult to their sensibilities. Its excesses are appalling. The bill should certainly be defeated.

I expect that it will not be. But it certainly tells a very sad story to the people of the United States about our willingness to actually make some tough choices. The tough choices we made here were to spend more in every category we could find.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I would point out that the bureaucracy that has been referred to includes the Justice Department. They have a 9-percent increase, approximately $320 million over last year.

This is for such things as law enforcement programs including the FBI, the Drug Enforcement Administration and the Federal prison systems. These are the kinds of things that the bureaucracy have asked for additions that account for, in that case, a 9-percent increase.

So when we talk about this in terms of an increase, although it is not for food, it does not mean it is not for something important. If people are afraid of crime out there and want a reduction in this area, I have not heard about it. That is probably one of the reasons why the administration does not object to the final figure on this bill.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I take this opportunity to yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, one of the troublesome matters that will come before us this afternoon is loosely referred to as CDS. That is no new disease or remedy therefor. It means "Construction Differential Subsidy."

Let me just tell you basically what that problem is about. Back in the early 1970's in an effort to revitalize our fleet, aware of the growing Russian competition, the House and the other body passed legislation to encourage the construction and operation of new bulk fuel vessels. These ships had to be constructed in the United States, fly the American flag, and be manned by U.S. crews. They also had to be owned and operated by U.S. companies that do not own foreign flag vessels.

In addition, they would not be eligible to operate in the coastwise or Jones Act trade, which is specifically limited to unsubsidized U.S. merchant vessels.

Thinking that we had done things correctly for a change, we suddenly found we had a problem. The problem arose because the rules under which our builders must build ships required them to utilize American-made components, a sort of a maritime domestic content law. At the time, however, foreign yards were technologically way ahead of us and we were limited to obsolete equipment such as nondiesel fueled engines.

We discovered that by operating these ships with less fuel efficient power supplies, we became again uncompetitive and, indeed, when the price of oil skyrocketed it, our ships were totally unable to compete.

□ 1200

What then developed was an idea, conceived in the Department of Transportation, that these CDS-built tankers would repay with interest the subsidies they had received and, thus, would become qualified to engage in domestic coast-wise trade.

A multitude of comments, pro and con, were filed with respect to this rule, and it seems we are now down to the question of whether or not that Department of Transportation regulation should be put into effect.

The rule would effectively recall the subsidy that would result in a return to the U.S. Treasury of something in the vicinity of $1 billion in the first year; a cut in transportation costs by 30 percent, and an increase in the windfall profits tax, returning $350 million to the Treasury a year, in addition to stimulating competition.

There apparently is no House position because the authorizing committee was unable to arrive at a compromise that was suitable to be brought to the floor. That, however, does not avoid the problem that we face more frequently than we should, namely legislation on an appropriation.

So let me just suggest one thing: It appears to this particular Member that while Illinois does not have a visible stake in this dispute, it seems that the wiser course would be to allow the Department of Transportation's position to be sustained and to decline to eliminate it here in this particular bill.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'BRIEN. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Just to clarify where we are—and I congratulate the gentleman for bringing this issue before this body—the motion will be made by the chairman, Mr. SMITH.

Mr. O'BRIEN. To recede and concur with the Senate language with amendment thereto. Technically there is no House position on this.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. What I want to make sure is a vote on that would be no to the Smith motion.

Mr. O'BRIEN. That is correct. If you favor the Department of Transportation's position, your vote on the Smith motion would be no.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. O'BRIEN. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. I would congratulate the gentleman.

When the amendment comes forth we will be speaking about the merits of the position of the gentleman [Mr. O'BRIEN] and the position of the Senate and hopefully the wisdom of this body will take care of the consumers and again allow American-built ships that have the capability to transport this oil as it should be at the cheapest rate.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'BRIEN. I would be happy to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I will address the motion to insist upon the House position on the matter in more detail when the motion is before the House.

But I think in fairness to the issue, that the House needs to be advised that first of all I disagree with the representations that have been made on the value of the gentleman's position, both economically to the taxpayers and to the Nation.

But there is another matter that is very serious that needs to be laid on the table and that is the defense factor in this equation. And I cite to the gentleman from a letter, a copy of which I have here, from Paul Thayer, the Assistant Secretary of Defense, to the Secretary of Transportation, the Honorable Elizabeth Hanford Dole, dated March 28, 1983, and I will excerpt from that letter, if I may, and I will insert the entire letter as a part of the RECORD.

In quoting from the Secretary's letter: "The effect of this rule change would be threefold." This is the rule that the gentleman's position, the effect of the gentleman's position in the eyes of the Secretary of Defense would be threefold.

(1) smaller, militarily useful tankers would be squeezed out of the domestic trade market by large tankers supported by the proposed rules; (2) our depressed shipbuilding industry, which has looked forward to the business created by the Port and Tanker Safety Act of 1978, would be deprived of the anticipated work it so badly needs; and (3) a windfall profit would be provided to a few major companies with CDS built tankers under charter.

The Navy's specific concern is the deterimental effect of accelerated small tanker retirements on our ability to resupply overseas forces in the event of war.

I will ask unanimous consent to include the text of this letter as a part of my remarks.

The letter is as follows:

Hon. ELIZABETH HANFORD DOLE,
The Secretary of Transportation,
Washington, DC.

DEAR ELIZABETH: The purpose of this letter is to request that the Department of Transportation not enact the Constitution Differential Subsidy (CDS) Replacement proposal contained in your Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM), Federal Register (Volume 48, No. 21, p. 44D8, of 31 January 1983).

Currently, CDS built tankers, as authorized by MARAD can participate in Jones Act Trade only to a maximum of six months annually. It is my understanding the proposed rule would lift all restrictions on Jones Act trading by CDS tankers whose subsidies had been reimbursed. The effect of this rule change would be threefold: (1) smaller, militarily useful tankers would be squeezed out of the domestic trade market by large tankers supported by the proposed rules; (2) our depressed shipbuilding industry, which has looked forward to the business created by the Port and Tanker Safety Act of 1978, would be deprived of the anticipated work it so badly needs; and (3) a windfall profit would be provided to a few major companies with CDS built tankers under charter.

The Navy's specific concern is the detrimental effect of accelerated small tanker retirements on our ability to resupply overseas forces in the event of war. Nearly half of our wartime shipping requirements, in terms of tonnage to be shipped, must be carried in tankers between 6 and 80 thousand DWT, with coated tanks to permit carriage of refined product. Larger tankers, the type supported by the proposed rules, are of limited value for military deployment and support purposes. As a result of the changes in petroleum product distribution systems, including shorter routes, greater use of pipelines, and other inland surface modes, the commercial requirement for smaller domestic oceangoing tankers has been steadily reduced. Application of the technical provisions of the Port and Tanker Safety Act will further accelerate the retirements of these tankers.

I fear that the proposed ruling to allow large tankers a greater share of domestic trade will greatly exacerbate an already dangerous trend toward small tanker extinction. I have asked the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Shipbuilding and Logistics to provide a more detailed explanation of our concerns.

Your assistance in this matter is greatly appreciated.

Sincerely,

PAUL THAYER.

Mr. ALEXANDER. But making additional reference to a letter dated November 9, 1983, by Robert C. McFarlane, the National Security Adviser, I would like to excerpt from that letter as well to address the national security concerns.

Mr. McFarlane says, and I quote from his letter and I will ask unanimous consent to include the text of the entire letter as a part of my remarks:

There is no doubt that America has entered into a period of potentially dangerous shortages in terms of the available US flag fleet of militarily useful commercial vessels.

The specific issue you raise regarding CDS payback strikes at the center of the need for us to maintain our current fleet of militarily useful tankers (i.e., approximately 80,000 tons and below). As you stated in your letter, the Deputy Secretary of Defense and the Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Shipbuilding and Logistics have put forth strong arguments to the Department of Transportation opposing CDS payback on the grounds that such action would harm our defense capabilities.

The letter follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, DC, November 9, 1983.

Hon. SAM NUNN,
U.S. Senate.

DEAR SENATOR NUNN: Thank you for your letter concerning Construction Differential Subsidy (CDS) repayment, and its impact on our fleet of US flag militarily useful tankers. Please excuse the delay in responding to your letter, but my staff has been working on the issues you have raised.

There is no doubt that America has entered into a period of potentially dangerous shortages in terms of the available US flag fleet of militarily useful commercial vessels. Our nation has always counted on adequate commercial vessel availability to serve as the "fourth arm of defense" if conflict should come and hence the requirement to ship massive amounts of war material across the oceans. Given the Navy's broad missions of sea control, power projection involving the Marines and strategic deterrence, we cannot and should not try to create a Navy controlled transport fleet to solve this additional problem. Of course, the decline in our merchant fleet is aggravated by the steady decline in our shipbuilding base. Unlike WWII, we cannot expect in any future conflict to be able to build more vessels than those lost.

The answer to this serious defense problem, I believe, must have three components. They are: maintenance of a superior Navy in order that our merchant fleet not be attrited by a foe in war; the NATO wide merchant fleet-sharing agreement which gives us access to NATO country vessels in the event of conflict; the maintenance of our current merchant fleet at its existing level in order that we may be prepared for a possible unilateral contingency.

The specific issue you raise regarding CDS payback strikes at the center of the need for us to maintain our current fleet of militarily useful tankers (i.e., approximately 80,000 tons and below). As you stated in your letter, the Deputy Secretary of Defense and the Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Shipbuilding and Logistics have put forth strong arguments to the Department of Transportation opposing CDS payback on the grounds that such action would harm our defense capabilities.

We too have these concerns and will continue to search out all ways that we can support the preservation of the US flag fleet in this and other cases.

Sincerely,

ROBERT C. MCFARLANE.

Has the gentleman considered these objections of our Department of Defense and of our national security adviser in his recommendation that his amendment be accepted by this body rather than the House position which was adopted on May 31?

Mr. O'BRIEN. Yes. This gentleman has taken that into consideration, and I would point out the descriptive language used is rather compelling here. With respect to the gentleman to whom the distinguished Member refers, let me point out that he used these words, "militarily useful tankers."

Let me point out that of all those particular vessels, 92 are more than 25 years old; 57 are over 30 years of age, and 10 are over 40 years of age. These particular vessels compare with the average age in the Soviet fleet of 7 years. I will venture there is some serious disagreement in the Defense Department with respect to the use of those vessels.

Mr. ALEXANDER. The gentleman, as I recall, is a veteran of World War II and I am sure that he recalls that during World War II the United States had to use merchant marine vessels that were over 40 years old in order to transport our personnel and our cargo across to the European theater during that difficult time of crisis in national need.

Does the gentleman recall that fact?

Mr. O'BRIEN. I recall the multitude of Liberty ships which were generated at that time to take care of the problem that the gentleman raises. I still suggest to the gentleman that the problem here is militarily useful ships and these are very questionably militarily useful.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Well, in the judgment of the national security adviser and the Assistant Secretary of Defense, and the Secretary of the Navy, they say in their own separate opinions that it is in our best interest not to support the gentleman's position.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I thank the gentleman.

I think we have debated the point clearly enough, and we have not convinced one another.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. O'BRIEN] has 4 minutes remaining.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I have no further speakers, but Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman reserves the balance of his time.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. I ask unanimous consent to insert at this point in the RECORD a summary of tables showing by department and agency the conference action compared with the amount provided for fiscal year 1984, the budget estimates for 1985, the House bill and the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CARR].

Mr. CARR. Mr. Speaker, I rise to associate myself with the remarks of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ALEXANDER].

Furthermore this issue is before the Appropriations Committee only because the relevant authorization committee wishes to work its will. That committee has held hearings and I'm informed that it is working diligently to report a bill. This is a complex issue. I'm told that it is politically delicate and that compromise is difficult. But progress in the authorization committee is being made. The lauguage on CDS payback in this bill is here at the request of the authorization committee. It is included here to prevent the DOT from prejudicing the situation before the authorizing subcommittees can act.

● Mr. FEIGHAN. Mr. Speaker, I am disappointed that this conference report does not include provisions from the Senate bill which expressed the sense of Congress that Bulgaria should be declared a state sponsor of terrorism and prohibited the expenditure of U.S. Government funds to promote trade with Bulgaria.

The Task Force on International Narcotics Control has held a series of hearings to examine the Bulgarian Government's promotion of narcotics smuggling, gunrunning, and international terrorism. And a number of witnesses testified that Kintex, the official state trading agency of Bulgaria, has been a front for narcotics trafficking, and that at least 10 percent of the heroin reaching our shores comes from Bulgaria. The profits from these drug operations are then used to arm terrorists around the world. According to the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration:

> The Government of Bulgaria has established a policy of encouraging and facilitating narcotics trafficking through the corporate veil of Kintex . . . and Kintex assists the flow of guns and ammunition to left-wing insurgency groups in Turkey and Lebanon.

The killers supported by this drugs, guns, and terrorism network include the PLO, Italy's Red Brigades, and Turkey's neo-fascist Grey Wolves.

Mr. Speaker, these criminal activities clearly come under the heading of state supported terrorism, and they constitute a direct threat to the people of the United States. It is high time that we tell the Bulgarians—in no uncertain terms—that we will not tolerate their support for international narcotics trafficking and international terrorism. The Senate language took an important first step in that direction. Although the public pressure that it would generate would not close the drugs-for-guns operations overnight, it would focus the eyes of the world community on the Bulgarians, it would force them to publicly answer the charges, and it would increase the price they pay for colluding with terrorists.

I regret that the Senate provisions were not included in this report.●

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the conference report.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 277, nays 135, not voting 20, as follows:

The Clerk announced the following pair:

On this vote:

Mr. Thomas of California for, with Mr. Paul against.

Mr. ROEMER changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

So the conference report was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMISSION FOR SUBCOMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENT ACTIVITIES AND TRANSPORTATION OF COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENT OPERATIONS TO SIT ON TOMORROW DURING 5-MINUTE RULE

Mrs. COLLINS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Government Activities and Transportation of the Committee on Government Operations be allowed to sit on August 9, 1984, while the House is proceeding under the 5-minute rule.

The subcommittee will be meeting to approve a report and to receive testimony.

This request has been cleared with the ranking minority member, the gentleman from New York [Mr. MCGRATH].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

AMENDMENTS IN DISAGREEMENT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the first amendment in disagreement.

The amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 5: Page 3, after line 4, insert:

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

For economic development assistance as provided by the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965, as amended, and Public Law 91-304, and such laws that were in effect immediately before September 30, 1982, $198,500,000: Provided, That during fiscal year 1985 total commitments to guarantee loans shall not exceed $150,000,000 of contingent liability for loan principal.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. SMITH OF IOWA

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. SMITH of Iowa moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 5 and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by said amendment, insert the following:

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

For economic development assistance as provided by the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1985, as amended, and Public Law 91-304, and such laws that were in effect immediately before September 30, 1982, $200,000,000: Provided, That during fiscal year 1985 total commitments to guarantee loans shall not exceed $150,000,000 of contingent liability for loan principal.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to consider en bloc the following amendments which are reported in technical disagreement and on which the managers on the part of the House propose to recede and concur with Senate amendments:

Senate amendments numbered 11, 13, 14, 17, 18, 20, 27, 30, 31, 65, 68, 72, 74, 82, 83, 105, 109, and 143.

Mr. Speaker, the amendment concerning funding and certain restrictions on the FTC, numbered 39, is not included in this unanimous consent request.

Also, the following amendments are not included: No. 36, the CDS payback; No. 113, on USIA National Endowment for Democracy; and No. 119, on the USIA.

I believe those are the only ones about which Members expressed a desire to have special debate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments to be considered en bloc are as follows:

Senate amendment No. 11: Page 4, line 20, after "management" insert ": Provided further, That the Minority Business Development Agency shall maintain a permanent position and full-time office in the city of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania".

Senate amendment No. 82: Page 18, line 23, after "expended." insert "In addition, $5,000,000 for the purpose of making grants to States for their expenses by reason of Mariel-Cubans having to be incarcerated in State facilities for terms requiring incarceration for the full period October 1, 1984 through September 30, 1985 following their conviction of a felony committed after having been paroled into the United States by the Attorney General: Provided, That within thirty days of enactment of this Act the Attorney General shall announce in the Federal Register that this appropriation will be made available to the States whose Governors certify by February 1, 1985 a listing of names of such Mariel-Cubans incarcerated in their respective facilities: Provided further, That the Attorney General, not later than April 1, 1985, will complete his review of the certified listings of such incarcerated Mariel-Cubans, and make grants to the States on the basis that the certified number of such incarcerated persons in a State bears to the total certified number of such incarcerated persons: Provided further, That the amount of reimbursements per prisoner per annum shall not exceed $12,000.".

Senate amendment No. 83: Page 25, after line 20, insert:

SEC. 204. (a)(1) Section 1201 of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) The authority to make payments under this section shall be effective only to the extent provided for in advance by appropriation Acts.".

(2) Section 1202 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 3796a.) is amended—

(A) by striking out "or" at the end of clause (2);

(B) by striking out the period at the end of clause (3) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(4) to any person employed in a capacity other than a civilian capacity.".

(3) Section 1203 of such Act is amended—

(A) by striking out clause (3) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(3) 'firefighter'—

"(A) means a person whose duties include performing work directly connected with the control and extinguishment of fires and who, at the time the personal injury referred to in section 1201 is sustained, is engaged in such work or in another emergency operation; and

"(B) includes a person serving as an officially recognized or designated member of a legally organized volunteer fire department;";

(B) by striking out clause (5) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(5) 'law enforcement officer' means a person—

"(A) the duties of whose position include performing work directly connected with—

"(i) the control of crime or juvenile delinquency;

"(ii) the enforcement of the criminal laws; or

"(iii) the protection of Federal officials, public buildings or property, or foreign diplomatic missions; and

Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Maritime Administration is authorized to furnish utilities and services and make necessary repairs in connection with any lease, contract, or occupancy involving Government property under control of the Maritime Administration and payments received by the Maritime Administration for utilities, services, and repairs so furnished or made shall be credited to the appropriation charged with the cost thereof: Provided, That rental payments under any such lease, contract, or occupancy on account of items other than such utilities, services, or repairs shall be covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

No obligations shall be incurred during the current fiscal year from the construction fund established by the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, or otherwise, in excess of the appropriations and limitations contained in this Act, or in any prior appropriation Act and all receipts which otherwise would be deposited to the credit of said fund shall be covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

None of the funds provided in this Act for the Maritime Administration shall be used for enforcement of any rule with respect to the repayment of construction differential subsidy for permanent release of vessels from the restrictions in section 506 of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended, until May 15, 1985.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH] will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. O'BRIEN] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this matter involves construction-differential subsidies, some shipping on the west coast, especially on the Alaska trade. It involves whether or not the owners of those ships can pay back those subsidies and then use them from port to port, U.S. ports.

Now, we had the same provision as this in last year's act except that it said June 15. When the House passed the 1985 bill, it was a straight limitation. It was this same amendment except that we did not say "until May 15."

□ 1240

Now, the dispute is still raging. They hope, however, that it will be solved sometime before too long, but this amendment will allow the promulgation of the rule that is proposed in the Department of Transportation but it will not permit its enforcement after May 15. We are hopeful that this will permit them going ahead, considering the rule, but if they do promulgate the rule that it will not be enforced after May 15.

We think that this will solve the problem fairly well for the next few months.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, it is this gentleman's understanding that a compromise has been worked out between the various parties involved in this problem. I am aware of that, but some of the people on this side of the aisle who evidence great concern about it are not satisfied that they know about it and I hesitate to agree without some further consultation.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, as one of the parties who has just become privy to this proposed compromise, I would like to state that it seems to be a reasonable and workable solution to the dilemma with which the parties are faced.

I observe that another one of the concerned parties, the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. YOUNG] is also present in the Chamber, with whom I have recently discussed the issue. It is satisfactory with me if it is satisfactory with the other parties concerned.

Mr. BATEMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Iowa yield for a question?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia for purposes of debate only.

Mr. BATEMAN. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, my question is this: Under the compromise which has been read, let us assume that the Congress takes no final action of any kind on this proposition between now and May 1 or 15 of next year. Would the Department of Transportation, the Maritime Administration, in the absence of such action, be permitted to go forward with rules that would permit the payback?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. They could go forward with deciding what kind of a rule they want, but they would not be able to enforce it until further action, with money that is in this particular bill.

Mr. BATEMAN. If the gentleman will continue to yield, a potential problem with the compromise is that in the event Congress does nothing and we come up to May 15, 1985, can the Department of Transportation, the time limit having expired, then go forward and do whatever it wants to do.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. They cannot enforce the rule until May 15.

Mr. BATEMAN. If the gentleman will yield further, if I understand it, then, some positive action would have to be taken by the Congress before they could implement the rule, even after May 1985.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Before they could enforce the rule; that is correct.

Mr. BATEMAN. I thank the gentleman for his response.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman from New York for purposes of debate only.

Mr. LENT. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I am somewhat perplexed by exactly what the ramifications of the gentleman's motion would be. Let me put it to the gentleman this way: If there is a party or a shipping company that wants to pay back its Federal CDS loan, and has the cash, and the interest to pay that loan back into too, will it be permitted to make that payment back to the Federal Treasury after May 15, 1985?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Let me go through it a step at a time.

Existing law is not changed. The Department has proposed a rule and they have been denied the opportunity to go forward and decide for sure exactly what rule they want. They could go ahead and finalize their rule, and they can do that with money that is in the bill, but they cannot enforce the law.

If they have a rule that permits a change in the law, it is not enforceable until later.

Mr. LENT. If the gentleman will yield further, can the gentleman explain to me how this compromise differs from what we had anticipated the gentleman was going to offer earlier, the motion to recede.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Earlier I was going to have no limitation of date. The only difference is, the date of May 15 was added.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, as I understand the compromise, none of the funds shall be used for enforcement of any rule until after May 15, so a rule cannot be implemented in the timeframe going up to May 15, 1985.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. They can finalize the rule, but they cannot enforce it. They can go ahead and finalize the rule.

Mr. O'BRIEN. It is not the chairman's understanding that, absent affirmative action by the Congress dealing with this provision, after May 15 the Secretary of Transportation could go ahead with the rule. Is that the gentleman's understanding?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. They could finalize the language of the rule, but if they want to change the law they could not enforce the rule. The Department has not taken any final action. They have not said for sure what they want to do. There is a proposed rule.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Just one more time, in order to clarify, if the gentleman will yield further.

As I read it, it says none of the funds provided shall be used for enforcement of any rule until May 15, 1985. It seems to me that the inference is, at least, that a rule promulgated after that date could be enforced.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Is the gentleman reading the last paragraph?

Mr. O'BRIEN. What is the chairman's understanding.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. They can go ahead and promulgate this rule and make their decision as to what they are going to recommend in the way of a rule. The gentleman from Alaska is well acquainted with this. I think, and I might ask if he agrees with that.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. The gentleman is absolutely correct. This is a very complex issue. As the gentleman from Arkansas and the gentleman from Michigan mentioned, we just had this colloquy of words and a meeting of the minds a few minutes ago, and it is my information that the other body has signed off on this language.

We can interpret it two different ways. I believe the Department can go ahead and make rules, proposals, but they cannot be implemented until May 15. So later on, if the gentleman will yield further, we are going to be debating this issue probably three more times on the floor of the House. Right now I believe this is the best way to move this legislation and still leave the opportunity for further discussion at a later date without hamstringing or delaying the Department's ability to go forth with what they have been attempting to do. That is my interpretation of what has occurred in the last few minutes.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. I agree.

Mr. CARR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CARR. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to say that the understanding of the gentleman from Alaska is the same as mine. This applies to funds only for the Maritime Administration, and this clears up this issue for this piece of legislation. A compromise has been struck between the principals of the House and the principals of the other body.

□ 1250

Mr. BIAGGI. Mr. Speaker, this is a very critical question. I am the chairman of the Subcommittee on Merchant Marine, and we have had several hearings on this issue. There are matters on both sides to be considered.

The fact that the Department of Transportation has in fact not produced a rule, I think, is not as communicative of the situation as it really should be. The fact is that we expected the Department of Transportation to produce a rule that will permit the buy back. That is the reality. They have not produced it formally as yet. That is another matter.

But we are dealing with the presumption that they will in fact produce a rule permitting buy backs. We would like to deal with this matter in a legislative fashion. We are trying to bring the parties on both sides of this question to the table so they can work out a compromise.

I understand that this is a little better than the present situation. It is a little bit better than what we had originally. May 15 may be the date, but I also heard my friend, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH], say that the rule could not be implemented during the next fiscal year. That would bring us to October. Is my understanding correct?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. As the gentleman knows, we are dealing with appropriations starting October 1 and ending October 1, 1986. During that year none of the money in this bill can be used to enforce whatever rule is adopted that changes the law unless there is further action, which would be through a legislative committee.

Mr. BIAGGI. So that leaves us in a position where in fact, if the rule was made effective after May 15, it would become operative, but no moneys could be used after the next fiscal year, until 1985?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. No money could be used prior to October 1.

Mr. BIAGGI. 1985?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. 1985. The gentleman is right. I was wrong on the years.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will forgive me for saying it, I fail to see the compromise here. If we pass this amendment, as amended, with the May 15 date in it, what difference is there? What is the difference if we just go ahead and pass the amendment as is?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. They can go ahead and promulgate the rule. They can go ahead and decide what they want to do.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will continue to yield, it is a sort of a hang your clothes but don't go near the water situation, is it not? If they promulgate the rule, it cannot be enforced, and none of the money will be available to enforce it. Does it not then lie there until the Congress takes further action, and is that not substantially what the gentleman's original motion was directed at?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. No, not really. It could not be enforced during that period from May 15 to October 1. That is only a few months really, and it gives some breathing time for others to do whatever they want with regard to the rule.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I still have trouble with the language, Mr. Speaker. None of the funds shall be used for enforcement until May 15. The opposite of that is that after May 15 funds can be used. That is the way I read it. Whatever legislative intent may be coming out of this debate, it is pretty vague to me.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I see what the gentleman is saying now, and I will back up. I think I have misstated a couple of things. They can go ahead and promulgate the rule, but they cannot enforce it until after May 15.

Mr. EDWARDS of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. EDWARDS of Alabama. Then, Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is saying that what he said a moment ago about the fiscal year 1985 is incorrect?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Yes; actually they are expected to promulgate the rule much faster. We expect there will be some time involved.

Mr. EDWARDS of Alabama. Then barring some other action, should the Department promulgate a rule by May 15, 1985, they would then be in a position to enforce it as far as this particular language is concerned?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Yes; the limitation on appropriations would not prevent them from doing so. It would be up to the legislative committee to do that.

Mr. EDWARDS of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield further, we understand that a similar provision is in the transportation appropriations bill?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Right.

Mr. EDWARDS of Alabama. And a provision of some type similar to this is within the armed services authorization bill, if I recall?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Right.

Mr. EDWARDS of Alabama. And perhaps there are others. Somebody has done a good day's work in trying to sew up the Department.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. What I am afraid of is that it will be in two or three supplementals, too. Nevertheless, as far as this bill is concerned, there is no limitation on enforcement after May 15.

Mr. EDWARDS of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman.

Mr. BIAGGI. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. BIAGGI. Mr. Speaker, in light of the clarification and in light of the so-called compromise, we have a fuller understanding of the picture.

Very frankly, I would urge the subcommittee chairman and urge the members of my committee to insist on the House position. What we are really talking about is delaying for a little while the implementation of a rule that would permit buy back, and it would have a very devastating effect on a very substantial portion of our maritime fleet. Until we can develop some legislation, that is the position we should maintain.

Now, we have had a number of hearings on this matter. We have deliberated carefully over the situation, and there is too much at stake to permit a rule of this nature to work such a disastrous impact on a very important segment of the maritime fleet, a fleet which is currently in a state of chaos, a state of decline. To have this rule be implemented would only decimate in a very substantial fashion the number of ships that we have that are available for our troop-carrying ability and for our cargo-carrying ability.

Mr. Speaker, this is not the way to go. The House has a position, it should be maintained, and we should insist upon it.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I think we are not clarifying things. It is not helping to continue the debate, and I hope we can end it in a hurry.

But I want to reply to the gentleman from New York and say that the parliamentary procedure is this: In the bill, as it passed the House, the general provisions were struck by Senate amendment No. 129 and reinserted in amendment No. 36. If we insist on the House provision, there is no provision to insist upon. Now, the gentleman does not want that.

So what I have done to prevent us from being in a position of having no provision, because I knew the gentleman and others wanted a provision in here, is this: I have moved to recede and concur in the Senate position with an amendment, and the amendment gives us the only protection we will have. If we defeat this motion, the gentleman will not have any protection. He will be back with no provision, including the one that passed the House.

So, Mr. Speaker, the gentleman would want to vote aye on this motion or he will have no protection.

Mr. BIAGGI. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. I hope that we can conclude this rather rapidly, but I will yield very briefly, for debate only, to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman's yielding.

I rise in support of the House's position on this conference report which is contained within amendment 36.

This position is completely consistent with that of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee which has been considering this issue now for over a year. Until such time as a reasonable resolution can be concluded, it is important that we retain the status quo. The amendment which is under consideration will do exactly that.

It is important that the programs that would be affected by any change in the way construction differential subsidy is repaid be considered and that satisfying one segment of the industry not be accomplished at the expense of all others.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that we will vote with the chairman of the subcommittee on this amendment which has been offered in substitution.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BATEMAN].

Mr. BATEMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

At the appropriate time I would like to be recognized in order to review this Member's perception of where we are and where we are going to get to if the amendment that has just been offered, the so-called compromise, is adopted. It is my view that it is not going to get us anywhere in the form in which it was offered, in view of the fact that we face almost in terms of reality a certainty that after May 15 the public policy issue that this House has addressed and addressed in a certain way is going to be reversed by what in fact is then going to occur.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to be heard later at the appropriate time to state that point of view.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BATEMAN] has expired.

The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH] has used 20 minutes of his 30 minutes of time.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SNYDER].

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the compromise as it has been reexplained to us.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to vote to recede from their disagreement with the Senate and reject the amendment which would prohibit the use of funds appropriated by this bill for the enforcement of a rule permitting the repayment of construction-differential subsidy. Apparently, the compromise will accomplish that effective May 15, 1985.

As a member of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, I can assure my colleagues that the issue of whether to permit the repayment of CDS by certain tanker owners who would thereby receive permission to operate their vessels in the domestic trade is an extremely controversial matter. The Merchant Marine Subcommittee has held several hearings on this subject, most recently in May of this year on H.R. 5071, a bill introduced by the subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. BIAGGI]. The committee has not yet been able to report a bill due to the controversy surrounding the issue. For example, one major maritime union supports the repayment of CDS while another maritime union opposes the adoption of such a rule.

The committee has been, as yet, unable to elicit a compromise from the rule's opponents. Nevertheless, that is no reason to rush to judgment on the CDS repayment issue, particularly by legislating in this manner. It would be most improper to decide this complex question by adopting a rider to an appropriation bill which would effectively foreclose any action by the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, the committee with subject matter jurisdiction over the issue.

Let me briefly address the merits of CDS repayment. I have favored the adoption of a rule which would permit the repayment of CDS. It would increase competition in the domestic tanker trade and lower rates. It has been estimated by some that implementation of the rule would reduce the Federal deficit by $1 billion, considering the amount of CDS repaid and cancellation of future operating differential subsidy obligations. More conservative estimates place CDS repayment benefits at $200 million. Repayment has also been estimated to result in approximately $350 million in increased windfall profits taxes each year. The challenge before us is to realize these benefits while trying to accommodate the opponents of the rule. While that may not be an easy task, it's the job of the Merchant Marine Committee, not the Appropriations Committee, to legislate on this issue.

For these reasons, I urge my colleagues to recede from their disagreement with the Senate and vote to delete this provision from the bill.

□ 1300

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BATEMAN].

Mr. BATEMAN. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman yielding the time to me.

If I understand the legal context in which this issue comes to us, it is this. The Supreme Court of the United States has ruled that under existing law the Department of Transportation has the authority to promulgate regulations permitting the payback of construction differential subsidies and the vessels who pay them back their operators permitting them to enter the Jones Act trade to which they are generally excluded by virtue of the fact that they accepted the CDS subsidies. That being the status of the law, unless this Congress has acted in some manner, there is nothing to prohibit the Department of Transportation from going forward and reversing what has historically been the policy of the United States, which has been not to permit the payback and the vessels that pay them back entering the Jones Act trade.

That may make little difference to many of you in terms of the specific involvement of your constituents. It makes a great deal of difference to those who have a constituency in which there is an American merchant marine or American shipbuilding.

To permit if we decide to do that, and I am afraid the compromise is going to permit it, these vessels to pay back their construction differential subsidies and enter the Jones Act trade is going to be a devastating blow to that trade reserved to American built and manned vessels. It is going to be a blow to American shipbuilding because that antiquated Jones Act fleet which under or safety and inspection laws is facing a point where many of those vessels will have to be replaced will no longer need to be replaced and there goes shipbuilding jobs in all the shipbuilding yards of America. There goes the shipbuilding mobilization base of the United States and there goes the small tanker fleet imported for our national security, rather than the large bulk carriers which will enter this trade, wiping out the smaller tankers.

Now, in view of the fact that the Courts have held that the Department of Transportation can do this, if we do no more than pass a compromise that says you cannot do it until May 15, then we are inviting virtually a certainty that after May 15, 1985, the settled public policy, the Merchant Marine policy of the United States, is going to have been reversed without any action or input from the Congress and going to be reversed in a way that is contrary to the manner that the House of Representatives has previously addressed this issue.

There are several things about this, if I have some remaining time, Mr. Speaker, that I think are offensive in terms of the sound and proper procedures by which the House should deal with this measure. We have acted on this measure. The bill that we passed says, "Thou shalt not do this."

It is said by some that the House has no position on this issue. We do indeed have a position on the issue and it is a sound and proper position on the issue which I think should be maintained.

The compromise amendment, as much as I applaud the reasoning behind it, and I feel the gentleman from Iowa is right, procedurally and parliamentary wise we need an amendment, but I do not think this amendment assuages the concerns that those of us feel about their becoming a reality after May 15, 1985, of CDS paybacks and these vessels entering the Jones Act trade.

I would suggest an amendment along these lines, but sayng it shall not be done before being implemented on May 15.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield one additional minute to the gentleman.

Mr. BATEMAN. I would suggest an amendment along the lines as that offered, but which provided that no regulation formulated before May 15, 1985, could be implemented thereafter in the absence of some affirmative act of Congress would be the kind of provision I think we are really struggling for, so that the Congress does have an opportunity to fairly determine what is the wisdom of public policy on this very important issue.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I just want to wrap it up by saying this. Under the parliamentary situation, if we do not pass the amendment that I have offered, there is no restriction whatever. They can go ahead, promulgate the rule and enforce it immediately. That is the situation.

Now, this is being dealt with in two or three other bills around here and I do not know what they will do in those other bills, but as far as this bill is concerned, I think the motion that is before us is the best that we can do and the best way out of it.

I would hope that we would adopt the motion.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. COUGHLIN].

Mr. COUGHLIN. Mr. Speaker, as the ranking minority member of the Transportation Appropriations Subcommittee, I have also been opposed to the CDS payback provisions.

This is, of course, a matter really within the jurisdiction of the authorizing committee and in view of the fact that the distinguished chairman of the authorizing committee indicates that this is a satisfactory compromise from the authorizing committee's standpoint and would give that committee the opportunity in which to act, I would certainly support the amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I appreciate this opportunity to speak today on a matter which I believe may have serious consequences for the future of the U.S. merchant marine. As the ranking minority member on the Transportation Appropriations Subcommittee, I have a special interest in all aspects of our Nation's transportation capabilities. The Department of Transportation proposal I wish to draw to your attention today involves the Maritime Administration and therefore falls within the jurisdiction of the Subcommittee on State, Justice, Commerce, and the Judiciary and this conference report.

DOT issued a proposed rule on January 31, 1983, which would allow owners of federally subsidized tankers engaged in foreign trade to pay back the unamortized portion of their construction differential subsidies in order to enter the unsubsidized domestic service known as the Jones Act trade. This proposal is unfair, ill-considered, and economically counterproductive. It would be disastrous for the Jones Act trade.

I would make the following points for my colleagues' consideration:

First, what DOT is proposing is to change the rules in the middle of the game after long-term economic decisions and large investments have been made on the basis of the existing legal framework for ship construction and operation. As the committee knows, that framework provides for Federal construction and operating subsidies for ships which operate exclusively in the foreign trade competing against the subsidized ships of other countries. Ships which operate only in the U.S. domestic trade receive no subsidies.

A number of companies have invested heavily in unsubsidized tanker construction and operation based on the protection afforded by the Jones Act and the number and types of vessels traditionally engaged in the domestic trade. Now that the foreign oil trade has fallen off and domestic oil transportation needs have increased due to development of the Alaskan North Slope, investors who chose the foreign trade freely are now seeking to "muscle in" on the domestic service by paying back the unamortized portion of their subsidies. To change the ground rules after they have served us well for a long time would be very unfair to those shipping interests who chose to build and operate their tankers in the unsubsidized domestic service.

Second, the immediate impact of the change will be the collapse of the present shipping rate structure for tankers in the protected Jones Act trade due to increased competition and a surplus of tanker capacity. The introduction of newer and larger tankers built and operated with Federal subsidies to compete in international trade into the domestic fleet will cause the rate to fall below the breakeven point for the average size and age of the vessels presently in the Jones Act fleet. It will not be economically feasible to continue many of them in operation.

Even DOT in explaining its proposals concedes that "some tankers might be unable to survive." As many as 5,000 jobs could be lost by seamen and others in maritime-related positions.

Should Alaskan North Slope oil production require additional domestic tanker capacity, current law already permits foreign trade U.S.-flag vessels to enter the domestic service under a 6-month temporary waiver. I believe this approach should continue to be used, rather than allowing CDS-built ships to enter the domestic trade on a permanent basis.

Third. The long-term effects of the proposed rule would be to discourage tanker construction for the Jones Act fleet. DOT notes in discussing the proposed CDS payback rule that—

With regard to the possible impact of the proposal on shipbuilding, the entry of CDS-built tankers into the domestic trades might, in fact, reduce the demand for new tankers in the Jones Act fleet.

The instability and uncertainty created by the rule change will further dampen future investment in domestic trade tankers which tend to be smaller and more versatile than those engaged in foreign trade. Fewer will be built and the Jones Act fleet will soon deteriorate. It is worth noting that this deterioration will have significant implications for national security. In time of international emergency, it would be critical to have a viable, flexible tanker fleet.

Fourth, my final point is that the proposed rule change makes no sense from an economic standpoint. I have already mentioned that it would squeeze a significant percentage of tankers out of the present Jones Act trade, causing the loss of jobs. It would also result in the loss of millions in business and income tax revenues to the Government. Even with the estimated repayment of construction differential subsidies, it is unlikely the Government would come our ahead. If failures under the Maritime Administration's title XI guarantee program for construction and overhaul are considered—as they must be—the Federal Government stands to lose perhaps hundreds of millions as title XI-assisted Jones Act tankers are pushed into bankruptcy by adoption of this rule change.

For all these reasons, I urge the House to insist on its prohibition of any funds in the bill from being used to promulgate a construction differential subsidies repayment rule.

● Mr. DONNELLY. Mr. Speaker, the proposal to allow deep-seagoing tankers that have been built with Federal subsidy to reenter the domestic trade is profoundly unwise and unfair. I strongly support the motion of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Smith] to insist on the disagreement with the Senate over this issue.

If Congress fails to prohibit the Maritime Administration from promulgating a final rule permitting tankers that were built with Federal construction subsidies to enter the domestic trade, disastrous consequences will be felt in the domestic tanker fleet that is so essential to the national security interest. The purpose of the Construction Differential Subsidy Program was to aid the development of a U.S.-flag fleet in the foreign trades. The shipowners who applied for, and received construction subsidies, were well aware at the time that subsidy-built ships were prohibited from operating in the domestic trade against ships that were not constructed with Federal subsidy. Changing the rules at this stage is extremely unfair to those domestic-trade ship operators who financed construction of Jones Act ships with private capital, and did not have the benefit of Federal subsidy programs. Perhaps importantly, the Nation's defense planners in DOD have expressed grave concerns that entry of huge, CDS-built ships into the domestic trade will result in the lay-up of smaller, militarily useful tankers. Layed-up tankers are quickly scrapped, and permanently lost as a sealift asset to our national defense requirements.

The House took the correct position when it included a prohibition against CDS-payback rule promulgation in its version of the State-Justice-Commerce appropriation bill. I urge my colleagues to reaffirm that postion today.●

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the motion.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH] to amendment No. 36.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The amendment read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 37:

Page 8, after line 24, insert:

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses for the Federal Communications Commission, as authorized by law, including uniforms and allowances therefor, as authorized by law (5 U.S.C. 5901-02); not to exceed $200,000 for land and structures; not to exceed $200,000 for improvement and care of grounds and repair to buildings; not to exceed $3,000 for official reception and representation expenses; purchase (not to exceed twelve) and hire of moter vehicles; special counsel fees; and services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109; $94,111,000. Not to exceed $300,000 of the foregoing amount shall remain available until September 30, 1986, for research and policy studies.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. SMITH OF IOWA

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. SMITH of Iowa moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 37 and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by said amendment, insert the following:

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses for the Federal Communications Commission, as authorized by law, including uniforms and allowances therefor, as authorized by law (5 U.S.C. 5901-02); not to exceed $200,000 for land and structures; not to exceed $200,000 for improvement and care of grounds and repair to buildings; not to exceed $3,000 for official reception and representation expenses; purchase (not to exceed twelve) and hire of motor vehicles; special counsel fees; and services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109; $93,611,000. Not to exceed $300,000 of the foregoing amount shall remain available until September 30, 1986, for research and policy studies.

Mr. O'BRIEN (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH].

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The amendment reads as follows:

Senate amendment No. 39: Page 8, after line 24, insert:

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses of the Federal Trade Commission, including uniforms or allowances therefor, as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 5901-5902; services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109; hire of passenger motor vehicles; and not to exceed $2,000 for official reception and representation expenses; the sum of $64,311,000: Provided, That the funds appropriated in this paragraph are subject to the limitations and provisions of sections 10(a) and 10(c) (notwithstanding section 10(e)), 11(b), 18, and 20 of the Federal Trade Commission Improvements Act of 1980 (Public Law 96-252; 94 Stat. 374).

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. SMITH OF IOWA

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. SMITH of Iowa moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 39 and concur therein.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH] will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. O'BRIEN] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LEVITAS].

Mr. LEVITAS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for yielding this time to me.

This is the portion of the conference report dealing with the Federal Trade Commission. The reason we are objecting to the action that is proposed by the conference is because the Federal Trade Commission's authorization expired in 1982. There has been no authorization of the Federal Trade Commission since that time. Nevertheless, through appropriated funds to an agency that has no authorization, that Agency has been able to continue to operate. During that time, Congress has had no input whatsoever in terms of defining the FTC's authority and its responsibilities, or in providing new authority or cutting back on those that it has already given.

Now, the Federal Trade Commission has vast legislative power. Under section 5, for example, of the Federal Trade Commission Act, it can issue a rule having the force and effect of law. That is, having as much force and effect as an act of Congress, and yet the Congress has no ability to review that.

Under a Supreme Court decision of last year, the authority for Congress to exercise its responsibility through former uses of a legislative veto was terminated. Mechanisms have been proposed, and in the case of some statutes, acts and bills, have been adopted which would reestablish this program of legislative veto consistent with the Supreme Court decision. But because the committee that authorizes the Federal Trade Commission has yet to bring its bill to the floor, even though we have urged them time and again to do so, there has been no reauthorization of the Federal Trade Commission. I ask you, why should we continue to fund an Agency that has not been authorized in over 2 years?

We have no business as legislators spending the taxpayers' money, and as you get closer and closer to election date I guess you are going to become more sensitive to this fact, without at least having some authorization thereof.

I know that the gentleman from Iowa, the distinguished subcommittee chairman, probably more than anybody else in this House, myself included, would like to see the authorization come to the floor. The gentleman from Iowa knows that his responsibility as chairman of an appropriating subcommittee is not to continue agencies in existence after Congress has decided, for one reason or another, not to authorize them, and he has done a responsible thing in the past.

But enough is enough. The time has come. What I am asking my colleagues to do is very simple, it is a very modest proposal, but it is the only way we are ever going to see an authorization bill come to this floor for the Federal Trade Commission. This is what I am going to ask. Help me bring the authorization to the floor.

When the gentleman from Iowa moves the previous question, I will ask you to vote no on his motion. Immediately following that vote, if the motion should be defeated, I will then, on behalf of myself and the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BROYHILL], offer an amendment to the Senate language which would simply say this: We will continue to fund the FTC, but they can issue no new rules, exercise no new legislative authority until there has been an authorization bill written into law.

That seems to me to make the point. That seems to me to make the point that this Congress will not abandon its responsibilities, that this Congress will not permit laws to be made by unelected bureaucrats, and that this Congress will face up to its responsibilities.

Any Member here who wants to go back and tell his constituents that he is prepared to let the unelected bureaucrats continue to make laws without any congressional control, can vote against what I am asking you to do.

My request is vote no on the Smith motion, and then vote yes on the motion which the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BROYHILL] and I will offer immediately thereafter.

Mr. NIELSON of Utah. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEVITAS. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. NIELSON of Utah. Just to sustain the point of the gentleman from Georgia, there has been in place a bill which passed the Energy and Commerce Committee, H.R. 2970, which would reauthorize the Federal Trade Commission, but that bill has been languishing, has not been brought to the floor. It has been waiting for over 1 year now. It appears that we will not have action on that bill and therefore the gentleman is correct.

Mr. LEVITAS. Let me make it very clear to anyone who has any concern about this. What I am attempting to do I in no way deem to be hostile to the fine work this subcommittee has done in bringing this bill before us. I voted for the conference report.

But it is not right, it is abandoning our responsibilities as legislators to simply continue to fund an agency without reassessing its charter. If we do not do that, we have not only created big Government, but we have put it into motion forever with an inertial force that will never stop, because we have not exercised our responsibilities.

If you will vote no on the Smith motion and let us adopt an amendment that will force this authorizing bill to the floor, then you and I representing the American people will have the opportunity to authorize the FTC.

I want to see this bill come to the floor for a vote.

The reason that we are here today is because the authorizing bill has not been brought to the floor for a vote in over 2 years. The time to act is now. The subject to act on is before us. This is the test of your willingness and your interest in curbing the excesses of Government by our bureaucracy and restoring Government to the elected Representatives of the people.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

If the House will forgive a light reference, I think the gentleman from Georgia, for whom I have profound respect as a scholar, is telling Noah how to handle floods. It seems to me that the chairman and I and our members of our committee have wrestled with this problem of no authorization for all of the years I have been on the committee. It seems to me that pressure exerted on the appropriating process to accommodate a function that does not belong to it is undesirable. I think that were I to make any suggestions to my distinguished friend, I think the pressure ought to be brought to bear on other committees and not this particular subcommittee of appropriations.

Mr. LEVITAS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'BRIEN. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. LEVITAS. I thank the gentleman for yielding and I commend him for his statement.

The gentleman is absolutely correct. It is not fair to the appropriating committee to have this hassle. It is not fair for the appropriating committee to bear the burden of authorization. But the only way we have any opportunity, I would say, to bring this pressure to bear on the authorizing committee, is to defeat the Smith motion and to adopt the motion which will then be offered. You will then see the authorization bill come to the floor very quickly.

Mr. O'BRIEN. I thank the gentleman.

I still feel that you are scratching not where the itch really is when you are working on this committee.

Mr. Speaker, I am happy to yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BROYHILL].

Mr. BROYHILL. I thank the gentleman very much for yielding.

I certainly do not want to add to the burden of the gentleman from Iowa and the gentleman from Illinois. They have certainly done a magnificent job in cooperating on these issues with respect to the FTC, and I certainly sympathize with the difficulties that we have here. It is certainly not our purpose to come here and to add to their burdens.

But, of course, the fact is that there were no funds for the Federal Trade Commission in the House-passed bill. We have had no authorization of the FTC for a number of years. I think it is 5 years now.

All that we are asking is that we have some opportunity to bring an FTC authorization bill to the floor of the House.

The motion of the gentleman, as I understand it, would mean that we would just go another year without an authorization for the FTC. In other words, the gentleman's motion would continue appropriating funds to the Commission for another year, and they could just go merrily on their way.

We are asking that that motion be voted down and that we vote "no" on that motion. Then, there would be an opportunity for the gentleman from Georgia to offer a motion that would continue funding for the FTC, but the Commission could not promulgate final trade rules.

As Members know, the FTC has enormous powers to promulgate trade regulation rules which have the force and effect of law. The motion of the gentleman from Georgia would not affect the power or authority of the Federal Trade Commission to do the preliminary work on these rules. It would only say that funds would not be available to promulgate final rules.

The motion to be offered by the gentleman from Georgia would not affect other ongoing programs, investigations, and enforcement powers of the Federal Trade Commission. But we do feel strongly that some leverage is needed to bring a Federal Trade Commission authorization bill to the floor. This is the only way that we know that we can get the attention of not only Members here, but perhaps of the Commission itself, in order to try to break loose the Federal Trade Commission legislation which has been languishing in the Rules Committee for these many months.

Once having acted on that authorization bill, then, of course, the House and the other body could work its will on the bill. In other words, we feel that there is a need for a number of amendments to the Federal Trade Commission Act. That is all we are saying here.

For example, we want the House to address the issue of what authority the Federal Trade Commission does have to promulgate these very broad, far-reaching trade regulation rules which have the force and effect of law. We would like to address some of the definitions that are in the Federal Trade Commission Act. For example, what is the definition of an "unfair" act? We would also like to address other issues. When does the Federal Trade Commission have the right to issue trade regulation rules which cover trade practices in whole industries? Under what circumstances should they move forward with these trade rules?

There are a number of issues that need to be addressed, and it can only be properly done in the authorization bill.

□ 1320

And the only way that we can bring that bill to the floor of the House is to vote down the motion of the gentleman from Iowa and to vote up the motion of the gentleman from Georgia.

I would urge, Mr. Speaker, that the House take these steps in order to bring the FTC authorization bill to the floor. That can be done only by defeating the present motion.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. FLORIO].

Mr. FLORIO. I thank the chairman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I oppose this effort to defeat the motion to recede to the Senate and I oppose the attempt that may be made to restrict the FTC's rulemaking authority.

I find this attack on the FTC to be highly ironic.

Here we have an agency whose current majority has virtually abandoned traditional consumer protection and antitrust enforcement. Yet the proponents of restrictions on rulemaking want to shut off half the FTC's statutory authority.

The irony is that there is probably little left to shut off. But what then is the great threat that requires subversion of the independence of an agency through the extraordinary method of an appropriations rider?

It is also ironic that some are urging this rider because of the delay in passing an FTC authorization. It is well known that the principal obstacle to action on the authorization is in the other body. It is also well known that the complex legislative veto issue has been the focus of extended consideration by the Rules Committee. I understand that the Rules Committee will be making its recommendations before long to the House.

Our committee reported the FTC authorization bill early last year. I have persistently sought a bipartisan consensus on unresolved aspects of the legislative veto. While our progress has been slowed in recent weeks by the preoccupation of the minority with other matters, I believe we can reach a consensus on the Commerce Committee and that working with the Rules Committee we can resolve the matter.

Frankly, I am at a loss to understand this attempted restriction. Perhaps some have simply gotten in the habit of an annual assault on consumers. But there is very little left to attack.

The credit practices rule, which is scheduled to take effect, received bipartisan support. Virtually everything else has been killed or buried at the Commission. To the extent that the proponents of a rules' freeze are trying to make it retroactive to affect rules like the funeral rule, there is no logical connection to the legislative-veto controversy. The old rules have already run the gauntlet. It would be a gratuitous slap at small business to stop implementation of the franchise rule; a gratuitous slap at the textile industry to stop implementation of the care labeling rule; a gratuitous slap at consumers to stop implementation of the funeral rule, the eye glasses rule, or the insulation rule.

I oppose this effort to restrict the FTC on principle. I also oppose it on the very modest chance that the current FTC majority might change course and take action to enforce the law. Even if we have not enacted an authorization by that probably distant time, it will be time enough for the opponents of this Commission's slight new efforts to help consumers to mount the barricades against them.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BROYHILL, Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield a minute or two to me in order to correct the record?

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BROYHILL].

Mr. BROYHILL. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman form New Jersey has left the implication that some rules which are already in effect would be affected by the amendment of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LEVITAS].

This is not correct. Any rules which are presently in effect would not be affected by the motion of the gentleman from Georgia.

In addition, the gentleman has referred to certain trade rules which are about to be promulgated in fiscal year 1984. The gentleman from Georgia's amendment goes to fiscal year 1985 and thus would not affect any rules which are presently in the process of being promulgated in fiscal year 1984.

Mr. FLORIO. If the gentleman would yield, the amendment, as I read it, talks about implementation. The credit rule which passed and which had bipartisan support is not to be implemented until 1985.

Mr. BROYHILL. The credit rule has been promulgated with fiscal year 1984 funds, not fiscal year 1985 funds.

Mr. FLORIO. If the gentleman would yield, it will be implemented in 1985. The effect of the amendment would be to undo that.

Mr. BROYHILL. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. LEVITAS. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, I am advised by the Federal Trade Commission that it would not apply to the credit rules, that the amendment which I propose to offer would not apply to the credit rules.

I might also add, in the spirit of candor that the gentleman from New Jersey is certainly a strong advocate for consumers in this country and has been very critical of some of the proposed rulemaking that the Federal Trade Commission is engaging in which he perceives as cutting back on consumer protection.

My amendment would do exactly what the gentleman from New Jersey would like to accomplish; that is cut back on those anticonsumer rules that the Federal Trade Commission has been discussing.

So I urge those of you who want to support Government by elected officials, and not bureaucracy, to vote against the motion before us now.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 more minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. BROYHILL. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out for the benefit of the RECORD that it is my impression that the gentleman from New Jersey could be most helpful in helping to move the authorization bill out of the Rules Committee. If he had been somewhat more helpful in urging Members to vote for that rule that we would not have to be here today arguing that the Members join us in going through this procedure.

All we are asking is for the opportunity for the House and the other body to work its will on an authorization bill. It could be that the amendments that might be brought forward by myself or the gentleman from Georgia or others would be defeated.

But then, of course, we will not have any more argument on those particular subjects. But we do feel that the House would support overwhelmingly the amendments that we are talking about and the modest changes that we are asking for in the Federal Trade Commission Act.

The only parliamentary and procedural method that we know to break loose that bill from the Rules and Committee is to go through this procedure. We ask that the present motion be voted down, and having done that, we would entertain a motion by the gentleman from Georgia that would continue funding for the Federal Trade Commission with the exception of funding to promulgate any final rules in fiscal year 1985.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OXLEY].

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, this motion would do nothing to encourage the authorization process for the Federal Trade Commission. This motion would once again appropriate funds to an agency which has not had substantive legislation enacted since 1980—almost 5 years ago. It is inexcusable for a Federal agency with sweeping authority to regulate every sector of our business community to be without an authorization for almost 2 years.

The gentleman's motion would simply appropriate funds for the FTC for fiscal year 1985 and extend expiring provisions of law. It does not provide any incentive whatsoever to bring an authorization bill to the floor of the House. In fact, it does the opposite—it allows Congress to forgo consideration of an authorization bill for yet another year.

The ranking minority member of the committee, the gentleman from North Carolina, and I have repeatedly urged that the authorization bill, H.R. 2970, which was reported from the Committee on Energy and Commerce back in May of 1983, be brought to the floor. Our calls have fallen on deaf ears and the bill continues to lie dormant.

It is only appropriate that the Members of this body be given an opportunity at long last to consider authorizing legislation. H.R. 2970 contains provisions affecting the Commission's "unfairness" jurisdiction, the FTC's authority over professionals and the right of defendants in civil penalty suits to question the legal determination on which a cease-and-desist order is based. It is critical that the Congress be afforded a chance to consider this legislation and in so doing give those subject to the authority of the Commission some certainty as to the scope of its legal authority.

As I understand the situation, after the pending motion is defeated, the gentleman from Georgia will offer another motion which will place limits on the Commission's rulemaking authority until an authorization bill is signed into law. The language of this motion will provide a strong incentive to move the authorization bill to the floor.

I think it is important to remember who controls the process in the House of Representatives. The majority party decides who brings, and when legislation is brought to the floor of the House.

You can criticize what the minority may or may not want. However, the fact is the opportunity to vote on this authorization bill is being stifled by the majority leadership in this body.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that the motion pending before us, by the gentleman from Iowa, be defeated so that the gentleman from Georgia has an opportunity to offer a very reasonable segment of this particular bill.

Mr. FLORIO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OXLEY. If I have time. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. FLORIO. Just for an observation.

Certainly I lament that the authorization has not gone forward. It is certainly not as a result of lack of the efforts on the part of myself, Mr. BROYHILL, Mr. DINGELL, and others.

I am just confused about the fact that the gentleman says this will be an incentive to induce action and yet the gentleman from Georgia indicates that this limitation in fact impacts upon no regulation, pending rule, or any prospective rule.

How, therefore, does this provide an incentive if it has no applicability?

□ 1330

Mr. OXLEY. If the gentleman would let me respond, clearly, we have waited 5 years.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OXLEY] has expired.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OXLEY].

Mr. OXLEY. The opportunity is here before us today. If we pass the Smith amendment, then clearly that disincentive is still with us as it has been for these many years.

All I am saying is, simply give the gentleman from Georgia an opportunity to let the House vote on his amendment. Let the duly elected representatives of the people make that decision, not somebody downtown who is not elected.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OXLEY. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. BROYHILL. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I would like to invite the gentleman from New Jersey and the gentleman from Michigan, since we are before the Rules Committee on another matter, to join me at 2 o'clock when I am to be recognized. I will be glad to yield to the two gentlemen to permit them to ask the Rules Committee, at that time, to grant a rule on the Federal Trade authorization bill.

Now, if the gentlemen would agree to do that and we could get assurance that we are going to have a bill, a lot of problems would be solved.

But, we have no such assurance.

Mr. FLORIO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OXLEY. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr FLORIO. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

If the gentleman would provide us with a response to the proposed accommodation that was submitted to the gentleman some 4 weeks ago, prior to that meeting, we would be pleased to respond to him.

Mr. BROYHILL. If the gentleman would yield further, it seems to me that a number of these questions should be decided by the House itself, and not by one or two individuals.

Mr. LEVITAS. Mr Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OXLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr LEVITAS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I would say, along with the gentleman from North Carolina, that if the chairman of the subcommittee and the chairman of the full committee will assure us that they will ask for the authorization bill to be granted an open rule and come to the floor immediately so we can vote on it, there would be absolutely no necessity to pursue this.

I suggest to you that the reason we are here is that the Rules Committee is not going to report that rule until a green light is given by the manager of the authorization bill. If he will assure us that he will let that bill come to the floor under an open rule, then I am prepared at this moment just to back off and let us vote on the substantive portion of the authorization bill.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL].

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, the motion of the gentleman from Iowa is a good one. It should be adopted by the House and should be done so forthwith. We ought not continue to be harassed by legislative amendments on the FTC appropriation by dissidents of different kinds on the House floor.

Now the attempt of the other side in this issue to reject the motion made by the gentleman from Iowa is a very broad tent. If one takes the trouble to lift up that tent, he will find that there are many amazing types of people dwelling therein. There are some who honestly think that we should have a rule on the Federal Trade Commission authorization bill. There are some who think we should not and that rather we ought to legislate on appropriation bills this late in the process and in the session. There are a number who are openly hostile to the Federal Trade Commission. There are many who are diligently listening to sundry special interest groups who do not want the Federal Trade Commission to be able to carry out its appropriate and proper function of protecting the business community, the public and the economy of this country from anticompetitive and unfair trade practices. And there are a lot of lobbyists who are out there pushing this particular kind of undertaking.

I would urge my colleagues that they should adopt the motion offered by the gentleman from Iowa at an early time.

Now, I have tried to make it plain on this floor on a number of instances that I have requested a rule on the Federal Trade Commission. Speaking as the chairman of the Committee on Energy and Commerce, I have appeared before the Rules Committee and have requested a rule with regard to that particular matter so that we can deal with it fairly on the floor. I think that that is the proper way that we should deal with it. There is absolutely no reason for us to be debating an amendment by people who falsely say, "We are friends of the Federal Trade Commission. All we want is a rule."

All I want is a rule, too. But I am not willing to shut down the Federal Trade Commission just so that I can say that I am a friend of the Federal Trade Commission and I want a rule.

Let us deal with the issue of the appropriation bill. Let us deal with an appropriation as an appropriation. Let us leave to the House, functioning as a legislative body, and the Energy and Commerce Committee, functioning as a legislative committee, to deal with the legislative questions relative to the behavior of the Federal Trade Commission and the need for a legislative veto.

I do not see any objection to having those issues on the floor. I will be glad to debate the gentleman from North Carolina and the gentleman from Georgia at the proper time, on the proper kind of vehicle, under the proper kind of rule, and in a manner that is not going to be mischievous to small businessmen, consumers, the economy generally, and those who are concerned about restrictive trade practices.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL] has expired.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 additional minute to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL].

Mr. LEVITAS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DINGELL. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. LEVITAS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

What I find bizarre, really, is the distinguished chairman of an important authorizing committee arguing in favor of appropriating funds to an agency that his committee has not authorized since 1982.

Mr. DINGELL. My committee has carried out its responsibilities. We have placed an authorization bill up in the Rules Committee. We reported out a bill favorably and sent a letter to the Rules Committee requesting a rule. If the gentleman has a complaint, I will give him the phone number of the chairman of the Rules Committee so he can air it with him.

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DINGELL. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. BROYHILL. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Would the gentleman then tell us when was the time that he went before the Rules Committee this year and would the gentleman——

Mr. DINGELL. I urged that a rule on this issue be granted in connection with the discussion of the legislative veto. I sent a letter to the chairman of that committee. I will be glad to make a copy of the testimony and a copy of the letter available to the gentleman from North Carolina because I am sure they will benefit him greatly.

Mr. BROYHILL. If the gentleman will yield further, would the gentleman agree to go with this gentleman to the Rules Committee this afternoon? We go back in at 2 o'clock.

Mr. DINGELL. No. I have requested to be heard by the Rules Committee. I am not going to be maneuvered into any trap by the gentleman from North Carolina. If the Rules Committee wants to hear me on that question, I will be delighted to be there and I will empower the gentleman to say on my behalf that we want a modified open rule and that I want to be heard on the subject of a rule, too.

In the meantime, let us reject the action of the gentleman from Georgia and adopt the motion of the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the FTC is an agency that I want continued. I think there is an important place for the FTC.

On the other hand, I do not think we ought to be settling the question of authorizations in this bill every year. So I agree with a lot of what the gentleman from Georgia said except his conclusion. I do not think we ought to vote this motion down today.

Now let me go back just a little bit. The last time it was authorized was fiscal 1982. I think it was authorized in 1980 for 1981 and 1982. There was no authorization in 1983. We came down to the House here asking that the rule permit consideration of FTC on the floor and the Members turned down the rule, did not want to consider the appropriation because it had not been authorized and because there was an argument on two different sides on the bill.

So we left out the FTC. We went to the Senate and we came back with a conference agreement. The Senate would not agree to it, but I wanted to put the money in subject to authorization. But they would not agree to that.

Then last year we had similar trouble except we did not ask for a rule. There is no need to go up there asking for a rule and get in trouble with the rule. We just came to the floor without the rule and it was knocked out on a point of order. The same thing happened this year.

We deny the House, by this procedure, an opportunity for Members to vote on what level of funding they want for the FTC.

We went to the Senate. Some of us wanted to put into the appropriation that it was subject to authorization. But the Senate convinced us that that would cause them all kinds of trouble. They could not pass the bill over there if it provided that it was subject to authorization.

So we are back here again today. We are accepting in this motion the level of funding that the administration requested. We are not changing that.

□ 1340

I think we really ought to at some time have an opportunity to really work on what level of funding we want. I myself think the funding is little bit inadequate, not grossly so, but a little bit inadequate.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, the opposition to the motion made by the gentleman from Iowa is bottomed on the assumption that in some way the Federal Trade Commission is not getting legislative oversight. Nothing is further from the truth. The Appropriations Committee oversights in an entirely proper fashion, sometimes with more enthusiasm than I approve but they do it, and they should. Our committee does so regularly. We have the Federal Trade Commission before us regularly, sometimes to the vast distress of my friend from North Carolina, who is not always pleased that we would be calling the FTC on the carpet on various matters. They are getting oversighted and they will continue to do so, and they will continue to do so if the motion offered by the gentleman from Iowa is adopted. I urge my colleagues to adopt that motion.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Each year a number of Members want to put limitations on the Federal Trade Commission because they say they have not had the opportunity to do so in the authorizing law. This year a rider was put in, and appears later on in the bill. We do not relish in the Appropriations Committee trying to deal with all these authorizing problems. If we do not do this today, then we are going to be tied up here. We are 2 days from recessing for the Republican Convention. I think we ought to dispense with this bill.

Now, I do want to say this about next year's bill: I am to the point where I am ready, although it is not a good procedure to bring back a conference report that permits the floor to work for 2 days if they want to on an authorizing bill on FTC.

Sometimes we have got to face the issue and quit holding this bill up. We could do that. I do not like to put authorizing legislation in an appropriations bill. But it can be done. Let the Members work their will on the floor for 2 days, if they want to, on the bill. Somehow we have got to get this thing settled sooner or later.

Under all of the circumstances, and given the limited time left in this Congress, I am asking the floor to support the motion one more time.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

What this entire debate recalls to me is a curiously domestic personal practice, one. Years ago, when I was a youngster, I lived on the north side of Chicago, and the favorite theater was the Granada. When I got home Friday afternoon from school, I asked my mother for permission to go to the Granada Theater. That was authorization. But when my father came home from work that night, I went to my father for the money to go to the movies. That was appropriation. And I did not get to the movies without both.

Using my analogy, our action here is like saying mother is going to visit the grandparents and father very grudgingly, has to act in both capacities. It is an undesirable position.

I support the chairman's motion because it is the only thing we can do, but I suggest that next year we better make some different plans, designed precisely toward forcing an authorization from the appropriate committee.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The gentleman from Illinois and I are in complete agreement on what he just said. While I do not disagree with most of what has been said heretofore by the gentleman from Georgia, I just think today that I will ask for an aye vote. I do not think it really is a vote on whether or not you agree or disagree with what the gentleman from North Carolina and the gentleman from Georgia say, it is just a matter that under practical circumstances we ought to go ahead.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the motion.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH].

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. LEVITAS. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 226, nays 193, not voting 13, as follows:

□ 1410

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The amendment reads as follows:

Senate amendment No. 87 Page 25, after line 20, insert:

LEGAL SERVICES CORPORATION

PAYMENT TO THE LEGAL SERVICES CORPORATION

For payment to the Legal Services Corporation to carry out the purposes of the Legal Services Corporation Act of 1974, as amended, $297,550,000: Provided, That the funds appropriated in this paragraph shall be expended in accordance with the provisions under the heading "Legal Services Corporation, Payment to the Legal Services Corporation" contained in Public Law 98-166 except that "fiscal year 1984", wherever it appears in such provisions, shall be construed as "fiscal year 1985"; "fiscal year 1983", wherever it appears in such provisions, shall be construed as "fiscal year 1984"; "January 1, 1984" shall be construed as "January 1, 1985"; "$6.50" shall be construed as "$7.61"; and "$13" shall be construed as "$13.57": Provided further, That notwithstanding the preceding proviso, no more than $1,158,000 shall be expended for the budget category entitled "Program Improvement and Training", no more than $1,829,000 shall be expended for the budget category entitled "Delivery Research and Experimentation", and no more than $11,283,000 shall be expended for the budget category entitled "Support for the Provision of Legal Assistance": Provided further, That none of the funds appropriated in this Act for the Corporation shall be used, directly or indirectly, by the Corporation to promulgate new regulations or to enforce, implement, or operate in accordance with regulations effective after April 27, 1984 unless the Appropriations Committees of both Houses of Congress have been notified fifteen days prior to such use of funds as provided for in section 509 of this Act.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. SMITH OF IOWA

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. SMITH of Iowa moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 87 and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by said amendment, insert the following:

LEGAL SERVICES CORPORATION

PAYMENT TO THE LEGAL SERVICES CORPORATION

For payment to the Legal Services Corporation to carry out the purposes of the Legal Services Corporation Act of 1974, as amended, $305,000,000: Provided, That the funds appropriated in this paragraph shall be expended in accordance with the provisions under the heading "Legal Services Corporation, Payment to the Legal Services Corporation" contained in Public Law 98-166 except that "fiscal year 1984", wherever it appears in such provisions, shall be construed as "fiscal year 1985"; "fiscal year 1983", wherever it appears in such provisions, shall be construed as "fiscal year 1984"; "January 1, 1984" shall be construed as "January 1, 1985"; "$6.50" shall be construed as "$7.61"; and "$13" shall be construed as "$13.57"; and shall not be denied to any grantee or contractor which received funding from the Corporation in fiscal year 1984 as a result of activities which have been found by an independent hearing officer appointed by the President of the Corporation not to constitute grounds for a denial of refunding: Provided further, That notwithstanding the previous provisions of this paragraph, $2,000,000 shall be available to increase quality legal services to the elderly by: (1) developing classroom and bar association source materials on law affecting the elderly for use by law schools, the private bar, legal services grantees, and in continuing education seminars; (2) developing plans to encourage the private bar to do more to provide better pro-bono services for elderly and higher quality paid services; (3) developing a clinical program to supplement local Legal Services Corporation grantees; and (4) disseminating the results to other law schools, legal aid societies and other interested parties; such pilot programs shall be distributed, if applicants are available, to varying size and geographically located schools; at least 50 per centum of the funds required shall come fro non-federal sources and federally funded assets and projects will not be included in in-kind services; no grant shall exceed $200,000; the application and award procedure shall not require a detailed plan or extensive paperwork so long as the recipient signs a guarantee that more than 50 per centum of the funds required shall come from non-federal sources and that federally funded assets and projects will not be included in in-kind services; the awards shall be made by July 1, 1985 and the projects shall each be completed by July 1, 1987; grantees shall not copyright the material developed and shall not charge other than private groups or individuals for such material and such charge shall be not more than approximately their net cost of production: Provided further, That notwithstanding the preceding provisos, no more than $1,158,000 shall be expended for the budget category entitled "Program Improvement and Training", no more than $1,829,000 shall be expended for the budget category entitled "Delivery Research and Experimentation", and no more than $11,283,000 shall be expended for the budget category entitled "Support for the Provision of Legal Assistance": Provided further, That none of the funds appropriated in this Act for the Corporation shall be used, directly or indirectly, by the Corporation to promulgate new regulations or to enforce, implement, or operate in accordance with regulations effective after April 27, 1984 unless the Appropriations Committees of both Houses of Congress have been notified fifteen days prior to such use of funds as provided for in section 509 of this Act.

Mr. O'BRIEN (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH] wish recognition?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. No, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. O'BRIEN] seek recognition?

Mr. O'BRIEN. Yes, Mr. Speaker, I do.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. O'BRIEN] is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER].

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, this motion goes to the heart of whether Congress and the Legal Services Corporation will have the power to punish those Legal Services Corporation local grantees which violate the laws that have been passed by the Congress of the United States and use appropriated funds to lobby local and State elected bodies and even to use public funds to influence political campaigns.

In the motion offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH] there is a clause in there which reads as follows, relative to the appropriation:

> It shall not be denied to any grantee or contractor which received funding from the corporation in the fiscal year 1984 as a result of activities which have been found by an independent hearing officer appointed by the President of the corporation not to constitute grounds for a denial of refunding.

Specifically, this clause refunds the Western Center on Law & Poverty in Los Angeles, CA, which has been the subject of much comment in an adverse report on at least two occasions by the General Accounting Office for violating the antilobbying restrictions that have been passed by the Congress of the United States.

The conference report would change the rules for refunding proceedings in the middle of the game after the Legal Services Corporation has duly denied refunding to the Western Center on Law and Poverty.

The corporation did so following procedures carefully drafted by Congress in the 1977 amendments to the Legal Services Corporation Act and the 1984 Legal Services Corporation appropriation, Public Law 98-166, and the Corporation in implementation thereof.

Ever since the corporation first implemented the 1977 amendments requiring the use of independent hearing officers, the role of the hearing officer has been to recommend the decision to the Corporation President, who is charged with making a final decision. This scheme has been operational for 6 years now and was confirmed in the 1984 appropriation bill. Just last year Congress set forth a new timeframe for denial of refunding proceedings and stipulated that the Corporation shall make such final decision within 30 days after the completion of such hearing.

Now that these processes have been followed and the Corporation President in a carefully reasoned written opinion has reached a decision, some in Congress would change the rules of the game and declare the Western Center the victor. They would do so despite the fact that this very matter is currently in litigation before the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia, civil action No. 84-406, before Judge Barrington Parker, and the Western Center continues to receive funding pending the outcome of the litigation.

It appears that should the court uphold the decision of LSC President Bogard denying funding to the Western Center, the appropriations bill would nevertheless require the refunding of this grantee.

Does Congress believe that any of the restrictions on legal services grantees will be followed if when gross violations are discovered and the Legal Services Corporation takes disciplinary actions under the due process provisions then in place, then Congress will subsequently revise the procedural rules to guarantee continued funding of the violator?

If this amendment passes, then the answer to the question that I have just posed is "yes." That means that no matter how much we legislate in this Chamber and in the other body against having the Legal Services Corporation grantees use public funds to lobby the voters and to lobby elected Government officials, whenever the Legal Services Corporation grantees are caught they can run off to a compliant Congress and get absolution and continue their funding for those kinds of grant activities.

I do not think we should be such patsies. When the law has been violated, we should stand up and deny refunding to those who have violated the law, but at the very least, when the entire matter is in litigation, we should not jump in and say that if the Legal Services Corporation exercising their management prerogatives over their grantees wins the case, then we will just turn around and say, "Forget about your decision, judge. The money just keeps on flowing to someone who has violated the law."

I would urge that this amendment be defeated. If it is defeated, I will come back with a subsequent amendment that would keep the appropriation coming, but simply remove the objectionable clause in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH] that says in effect, "We don't care what the Legal Services Corporation President decides. We don't care what the court decides. These folks continue to deserve their money," even though Congress has said, "thou shalt not use these funds for lobbying."

I thank the gentleman from Illinois for yielding and yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, speaking to this particular provision, it was put into the bill by the Senate and it involves a Los Angeles, CA, grantee.

I met in Los Angeles with some of these grantees and went over the situation. I must say I fully agree with the language that is in the bill that was insisted upon very strongly by Members of the Senate.

What we are involved with here is an alleged infraction that took place back in 1980. In the meantime, any infraction that there may have been or any policy that may have been followed at that time has been changed. At that time the grantee, the Western Law and Poverty Center, did it after they had consulted with the national office and were told that it was OK; but now we come along with a new board and they are saying that what the grantee did was not OK, so we are going to defund you.

So what happened here was that the new President of the Legal Services Corporation appointed a hearing officer to hear this matter and the hearing officer decided the case in March, ruling in favor of the grantee, the Western Law and Poverty Center. This is his hearing officer that ruled in favor of the Western Center. Then the President of the Legal Services Corporation came along and overruled the officer that he appointed to hear this matter. So what the conferees are recommending in this amendment, is that funding shall not be stopped in this particular case. That is what it amounts to.

I think on the merits that this is not an argument over whether or not we are against funds being used for lobbying. We have provided very specifically in here the last 3 years that Legal Services funds cannot be used for that purpose. Unfortunately, we are forced to bring what amounts to an authorization bill onto the floor along with this appropriation because the authorization for the Legal Services Corporation has not been extended. The appropriations bill contains a whole long list of limitations that some people in Legal Services do not like, but we have continued them from the fiscal year 1984 appropriations bill and put them in the fiscal year 1985 bill and have said that the Legal Services Corporation has got to live within these limitations.

I do not think it would be fair now to defund a present grantee in Los Angeles, because of an infraction alleged to have been made back in 1980 after the grantee had consulted the Corporation and had its actions approved by the national board of the Legal Services Corporation.

Mr. MORRISON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. MORRISON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the gentleman on his statement and also on his concurrence with the Senate amendment.

I think that it should be underscored that the activities which were the basis for the defunding action by the Legal Services Corporation were activities which were specifically funded in a special grant application by the Corporation at an earlier time and whether or not in retrospect it would seem that was an appropriate or an inappropriate use of Legal Service Corporation funds, it is certainly not the case that a grantee which relies on the judgment of the agency making the funding decision should later find themselves in a position of being defunded for doing exactly what they applied to do and what they were funded to do.

This was not general funds that were used, but these were specific funding grants for these purposes.

I think it is also important to note that under these situations, as the gentleman from Iowa has stated, this was a decision by an independent hearing officer and on several occasions this Congress has specifically provided in the statute, in the Legal Services Corporation Act, for an independent hearing officer. We have a situation here of an arbitrary interference with the decision that was made.

□ 1420

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. What would be more independent than the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia? And if the language contained in the gentleman from Iowa's motion passes, if the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia states that the Legal Services Corporation was well within its powers in denying refunding for the Western Center, the refunding will continue due to an act of Congress.

What the gentleman from Connecticut is saying is that there is no appeal from the decision of a hearing officer even to the courts of the United States. We give an appeal on practically everything, at least once as a matter of right. But what the gentleman from Connecticut is saying is that the Reagan-appointed Legal Services Corporation President and Board do not have a right of appeal when they should lose a decision at the hearing officer level, and I think that smacks of a double standard.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. I will take my time back. I will say we do not have a normal situation here. We do not have a confirmed Board for the Legal Services Corporation and I do not agree with that either. There ought to be a confirmed Board.

If we had a Board that has been appointed by the President and confirmed by the other body, that would be a different matter. But we do not have that situation.

Our disagreement is not over whether or not there should be a limitation prohibiting lobbying. There is such a provision included by reference in this legislation.

Mr. MORRISON of Connecticut. I will not prolong this except to say that I think it is important to keep in mind that this provides funding during the course of whatever appeals may follow, and certainly after a final judgment of the final court in this matter who may determine this body would be defunded. That will be a different situation and this Congress can look at it at that time. But there is no provision in the Legal Services Corporation Act which guarantees that funding will continue during the court process; only during the administrative process, and I think this is a correct protection for the clients in California who will benefit from these services.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. In closing, I just want to say to the gentleman from Wisconsin that we have taken cognizance of every criticism he has had. I know he is against funding of the Legal Services Corporation period, or has been in the past at least. But I think that we have done a good job here and recognize the very legitimate complaints he has made about the way this organization has worked. I think we have done as good as we can in this bill.

If there are no further requests for time, Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on ordering the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Did the Chair put the question on the previous question or on the motion itself?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question was on ordering the previous question.

The SENSENBRENNER. I thank the Chair.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH].

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 278, nays 138, not voting 16, as follows:

Mr. O'BRIEN (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH] wish to be heard on this motion?

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. I do, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH] for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. OBRIEN] for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. OTTINGER].

Mr. OTTINGER. Mr. Speaker, 3 months ago this Chamber voted overwhelmingly, 226 to 173, to delete funds from this bill for the National Endowment for Democracy.

I rise today to urge my colleagues to repeat that decision and vote against the motion of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH] which adds $18½ million for the National Endowment for Democracy in the USIA salaries and expenses appropriation.

Because the conference committee tucked funds for the National Endowment into the salaries and expenses of the USIA, it is necessary to vote against this amendment for the entire $545.8 million in order to be able to eliminate the endowment funds.

If that happens, I will then offer a preferential motion to recede and concur with the Senate amendment which will restore all the remainder of the appropriation for salaries and expenses without the endowment funds.

Mr. Speaker, the National Endowment for Democracy is laudible in intent, but I believe it fails the test of reasonable and accountable expenditure of taxpayers' funds. The funds are given to the Chamber of Commerce and the AFL-CIO organizations without any depth of experience in international affairs, and I am afraid that we are going to see a continuing embarrassment of the United States as they, with 100 percent funding from the Federal Government go out to try and promote democracy in the way they see it, whether it is supporting leftwing causes or rightwing causes interfering with the internal affairs of other countries. I think these government sponsored activities are bound to be resented and therefore to be counterproductive to U.S. interest. No matter how worthy the project, the United States is going to be embarrassed.

That, indeed, was the case with the first project that was undertaken with NED funds in Panama where money was given to the AFL-CIO. They gave not directly to a political party but to a labor group that backed a military-backed political candidate. That interference caused such a stir in Panama, because we were trying to interfere with their elections, that the U.S. Ambassador cabled and said, "Please stop this activity before it causes us irreparable harm and embarrassment in Panama." I think that is just bound to happen time and time again. If these organizations—and certainly the Chamber of Commerce and the AFL-CIO are adequately funded—want to do things on their own, they are quite free to do so. But to do it with 100-percent funded programs I think will just cause great danger and mischief.

We are at a time of ballooning budget deficits. Why we should fund an $18½ million project which invites private groups working with Government funds specifically to interfere in the internal affairs of other countries? I cannot see it.

I saw the "Dear Colleague" letter that the gentleman from Florida sent to us all justifying this. I would like to congratulate him because I think as a result of the concerns that I and the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. BROWN] expressed, very substantial improvements have been made in the way that the fund will operate to try and protect against abuse. However, I think the basic problems with this operation still have not been resolved.

The gentleman from Florida says that NED passed a resolution prohibiting the use of endowment funds to support candidates. but as the AFL-CIO showed in Panama, you do not have to directly back a candidate; you back a group that backs a candidate and you have the same result and the same embarrassment.

The gentleman from Florida [Mr. FASCELL] says that the USIA has good programs but not adequate funds to carry out the kinds of programs that the endowment would promote. Well, why not give USIA adequate funds then, rather than to proceed in this unaccountable way?

The gentleman from Florida says that the endowment and the USIA are not the same, and USIA does not obviate the need for the endowment. I understand that there are things that a private agency can do that the Government perhaps cannot do. But you are not really going to be able to hide the fact that these are 100-percent Government-funded programs; whatever they do is still going to be attributed to the United States.

So I think that the basic problems here still do persist, and I would urge a "no" vote on the Smith motion and then an "aye" vote on the preferential motion which I will offer.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MICA].

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, there is no sense in redebating this entire issue. The gentleman from New York has stated his position rather clearly. But I do appreciate his commendation that we did try to meet the needs of this particular issue and the concerns raised therein.

There will be—and I would simply just give this to the Members for their information—these changes to address the concerns that were brought up to the House earlier this year.

As the Members may recall, we approved this once, and then the concerns were brought to the attention of the House and we rejected it, and now we feel we have addressed the concerns of the House. There will be no funding for political parties. The funding level has been brought down to a straight line, no increase, about $18.5 million, down from $31.2 million. There is an openness now required. All records will be open to the public for review. There are no concerns there. No interference in the policy, and the Board is all agreed, no interference in foreign elections and political processes. There will be an outside auditing procedure. They have hired an outside auditor. They have also agreed and we have agreed that the GAO would perform audits. The recommendations that were given by GAO will all be put into place, most of them have been put into place, those that have not will be put into place. There will be a political balance in the distribution of the grants, and there will be no duplication of efforts from the USIA and NED.

Now, we have taken different positions. We understand that. I simply want to point out these changes. We have had a good debate, it has been a good argument, a lot of pros and cons, and now I hope we can move on with the business at hand.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the motion offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH] to recede and concur on the amendment regarding funding for the National Endowment for Democracy. I wish to associate myself with the remarks of the distinguished chairman of our Subcommittee on International Operations of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MICA].

Mr. Speaker, I will also enter into the RECORD at this point a letter my colleague have received from the Chamber of Commerce of the United States of America in support of this resolution, which in part states:

We have been strong supporters of the National Endowment for Democracy as an important new vehicle to enable the American private sector to strengthen democratic institutions abroad. The National Chamber Foundation, an affiliate of the U.S. Chamber, has been charged with carrying out the business portions of the program.

The national president, Albert D. Bourland, recommends that we support full funding of the endowment at the level contained in the conference report.

Mr. Speaker, I include the entire letter at this point in the RECORD:

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
August 3, 1984.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES: On behalf of the United States Chamber of Commerce, which is composed of nearly 200,000 businesses, I respectfully urge you to support funding for the National Endowment for Democracy in the State-USIA Appropriations bill (H.R. 5712) as recommended by the House-Senate conferees in their report.

As you know, the House deleted funding for the National Endowment because of its concerns over (1) possible involvement of Endowment grantees in political campaigns of foreign countries; (2) freedom of information; and (3) Endowment accountability to the Congress. On June 8, the National Endowment Board met to address these concerns. The Board (1) passed resolutions prohibiting use of funds to support political candidates or campaigns abroad; and (2) adopted a resolution to provide for full disclosure of Endowment grants and programs and to prohibit use of funds for domestic political purposes. As to the third concern listed above, the National Endowment for Democracy Act (P.L. 98-164) provides for oversight by the House Foreign Affairs Committee and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, as well as for regular audits by the General Accounting Office.

I believe the concerns of the House have been addressed satisfactorily by the National Endowment Board.

Therefore, I feel it is time for the United States to counter aggressively the forces of Marxism, to show the positive alternative to statism, and to encourage pluralism through strong business leadership. Prior to creation of the National Endowment for Democracy, the United States lacked the capability to support democratic institutions. The Soviets, of course, are past masters at the war of ideas. We need the National Endowment to engage the American private sector, especially the business community, in the global contest for the future of democracy.

We have been strong supporters of the National Endowment for Democracy as an important new vehicle to enable the American private sector to strengthen democratic institutions abroad. The National Chamber Foundation, an affiliate of the U.S. Chamber, has been charged with carrying out the business portions of the program.

Private enterprise is the basis of democratic society. For our part, the business community is ready to work for the national interest by supporting our counterpart business groups abroad in the drive to build private enterprise democratic societies.

I respectfully urge you to support full funding for the Endowment at the level contained in the conference report ($18.5 million).

Sincerely,

ALBERT D. BOURLAND.

Mr. Speaker, there are those who clamor that our Nation expends an inordinate amount of money on armaments and material to defend our Nation and secure its vital interests. It is thus perplexing to hear arguments from those same quarters which rail at the thought of the United States arming itself to engage efficiently in the arena of thinking and ideas. It is that very arena that the foes of democracy and the enemies of free expression are mobilizing their forces.

The National Endowment for Democracy is a new idea, a concept designed to bolster U.S. efforts to convey the virtues and merits of our democratic tradition. I believe that the Endowment has benefited significantly from close congressional scrutiny of its programs.

The gentleman from New York has contributed substantially to that scrutiny. To its credit, NED has responded to congressional and General Accounting Office recommendations. It thus deserves a chance to convey to other nations processes which could promote the aspirations of those seeking for their nations the most positive attributes of democracy.

Accordingly, I urge my colleagues to support this motion, a motion giving substance and force to the process of articulating democratic ideals.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. LAGOMARSINO].

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the gentleman from Iowa's amendment for funding for the National Endowment for Democracy.

As you know the amendment would not restore funding for the political parties.

Soon after the House acted in June to delete funding for the NED, I submitted for the RECORD two newspaper commentaries which strongly supported the continuation of the democracy program. I want to share with my colleagues, again, some of those thoughts.

The following is from an article by Morton Kondracke, entitled "Touting Democracy is Worth the Cost":

The basic conception behind the NED is for private American organizations—the Democratic and Republican Parties, the AFL-CIO and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce—to use federally supplied funds to assist democratic forces in the world openly . . . These are some of the projects the endowment has initiated or is considering.

Institution building in the third world.

The AFL-CIO has the most practice in this field and is scheduled to receive the bulk of NED money to expand its training of peasant union organizers and democratic politicians. . . . The union, the parties, and the Chamber of Commerce also work with Third World newspaper editors, religious groups and businessmen to press for democratic change in their countries.

Aid to dissidents in Communist countries.

The AFL-CIO, on its own, assisted the Polish trade union Solidarity. Other NED ideas included publication of dissident books in the West (in hopes they would filter back behind the Iron Curtain) and provision of medical and financial assistance to dissidents and their families. . . .

The Soviet Union spends vastly more money than western countries to send representatives to peace, youth and cultural conferences around the world. A NED-backed congress could strive to correct the balance. The Congress also would arrange meetings of Democrats to discuss how to foster freedom in various countries. . . .

A project to train and exchange lawyers and law students in human rights watchdog groups in Africa, Asia and Latin America. [sic]. . . .

Projects such as these could be financed by the CIA—and often have been in the past. NED is a far better way to foster democracy—an open and aboveboard way, in keeping with American values.

Another article by George Will goes to the heart of the argument about the morality of intervening in another country's affairs as represented by the NED. He says:

The moral status of an action is conditioned by the actor's intentions and results. We are a good Nation interested in nurturing good things in nations afflicted with bad regimes. Besides, we tolerate all sorts of foreign attempts to shape opinion in our open society. . . .

Many opponents have used NED's little appropriation as an excuse for preemptive indignation about imaginable violations of the everstricter rules of political hygiene that are binding only on the United States.

There is a moral failing that theologians call "scrupulosity." It involves seeing moral fault where there is none, or fanatically seeking perfect purity when that is not desirable or even possible. The assault on NED is, in part, another excuse of scrupulosity regarding foreign policy.

Congress, it sometimes seems, would like a foreign policy conducted by Emily Post with the Warren Court squinting over her shoulder lest there be any violation of procedural niceties. NED is not perfect. The controversy about it illustrates how pursuit of the perfect injures the good.

For all those who criticize the Reagan administration for relying only on military solutions to the problems of the world, the National Endowment for Democracy provides the most appropriate solution because it promotes the cause of peace and democracy without resort to any military element.

I urge my colleagues to give their strong support for continued funding of the National Endowment for Democracy.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I subscribe to the remarks of the gentlemen from Florida and California, who preceded me, and I think the Endowment's program for encouraging free democratic institutions throughout the world with grants to private-sector organizations for educational exchange and training programs is a highly motivated and effective program, and I believe we should support the motion.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume, and I will announce right now that because no other Member has asked for time, I will be the last speaker, and I will move the previous question as soon as I am finished.

□ 1500

Mr. Speaker, I want to be sure that the Members of the House know precisely what we are voting on. We had a vote on this matter when the bill was before the House, and some Members said that they did not know what they had voted on or they would not have voted that way.

All day long we have been arguing over programs that are not authorized but had to be extended by funding them in this bill. The Federal Trade Commission, the EDA, and a member of other agencies are in this category. But now we are talking about funding a program that is authorized, that was authorized in this Congress, and we are providing less money than the amount authorized. The National Endowment for Democracy was authorized for $31.3 million and this bill includes $18.5 million for the Endowment. Can we ever win? Whether it is authorized or unauthorized, somebody wants to argue about what we did.

So what we have got here is the program that is funded in this bill at $18.5 million instead of the $31.3 million, which is the authorization. In addition, there is a provision in the bill (amendment No. 119) that prohibits any of the money from going to the national political parties—a provision which the authorization did not have. That is where we are.

Now, let me tell you the effect of voting no on this amendment. If you will look at the report on page 36, we have provided this: Under salaries and expenses for the U.S. Information Agency, we provided enough money to cover $18.5 million. Then we added this:

Provided further, That not to exceed $18.5 million of the foregoing appropriation shall be available for grants to the National Endowment for Democracy as authorized by the National Endowment for Democracy Act.

Why did we put that in? Because if we had not put that in, the Endowment is entitled to $31.3 million, not $18.5 million. That is a limitation on the amount of money that they can get. The reason is that section 205 of the authorizing legislation (Public Law 98-164) provides:

Of the amounts appropriated for the United States Information Agency for each of the fiscal years 1984 and 1985, not less than $31.3 million shall be available only for a grant in accordance with title V of this Act to the National Endowment for Democracy for use in carrying out its purposes.

Now, if you defeat this motion, what you are saying is you do not want a limit on the amount that they spend and that USIA has to make available $31.3 million for the Endowment out of the salaries and expenses account. And you know where that will come from? It will come out of the Voice of America, and other USIA programs. That is the law. The $18.5 million could come out of various educational and cultural exchange programs for which there is $22.3 million in the salaries and expenses account, but most likely the $18.5 million would come out of the Voice of America for which there is $164,890,000 in the salaries and expenses account, including funds to expand the television satellite initiative, Worldnet.

A vote against my motion is a vote to reduce these other programs like Voice of America not by $18.5 million, but by $31.3 million and give it to the National Endowment for Democracy. I want you to be sure you know what you are voting on. If you vote no on this, what you are saying is you want the U.S. Information Agency to take $31.3 million, not $18.5 million out of other programs and give it as grants to this National Endowment for Democracy. You are saying $18.5 million is not enough; that you want them to have $31.3 million, and you are also saying, you have got to take that money out of Voice of America and other programs. Before you vote, you ought to know that is what you are voting on.

I ask for an aye "vote" on the motion.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH].

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. OTTINGER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 237, nays 181, not voting 14, as follows:

ANNUAL REPORT OF ACTIVITIES OF U.S. GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS AND AGENCIES DURING 1983 RELATED TO PREVENTING NUCLEAR PROLIFERATION—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, and together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

(For message, see proceedings of the Senate of today, Wednesday, August 8, 1984.)

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will take 1-minute speeches as we wait for other Members to appear on the conference reports.

CHANGING NAME OF NAVY COMMODORE

(Mr. BENNETT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. Speaker, I have introduced a bill today which changes the name of commodore to commodore-admiral.

As you know, the Air Force and the Army have four staff grades of general, starting with brigadier general and running up to major general and full general.

When the Navy went from having only three in that category to having four, as they have now done, they called the beginner, comparable to brigadier general, a commodore.

Well, the problem about that is that the word "commodore" has for centuries been used to denote a person who is in charge of a particular naval operation, a task force, a naval task force. As a matter of fact, that person could even be an enlisted man; so the word "commodore" has a very technical meaning which is used in military parlance to mean somebody who is in charge of a particular task force, regardless of rank.

So therefore, I think when the Navy went to using the name commodore, as distinguished from commodore admiral, they made a mistake, so I have introduced a bill to bring the dignity to that position that I think it should have and make it more comparable to a brigadier general in the Air Force and the Army.

I have not found anybody in the Navy, enlisted man or officer, who does not agree with me that this ought to be done, not only becaue of the prestige involved, but because of the complication involved in using the word Commodore in two separate distinct ways, one to indicate being head of a task force in the Navy and the other that would indicate an actual title.

So I hope this will be promptly considered. It may seem not very important to a lot of people, but believe me, it is important to the way in which the Navy runs its business and I hope we can take prompt action.

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BENNETT. I yield to the gentleman from Oregon.

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, I was a third class petty officer in the Navy. I wondered if the gentleman was going to do anything for what I think was one of the greatest ratings there is in the Navy.

Mr. BENNETT. I think it is and I think the gentleman's presence here in the House being a third class petty officer previously throws glamour on that position because of the courage and the ability that the gentleman has shown here in his legislative activity. It is a pleasure to serve here with the gentleman and it is an inspiration to the country to have a man of his quality.

Mr. WEAVER. Well, I want to return the compliment and thank the gentleman from Florida.

The gentleman from Florida is one of the most distinguished Members here, and always is on the right side.

FOREST POLLUTION

(Mr. WEAVER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, there was an article appearing in the New York Times science section yesterday dealing with the effects on the world environment of the increase in carbon dioxide in the atmosphere. In the last 20 years, carbon dioxide has increased from around 320 parts per million to 345 parts per million.

This is a rather striking increase in such a component of our atmosphere as carbon dioxide and it is already, they believe, having an effect on the growth rate of many plants. They have discerned an increased growth rate in pine in the high elevations in Nevada. It could have a deleterious effect on such plants as corn and grasses.

I felt, Mr. Speaker, that the various conflicting effects of these changes in our atmosphere, for instance what I have already told the House of the potential threat to our forests from certain elements of air pollution. We do not know yet exactly what forms this air pollution takes, whether it is sulphur oxides, nitrous oxides, ozone or what, but we do know that the German forests have in 1 year, one-third of them died. They believe now that the forests were dying for 15 or 20 years, but suddenly it was manifest in the forests themselves as they discerned certain trees turned brown and died, one-third of the entire German forest, a striking, shocking thing.

We are getting death among trees in the Appalachian forest, all the way from Maine down through Alabama.

The red spruce in the higher elevations have died in the eastern forests outside of Los Angeles and the San Bernardino area are rapidly dying, and this from something other perhaps than the carbon dioxide that is making some trees grow faster.

We have initial information that the rate of growth of trees, the rate of growth of the diameter of trees has been declining for 20 years in this country. Something is going on. We do not know what it is.

I conclude, Mr. Speaker, by saying that we need intensive investigation of this situation in our forests, including the tropical rain forests in the southern climes are also on their decline.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON S. 1429, SMALL BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT CENTER IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 1984

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the Senate bill (S. 1429) to amend the Small Business Act to extend and strengthen the Small Business Development Center Program, and for other purposes, and I ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

(For conference report and statement, see proceedings of the House of Monday, August 6, 1984.)

Mr. MITCHELL (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with further reading of the statement.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. MITCHELL] will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MCDADE] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. MITCHELL].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on this conference report.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the conference report on S. 1429, the Small Business Development Center Improvement Act of 1984.

The most frequently cited reason for the failure of small businesses is the lack of management assistance. Most small firms are simply too small to employ their own experts and seldom have the resources to seek outside counsel. As a result, in 1980 Congress established the Small Business Development Center Program under which the Small Business Administration is authorized to become partners with a local entity which will provide management assistance to small concerns.

The original legislation, including an interim extension, provides a sunset on this program of January 1, 1985. At the present time these centers, or SBDC's, exist in 32 States and the District of Columbia. Several additional States are expected to join the program this year. To date, on a national basis, the centers have provided assistance to almost 300,000 small businesses.

This program has proven highly successful and is deserving of continuation. The conference report extends the program until October 1, 1990.

One of the key concepts of the program is that the local partner of the SBA is required to provide matching funds on a dollar per dollar basis, but with up to one-half of the required amount being permitted to be in indirect costs or waived overhead such as the value of office space, utilities, and so forth. The conference report makes an important change in this regard. It specifically requires that the other half of the matching funds be hard cash. That is, the SBDC must actually have cash money; it will no longer be sufficient that the local partner or sponsor is paying expenses on behalf of the SBDC such as is the case now with university faculty members who do work for the SBDC but are paid by the university. In order to give everyone the opportunity to adjust to the change, however, this new statutory hard cash reqirement is phased-in over the next 4 years.

In addition, the bill makes a number of housekeeping-type changes such as—

Requiring that the grants or cooperative agreements with the SBDCs be on either a fiscal year or calendar year basis;

Reinstating an expired provision which requires applicants to conform to any State-approved plan;

Requiring the SBDC National Advisory Board to meet at least semiannually—instead of quarterly—and requiring—rather than permitting—each SBDC to establish a local advisory board; and Instructing SBA within 6 months to develop and implement a proposal for biannual evaluation of each SBDC.

I want to thank all of my colleagues on the Small Business Committee who worked on this legislation, particularly NEAL SMITH and JOE ADDABBO and our ranking minority member, JOE MCDADE, and also SILVIO CONTE.

I urge all Members to support the conference report.

□ 1540

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report on S. 1429, the Small Business Development Center Improvement Act of 1984. I would like to commend our distinguished chairman for his leadership in moving this bill through the House and conference in a most expeditious manner. The conference report will make a number of improvements in this important management assistance program in the Small Business Administration.

The SBDC Program began on a pilot basis in 1976 at eight universities. Today there are SBDC's in 32 States and the District of Columbia. In Pennsylvania the SBDC Program is comprised of 13 centers located in colleges and universities around the State. Since 1979 the Pennsylvania SBDC has served more than 22,500 small business clients in a counseling and training capacity. Mr. Speaker, the program works and I urge adoption of the conference report.

I want to commend my colleague from Maryland, the distinguished chairman of our subcommittee and our committee, for moving this bill in a most expeditious manner to get it signed into law.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report on legislation to extend and strengthen the Small Business Development Center Program.

Certainly all those of us who serve on the Small Business Committee recognize the tremendous assistance which small business development centers have provided to the small business community. Numerous studies have shown that the high small business failure rate is due to a lack of management assistance and although we cannot provide this assistance to each small business, the SBDC Program is certainly a step in the right direction.

I believe that this type of program is especially appropriate and important today. By requiring the SBDC to obtain additional matching funds at the local level, we not only insure local interest in the program but we also double our money. For fiscal year 1984, for example, the Congress appropriated $22 million for this program; however, due to the matching funds requirement, we actually were able to operate a $44 million program.

When this program was established in 1980, it was determined that when it's operational on a national basis, it would require $65 million in Federal funds and an equivalent amount in matching funds. We are now approximately one-third of the way toward this goal with new States applying for admission to the program each year and with others already in the program seeking additional funds as the program expands in the State.

I am very pleased that this conference report reiterates its support for a national program. I believe it is very crucial that the program continue to rely on a formula distributing the funds to each State according to a population formula. This will ensure that everyone is treated fairly whether they were among the first States to see the value of this program or even if they are among the last to seek participation.

I commend Chairman MITCHELL for his effort in bringing this matter before the House.

● Mr. CONTE. I rise in support of the conference report on S. 1498 and H.R.

5334, the Small Business Development Center Improvement Act of 1984.

I would like to congratulate the chairman of the committee, Mr. MITCHELL of Maryland, and the other conferees for their fine work on this important piece of legislation.

I would also like to take a moment to bring to my colleagues attention the fine work done by the small business development center headquartered at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst. Since this program was established in 1980, they have assisted nearly 5,000 clients and provided training programs that attracted over 8,500 participants. I am very pleased that so many small businesses have benefited from this program.

Finally, this program is a wise use of Federal dollars. The Massachusetts SBDC has taken surveys analyzing the increases in sales, employment, profits, and taxes paid by clients after they have received counseling. During 1981 and 1982, every Federal dollar spent by the SBDC resulted in an additional $14 being returned to the Federal Treasury. I only wish we had more programs that were as cost efficient.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support the Small Business Development Center Improvement Act of 1984.●

● Mr. HATCHER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to express my support for the Small Business Development Center Improvement Act of 1984, which will reauthorize the funding of the Small Business Development Center Program through October 1, 1990.

As a member of the House Small Business Committee, I have witnessed the efficient and effective operation of the SBDC Program, and I wholeheartedly endorse its continuation. In my home State of Georgia, the SBDC Program is recognized as one of the best in the Nation. Since it began in April 1977, the SBDC's in Georgia have provided vital management assistance and training programs. These services have improved the equity, profit, and growth potential of small businesses and have developed jobs in the private sector.

I ask my colleagues to join me in encouraging the small businessman by supporting the Small Business Development Center Improvement Act of 1984.●

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I, therefore, yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FIVE NEW INDUCTEES TO THE BASEBALL HALL OF FAME

(Mr. BOEHLERT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOEHLERT. My colleagues, I wish to call your attention to an event of international importance that will take place in my district this Sunday, August 12. On that day in beautiful Cooperstown, NY, there will be inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame five American greats of yesteryear.

I would invite all of my colleagues today upon conclusion of regular business to join me in paying tribute to Luis Aparicio, Don Drysdale, Rick Ferrell, Harmon Killebrew, and Harold "Pee Wee" Reese. These all-time great baseball players brought so much joy and happiness to all of us during their very distinguished careers, and I think it would be fitting and proper for those of us who are privileged to serve in this body, this representative body of the American people, to rally around the flag, so to speak, today, as we take a special order to honor the latest inductees to the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, NY.

While I am at it, just let me extend to one and all a warm invitation to visit the home of baseball, Cooperstown, NY. We welcome you all to the heartland of America.

PROJECT UPWARD BOUND

(Mr. HARRISON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. Speaker, it is sometimes said that out of the mouths of babes comes wisdom. A young lady who lives in my district wrote me a very wise letter about Project Upward Bound at Bloomsburg University in which she is participating, and closed her letter by observing that there was only one thing wrong with this program and that is that the present administration is not giving it enough money.

At this point I include a copy of the letter from Ms. Ronnie Doty in the RECORD:

BENTON, PA, July 24, 1984.

Congressman FRANK HARRISON,
House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR FRANK: Hello, I haven't heard from you in awhile. I hope you are ok and doing good.

I am in the six weeks summer Upward Bound program at Bloomsburg University. I attend the program through my home school, Benton High School.

The program is really different. It helps educate the students for the future. The students get to make new friends and see what people are like outside the area they live in. The students and teachers help one another out, so it's like one big family. The most important thing I think is that teachers and counselors try to help you figure out what you want to do in life and what jobs you'll like and can do.

There is a problem though, they don't have enough money to take in more students, and the cuts that are being made in Reagan's budgets are making things harder. Please encourage legislators to vote more funds for the program like ours.

Sincerely yours,

RONNIE DOTY.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 5604, MILITARY CONSTRUCTION AUTHORIZATION ACT, 1985

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 5604) to authorize certain construction at military installations for fiscal year 1985, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

(For conference report and statement, see Proceedings of the House of August 7, 1984, at page H8519.)

Mr. DELLUMS (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers be considered as read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WHITEHURST] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS].

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the conference report on H.R. 5604, the Fiscal Year 1985 Military Construction Authorization Act, represents the diligent effort of a House-Senate conference committee that met on August 1, and resolved over 300 differences.

As a result of the conference between the Senate and House on the differences in H.R. 5604, the conferees agreed to a new adjusted authorization for military construction and family housing for fiscal year 1985 of $9.1 billion.

The conference compromise is $104 million below the House figure, $166 million below the Senate figure, and $1.4 billion below the President's budget request of $10.5 billion.

For the benefit of my colleagues, I want to briefly explain how we arrived at the final authorization level.

First, a spending target of $9.2 billion in budget authority was determined to be the amount the conferees could authorize for appropriations to stay within the ceiling for the defense function being negotiated between the House and Senate in conference on H.R. 5167, the Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1985.

Second, within this target, priority was given to restoring those adequately justified projects that had been included in the budget request but deferred by either the House or the Senate for budgetary reasons.

And third, prior year savings were used to the maximum extent possible to reduce the authorization for appropriations.

In recent years, unbudgeted projects added by either the House or the Senate were included in the conference bill and authorized for construction with savings. In a departure from this policy, the conferees authorized the unbudgeted projects for appropriated funds and used the expected savings for general reductions wherever possible.

Mr. Speaker, because of time constraints, I will not go into detail on the individual items contained in the conference bill. However, there are several items I want to call to the attention of the Members.

I don't have to remind my colleagues of my total opposition to deployment of the ground launched cruise missile [GLCM]. But since deployment of GLCM is the current policy of the U.S. Government, certain facilities must be provided for the support personnel being assigned to man these weapons.

The conferees agreed to authorize $114.5 million for the GLCM program in fiscal year 1985, which is $139.1 million below the budget request. Of the $114.5 million authorized, $72.5 million is for family housing and $21.7 million is for schools.

The conferees approved $29 million for rapid deployment force facilities which is $77 million below the President's budget request. Included in the reduction was $15.1 million for construction of hardened aircraft shelters in Oman. The conferees questioned the requirement for these shelters at a contingency base.

Included in the President's budget request was $8.7 million for contingency facilities in Honduras. The House bill delete all funds for this purpose. The conferees agreed to authorize appropriations of $4.3 million for relocatable facilities designed to accommodate a 100-man Army aviation unit which will support regional intelligence requirements.

The House funded the NATO infrastructure program at $250 million. The Senate figure of $131.7 million was approved by the conference based on later information indicating that the dollar is expected to remain strong against foreign currencies through fiscal year 1985.

And family, the conference approved $424.4 million for the Guard and Reserve which is $33.6 million above the budget request. The conferees expect a number of high priority projects to be constructed with the additional funds.

This briefly summarizes the major actions of the conference. Time does not permit going into greater detail here, but the conferees believe the bill agreed to in conference will meet the construction needs of the military departments during fiscal year 1985. Mr. Speaker, I urge adoption of the conference report on H.R. 5604.

□ 1550

I would simply state: In terms of the conference report that we are reporting back to the House floor, I would say that the House conferees attempted diligently to maintain the integrity of the House position on all of the various matters.

I would say for those Members who supported the bill as it passed the House, there is virtually nothing in this bill that would cause any Member who voted for the bill as it left the House to change that vote in the conference.

For those Members and I find myself one of them, an interesting situation I find myself in—who opposed the bill brought to the floor, for those Members who opposed the legislation that left the floor to conference with the Senate, there is nothing in this bill that would require them to change their vote.

The one area I would like to focus on just briefly is the facility in Honduras. For those of my colleagues who feel as strongly as this gentleman feels about American policy in Central America, I find the inclusion of this particular item quite repugnant, but I find myself in the minority.

I point this out to my colleagues to understand that this is, in my estimation, a policy different from the bill that left the House and the one that comes back from conference. To simply summarize, as I said, we attempted to maintain the integrity of the House.

For those Members who supported it, you can continue to support this conference as I think this conference embraces the policies that are the general majority point of view of the House of Representatives. For those of my colleagues who oppose the bill, I think they can continue to oppose the bill, as money continues to be in this legislation for facilities associated with MX, B-1, cruise missile, facilities for Honduras, and so forth.

Finally, I would like to thank all of my colleagues who worked on the conference. It is just a great pleasure to work with these Members. They all are very diligent and hardworking.

Finally, I would like to compliment the staff who in my estimation have done an extraordinary job. I believe any of us who believe we can function without capable staff people are living in a never-never land.

I think one has to be realistic and humble enough to understand that you are only as good as the people who help you to continue to carry out your function. The staff in this instance were very diligent in helping us resolve over 300 items of difference with the Senate.

With that explanation, Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WHITEHURST].

Mr. WHITEHURST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report on H.R. 5604, the fiscal year 1985 Military Construction Authorization Act.

As was stated earlier, there were several hundred differences between the Senate and House versions of the bill. Nevertheless, the House and Senate conferees were able to resolve the differences without much difficulty because most of them were not of a substantive nature. The conferees settled on a compromise figure of $9,133,908,000 which is below the amounts originally authorized by both the House and Senate.

Even though the compromise figure is nearly $1.4 billion less than the $10.5 billion requested by the administration, the conferees believe that the amount approved is sufficient to provide the facilities most needed by the services to upgrade our overall defense.

In short, we have before us a measure that will buy our Nation improved readiness at a reduced spending rate. As one who served on the conference, I believe we are bringing before both Houses a sound compromise that deserves the support of this body. I urge the adoption of the conference report on H.R. 5604.

Parenthetically, Mr. Speaker, we owe a great deal of credit to the gentleman from California for his very effective leadership of this subcommittee. This gentleman serves on that subcommittee and knows how fair he has been in dealing with policy issues that he finds himself in disagreement with, but in no way or ever has he attempted to impose those views on the majority. He has always provided for fair debate.

I would add that having been a conferee on this bill with the Senate, I was filled with pride with his leadership on the House side; fighting for the House positions, compromising where necessary. And certainly the speed with which this conference report was agreed to, it was the better part of a morning's worth of work in resolving the remaining differences; is largely due to the very effective leadership of our chairman.

I have no further requests for time, Mr. Speaker, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DELLUMS. Thank you very much.

First let me thank my colleague for his kind and very generous remarks and I deeply appreciate it.

Mr. Speaker, I look forward to serving with my colleague for an extended period of time. I thank him very much.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

● Mr. EDGAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the fiscal year 1985 military construction bill. On balance this is a bill that has many attractions and, among other things, attempts to address inefficiencies and unsafe working conditions at certain of our military installations.

I am particularly pleased that the bill contains $12.6 million for a new electrical distribution system at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. The current system has long been obsolete and replacement has been a top priority of the yard for many years.

Just over the past 5 years, for example, there have been in excess of 1,000 failures in a system dating back to the Second World War. Such failures are not only inefficient—workers are sent home early and the taxpayer picks up the bill—but, more importantly, they create unsafe working conditions. Personnel at the yard should not be exposed to such hazards; this system will go a long way toward reducing these dangers.●

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the conference report just agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

COMMISSION TO ASSIST IN FIRST OBSERVANCE OF HOLIDAY HONORING DR. MARTIN LUTHER KING, JR.

Mrs. HALL of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 5890) to establish a commission to assist in the first observance of the Federal legal holiday honoring Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Congress finds that—

(1) January 20, 1986, marks the first observance of the Federal legal holiday, established by Public Law 98-144, honoring the birthday of Martin Luther King, Jr.;

(2) such holiday should serve as a time for Americans to reflect on the principles of racial equality and nonviolent social change espoused by Martin Luther King, Jr.; and

(3) it is appropriate for the Federal Government to coordinate efforts with Americans of diverse backgrounds and with private organizations in the first observance of the Federal legal holiday honoring Martin Luther King, Jr.

SEC. 2. There is established a commission to be known as the Martin Luther King, Jr. Federal Holiday Commission (hereinafter in this Act referred to as the "Commission").

SEC. 3. The purposes of the Commission are—

(1) to encourage appropriate ceremonies and activities throughout the United States relating to the first observance of the Federal legal holiday honoring Martin Luther King, Jr., which occurs on January 20, 1986; and

(2) to provide advice and assistance to Federal, State, and local governments and to private organizations with respect to the observance of such holiday.

SEC. 4. (a) The Commission shall be composed of—

(1) four officers from the executive branch, appointed by the President;

(2) four Members of the House of Representatives, appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives in consultation with the minority leader of the House of Representatives;

(3) four Senators, appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate in consultation with the majority and minority leaders of the Senate;

(4) Coretta Scott King and two other members of the family surviving Martin Luther King, Jr., appointed by such family;

(5) two individuals representing the Martin Luther King, Jr. Center for Non-Violent Social Change (a not-for-profit organization incorporated in the State of Georgia), appointed by such organization; and

(6) fourteen individuals other than officers or employees of the United States or Members of Congress, appointed by the members of the Commission under paragraphs (1) through (5) of this subsection from among individuals representing diverse interest groups, including individuals representing labor, business, civil rights, and religious groups, and entertainers.

(b) Not more than half of the members of the Commission appointed under each of paragraphs (2), (3), (5), and (6) of subsection (a) shall be of the same political party.

(c) Members shall be appointed for the life of the Commisison. Any vacancy in the Commission shall not affect its powers, but shall be filled in the manner in which the original appointment was made.

(d) Members of the Commission shall serve without pay, but may, subject to section 7, be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, while away from their homes or regular places of business in the performance of services for the Commission.

SEC. 5. (a) The Commission shall first meet within 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act. At this first meeting the Commission shall elect a chairperson from among its members and shall meet thereafter at the call of the chairperson.

(b) The Commission may encourage the participation of, and accept, use, and dispose of donations of money, property, and personal services from, individuals and public and private organizations to assist the Commission in carrying out its responsibilities under this Act.

(c) The provisions of the Federal Advisory Committee Act shall not apply to the Commission established under this Act.

SEC. 6. (a) The Commission may appoint a director and a staff of not more than five persons, without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service. Subject to section 7, the Commission shall set the rates of pay for the director and staff, except that the director may not be paid at a rate in excess of the maximum rate of pay payable for grade GS-18 of the General Schedule under section 5332 of title 5, United States Code, and no staff member may be paid at a rate in excess of the maximum rate of pay payable for grade GS-13 of such General Schedule.

(b)(1) Upon the request of the Commission, the head of any department or agency of the United States may detail, on a nonreimbursable basis, any of the personnel of such department or agency to the Commission to assist it in carrying out its responsibilities under this Act.

(2) Each head of such department or agency is authorized to cooperate with and assist the Commission in carrying out its responsibilities under this Act.

SEC. 7. All expenditures of the Commission shall be made from donated funds.

SEC. 8. Not later than April 20 1986, the Commission shall submit a report to the President and the Congress concerning its activities under this Act.

SEC. 9. The Commission shall cease to exist after submitting its report under section 8.

Mrs. HALL of Indiana (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the requested of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the initial request of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

Mr. TAYLOR. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, and I do not intend to object. I also rise in support of the motion made by the gentlewoman from Indiana to concur with the Senate amendment to H.R. 5890 which establishes a commission to encourage appropriate nationwide ceremonies relating to the first observance of the Federal holiday honoring the late Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. The Commission would also assist Federal, State, and local governments and private organizations in planning for this first observance.

H.R. 5890 as amended by the Senate makes several very minor technical and stylistic changes which do not alter the bill in any way from that which passed the House on July 24, 1984.

Mr. Speaker, I encourage my colleagues to support the Senate changes to H.R. 5890.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the initial request of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DESIGNATING WEEK OF FEBRUARY 17, 1985, TO RECOGNIZE BIG BROTHERS AND BIG SISTERS VOLUNTEERS

Mrs. HALL of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 594) designating the week beginning February 17, 1985, as a time to recognize volunteers who give their time to become Big Brothers and Big Sisters to youths in need of adult companionship, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

Mrs. LLOYD. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, and I do not intend to object, I am pleased that we are considering this resolution today and want to thank Representative HALL for bringing it to the floor. The House frequently approves commemorative legislation recognizing various groups and industries for their contributions to our society. I don't think any volunteer organization has done more for the children of one-parent families in America than Big Brothers and Big Sisters. This resolution acknowledges the work of this special group of individuals. They voluntarily assume one of the most difficult tasks any adult can undertake, that of guiding young people.

Big Brothers and Big Sisters of America gave us the first national service program for boys and girls who have only one parent. And as those of us who are parents know, one individual cannot possibly provide all the attention growing children need. Children today face challenges and temptations unthought of just a few years ago and many single parents are unprepared to cope with the problem alone. Currently there are over 12 million children in the United States who live in single parent families. In the absence of an extended family, a Big Brother or a Big Sister can help fill an emptiness by providing adult companionship and guidance.

Childhood is the critical time of human development. If we can provide the proper stability and influence, our children are better prepared to face life and become productive citizens. Big Brothers and Big Sisters encourage the child to adopt good behavior and study habits by emphasizing the child's self-worth.

The quality of life in the future depends on the values we instill in our children today. Big Brother/Big Sister volunteers provide a valuable service toward that end and I want to join with my colleagues in applauding their efforts.

Mr. COATS. Mr. Speaker, I had the privilege of sponsoring with Congresswoman MARILYN LLOYD legislation acknowledging Big Brothers/Big Sisters volunteers for their service with children. At this time, I would like to thank Congresswoman LLOYD for all her efforts in helping obtain passage of House Joint Resolution 594 which designates the week beginning February 17, 1985, as "Big Brothers/Big Sisters Week." Of course, we could not have accomplished this goal without the support of our colleagues, and I sincerely appreciate their cosponsorship of House Joint Resolution 594.

As a former big brother and as past president of Big Brothers/Big Sisters in Fort Wayne, I am personally familiar with and strongly support the operation and goals of this organization. The Congress, itself, recognized the important service of Big Brothers/Big Sisters when it issued a congressional charter in 1958.

For over 80 years, one-parent children have benefited from the friendship and care extended by volunteers in this special one-on-one relationship. Today, there are over 450 agencies serving approximately 100,000 children a year. These statistics reflect not only the achievements of Big Brothers/Big Sisters but the continual need for this national youth organization.

David Bahlman, executive vice president of Big Brothers/Big Sisters of America, testified before the House Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families that as children from father-absent families grow in numbers, so must society's sensitivity to their situation. Big Brothers/Big Sisters volunteers can assist children from father-absent homes to handle the challenges presented to them in a manner which will allow them to grow and mature into healthy, productive adults.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters of America is a national nonprofit youth organization based on a one-to-one friendship between an adult volunteer and a school-age child from a one-parent home who needs special, extra adult attention. Volunteers make a commitment to spend 3 to 6 hours a week for at least a year. Once a match is made, goals are set and regular contacts maintained between the parent, child, volunteer, and agency staff. Not every child from a one-parent home needs a big brother or sister, but for an estimated one-fifth of these children, there are no such supports. Big Brothers/Big Sisters is not a substitute parent but an ally who can help a child through a difficult period and the challenges of growing up.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters in just over 80 years has become the fastest growing youth-service organization in the United States. Field studies have established this as a highly effective means for preventing juvenile delinquency and emotional problems, and preparing children for adulthood. It is also cost effective. A match costs about $650 a year compared with $3,000 for each child entered into the juvenile justice system, or $18,000 to $65,000 a year for institutionalization.

While the demographics of our society may be changing, the needs of our children are not. I think it is more than time that we nationally recognize the Big Brother/Big Sister volunteers who give so much of their time, talents and love to help ensure the well-being of our children, and I am proud to have cosponsored with Congresswoman LLOYD this most worthy legislation.

Mrs. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

H.J. RES. 594

Whereas many girls and boys in the United States suffer from a lack of parental time and attention because of the death of one or both of their parents, the divorce of their parents, or for other reasons;

Whereas this deprivation can result in serious problems for these children and their communities; and

Whereas there is a dire need for volunteers to serve as older brothers and sisters who can give these children the individual support, help, and counseling of a stable adult friend: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the week beginning February 17, 1985, is designated as a time to recognize the contributions of volunteers who give their time to become Big Brothers and Big Sisters to youths in need of adult companionship and the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling on the people of the United States to observe such week with appropriate celebrations and activities.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATIONAL JEROME KERN DAY

Mrs. HALL of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 583) to designate January 27, 1985, as "National Jerome Kern Day," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resloution, as follows:

Whereas Jerome D. Kern is considered "The Father of the American Musical Theater";

Whereas Jerome Kern composed over 1,000 songs and 108 complete theatrical scores, including the renowned favorites "Lovely to Look At", "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes", "All the Things You Are", "Look for the Silver Lining", and his most popular score, "Showboat";

Whereas Jerome Kern was the honored recipient of two Academy Awards during his lifetime for his works "The Way You Look Tonight" and"The Last Time I Saw Paris";

Whereas the works of Jerome Kern have not only enriched the lives of countless Americans, but are enjoyed to this day by millions of people throughout the world;

Whereas January 27, 1985, marks the 100th anniversary of Jerome Kern's birth; and

Whereas the music industry is planning a year-long tribute to Jerome Kern's Centenary: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That January 27, 1985, is designated "National Jerome Kern Day", and the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe such a day with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

● Mr. LEVINE of California. Mr. Speaker, as the author of House Joint Resolution 583, I urge my colleagues to designate January 27, 1985, as "National Jerome Kern Day." I would like to take this opportunity to thank Congresswoman KATIE HALL chairwoman of the Subcommitte on Census and Population, and Kathy Jurado of her staff for their assistance in bringing this legislation to the floor. I would also like to thank Majority Leader WRIGHT and over 200 of my colleagues for their support of this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, January 27 of next year will mark the 100th anniversary of one of Broadway's greatest composers, Jerome Kern. Mr. Kern is in fact often recognized as the "Father of the American Musical Theater."

For many decades, Jerome Kern's music has entertained a listening public worldwide. During his career, Mr. Kern composed over 1,000 songs and 108 complete theatrical scores. He is responsible for writing such popular classics as "Look for the Silver Lining," "Lovely To Look At," and "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes." No listing of Mr. Kern's credits would be complete without reference to his most popular score, "Showboat," which included such famous songs as "Make Believe," "Ol' Man River," and "Why Do I Love You?"

I am pleased to inform my colleagues that the music industry itself is planning a year-long international centennial tribute to Jerome Kern, complete with tributes staged both in New York City and Washington, DC.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this resolution to honor this great man who brought such beautiful music to the world. He will long be remembered.●

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

HAWAII STATEHOOD SILVER JUBILEE DAY

Mrs. HALL of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the Senate Joint Resolution (S.J. Res. 248) designating August 21, 1984, as "Hawaii Statehood Silver Jubilee Day," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate Joint Resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I do not intend to object, I urge all my colleagues to join me in supporting House Joint Resolution 546, which designates August 21, 1984, as "Hawaii Statehood Silver Jubilee Day." The resolution recognizes the 25th birthday of Hawaii's admission as a State.

Observance of the anniversary of statehood is important in view of Hawaii's long struggle to win the right to become the 50th State. In recognition of Hawaii's strategic military importance in the Pacific, the U.S. Congress officially annexed Hawaii on August 12, 1898. The Nation's new possession was quickly organized as a territory with Sanford Ballard Dole as its first Governor, taking office on June 14, 1900.

Statehood was first proposed during the reign of King Kamehameha III and became a more defined goal shortly after World War I when Hawaii's Delegate to Congress, Prince Jonah Kuhio Kalanianaole, introduced a bill to that effect. More strenuous efforts were made in the 1930's when Samuel Wilder King was Delegate, and this effort continued after World War II by Delegate Joseph Rider Farrington and after his death, by his widow, Delegate Elizabeth Farrington. It was in 1940 that a plebiscite showing a 2-to-1 vote in favor of statehood was conducted; in 1950, a Constitutional Convention was held to draft Hawaii's modern constitution.

All these efforts finally bore fruit in 1959, when John A. Burns was Delegate, and both Houses of Congress passed the landmark legislation granting Hawaii statehood. President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed into law "an act to provide for the admission of the State of Hawaii into the Union" on March 18, 1959. This act required a vote by the people of Hawaii on the question of statehood and was overwhelmingly passed by a 17-to-1 margin. Hawaii was thus officially admitted to the Union on August 21, 1959.

I proudly encourage each and every one of you to join me in recognizing this important date, Hawaii's Statehood Silver Jubilee Day, by lending full support to House Joint Resolution 546.

● Mr. HEFTEL of Hawaii. Mr. Speaker, on August 21, 1984, Hawaii celebrates the 25th anniversary of its admission as a State.

For all of us who call Hawaii our home, it is our silver jubilee. It celebrates the culmination of a 40-year struggle to attain equal status for Hawaii's people with their brothers and sisters on the mainland. In 1919, Prince Jonah Kuhio Kalanianaole introduced the first Hawaii statehood bill.

Congress ignored the Islands' early efforts to gain admission as a State. By 1935, however, Hawaii's case proved too strong to be disregarded. Hawaii's population exceed that of four States. Its area equaled or exceeded that of six. Hawaii's economy was demonstrably capable of sustaining self-government. Indeed, her people's annual contributions to the Federal Treasury exceeded those of 15 States.

From 1935 to 1959 four strong Hawaii patriots eloquently and indefatigably argued Hawaii's cause. Delegates to Congress, Samuel Wilder King, Joseph and Elizabeth Farrington, and John A. Burns, saw Hawaii through over 30 congressional investigations. Thousands of pages of testimony attested to Hawaii's credentials to become a State, and congressional investigators swelled the Islands' tourist trade.

Yet time and time again Hawaii's ambitions were thwarted. Opponents balked at her multiethnic population.

They questioned the patriotism of the Island's large number of aliens.

The curse of McCarthyism also slowed Hawaii's progress. Statehood opponents saw in the collective efforts of Hawaii's laboring community the threat of Communist influence in the Islands. Hawaii's supporters answered both charges. In 1935 the Islands' alien population was no larger than that of Boston and New York. But unlike Boston's Irish or Italians, the majority of Hawaii's aliens had no recourse. National immigration laws blatantly discriminated against them. It specifically prohibited the naturalization of first-generation Japanese immigrants.

During World War II, Hawaii's Asian population answered the charge of disloyalty with their blood. In Italy and France, Japanese-Americans of the 442d Regimental Combat Team, men like DAN INOUYE and SPARK MATSUNAGA, fought and died to defend democracy and to demonstrate to their countrymen the patriotism of Americans of Japanese ancestry. The 442d emerged from World War II as the most heavily decorated outfit in the U.S. Army.

Those same veterans returned to Hawaii, educated themselves on the GI bill of rights, and entered the mainstream of Island life. They practiced law and medicine. They taught in schools. They entered politics and joined the labor movement. And their example sustained the statehood movement.

Finally, on March 11 and 12, 1959, after a quarter century of congressional study, the Senate and House passed the Hawaii statehood bill; 6 months later, President Dwight David Eisenhower proclaimed Hawaii our Nation's 50th State.

That proclamation ushered in a new era in American history. Coupled with the Civil Rights Act of 1957, the acceptance of a State whose population was overwhelmingly noncaucasian constituted a reaffirmation of the egalitarian principles of Jefferson and Jackson, of Lincoln and Roosevelt, which are this country's greatness. By admitting Hawaii to the Union, Congress, the President, and the American people expressed their faith in the ability of all men and women—Hawaiian, Chinese, Japanese, Filipino, Korean—to govern themselves democratically.

Over the past quarter century, blacks, Hispanics, native Americans, and women have also proclaimed their right to share in our Nation's egalitarian dream. And the Nation has responded with the Civil Rights Acts of 1964 and 1965 and with guarantees of equal housing and equal employment opportunity.

Over the past quarter century, we in Hawaii have continued the struggle for social equality. We have embraced increasing numbers of new immigrants: from the Philippines, Samoa, Vietnam, Cambodia, and Laos. We've pledged ourselves to integrating them into the social, economic, and political fabric of island society.

We've committed ourselves as well to righting past wrongs. No people has contributed so much to the spirit and harmony of Island life as Native Hawaiians. Yet history has wronged them, and they seek redress. We in public life will continue to do all that we possibly can to secure justice for them.

No one will work harder in that endeavor and in seeking the general good than my esteemed colleague in this body, DANIEL AKAKA. He is a true keiki o ka aina, a child of the land. As all of you well know, he embodies the spirit of aloha. In his concern for others, his generosity, in his very demeanor, he demonstrates the Hawaiian attributes which have created Hawaii's social harmony.

To be sure, over the last 25 years we in Hawaii have known difficulties. But we have acknowledged them and, in the spirit of aloha, we have struggled and are struggling to meet them. And we remain, as we were 25 years ago when this body found us fit for admission, a strong bastion of patriotism. As in World War II, our sons have fought and died in Korea and Indochina. In our military installations, we help sustain America's capacity to defend itself yet again, if need be.

So Hawaii's Statehood Silver Jubilee truly belongs to all Americans. Let us exult together in the accomplishments of these past 25 years. And let us affirm again, as we did on August 21, 1959, our patriotism and our belief in equality for all.●

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

S.J. RES. 248

Whereas, on March 12, 1959, Americans were thrilled to learn that the United States House of Representatives, by a vote of three hundred and twenty-three to eighty-nine, had approved statehood for Hawaii, following the favorable United States Senate vote of seventy-six to fifteen the day before;

Whereas President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed the Hawaii Statehood Bill on March 18, 1959;

Whereas, pursuant to the provisions of the Hawaii Statehood Act, a plebiscite was held in the territory of Hawaii and on June 27, 1959, the people of Hawaii voted one hundred and thirty-two thousand nine hundred to seven thousand eight hundred in favor of statehood;

Whereas President Eisenhower proclaimed Hawaii the fiftieth State on August 21, 1959;

Whereas the admission of Hawaii to the Union has proven to be of immense benefit both to the United States itself and the State of Hawaii;

Whereas Hawaii is essential to our national security as the site of the headquarters of United States military and naval forces in the Pacific at Pearl Harbor, and is the location of the Army's Schofield Barracks, the Air Force's Hickam and Wheeler Air Force Bases, the Kaneohe Marine Corps Air Station, and other defense facilities;

Whereas Hawaii is our Nation's largest producer of sugarcane and pineapple and its only major domestic source of coffee, macadamia nuts, and certain species of decorative flowers, and is a leader in the development of commercial aquaculture;

Whereas Hawaii is also outstanding as a leader in astronomy, in ocean science, and alternate energy research and development, and in the extent and quality of its tourism industry;

Whereas the State of Hawaii contributes significantly to the national balance of trade, operating Hawaii Foreign-Trade Zone numbered 9 and Subzone numbered 9-A, welcoming hundreds of thousands of foreign tourists, and serving as a mid-Pacific base for United States and foreign commercial interchange;

Whereas Hawaii is the site of the unique, congressionally-funded Center for Cultural and Technical Interchange between East and West;

Whereas Hawaii is blessed with great natural beauty, clean waters, pure air, and extraordinary scenery; and

Whereas Hawaii's multiethnic people, in their personal lives and in the various social and civil institutions and policies they have formed, show a warm spirit of aloha, and have expressed this spirit in their Constitution's Preamble, ". . . with an understanding and compassionate heart toward all the peoples of the Earth . . .": Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That August 21, 1984, be known throughout our Nation as "Hawaii Statehood Silver Jubilee Day" in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary—the Silver Jubilee—of Hawaii's Statehood.

SEC. 2. The President be requested and authorized to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States and all Federal, State, and local governments to observe "Hawaii Statehood Silver Jubilee Day" with observances and ceremonies appropriate to its importance.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATIONAL DRUG ABUSE EDUCATION AND PREVENTION WEEK

Mrs. HALL of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 529) to designate the week of September 23, 1984, through September 29, 1984, as "National Drug Abuse Education and Prevention Week," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object and I do not intend to object.

Mr. Speaker, drug abuse is one of the most serious health problems we have today. I have worked hard to strengthen our laws to reduce the flow of illegal drugs; however, any successful solution to our current drug problem depends on the education of our society to the harmful effects of drug abuse.

The recent statistics reveal that drug abuse in America is the highest of any developed nation in the world; 41 percent of our young people regularly abuse alcohol and it is the single leading cause of death among 15 to 24-year-olds. One in 16 high school seniors smokes marijuana on a daily basis, and 34 percent of high school seniors regularly abuse illegal drugs. Other statistics show that more than just health problems are associated with drug abuse. Between 50 and 60 percent of all property crimes are drug related. Drug abuse costs thousands of lives and millions of dollars each year in addition to the pain and suffering of the individual, family, and friends. Almost every American will be touched in one way or another by the effects of drug abuse.

We truly need to focus on the problem of drug abuse. We must recognize that children are faced with drugs and the pressure to use drugs at a very young age. However, this is not just a problem the young must face. If we all start talking about drugs in a more open and realistic manner, discussing all the effects of legal and illegal drug abuse, then all of us will be better able to make responsible decisions.

In an effort to focus national attention on this serious problem I have sponsored House Joint Resolution 529 which would designate the week of September 23-29 as "National Drug Abuse Education and Prevention Week." This week corresponds with the third annual National Conference of the National Federation of Parents for Drug-Free Youth. This organization has been deeply involved in promoting drug abuse education among our young people and was instrumental in the planning and publicizing of the highly successful "Chemical People" program. We must continue our fight against drug abuse and the best way to start is with an informed public, one that knows the effects of drug abuse and its enormous cost to our people. I urge all of my colleagues to participate in this nationwide effort.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Indiana [Mrs. HALL]?

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object, and I do not intend to object.

● Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in support of House Joint Resolution 529, designating the week of September 23 through September 29, 1984, as "National Drug Abuse Education and Prevention Week." Narcotics trafficking and drug abuse have reached epidemic proportions in this Nation. It is a multibillion-dollar business activity—exceeding $100 billion annually in the United States alone. The cost of this activity is compounded by the economic and social costs to those adversely affected by illicit drug use. The effect on our Nation's youth is especially alarming.

As the ranking minority member of the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, I have witnessed the significant efforts of the administration to help control the supply of illicit drugs that are adversely affecting our citizens. While these efforts must be continued and intensified, there is no substitute for an increased awareness by our parents and children on the evils of drug abuse. In this regard, Mrs. Reagan is to be congratulated for her continuing efforts to help raise the consciousness of the public regarding the dangers of drug abuse.

The designation of National Drug Abuse Education and Prevention Week will provide an opportunity for all of us to concentrate our efforts on educating our children, teachers, and parents as to the deadly effects of drug abuse. In that connection, the distinguished chairman of the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL], and I recently introduced H.R. 5990, the State and Local Narcotics Control Assistance Act which is designed to provide increased Federal resources to State and local governments to assist them in drug law enforcement, treatment, and education.

Mr. Speaker, I commend the distinguished gentleman from Florida [Mr. BENNETT] for introducing this resolution and for his dedicated efforts in helping to alert the citizens of our Nation as to the dangers of drug abuse. I also would like to commend the gentlelady from Indiana [Mrs. HALL] for her leadership in bringing this measure to the floor of the House, and accordingly, I urge my colleagues to support this resolution.●

● Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Joint Resolution 529 which would designate the week of September 23-29, 1984, as "National Drug Abuse Education and Prevention Week." The designation of this week to encourage drug abuse education and prevention activities in local communities is particularly appropriate because it corresponds with the third annual national conference of the National Federation of Parents for Drug-Free Youth. This group has played an important role in educating parents, teachers and other community leaders throughout the country about the dangers of drug abuse and has helped to mobilize the energies of local communities in effective drug prevention activities.

Drug abuse and drug trafficking are pervasive in the United States today and the problems they cause continue to mount. The social costs of drug abuse and drug trafficking are enormous, and the cost in terms of human suffering and lives wasted and lost is incalculable.

Combating drug abuse requires a coordinated, comprehensive, long-term national strategy that attacks the drug problem on all fronts. Our Federal Government must make the international control of narcotics a high foreign policy priority and use strong diplomatic initiatives to eradicate drug crops in source countries and curtail the international production, processing and transshipment of illegal drugs. Our domestic law enforcement agencies must be given the resources they need to interdict drug smuggling, dismantle trafficking organizations and put drug criminals in jail. We must provide treatment for the victims of drug abuse and expand our knowledge of drug abuse through increased research. We must also prevent the spread of drug abuse by educating our youngsters and all our citizens about the serious dangers drugs pose.

Implementing this strategy requires the full commitment of our Federal, State and local governments and the strong, voluntary participation of the private sector and our local communities all working together. The observance of "National Drug Abuse Education and Prevention Week" will make a valuable contribution to this strategy by increasing the awareness of drug abuse problems and promoting effective responses. As chairman of the Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control and as a cosponsor of House Joint Resolution 529, I am pleased to support this worthwhile effort. I commend the gentleman from Florida [Mr. BENNETT] for his leadership in sponsoring this legislation again this year and also the gentlewoman from Indiana [Mrs. HALL] for bringing this important measure to the floor.●

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Indiana [Mrs. HALL]?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

H.J. RES. 529

Whereas the illegal drug trade consists of approximately $79,000,000,000 in retail business per year;

Whereas removing the demand for drugs would reduce the illegal drug trade;

Whereas drug abuse destroys the future of many of the young people and adults in the Nation;

Whereas the eradication of drug abuse requires a united mobilization of national resources, including law enforcement and educational efforts; and

Whereas the most effective deterrent to drug abuse is education of parents and children in the home, classroom, and community: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the week of September 23, 1984, through September 29, 1984, is designated as "National Drug Abuse Education and Prevention Week" and the President as authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to participate in drug abuse education and prevention programs in their communities and encouraging parents and children to investigate and discuss drug abuse problems and possible solutions.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATIONAL ADULT DAY CARE CENTER WEEK

Mrs. HALL of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 505) designating the week beginning September 23, 1984, as "National Adult Day Care Center Week," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

H.J. RES. 505

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

Whereas there are nearly eight hundred adult day care centers nationwide providing a safe and positive environment to partially disabled adults and senior citizens in need of daytime assistance and supervision;

Whereas adult day care centers provide necessary health maintenance functions and medical care, including medication monitoring, therapies, and health education, and are operated by professional staffs who identify the need for additional health services and make appropriate referrals;

Whereas adult day care centers provide opportunities for social interaction to otherwise isolated individuals and assist them in attaining and maintaining a maximum level of independence; and

Whereas these centers offer relief to families who otherwise must care for disabled elderly persons on a twenty-four-hour-per-day basis: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the week beginning September 23, 1984, is designated "National Adult Day Care Center Week". The President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe that week with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

● Ms. SNOWE. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that House Joint Resolution 505 designating the week beginning September 23, 1984, as National Adult Day Care Center Week passed today. As an original cosponsor of this resolution, my support for these centers is part of my longstanding commitment toward improving the quality of life for senior citizens.

To date, there are approximately 800 established adult day care centers in the United States, and according to the National Council on Aging, it is anticipated that more than 200 additional centers will be established annually.

Adult day care programs typically serve the impaired older person who cannot live entirely independently, but who nevertheless is not a candidate for a nursing home. Trained professionals provide comprehensive care during the day, allowing participants to return home at night and on weekends. The primary purpose and obvious benefits of such centers are: to prevent premature institutionalization; to relieve families of the burden of full time care; to help individuals remain independent for as long as possible; and to curtail health care costs.

Such day care also provides a welcome and needed respite for the caretaking family who cannot afford the time and expense of full-time institutional or home supervision. While at the center, the person is cared for and feels less of a burden while the family is not strained even further financially because someone had to give up a job to care for a mother or father.

This is particularly significant for care taking families of victims suffering from cognitive disorders such as Alzheimer's disease. Alzheimer's disease is a degenerative brain disorder, and is in fact the fourth leading cause of death in this country. Victims suffer from 3 to 20 years, and in the process lose control of most mental and bodily functions. Persons in the early stages of Alzheimer's disease, however, are capable of involvement in some meaningful activity. Adult day care centers can save institutional costs by allowing families to keep victims at home longer during these early stages of the illness.

Health care for the elderly remains fragmented and expensive in this country. Adult day care centers provide a needed alternative to the more expensive long-term care provided by nursing homes and other institutions. Representative dollar comparisons of day care programs and other long-term care costs are revealing. Adult day care costs approximate $22 per day. For this comparatively small amount, a participant receives one or two meals per day, transportation, nursing care, various therapeutic treatments if needed, stimulating activities and peer socialization for 6 to 10 hours per day. Further, subsidies to assist low-income families are available in many States. In comparison, nursing home care costs run about $60 per day. Clearly, day care does not provide the 24-hour care that these institutions provide, but it does meet the needs of many families who without day care would have to seek nursing home placement at a much greater cost.

By designating the week beginning September 23, 1984, as "National Adult Day Care Center Week," Congress can perform a valuable public service. As adult day care centers become more available in our communities, and as their services become better known, I am convinced families will find these programs to be a welcomed, affordable alternative to the long term, and often unnecessary institutionalization of their loved ones.●

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATIONAL SEWING MONTH

Mrs. HALL of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the Senate joint resolution (S.J. Res. 302) to designate the month of September 1984 as "National Sewing Month," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

S.J. RES. 302

Whereas the sewing industry annually honors the approximately fifty million people who sew at home and the approximately forty million people who sew at least part of their wardrobe;

Whereas the home sewing industry generates over $3,500,000 annually for the economy of the United States; and

Whereas innumerable careers in fashion, retail merchandising, design, patternmaking, and textiles have had their genesis in the home and in elementary school home economics classes; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the month of September 1984 is designated "National Sewing Month". The President is requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe that month with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

● Mr. BONER of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of Senate Joint Resolution 302, designating the month of September as "National Sewing Month." As the sponsor of the identical resolution here in the House, I want to thank Chairwoman HALL, the ranking minority member, JIM COURTER and the 225 cosponsors of House Joint Resolution 491 for their support of this measure.

This is the third year in which the Congress has called upon the President to designate the month of September as "National Sewing Month." National Sewing Month, as my colleagues know, is a month set aside to support the home sewing industry and recognize the more than 40 million Americans who sew at home.

Sewing provides the opportunity for more than 40 million Americans—young, old, urban, and rural—to become self-sufficient in meeting some of their wardrobe needs. In addition, many thousands of Americans find employment in the sewing industry. They are employed directly as machinists, seamstresses, pattern makers, truckers, contractors, fashion designers, and merchandisers. In fact, the sewing industry is a large and historically important segment of or Nation's economy. More than 590 corporations, manufacturers, retailers, and wholesalers are engaged in textiles, the creation of patterns, and the manufacture of notions, fabrics, and sewing machiery. The home sewing industry generates over $3.5 million annually for our Nation.

Sewing has been an important element contributing to building the family. For years, indeed for generations, the fundamental of home sewing have been taught in the home and in home economic classes of local elementary and secondary schools. The great majority of individuals who currently work in the sewing industry had their first taste of sewing or both of these places—places where the pride, enjoyment, and creativity associated with sewing was first introduced.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, National Sewing Month coincides with an industrywide promotion designed to increase home sewing interest, consumer knowledge, and family sewing participation under a single universal sewing theme. The American Home Sewing Association, the only organization representing the home sewing industry in one voice, is to be congratulated for their promotional effort. I also want to thank them for their assistance in securing the support of the 225 Members who have joined me in sponsoring the House National Sewing Month resolution.

Again, I thank Chairwoman HALL for bringing National Sewing Month to the floor for consideration and request my colleagues to join me in passing this measure.●

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

WOMEN IN AGRICULTURE WEEK

Mrs. HALL of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 554) to designate the week of November 11, 1984, through November 17, 1984, as "Women in Agriculture Week," and ask for its immediate consideration.

□ 1610

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

H.J. RES. 554

Whereas farmwomen contribute substantially to the stabilization of family farms in the United States;

Whereas more than one million women are engaged, either solely or jointly, in the operation of farms in the United States;

Whereas farmwomen are involved in all aspects of farming operations either as accountants, machine operators, veterinarians, crop specialists, businesswomen, mothers, or other occupations;

Whereas farmwomen also make significant contributions to agriculture, the leading employer in the United States, by virtue of their motivation and pride;

Whereas farmwomen are committed to the preservation of their families and farming operations and to the prosperity of our Nation's agricultural economy; and

Whereas the appropriate recognition of the contributions made by our Nation's farmwomen is long overdue: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the week of November 11, 1984, through November 17, 1984, is designated as "Women in Agriculture Week" and the President of the United States is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe the week with appropriate programs, ceremonies, and activities.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

OSTOMY AWARENESS MONTH

Mrs. HALL of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 587) designating the month of August 1984 as "Ostomy Awareness Month," and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

H.J. RES. 587

Whereas the word ostomy refers to a type of surgical operation, such as colostomy, ileostomy, and urostomy, that is required when a person has lost the normal function of the bowel or bladder as a result of birth defect, disease, injury, or other disorder;

Whereas nearly 125,000 new ostomy surgeries are performed each year;

Whereas an ostomy allows normal body wastes to be expelled through a surgical opening (stoma) on the abdominal wall;

Whereas more than 1.5 million individuals in the United States are ostomates, including persons of every age, race, occupation, and ethnic background;

Whereas the United Ostomy Association is dedicated to helping ostomates in North America overcome the trauma associated with this type of surgery and return to normal living and community responsibility through mutual aid, moral support, education about proper ostomy care, exchange of ideas, assistance in improving ostomy equipment and supplies, support of research, and public information; and

Whereas the United Ostomy Association, a nonprofit agency of nearly 650 chapters, is dedicated to improving the quality of life of all children, young adults, and senior adults whose lifestyle has been changed because of this radical surgical procedure: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that the month of August 1984 is designated as "Ostomy Awareness Month". The President is requested to issue a proclamation calling upon all Federal and State departments and agencies, public education groups, the media, the health care community, and the people of the United States to observe that month with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I rise on behalf of House Joint Resolution 587, the bill which would designate the month of August as "Ostomy Awareness Month."

First I would like to commend the work of Congresswoman KATIE HALL, the esteemed chairwoman of the Subcommittee on Census and Population, and her colleague, Congressman BILL FORD, chairman of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service Matters. Their leadership has been very important in bringing this bill to the floor in such a speedy manner. I would also like to thank the other 225 of my colleagues who joined me as a sponsor of this bill.

More than 1.5 million people in the United States and Canada have had to face the trauma of the surgical procedure known as an ostomy. These individuals are of all ages, races, occupations, and ethnic backgrounds and approximately 125,000 more join them each year.

The term ostomy signifies a type of surgery required when a person has lost the normal function of the bowel, or bladder, either due to disease, birth defect, injury, or other disorder. Those who have this surgery can and do return to normal living, but all the mending is not only physical. Many must first overcome the trauma associated with this radical surgery.

Public education and awareness can help. So can groups such as the United Ostomy Associations, Inc. with over 600 chapters and international affiliations. The association is dedicated to helping every ostomy patient return to normal living through mutual aid and moral support, education, exchange of ideas, assistance in improving ostomy equipment and supplies, advancement of knowledge of gastrointestinal diseases, and public education about ostomy.

It is important that the public have an understanding of this type of surgery, to lessen the fears for those about to undergo the surgery, and for family members and loved ones who are important in the rehabilitation process. For this reason, this House joint resolution designates the month of August, 1984 as "Ostomy Awareness Month" to promote public education and awareness of this disorder.

Mr. Speaker, I know that my colleagues will join with me today in approving this resolution, so that we can begin immediately to do our part in bringing public awareness to this important treatment.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATIONAL HOUSING WEEK

Mrs. HALL of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 606) to designate the week of October 14, 1984, through October 21, 1984, as National Housing Week, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

H.J. RES. 606

Whereas the opportunity to own a home and live in decent housing is the foundation for family life and a source of national economic, social, and political strength;

Whereas the housing industry has led the Nation to economic recovery following every recession since World War II by creating millions of productive jobs for the unemployed, generating billions of dollars worth of tax revenue, and creating demand for goods and services;

Whereas the housing industry in 1983, although accounting for only 3.4 percent of the real gross national product, was responsible for 30 percent of the total economic growth, a $15,000,000,000 real increase in gross national product during the year;

Whereas a sustained and strong housing recovery is essential for a long-term economic recovery;

Whereas it is appropriate to reaffirm the national historic commitment to housing and homeownership and to recognize the economic opportunities created by the present housing recovery; and

Whereas the housing industry epitomizes the principle of free enterprise in the economic system of the Nation: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the week of October 14, 1984, through October 21, 1984, is designated as "National Housing Week", and the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe such week with appropriate activities.

HONORING CHAD KNUTSON

Mrs. HALL of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 420) honoring Chad Knutson whose remarkably unselfish decision to donate his organs at his death made possible multiple life- and sight-saving transplant operations, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object—and I will not object—House Joint Resolution 420 is a simple tribute to one young boy, Chad Knutson of Wrenshall, MN, which is represented here in Congress by my colleague JAMES OBERSTAR. By the age of 7 years, Chad had learned a sense of responsibility and caring that many of us as adults would do well to emulate. I want to thank Representative KATIE HALL, chairwoman of the Subcommittee on Census and Population, and Representative WILLIAM FORD, chairman of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee, for their expeditious handling of this resolution. I also want to thank my 227 colleagues who cared enough about one young boy's personal generosity to cosponsor this legislation.

I was proud of this body earlier in the summer when we overwhelmingly approved the Organ Transplant Act of 1984. This bill provides a desperately needed improvement of regional organ procurement agencies and creates a national computerized network to match organs to donors. We here in Congress are accustomed to dealing in macro terms such as this—in looking at the whole picture, in developing entire programs, in trying to find ways to meet the needs of the citizens as a whole. This is as it should be.

But it is also important for all of us here to be able to look past the programs and policies to see the individual behind it all. The wheels of the organ-donor system are in motion, but the success of this or any other system ultimately lies with each of us as individuals being willing to act on the responsibility and concern that bind us as caring people.

At age 7, Chad Knutson probably wouldn't have understood much of the technical and medical aspects involved in the Organ Transplant Act. He may not have fully appreciated the financial, moral, and ethical dilemmas many of us face in trying to decide how to apportion limited resources among so many worthwhile demands. He may not have comprehended that the blessing of advanced medical technology is accompanied by increasingly difficult decisions for lawmakers. But Chad did understand about responsibility and a caring spirit.

In November 1982, Chad asked his mother to explain about Jamie Fiske, the baby girl who first gained so much publicity about her liver transplant. As they were talking about the Utah boy whose liver went to Jamie, Chad instructed his mother: "When I die, I want to do that." Less than 1 year later, in September last year, Chad's wish came true. Tragically, Chad and his younger brother both died in a car-train accident. But out of that tragedy, Chad shared life and health with five other individuals through the donation of his heart, both kidneys, and both corneas.

Chad has done more than just help those five indivduals, though. He has given us all an opportunity to pause, remember, and be refreshed by the seemingly little stories of personal heroism that surround us. He has given us a reminder of the difference we each can make to those whose lives we touch. He has reminded us of our responsibility to make known our own desires to donate our vital organs.

Passage of House Joint Resolution 420 not only allows us to express a word of appreciation for that which Chad has given us—it also enables us to remind the rest of the Nation of these important lessons. Individuals acting in a caring, responsible way is what has helped make this country great. Sharing the gift of life through organ donations is one of the greatest gifts anyone could offer. We are grateful to Chad for giving the example of his life to all of us.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution as follows:

H.J. RES. 420

Whereas Chad Knutson at only seven years of age expressed the desire to give the gift of life by donating his organs when he died;

Whereas Chad Knutson met a tragic and untimely death less than a year after expressing such desire to his mother;

Whereas Chad Knutson's decision to be an organ donor facilitated five life- and sight-saving transplant operations;

Whereas such generosity and concern for the well-being of others is the keystone of a successful national organ transplant program;

Whereas Chad Knutson's parents made the difficult and courageous decision to allow Chad's organs to be used for transplant operations;

Whereas Chad's unselfishness stands in stark contrast to the profit-minded motives of organ donors who would sell their organs at high prices to desperate recipients faced with an inadequate supply of donor organs; and

Whereas Chad Knutson's brief but purposeful life and generous spirit can be a source of inspiration to those who have not considered becoming transplant donors: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Senate and House of Representatives honor and pay tribute to Chad Knutson and his parents for their unselfish and courageous behavior which made possible multiple life- and sight-saving transplant operations.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATIONAL COMMUNITY LEADERSHIP WEEK

Mrs. HALL of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 574) to designate the week beginning on September 9, 1984, as "National Community Leadership Week," and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object—and I shall not object—it has been my privilege to be a principal sponsor of House Joint Resolution 574. The resolution designates the week beginning September 9, 1984 as "National Community Leadership Week."

As the 274 of my colleagues who join me in sponsoring this legislation know, this resolution pays tribute to the thousands of men and women who ably fill local leadership roles. It praises and publicizes the efforts of the over 200 community leadership organizations now training our leaders of the future.

Community leaders play a vital role in maintaining and shaping the future of our great Nation. Community leadership organizations provide a nonpartisan forum in which present and future leaders can meet to exchange ideas and expertise. In these fora, seasoned leaders benefit from fresh ideas, and emerging leaders profit from the experience of their predecessors.

These programs have proved to be highly successful. In my judgment, they will be even more beneficial in the future. Community leadership, and community leadership organizations, clearly merit our commendation and appreciation.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution as follows:

H.J. RES. 574

Whereas local communities form the foundation of our Nation;

Whereas qualified and well-trained leadership of our local communities helps sustain our democratic institutions;

Whereas, throughout local communities in the United States, community leadership programs have been instituted to identify and train citizens for leadership positions in their communities; and

Whereas hundreds of community leadership programs have produced thousands of talented and well-trained local leaders who are aware of the unique problems confronting their communities and can propose solutions to such problems: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the week beginning on September 9, 1984, is designated as "National Community Leadership Week", and the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon local communities and the people of the United States to observe such week with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

YOUTH OF AMERICA WEEK

Mrs. HALL of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 597) to designate the week beginning September 2, 1984, as "Youth of America Week," and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

H.J. RES. 597

Whereas the children of our Nation, numbering more than fifty million, are this Nation's most valuable natural resource;

Whereas when adults share their knowledge, experience, and wisdom with the youth of this land, they teach our children to become an integral part of society as they mature into adulthood and contribute their abilities to our Nation's growth; and

Whereas all people in the United States can, together, strengthen this Nation's commitment to nurture in our children the development of strong democratic principles and sound, moral, and spiritual values which will help to make these United States a better place for all to live: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the week beginning September 2, 1984, is designated "Youth of America Week". The President is requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe that week with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CONGRATULATING ATHLETES OF U.S. OLYMPIC TEAM FOR THEIR PERFORMANCE AND ACHIEVEMENTS IN 1984 OLYMPIC GAMES IN SARAJEVO, YUGOSLAVIA, AND IN LOS ANGELES, CA

Mrs. HALL of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the Senate joint resolution (S.J. Res. 338) to congratulate the athletes of the U.S. Olympic Team for their performance and achievements in the 1984 winter Olympic games in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, and the 1984 summer Olympic games in Los Angeles, CA, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

□ 1620

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object.

● Mr. DANIEL B. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, we have witnessed something quite extraordinary during the past few days as America's attention has been drawn to the Olympic games: a new spirit fills the air—you can almost taste it—due to those men and women whose efforts on behalf of the United States are a source of wonder and delight in every corner of America.

I simply want to take this opportunity to rise in support of Senate Joint Resolution 338 and congratulate each and every athlete participating in the games, from all the nations, and especially those who represent our country. For whether it has been humility in victory or grace in defeat, they have brought honor to America by their very examples. And by bringing honor to their country, they have brought it upon themselves.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to single out, by name, those athletes who have made their home State of Illinois so very proud. Among them is Bob Espeseth, who represents the United States in men's rowing and who hails from Champaign in the 19th Congressional District.

Men and women of Illinois, the folks back home are bursting with pride.

Jackie Joyner, E. St. Louis—Track and Field.
Pam Page, Evanston—Track and Field.
Mike Conley, Chicago—Track and Field.
Sunder Nix, Chicago—Track and Field.
Jim Spivey, Wooddale—Track and Field.
Craig Virgin, Lebanon—Track and Field.
Mike Dunne, Peoria—Baseball.
Cathy Boswell, Sherwood—Basketball.
Bob Espeseth, Champaign—Rowing.
Angelo DiBernando, Chicago—Soccer.
Tom Jager, Collinsville—Swimming.
Greg Morava, Des Plaines—Team Handball.
Chris Spelius, Deerfield—Kayak.
Ann Turner, St. Charles—Kayak.
Robert Plankenhorn, Roselle—Canoe.
Danny Vanhaute, Chicago—Cycling.
Bart Connor, Morton Grove—Gymnastics.
Robert Berland, Wilmette—Judo.
Robert Nieman, Hinsdale—Modern Pentathlon.●

● Mr. COURTER. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to take this opportunity to extend my congratulations to the athletes of the U.S. Olympic Team. These men and women have demonstrated the commitment to excellence, the unsurpassed drive, and the good sportsmanship that make for success in its truest sense—success as seen in the number of victories our athletes recorded and as felt by all of us who have seen our athletes have done their very best.

The legislation before us today, Senate Joint Resolution 338, gives our Olympic athletes the public recognition they so deserve. I rise as a strong supporter of this legislation, and as an equally strong supporter of the ideals these athletes have upheld. It is a beautiful thing to see the hearts of America so lifted by the achievements and performances of our Olympic Team, and I think it is very appropriate that we recognize these men and women for their tremendous contribution to the spirit of America.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to make note of those athletes who have made their home State of New Jersey so very proud. Among them are Jim Buehning and Stephen Kirk who represent the United States in team handball and who are residents of the 12th District.

Athletes of New Jersey, we couldn't be more proud of you:

NEW JERSEY'S OLYMPIC ATHLETES

Bruce Baumgartner, Halledon—wrestling.
Hernon Barga, Bloomfield—soccer.
Pam Boyd, Toms River—team handball.
David Brcic, Washington Township—soccer.
Jim Buehning, Short Hills—team handball.
Chris Catalfo, Montvale—wrestling.
Gwen Cheeseman, Haddenfield—field hockey.
Angel Dibernardo, North Halledon—soccer.
Anne Donovan, Ridgewood—women's basketball.
Jeff Durgan, Westwood—soccer.
Graig Gilbert, Cranberry—team handball.
Tom Kain, Wall Township—soccer.
Stephen Kirk, Short Hills—team handball.
Randy Lipscher, Lawrenceville—field hockey.
Micheal McCahey, Leonia—fencing.
Kathleen McGahey, Blackwood—field hockey.
Steve Mormando, Lakewood—fencing.
Steve Moyers, Washington Township—soccer.
Lou Mucardo, Port Redding—weightlifter.
Doug Nelson, Englewood—judo.
Lee Shelley, Hackensack—fencing.
Cindy Stinger, Lawrenceville—team handball.
Kazbek Tambi, Ridgewood—soccer.
Wenda Vareen, Trenton—track and field.●

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, I support this acknowledgment of the great achievements of all of our Olympic athletes. They have represented their country with distinction and honor.

My own congressional district has one medal winner, Susan Rapp of Eden Prairie, MN. She and every American competitor, has richly earned the commendation of Congress and all of their fellow citizens.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

S.J. RES. 338

Whereas the attention of millions of people around the world has focused on the 1984 winter Olympic games in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia and the 1984 summer Olympics in Los Angeles, California;

Whereas the contingent of athletes from the United States include some of the finest athletes and competitors ever produced by the Nation;

Whereas the athletes representing the United States have achieved great success personally and for the Nation; and

Whereas the United States Olympic athletes have represented themselves and the Nation with extraordinary grace and courage: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, the athletes of the United States Olympic team are congratulated for their performance and achievements in the 1984 winter and summer Olympics and the Nation takes great pride in the qualities of commitment to excellence, grace under pressure, and good will toward other competitors exhibited by such athletes.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mrs. HALL of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the resolution just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, did the gentlewoman's request apply to all of the resolutions which the House has passed?

Mrs. HALL of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENZEL. I yield to the gentlewoman from Indiana.

Mrs. HALL of Indiana. Yes, I included that. Members would have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks on all of the resolutions just passed.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman, and I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. HAWKINS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill (S. 2556) to authorize appropriations for the American Folklife Center for fiscal years 1985 through 1989, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

S. 2556

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of United States of America in Congress assembled, That section 8 of the American Folklife Preservation Act (20 U.S.C. 2107) is amended—

(1) by striking out "and where it appears immediately after "1983"; and

(2) by inserting after "1984" the following: ", $930,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985, $1,021,150 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986, $1,104,025 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1987, $1,216,525 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1988, and $1,319,550 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1989".

SEC. 2. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law and subject to the provisions of paragraph (1) of subsection (b), the Capitol Police Board is authorized to designate certain portions of the Capitol grounds (other than a portion within the area bounded on the North by Constitution Avenue, on the South by Independence Avenue, on the East by First Street, and on the West by First Street) for use exclusively as play areas for the benefit of children attending a day care center which is established for the primary purpose of providing child care for the children of Members and employees of the Senate or the House of Representatives.

(b)(1) In the case of any such designation referred to in subsection (a) involving a day care center established for the benefit of children of Members and employees of the Senate, the designation shall be with the approval of the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration, and in the case of such a center established for the benefit of children of Members and employees of the House of Representatives, the designation shall be with the approval of the House Committee on House Administration, with the concurrence of the House Office Building Commission.

(2) The Architect of the Capital shall enclose with a fence any area designated pursuant to subsection (a) as a play area.

(3) The authority to use an area designated pursuant to subsection (a) as a play area may be terminated at any time by the Committee which approved such designation.

(c) Nothing in this or any other Act shall be construed as prohibiting any day care center referred to in subsection (a) from placing playground equipment within an area designated pursuant to subsection (a) for use solely in connection with the operation of such center, subject to, in the case of a day care center established for the benefit of children of Members and employees of the Senate, the approval of the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration, and in the case of such a center established for the benefit of children of Members and employees of the House of Representatives, the approval of the House Committee on Administration, with the concurrence of the House Office Building Commission.

(d) The day care center referred to in S. Res. 269, Ninety-eighth Congress, first session, is a day care center for which space may be designated under subsection (a) for use as a play area.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. HAWKINS

Mr. HAWKINS. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HAWKINS: Strike out section 1 of S. 2556 and insert the text of H.R. 5886 as passed by the House and renumber the remaining section.

Mr. HAWKINS (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr HAWKINS].

The amendment was agreed to.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The title of the Senate bill was amended so as to read: "An Act to authorize appropriations for the American Folklife Center for fiscal years 1985 and 1986."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill (H.R. 5886) was laid on the table.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5, rule 1, the Chair announces that he will reduce to a minimum of 5 minutes the period of time within which a vote by electronic device may be taken on all of the additional motions to suspend the rules on which the Chair has postponed further proceedings.

OLDER AMERICANS ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1984

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The unfinished business is the question of suspending the rules and passing the bill, H.R. 4785, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

● Mr. DAUB. Mr. Speaker, today I rise in strong support of H.R. 4785, the Older Americans Act of 1984. This act is the principal program providing supportive services to older individuals. This legislation incorporates many good changes into the act enabling us to continue providing important service to our Nation's senior population.

Since the Older Americans Act became law in 1965, we have seen tremendous progress made toward understanding and solving the problems of seniors. The Older Americans Act can be the means by which we reduce duplication of services, eliminate Federal redtape by identifying and delivering services from a local level, and secure dignity and respect for our senior citizens.

One of the strong points of the Older Americans Act is the flexibility provided to State and local aging agencies to direct resources to meet local priorities. This flexibility will be extended by increasing the allowable funds transfer between title III-B and title III-C, from 20 to 25 percent.

I encourage this flexibility and oppose provisions to further restrict it. In a recent letter from the director of the Nebraska Department on Aging, it was brought to my attention that the elder abuse services mandated in Senate bill 2306 are duplicative of what many States, Nebraska included, are already required by State law to provide. In Nebraska, these services are provided through the department of social services. Elder abuse services, therefore, should be left as an allowable service for other States.

In response to the growing health care needs and the changing health care delivery system, I am encouraged by the growing emphasis by States in providing community-based care. The Federal Government must continue to provide incentives to expand this alternative form of care.

I also support the extended research efforts made possible through title IV funding. This title will provide for both inservice training for professionals in the aging field and continued academic research. The language in the act targeting Alzheimer's disease research is essential in examining the far reaching impact of this disease that afflicts between 5 and 10 percent of people over age 65.

Our aim through these and other changes is to pursue the original intent of the Older Americans Act which is to meet the social service needs of our older citizens in the most effective manner possible. Our State and local aging agencies are successfully responding to these needs and achieving the goals we have set out for them. I support the passage of this bill today and encourage the prompt action by House and Senate conferees so we may continue to provide services to our Nation's seniors.●

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ANDREWS] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4785, as amended, on which the yeas and nays are ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 406, nays 12, not voting 14, as follows:

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

The result of the vote was announced, as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. ANDREWS of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill (S. 2603) to extend the authorization of appropriations for, and to revise the Older Americans Act of 1965, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

That (a) this Act may be cited as the "Older Americans Act Amendments of 1984".

(b) Except as otherwise specifically provided, whenever in this Act an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of the Older Americans Act of 1965.

(d) Section 307(a)(15)(B) is amended to read as follows:

"(B) the plan contains assurances that no legal assistance will be furnished unless the grantee administers a program designed to provide legal assistance to all older individuals with social or economic need and has agreed, if the grantee is not a Legal Services Corporation project grantee, to coordinate its services with existing Legal Services Corporation projects in the planning and service area in order to concentrate the use of funds provided under this title on individuals with the greatest such need; and the area agency makes a finding, after assessment, pursuant to standards for service promulgated by the Commissioner, that any grantee selected is the entity best able to provide the particular services;".

(e) Section 307(a)(15) is amended by striking out "legal services" each time it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "legal assistance".

(f) Section 307(a) of the Act is amended—

(1) by redesignating clauses (16), (17), and (18) as clauses (19), (20), and (21), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after clause (15) the following new clauses:

"(16) provide that with respect to services for the prevention of elder abuse—

"(A) the State will identify the public and private non-profit entities involved in the prevention, identification, and treatment of elder abuse, neglect and exploitation;

"(B) the State will, based on such identification, determine the extent to which the need for services for the prevention of elder abuse are unmet;

"(C) the State will establish, in areas where the State determines that the need for services is unmet, a program consistent with relevant State law and coordinated with existing State adult protective service activities for—

"(i) public education to identify and prevent elder abuse;

"(ii) receipt of reports of elder abuse;

"(iii) active participation of older individuals participating in programs under this Act through outreach, conferences, and referral of such individuals to other social service agencies or sources of assistance where appropriate and consented to by the parties to be referred; and

"(iv) referral of complaints to law enforcement or public protective service agencies where appropriate;

"(D) the State will not permit involuntary or coerced participation in the program of services described in this clause by alleged victims, abusers, or their households; and

"(E) all information gathered in the course of receiving reports and making referrals shall remain confidential unless all parties to the complaint consent in writing to the release of such information, except that such information may be released to a law enforcement or public protective service agency;

"(17) provide assurances that each State will provide inservice training opportunities for personnel of agencies and programs funded under this Act;

"(18) provide assurances that each State will assign personnel to provide State leadership in developing legal assistance programs for the elderly throughout the State;".

(g) Section 307 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f)(1) From amounts made available under section 304(d)(1)(C), each State shall provide for the establishment of at least one demonstration project for health and nutrition education to be conducted by one or more area agencies on aging within the State.

"(2) Each such project shall—

"(A) be administered by the area agency for the purpose of improving the health and nutrition of older Americans served by the agency;

"(B) be established and administered in consultation with the appropriate Long-Term Care Gerontology Center;

"(C) be designed to improve the health and nutrition of older Americans through increasing their physical fitness activities and improving the nutritional value of meals in their own daily living habits;

"(D) if appropriate, be conducted in conjunction with schools of public health, schools of medicine, public health and social service agencies, private voluntary organizations, or other entities concerned with the health and well-being of older Americans; and

"(E) evaluate and submit the evaluation prior to October 1, 1987 and submit such interim reports as the Commissioner may reasonably require.".

ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 12. (a)(1) Section 308(b)(1) is amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1)(A) From sums appropriated pursuant to section 303 and allotted to each State under section 304(a)(1) for each fiscal year, not to exceed 5 percent of the amount appropriated for each such year or $500,000, whichever is greater, shall be available for the cost of administration of the State plan, except that in the case of Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and the Northern Mariana Islands, the amount shall be 5 percent or $200,000, whichever is greater. For the purpose of this paragraph, the term 'State' does not include Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and the Northern Mariana Islands.

"(B) The budget submitted under section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, for each fiscal year and the appropriation Act containing appropriations made pursuant to section 303 for each fiscal year shall separately set forth the amount available to carry out the provisions of this paragraph.".

(2)(A) Paragraphs (2), (3), and (4) of section 308(b) are repealed.

(B) Paragraphs (5) and (6) of section 308(b) are redesignated as paragraphs (2) and (3), respectively.

(3) The amendments made by paragraph (1) (other than the portion of the amendment adding a new subparagraph (B) to paragraph (1) of section 308(b)) and paragraph (2) of this subsection, relating to the increase in the amount available for the administration of State plans, shall be effective only for a fiscal year in which the amount available for the administration of State plans is equal to or exceeds $40,000,000.

(b) Section 308(b)(3) (as redesignated by subsection (a) of this section) is amended by striking "20 per centum" and inserting in lieu thereof "35 per centum".

AVAILABILITY OF SURPLUS COMMODITIES

SEC. 13. (a) Section 311(d)(1) is amended to read as follows:

"(c)(1)(A) There are authorized to be appropriated $119,500,000 for fiscal year 1985, $123,802,000 for fiscal year 1986, and $129,744,500 for fiscal year 1987, to carry out the provisions of this section (other than the provisions of subsection (a)(1)) and such additional sums as may be necessary for fiscal years 1985, 1986, and 1987 to maintain the level of reimbursement for the number of meals served under such provisions in fiscal year 1983.

"(B) Effective on the first day of the first month after the date of enactment of this subparagraph, no State may receive reimbursement under the provisions of this section unless the State submits final reimbursement claims for meals within 90 days after the last day of the quarter for which the reimbursement is claimed.".

AUDIT

SEC. 14. (a) Section 313 is amended by inserting "(a)" after the section designation and by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b) State agencies and area agencies on aging shall not request information or data of providers which is not pertinent to a payment made pursuant to this Act.".

SUPPORTIVE SERVICES AND SENIOR CENTERS

SEC. 15. (a) Section 321(a)(5) is amended to read as follows:

"(5) services designed to assist older individuals in avoiding institutionalization and to assist individuals in long-term care institutions who are able to return to their communities, including client assessment through case management and integration and coordination of community services such as preinstitution evaluation and screening and home health services, homemaker services, shopping services, escort services, reader services, and letter writing services, through resource development and management to assist such individuals to live independently in a home environment;".

(b) Section 321(a)(6) is amended by striking out "legal services" and inserting in lieu thereof "legal assistance".

(c) Section 321(a) is amended—

(1) by redesignating clauses (14) and (15) as clauses (16) and (17), respectively, and

(2) by inserting after clause (13) the following new clause:

"(14) services for the prevention of elder abuse in accordance with clause (16) of section 307(a);

"(15) inservice training and State leadership for legal assistance activities;".

(d) Section 321(b)(1) is amended by striking all that follows "centers" and inserting in lieu thereof a period.

TRAINING, RESEARCH, AND DISCRETIONARY PROJECTS AND PROGRAMS

SEC. 16. (a) Title IV is amended by inserting after the title designation the following new sections:

"STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

"SEC. 401. It is the purpose of this title to expand the Nation's knowledge and understanding of aging and the aging process, to design and test innovative ideas in programs and services for older individuals, and to help meet the needs for trained personnel in the field of aging through—

"(1) placing a priority on the education and training of personnel to work with and on behalf of older individuals;

"(2) research and development of effective practices in the field of aging;

"(3) demonstration and other projects at the discretion of the Commissioner; and

"(4) dissemination of information on aging and the aging process acquired through such programs to public and private organizations or programs for older individuals.

"ADMINISTRATION

"SEC. 402. (a) In order to carry out the provisions of this title effectively, the Commissioner shall administer this title through the Administration on Aging.

"(b) In carrying out the provisions of this title, the Commissioner may request the technical assistance and cooperation of the Department of Education, the National Institutes of Health, and such other agencies and departments of the Federal Government as may be appropriate.".

(b) Section 411 is amended by inserting before the period a comma and the following: "with priority to training in the provision of supportive services to families of elderly victims of Alzheimers' disease and other neurological diseases and organic brain disorders".

(c) Section 421 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "Appropriate provisions for the dissemination of resulting information shall be a requirement for all grants made under this section.".

(d)(1) Section 422(b) is amended—

(1) by redesignating clauses (1), (2), (3), (4), (5), (6), and (7) as clauses (2), (3), (4), (5), (6), (7), and (8), respectively; and

(2) by inserting before clause (2) (as redesignated by this subsection) the following new clause:

"(1) meet the supportive services needs of elderly victims of Alzheimers' disease and other neurological diseases and organic brain disorders and their families, including—

"(A) home health care for such victims;

"(B) adult day health care for such victims; and

"(C) homemaker aides, transportation, and in-home respite care for the families, particularly spouses, of such victims;".

(2) Section 422 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d)(1) Whenever appropriate grants made and contracts entered into under this section shall be developed in consultation with the appropriate Long Term Care Gerontology Center.

(2) Grants made and contracts entered into under this section shall include provisions for the appropriate dissemination of project results.".

(e) Section 423(b)(3) is amended by inserting (A) after the paragraph designation and by adding at the end thereof the following: "(B) Grants made and contracts entered into under this section shall include provisions for the appropriate dissemination of information regarding the development of such services.".

NATIONAL IMPACT ACTIVITIES

SEC. 17. (a) Section 425 is amended—

(1) by designating the first sentence as subsection (b),

(2) by redesignating subsection (b) as subsection (c), and

(3) by inserting after the section designation the following:

"(a) The Commissioner shall, upon request, provide assistance to State agencies on aging, to work in conjunction with State protective service agencies so as not to duplicate activities already undertaken by such State protective service agencies, for the provision of technical assistance and development of training materials for personnel in State and area agencies who are engaged or intend to engage in the prevention, identification, and treatment of elder abuse.".

(b) Section 425(c) (as redesignated by paragraph (1) of this subsection) is amended by inserting after "carrying out" the following: "subsection (b) of this".

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR TITLE IV

SEC. 18. Section 431(a) is amended to read as follows:

"(a) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the provisions of this title $28,500,000 for fiscal year 1985, $30,295,500 for fiscal year 1986, and $32,052,639 for fiscal year 1987.".

OLDER AMERICAN COMMUNITY SERVICE EMPLOYMENT PROGRAM

SEC. 19. (a) Section 502(c) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) Of the amount for any project to be paid by the Secretary under this subsection, not more than 12 per centum shall be available for paying the costs of administration for such project.".

(b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on July 1, 1985.

ADMINISTRATION FOR TITLE V

SEC. 20. Section 503(b) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) If the Secretary determines that to do so would increase job opportunities available to individuals under this title, the Secretary is authorized to coordinate the program assisted under this title with programs authorized under the Job Training Partnership Act, the Community Services Block Grant Act, and the Vocational Education Act of 1984. Appropriations under this Act may not be used to carry out any program under the Job Training Partnership Act, the Community Services Block Grant Act, or the Vocational Education Act of 1984.".

EQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION OF ASSISTANCE

SEC. 21. Section 506 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) The Secretary shall require the State agency for each State receiving funds under this title to report at the beginning of each fiscal year on such State's compliance with subsection (c). Such report shall include the names and geographic location of all projects assisted under this title and carried out in the State and the amount allotted to each such project.".

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR COMMUNITY SERVICE EMPLOYMENT

SEC. 22. Section 508(a)(1) is amended to read as follows:

"(1) $335,000,000 for fiscal year 1985, $351,415,000 for fiscal year 1986, and $368,282,920 for fiscal year 1987; and".

GRANTS FOR INDIAN TRIBES

SEC. 23. Section 608(a) is amended to read as follows:

"(a) There are authorized to be appropriated $7,500,000 for fiscal year 1985, $7,972,500 for fiscal year 1986, and $8,434,905 for fiscal year 1987 to carry out the provisions of this title other than section 606.".

TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS

SEC. 24. (a) The heading of title I is amended by striking out the colon and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon.

(b) Section 204(d) is amended by striking out clause (2) and by redesignating clauses (3), (4), (5), and (6) as clauses (2), (3), (4), and (5), respectively.

(c) The first sentence of section 206(b) is amended—

(1) by inserting "under" before "title IV", and

(2) by striking out "section or".

(d) The second sentence of section 304(c) is amended—

(1) by striking out "subsection (d)(1)(D)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (d)(1)(C)"; and

(2) by striking out "funds for" and inserting in lieu thereof "funds or".

(e) Section 307(a)(20)(B)(ii) (as redesignated by section 11(f)) is amended by striking out the period at the end of such section and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon and "and".

(f) Section 309(b)(2) is amended by striking out "section 304(d)(1)(B)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 304(d)(1)(D)".

AMENDMENTS TO THE AGE DISCRIMINATION IN EMPLOYMENT ACT OF 1967

SEC. 25. (a) Section 11(f) of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 (hereinafter in this section referred to as "the Act") is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The term 'employee' includes any individual who is a citizen of the United States employed by an employer in a workplace in a foreign country.".

(b)(1) Section 4(f)(1) of the Act is amended by inserting before the semicolon a comma and the following: "or where such practices involve an employee in a workplace in a foreign country, and compliance with such subsections would cause such employer, or a corporation controlled by such employer, to violate the laws of the country in which such workplace is located".

(2) Section 4 of the Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g)(1) If an employer controls a corporation whose place of incorporation is in a foreign country, any practice by such corporation prohibited under this section shall be presumed to be such practice by such employer.

"(2) The prohibitions of this section shall not apply where the employer is a foreign person not controlled by an American employer.

"(3) For the purpose of this subsection the determination of whether an employer controls a corporation shall be based upon the—

"(A) interrelation of operations,

"(B) common management,

"(C) centralized control of labor relations, and

"(D) common ownership or financial control, of the employer and the corporation.".

(c)(1) Section 12(c)(1) of the Age Discrimination Employment Act of 1967 is amended by striking out "$27,000" and inserting in lieu thereof $44,000".

(2) The amendment made by paragraph (1) of this subsection shall not apply with respect to any individual who retires, or is compelled to retire, before the date of the enactment of this Act.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. ANDREWS OF NORTH CAROLINA

Mr. ANDREWS of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. ANDREWS of North Carolina moves to strike out all after the enacting clause of the Senate bill, S. 2603, and to insert in lieu thereof the provisions of H.R. 4785, as passed by the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The title of the Senate bill was amended so as to read: "An Act to amend the Older Americans Act of 1965 to authorize appropriations for fiscal years 1985, 1986, and 1987, and for other purposes."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill (H.R. 4785) was laid on the table.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES ON S. 2603

Mr. ANDREWS of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speakers table the Senate bill S. 2603, with the House amendment thereto, insist on the House amendment, and request a conference with the Senate thereon.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina? The Chair hears none and, without objection, appoints the following conferees: Messrs. HAWKINS, BIAGGI, ANDREWS of North Carolina, MILLER of California, CORRADA, WILLIAMS of Montana, OWENS, ECKART, COLEMAN of Missouri, PETRI, Mrs. ROUKEMA, and Mr. CHANDLER.

There was no objection.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT ANTITRUST ACT OF 1984

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The unfinished business is the question of suspending the rules and passing the bill (H.R. 6027) as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

● Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, while I support the goal of H.R. 6027, the "Local Government Antitrust Act of 1984" to provide relief for local governments and their officials from the full application of the antitrust laws to their official activities, I have strong reservations about several provisions in the bill as it was reported out of the Judiciary Committee. I believe the bill needs several changes to restrict its scope and make it consistent with the traditional approaches of Congress to antitrust matters.

First, and perhaps paramount, the retroactive application provided for in this bill is disturbing. As reported, the new law will apply to all pending cases. Those who have filed lawsuits in good faith to vindicate their rights under the law as it exists, good or bad, and have pursued them with every expectation of their application, are now faced with new rules. In eliminating what is felt to be the inequities in the old law, the retroactive application of newly crafted statutory law only creates a new set of inequities.

Such retroactive application is not in accord with the Judiciary Committee's traditional approach to changing existing law. I need only cite the recent refusal by the committee and Congress to retroactively apply the bankruptcy reforms to alleviate what many felt were the extreme hardships and unjust results flowing from the previous law. I fear that we will be in no position to refuse retroactive application of numerous other legislative reforms, all argued for because of injustice and hardship, which we will certainly be asked to enact.

Second, the scope of the bill as it was reported may be too broad. It applies not only to local governments and their officials, but also to private parties whose actions have been expressly required by a local government. This extension to private firms is an attempt to express and codify the existing court developed State-action doctrines at the local level. While that result may be warranted, I fear that the formulation will create a new and broad doctine of protection for private firms' actions in conjunction with local governments.

The exemption for private firms should not extend beyond the tightly drawn judicial doctrines which afford protection only if the private activity has been compelled by the Government so as to make it tantamount to government action. To construe this provision otherwise will create a giant loophole by which private businesses can arrange their affairs with local governments to secure virtual antitrust immunity.

Similarly, the provisions distinguishing official conduct, which is to be covered under the bill, and nonofficial conduct, which is not included within the ambit of the bill should also be narrowly construed. Conduct outside the clear authority of the local government, both criminal and noncriminal, as in Affiliated Capital Corp. v. City of Houston, F.2d 5th Circuit, en banc (July 16, 1984) is not to be protected under this bill. The antitrust laws should be fully applied to any activity which is not clearly and properly authorized.

I am also concerned with the provisions of the bill which restrict the remedy for antitrust violations to injunctive relief. I concur that the punitive remedy of treble damages specified in the antitrust laws is unwarranted when applied to local governments and their officers. The bill, however, goes beyond the elimination of treble damages to strip the right to actual damages for antitrust violations.

The elimination of actual, as well as treble, damages has two serious drawbacks. The bill, by providing for injunctive relief, recognizes that there is a role for the antitrust regulation of local governments to ensure proper competition in local markets. Injunctive relief alone will not provide the incentive for individuals and small businesses, to undertake the massive and protracted litigation necessary to enforce the antitrust law and achieve our free enterprise goals. Further, the award of actual damages is a traditional remedy found throughout the Nation's civil laws. It is based upon a fundamental belief that justice requires that those who are injured by illegal activity should be allowed to recoup their loss. In this instance, those who have been the victims of anticompetitive behavior should be paid back their actual loss. The injury is the same whether it has been caused by a group of individuals acting as a corporation or through a local government.

I note that in both the Joint Research and Development Act of 1984 and the Shipping Act of 1983, the committee felt that relief from treble damages under the antitrust laws was appropriate for certain groups, but that actual damages were retained. This is a sensible and just approach in providing relief when warranted, but still ensures the effective application of the antitrust laws to achieve our policy goal of a free and competitive economy.

Because this bill has been processed so rapidly from the Judiciary Committee's adoption last week, I do not believe my colleagues have had the opportunity to closely examine the bill to discover its deficiencies. Unfortunately, the bill is being considered under suspension of the rules and amendments cannot be offered to correct them. I strongly urge the Senate to carefully examine this legislation when it is reviewed there. The problems I have addressed need to be remedied before this bill becomes law.●

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 6027, as amended, on which the yeas and nays are ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 414, nays 5, not voting 13, as follows:

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof), the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The title of the bill was amended so as to read: "A bill to clarify the application of the Clayton Act to the official conduct of local governments, and for other purposes.".

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MAKING IN ORDER ON THURSDAY, AUGUST 9, 1984, OR ANY DAY THEREAFTER, CONSIDERATION OF HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION 635, URGENT SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATION FOR THE FOOD STAMP PROGRAM, 1984

Mr. WHITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it may be in order at anytime on Thursday, August 9, or any day thereafter, to consider in the House the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 635) making an urgent supplemental appropriation for the Food Stamp Program for fiscal year 1984.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do so to get an explanation of just what we are doing here. Do I understand this is only to cover the food stamp portion of the bill should you not be able to go to conference with the other body?

Mr. WHITTEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I will be glad to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. WHITTEN. The gentleman is correct. This is, as he knows, an entitlement program. The funds will expire the first week in September. Unless we act now the 22 million people who are now on food stamps will be notified that there are no funds.

Insofar as the rest of the supplemental now pending in the other body, the Senate in Committee has added over 200 amendments and $1.5 billion. A study of that bill shows that there are no other essential items that have to be funded prior to the 15th of September. The only urgent item is the food stamp money which is necessary and an entitlement program. As I say, unless we act now the money will expire and notice will go out to terminate the distribution of food stamps for 22 million people.

So it appears to me, and I have counseled with others, that there is little if any chance that the other body can get through with the supplemental. If so, there is very limited chance that we can get together and complete a conference agreement.

This unanimous consent is a protective measure. May I say the leadership will determine whether to follow this approach. This request will make it possible that we can handle it this way tomorrow, should it be decided by the leaders on both sides.

Mr. WALKER. I thank the gentleman. Under my reservation I might say to the gentleman that I am getting worried because I am beginning to understand what he explains to me. But I would simply say to the gentleman that we would not have this problem had we fully funded the Food Stamp Program in the last year's appropriation bill rather than going through this exercise where we only partially fund the Food Stamp Program in order to show that we are within the budget in the appropriation bill.

If we had fully funded the Food Stamp Program back last year when we passed the appropriation bill we would not find ourselves in this bind, and so, to some extent, we have a crisis here of our owm making because we did not fully fund the program at the beginning.

Mr. WHITTEN. May I correct the gentleman again. Last year we had to cut it to the budget request. The Office of Management and Budget wanted us to appropriate the money without a budget request. We said we will appropriate it as soon as you give us a request.

So we did not try to hide anything from anyone, we did not mislead anyone. The Office of Management and Budget did come in with a budget request 2 weeks ago and the money was made available in the supplemental which we passed in the House.

Mr. WALKER. Further reserving the right to object, I would say to the gentleman the fact is though that the appropriation bill we had before us only funded the program for 11 months and we now find ourselves in this situation.

Mr. WHITTEN. May I say that the Office of Management and Budget only recommended that amount and we had no authority to cut the rates.

Mr. WALKER. I still contend with the gentleman that we ended up with an 11-month appropriation and that we are now paying the penalty for it because we have got to wait on the other body with a supplemental. If we had fully funded the program from the beginning, as we are supposed to around here, rather than playing games with the budget process, it seems to me that we would not be in this particular crisis.

I am not going to object to the gentleman's request but I would point out that this is precisely what takes place when we are not honest enough to fully appropriate for the full year on a lot of these programs.

Mr. WHITTEN. I appreciate the gentleman's attitude and his words are exactly the same words that I told to the Director of the Office of Management and Budget last year.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, just briefly, the House language of the supplemental appropriation bill for 1984 essentially dealt with the problem of the employment level floors at the Department of Energy. The House version retained the floors but modified them. Can the gentleman tell me what are the plans of the committee with regard to that matter and is it involved in his request?

Mr. WHITTEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DINGELL. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. WHITTEN. I do not know that I understood the gentleman.

Mr. DINGELL. The House language of the supplemental provides for certain employment levels at the Department of Energy. The Senate version would remove the floors. I oppose that. I am troubled that that may get away from us and that we may come back looking at the Senate bill. That would be bad. If that is not a part of the gentleman's request, I have no concern and support the gentleman.

Mr. WHITTEN. That is nothing to do with what we have here.

But I agree with the gentleman and I hope that we can stick to the position he has. But that is another matter entirely.

Food stamps are one item where we will run out of money the first week in September. We have to correct it now and that is the only thing involved in my request.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I thank my good friend, and I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 4325, CHILD SUPPORT ENFORCEMENT AMENDMENTS OF 1984

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the unanimous consent agreement of Wednesday, August 1, 1984, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 4325) to amend part D of title IV of the Social Security Act to assure, through mandatory income withholding, incentive payments to States, and other improvements in the Child Support Enforcement Program, that all children in the United States who are in need of assistance in securing financial support from their parents will receive such assistance regardless of their circumstances, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the conference report is considered as having been read.

(For conference report and statement, see proceedings of the House of Wednesday, August 1, 1984.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from New York [Mr. CONABLE] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI].

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this report represents the agreements reached by the Committee on Conference on the bill H.R. 4325, the Child Support Enforcement Amendments of 1984. While there were differences between the House and Senate versions of this legislation, the goal of both bodies was the same: to substantially improve child support enforcement. The lack of compliance with court ordered child support payments is a national disgrace.

This legislation will put some teeth in our child support enforcement program. The major provisions of the bill require States to provide for:

First, the mandatory withholding from wages of child support when arrearages occur;

Second, the mandatory intercept of State tax refunds to collect past due support for children receiving AFDC;

Third, the mandatory intercept of Federal tax refunds, through January 1, 1991, to collect past due support owed to both AFDC and non-AFDC families;

Fourth, the placing of liens on real and personal property to enforce payment of child support; and

Fifth, the requiring of bonds, securities or other guarantees when there is a pattern of past due support.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation represents a truly bipartisan effort to address a serious problem. I want to thank all of the members of the conference committee, in particular, Mr. FORD, chairman of the Subcommittee on Public Assistance and Unemployment Compensation, Mr. CAMPBELL, the ranking minority member of the subcommittee, and Mrs. KENNELLY, the primary sponsor of this legislation. Their efforts, and the efforts of many other Members from both sides of the aisle, have resulted in legislation that is sorely needed and deserving of the support of all Members of the House.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. FORD].

□ 1710

Mr. FORD of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I thank my distinguished chairman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this conference report and urge my colleagues to adopt it. This legislation is vital to the well-being of millions of children in this country and is deserving of the support of every Member.

According to the Census Bureau, in 1981 more than 8.4 million women were raising children whose fathers were absent; 30 percent of these women and children were living in poverty. Although most of these children should have been receiving child-support payments, child-support obligations had been established on behalf of only 60 percent of them. Of those that were due child support, 53 percent received only partial payment or no payment at all. The Census Bureau estimates that children are being cheated out of nearly $4 billion a year because of unpaid child support.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that a parent's first responsibility is to provide for the upbringing and welfare of his or her children. Unfortunately, it is far too easy today for absent parents to escape this legal and moral responsibility. This legislation is a major step in assuring that this responsibility will be met.

The most important provision in the legislation is the requirement that State laws provide for mandatory wage withholding when support payments are in arrears. In addition, there are provisions for the posting of bonds, for liens on property, and for the intercept of tax refunds in order to assure that child-support obligations are met.

The legislation also restructures the incentive payments to States to encourage the development of programs that emphasize collections on behalf of both AFDC and non-AFDC families and to improve the cost effectiveness of their enforcement programs.

Mr. Speaker, as the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means has pointed out, this has been a bipartisan effort. This legislation was passed by both bodies by unanimous votes. The conference report deserves the same unanimous support.

Mr. Speaker, it is estimated that half of the children born this year will live in a single-parent family before they reach age 18. One-half that statistic along points out the dramatic need for this legislation.

I urge my colleagues to support the conference report.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 8 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I support the adoption of this conference agreement on H.R. 4325, the Child Support Enforcement Amendment of 1984. Early in this Congress, there was an outpouring of new ideas and legislation to strengthen the existing program of child-support enforcement. These ideas and bills were honed and combined into H.R. 4325 as passed by the House. Then they were further refined and added to the Senate. The resulting conference agreement before us today is an auspicious conclusion to that 2-year process. It stands as a piece of legislation which promises to make a substantial difference in the payment of child support in the United States.

Mr. Speaker, I realize that all children will not automatically be supported as a result of this measure passing.

We all know the circumstances of divided families, the acquisition of new obligations, the limited resources, frequently, that accompany marital difficulties of one sort and another. But it would be most unfortunate if we did not put the resources of the Government behind the collection of ordered child support to the extent possible.

This bill, I think, greatly improves our procedures and makes it much more difficult for absconding parents to avoid responsibilities which are rightly theirs, particularly in those circumstances in which they can afford to contribute to the welfare of their abandoned children.

Under the bill, States which have not already done so will be required to begin withholding child-support payments from noncustodial parents' paychecks when unpaid support totals 30 days of child support. Several backup enforcement technique will also be applied where appropriate. They include diverting Federal and State income tax refunds to pay past-due child-support obligations, reporting past due support to consumer credit agencies, and imposing liens, bonds, and securities when parents fail to pay child support.

A major focus in the child-support debate during the 98th Congress has been the underlying purpose and intent behind the child-support enforcement program. Some maintained that it should aim primarily at recovering AFDC expenses incurred because families without child support must rely on welfare. Others contended that this Federal program ought to be available as a service to all families in need of assistance in securing child support, regardless of whether they receive welfare or not. This conference agreement reflects the rationale stated in both House and Senate bills which reaffirms that the program should be available to all who need services. This is an important statement of our intent that the Federal Government should assist in the costs of putting into place a nationwide efficient and effective child-support enforcement system that enables all children in need of support to receive timely and expedient assistance.

As is so often the case in programs where there is Federal financial participation, the House and Senate had different approaches to the Federal matching of administrative expenses, the incentive payments for collection of support, and the fiscal sanctions if a State's program does not comply with the requirements of the Federal statute. The conference compromise on these issues encourages States to operate programs that address both AFDC and non-AFDC child-support enforcement, and to do so in both an efficient and an effective manner. The Federal-matching rate for administrative expenses will be reduced to two steps, from 70 percent to 68 percent for fiscal year 1988 and 1989 and to 66 percent for fiscal year 1990 and thereafter. However, beginning October 1, 1985, the incentive-payment system will be replaced with a new dual system which pays separate incentives for AFDC and non-AFDC collections. States will receive incentives of at least 6 percent of collections and can qualify for as much as 10 percent if they run programs which are cost effective enough to collect $2.80 for every $1 spent in running the program. Finally, a realistic periodic review process has been enacted which will permit Federal oversight to concentrate on States which are not in substantial compliance and which will impose fiscal sanctions in a manner intended to achieve compliance with the Federal requirements.

The difficulty of enforcing child-support obligations across State lines has been a particularly nettlesome problem. This legislation has taken special care to address this situation by providing that the newly mandated State enforcement procedures will apply equally to in-State as well as out-of-State child-support obligations. The revised Federal incentive payments to States for child-support collections will reward both initiating States and responding State so that interstate cases will no longer be at a relative fiscal disadvantage. Finally, the Secretary of HHS is authorized to award to States grants to carry out special projects to develop innovative techniques and procedures for improving interstate enforcement.

This bill is an important step in securing the establishment and enforcement of child-support obligations. Child-support enforcement is a difficult area, and one should think that we have achieved total reform with the stroke of a pen. However, this bill is a significant measure. The unanimous votes by which the House and Senate passed the bill demonstrate the strong conviction of the Congress that the problem is a serious one and that States must respond aggressively to carry out the mandates of this legislation. I look forward to seeing it signed into law and I encourage my colleagues to support this measure.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield.

Mr. CONABLE. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, will the ranking member of the Committee on Ways and Means answer a question?

I understand the Federal connection in the projected law that would allow us to attach income tax refunds, et cetera. I do not understand completely the Federal connection that would permit us to compel the States to wage attachment.

Mr. CONABLE. Well, the State income tax you are talking about?

Mr. GEKAS. Yes.

Mr. CONABLE. As you know this is a participatory program in which States participate, also.

Mr. GEKAS. Yes.

Mr. CONABLE. And one of the conditions of the bill is that States make available collection from refund on State taxes as well as Federal taxes.

Mr. GEKAS. I understand on refunds, but how about wage attachment.

Mr. CONABLE. Wage attachment? That is permitted under this bill.

Mr. GEKAS. I understand it is permitted. What I am asking is what Federal retribution can we exact against a State that does not provide for wage attachment?

Mr. CONABLE. Well, the States have to contribute a portion of the cost of the program and the Federal Government reimburses them for expenses. Of course it they fail to cooperate, we can refuse to contribute to the State's expenses. If they are not cooperating in the enforcement of the program, sanctions may be applied.

Mr. GEKAS. That is exactly what I wanted to get on the record, so that we can demonstrate that the States have something to lose.

Mr. CONABLE. They do have something to lose. Clearly the States are heavily involved in the administration of this program, also, and they get incentive payments under this bill to encourage good cooperation.

Mr. GEKAS. I thank the gentleman.

□ 1720

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONABLE. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. KASICH. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I would just like to compliment the gentleman from New York and the majority for what I think is a fantastic effort to try to put an end to what I think can almost be labeled a national disgrace. I think the gentleman may agree with that.

When you take a look at 28 percent of the families never receive any child support payments. Twenty-three percent only partial payment.

I used to be a member of the State legislature when we had the budget crunches and we looked at the fact that there were many people who could afford to pay child support who just flat out ignored their responsibilities which put another burden on all the taxpayers. In addition to that, in addition to the fiscal consideration, it is just human decency to support those children that you have if that is your responsibility as provided for in a court agreement and is provided for, as far as I am concerned, by being born on the face of this Earth.

I want to compliment the gentleman for his action and the majority for the passage of what I think can be one of the most significant things that we do in this session of the Congress to help people who really need it, particularly the children in this country.

Mr. CONABLE. I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

Mr. FORD of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. PEASE].

Mr. PEASE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the conference report on H.R. 4325, the Child Support Enforcement Amendments of 1984. The Child Support Enforcement Program has been one of the most successful and popular Federal-State cooperative programs ever enacted. Since its inception, the program has aided millions of children. It has collected over $8.8 billion in child support obligations since 1975.

But too many children are still not receiving the benefit of either full or timely support payments. The legislation we consider today gives States additional tools and financial incentives to collect support for children of both AFDC and non-AFDC families. In approving this conference report, we will grant States the authority for mandatory withholding from wages, tax refund intercepts, and property liens in delinquent child support cases.

The amount of unmet child support obligations nationwide is estimated to total over $4 billion per year—a tragic loss for children who in many cases need this support to meet basic needs. I think H.R. 4325 will make more of this shocking debt collectible and I urge all of my colleagues to join me in strong support of this report.

Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. CAMPBELL], a member of the committee.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report.

I would also like to congratulate the members of the Subcommittee on Public Assistance and Unemployment Compensation that worked so hard on this on both sides of the aisle. It was a bipartisan product and I think it is one of the most significant pieces of legislation that we have had before us this year.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that parents, both father and mother, have an obligation to support the children they bring into this world to the best of their ability. Unfortunately, all parents do not support their children even when orderd by the court to do so.

So a little more than a year ago, I, along with Mr. MOORE, Mr. FRENZEL, Mr. THOMAS, Mr. CONABLE, Mr. DUNCAN, Mrs. ROUKEMA, Ms. SNOWE, Mrs. JOHNSON, Mrs. MARTIN, Mr. MARRIOTT, and Mr. COATS, introduced a bill to improve the child-support enforcement situation in our Nation for all children. My bill required States to use proven child-support enforcement techniques, restructured the Federal financial role to encourage and reward States for aggressive and effective programs to serve all families in need of services, and encouraged States to adopt sophisticated systems to monitor and enforce support obligations.

My bill had plenty of legislative company. The administration sent us an excellent bill which served as the foundation for many of the provisions before us in the conference agreement today. My colleague, Representative ROUKEMA of New Jersey, sponsored a measure to require the withholding of child support from wages beginning with the first payment. There was also the bill introduced both as part of the Economic Equity Act and as a separate measure, by Mrs. KENNELLY, with bipartisan sponsorship.

This extensive and unprecedented legislative interest in child-support enforcement gave us an excellent chance to study various options for improving the Federal program. I am pleased that in just a little more than a year, both Houses of Congress and the administration have been able to agree upon legislation before us today.

This positive and timely outcome has been possible because of the somewhat unusual cooperation of all involved. The administration, and particularly Secretary Heckler, deserve credit for helping to keep the issue on the front burner. Members from both parties and both Houses of Congress collaborated to refine and strengthen the bill as it forward through the legislative process. And outside groups with experience and expertise provided valuable assistance and guidance.

I became involved in this issue personally because I was familiar with specific situations back home where the nonpayment of court-ordered child support had had terrible consequences for families. I began to realize that these were not just isolated, unusual examples affecting an unfortunate few. Instead, these problems are being experienced by literally millions of families in every State and locality. And unfortunately, the Federal-State program already on the books, despite its not inconsequential cost and efforts, has not succeeded in improving compliance with child-support obligations to even the 50-percent mark.

I want to warn my colleagues that the legislation we are about to approve stands as a signal that we here in Congress are deadly serious about dealing with this child-support situation. This bill is no cosmetic fluff. Those of us familiar with its provisions know that it has real teeth.

If we enact this bill, we will be getting very tough in the next few years on parents who have not paid the support they legally and morally owe to their children. If this bill works as intended, we had better expect to hear from angry constituents complaining about various enforcement actions taken against them. Frankly, complaints from constituents who are being forced to pay child support are far preferable to pleas from single-parent families who are receiving no help whatsoever from the parents who moved out.

And that is not all. We will also be getting tough on States which have not mounted aggressive and effective programs to make sure that most child-support payments are made regularly and on time. Although child-support collections have increased in recent years, some States still lag far behind in both the extent of their efforts and the cost efficiency of their programs. So you had also better prepare to hear your State officials complaining that the "Feds"—we who are standing here right now—have made them pass difficult laws to implement support enforcement.

The specifics of the bill are being described by others, so I will just highlight a few provisions of special interest. First, States will have to impose wage withholding if child-support arrearages mount up to 30 days' worth of support. Some would have preferred 60 days as the trigger level and some preferred zero days so that withholding would begin automatically with the first payment. I believe that 30 days is a good compromise. Of course, States which wish to impose a more restrictive standard are free to do so. However, States like my own, which do not now provide for any wage withholding whatsoever, will have their work cut out for them in the next session of the State legislature.

Next, a number of other enforcement techniques must also be provided by the State to complement wage withholding. These include the imposition of liens on real and personal property and the obtaining of bonds or other securities to guarantee payment of support.

States will also have to provide that all support orders issued after October 1, 1985, will provide for wage withholding if the support is not paid. I proposed adding this to the bill so that parents would have the option of enforcing their support orders through private channels if they so desired.

Child-support debts should be paid up before parents take on new credit obligations. Therefore, the bill requires States to inform consumer credit agencies, upon their request, of child-support arrearages of $1,000 or more.

So that parents will know where to seek services in enforcing support, child-support agencies are required to publicize periodically the availability of services together with an address or phone number to contact for further information.

I am very pleased that the House conferees accepted Senator GRASSLEY's provision that expands the current Federal income tax refund offset to cover all delinquent parents, regardless of their families' welfare status. Starting in 1986, Federal tax refunds owed to parents who are behind on child-support payments can be diverted by the Government to pay back their past due support. States with income taxes will be required to do likewise.

States will see their automatic matching payments reduced from 70 to 66 percent beginning in fiscal year 1990. In the meanwhile, however, a revised system of incentive payments will permit States to maintain or even increase their Federal funding, provided they operate efficient programs which reach both AFDC and non-AFDC families.

The bill revises the procedure for reviewing State's compliance with Federal program requirements. States with good records of compliance will be audited only every 3 years while those with compliance problems will be reviewed more frequently. Fiscal sanctions, in the form of reduced Federal matching for AFDC, will be coordinated with State corrective action plans so that compliance with Federal standards and requirements can be achieved.

In order to give us a better picture of State performance, more detail will be required in States' annual reports to the Secretary. These reports will guide us in evaluating the operation of the new legislation and in assessing the need for further action in the future.

These are just a few of the changes contained in H.R 4325. The entire package, I believe, has the potential to transform the child-support enforcement efforts in the United States into a solidly effective program. The dismal nationwide statistics on child support indicate that most parents do not now live up to their child-support responsibilities. They let their families go on welfare or simply do without. However, I believe that if States follow through on the mandates in this bill and respond to its incentives, we can turn this situation around in a few years. No one is making any promises, of course, because this is a very difficult problem. But the conference agreement offers at least a very real reason to hope that change—a revolutionary change—is in the offing, and that we will be moving from a situation where nonpayment of child support is the rule to one where it is the exception.

I strongly support this conference agreement and I hope that you will join me in that support.

Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA], one distinguished Member of this body who has taken a great deal of initiative in this matter and has provided leadership badly needed to the Congress as a whole.

□ 1730

Mrs. ROUKEMA. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, it is with a mixture of hope and pride that I rise today in support of the conference report to accompany H.R. 4325, the Child Support Enforcement Amendments of 1984, with hope for the millions of women and children presently enduring economic hardships and emotional abandonment and pride that the 98th Congress has achieved a bipartisan national child-support reform of landmark proportions. The timely passage of this conference report will make full implementation of an enforceable national interstate system a reality by October 1985.

It was not so long ago that child support was a very private matter, so private, in fact, that millions of fathers nationwide were ignoring their legal obligations, making economic victims of their children. With the introduction of legislation in the spring of 1983, the cloak of secrecy was lifted.

We, in the House, approved H.R. 4325 in November of last year. The Senate followed in April of this year. Finally, we have before us today the assurance to the children of this Nation that they will no longer be victims of callous parental neglect.

The landmark action we are about to take in this House represents a sea of change in thinking of this body. It puts the Federal Government firmly on record that child support is not a voluntary commitment, but a legal and moral obligation. This bill affirms that the U.S. Congress will not turn its back on children nor look the other way when families need help.

That this bill now passes with no opposition, or little, belies the controversy that surrounded it just a year ago.

While acknowledging that child support was a problem, opponents to this reform were initially firm. Numerous objections were raised—some substantive, some specious. We heard States' rights arguments. We heard the clarion for fathers' rights. We heard objections based on due process. Bureaucratic costs were also questioned, and objections were raised by those who feared that wage withholding would cause hardship for employers.

But the case for this reform proved to be so compelling, the injustice so clear, and the victims so many that a powerful consensus quickly developed.

While this legislation does not contain all that might have been achieved, it is far, far more than a pretext of reform. It is strong medicine.

This fundamental reform is centered on four basic principles. First, the withholding of wages for the payment of legally ordered child support. Second, a formula of credible bonuses and penalties for the States, with formulae provide strong incentives to insure compliance and develop a reciprocal national enforcement apparatus. Third, the development of a system which provides universal coverage applying to AFDC and self-supporting families alike. Finally, the creation of a system which can be implemented quickly and be easily implemented by the States.

The legislation before us today includes the use of withholding after a 30-day delinquency period. This procedure vastly improves the current, unworkable system that clogs the court dockets and results in unenforceable court-ordered collections. It gives added authority to those child support orders and treats them as the legal obligations they are. Withholding is essential to the construction of an effective inter- and intra-state collection system.

I continue to be of the opinion that automatic withholding from the time a support order is issued, without permitting delinquency default, will better serve all parties. Automatic withholding provides immediate and efficient enforcement and minimizes the necessary collection apparatus. I would hope that, in the near future, our experience will validate the experience of several States that are moving toward automatic withholding. Logic dictates the necessity of this method of collection.

Any meaningful reform needs credible bonuses and penalties which the Department of Health and Human Services can use to enforce compliance by the States. Our current system has no "teeth." The States are able to operate their child-support agencies randomly with no enforceable penalties to ensure compliance. Under this bill, if a State is in noncompliance after a review period, the Secretary of Health and Human Services can penalize that State up to 2 percent of its AFDC matching funds. This penalty would increase to between 3 to 5 percent if a State were to continue in noncompliance. States with a good collection record would be eligible for bonus payments. These payments will be awarded to States for good collection records in both AFDC and non-AFDC cases as well as for their good performance in interstates cases.

As I have long maintained, in order for true reform to occur, we must have a strong system of bonuses and penalties which is automatically triggered when a State is in noncompliance. This legislation allows the Secretary of Health and Human Services the discretion to impose these penalties. That significantly weakens the original intent of the House. I am vehemently opposed to the dilution of this major provision. It is one which I hope could be amended in the future. However, I do support the passage of the bill, as I believe that the total package is a tremendous improvement over the current system.

Currently, interstate cooperation in child-support enforcement is virtually nonexistent. As a result, it is far too easy for a person to move from State to State to avoid paying child support. It is also not uncommon for a custodial parent to have two or more court orders for child support in different States. Under this report, both the State collecting and the State paying would be eligible for incentive money.

Third, this reform measure should end the discrimination between AFDC and non-AFDC cases. Child-support enforcement is not simply a problem for so-called welfare families. It is a problem that is growing across all levels of society. Often, families who had exhausted their hard-earned financial means in court had to resort to the welfare roles to care for the very basic of needs of their children. And, let us not forget the taxpayers are absorbing the costs of delinquent parents. Child support is a legal and moral obligation for the parents and not the taxpayers and the bill ensures that this principle is upheld.

Last, this bill mercifully establishes no new bureaucracies and places no further strains on our already overcrowded court dockets.

It is important to note that this legislation in no way infringes on the separate States' rights to enact divorce, support, and visitation codes. This legislation merely requires the States to establish commissions to examine their own child-support systems and report their findings to the Congress prior to the October 1, 1985, implementation date of this bill.

In summary, this legislation will remedy the problem of scofflaws who defy the law and abandon their moral and legal obligations to their children. It establishes the responsibilities of both State and Federal authorities in the enforcement of court-ordered child-support payments. It is a giant step forward toward an enforceable, nationwide system where State and Federal authorities maintain a cooperative network.

Let me repeat: Child support is the responsibility of parents and not the taxpayers. It is essential that we halt the tragic trend that sees more and more women and children, economically abandoned by a deadbeat dad, slip onto the public assistance rolls, thus becoming wards of the taxpayers.

Mr. FORD of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. KENNELLY] who I would also like to say is the prime sponsor of this conference report that is before us today, and as chairman of that subcommittee, I would just like to say that she worked tirelessly in bringing that legislation out of the subcommittee and onto the House floor.

Mrs. KENNELLY. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the conference report on H.R. 4325, the Child Support Enforcement Amendments of 1984. I wish to commend the leadership of the Committee on Ways and Means, Chairman DAN ROSTENKOWSKI and Representative BARBER CONABLE, as well as Representatives HAROLD FORD and CARROLL CAMPBELL, the chairman and ranking minority member of the Public Assistance Subcommittee, for their efforts on this bill. Because of their fine work, we have strong legislation to end the national disgrace of nonpayment of child support and to ensure that assistance in securing support will be available to all children.

This has truly been bipartisan legislation. Arising from the long interest of the congressional caucus for women's issues in child-support reform and modeled after title V of the Economic Equity Act, which I introduced last year as H.R. 2374, the bill incorporates the ideas and suggestions of many Members of Congress—as Senator DOLE has said, from both sides of the aisle and both sides of the Capitol. In addition, the bill has benefited greatly from the contributions of many people from off the Hill, particularly the individuals whose own children have suffered from the unwillingness or inability of a system to enforce the payment of court-ordered support.

In many respects, the conference on H.R. 4325 was an easy one. The conference agreement includes the following enforcement procedures: Mandatory income withholding after an arrearage of 30 days for all child support orders in the State; Federal and State income tax refund offsets for both non-AFDC and AFDC cases; the imposition of liens on property; the securing of bonds; the reporting of arrearages to credit bureaus; the requirement that States expedite cases involving child-support obligations and any related obligations. In addition, the States must permit the establishment of paternity at least until the child's 18th birthday and notify AFDC recipients of support collected. The States are required to collect spousal support under certain specified circumstances and are given the option to provide tracking and monitoring of support payments at the request of either parent. The conferees also wisely agreed that medicaid coverage will continue for 4 months in order to provide a transition for a family which no longer qualifies for AFDC as a result of increased child-support collections.

I personally am very pleased that the conferees followed the House bill in directing the Governors of each State to appoint a commission—a high-level, working, blue-ribbon group—of judges, legislators, executive branch officials and, most importantly, custodial and noncustodial parents to examine the State's entire child-support system. The commissions are logical and appropriate forums for the development of guidelines for objective support awards, required under another provision of the bill by October 1, 1987. The commissions should be given a broad mandate to examine family law issues in the State, including issues surrounding visitation and custody. As each of us who has worked on this bill has delved into the problems of children of divorce and parental separation, we have all understood that tragedies come in many forms for children who suffer the effects of a family breakdown, and financial deprivation is only one of these. We ask the States to establish commissions because we want them to build upon this legislation and ensure its proper implementation but also because we in the Congress believe the establishment and enforcement of visitation and custody are important for children who are all too often the pawns, and the victims, in the battles of their parents.

Every conference has its disappointments and I am not entirely satisfied with the final version of the legislation with respect to the Federal match of administrative costs and the Federal incentive formula. I would have preferred that the Federal share remain at 70 percent, although I am glad the House conferees were able to make the Senate reduction here more gradual. I am also afraid we have not developed a financial formula which provides the States sufficient incentives to improve their programs, in that the cap on the non-AFDC bonus only reaches 115 percent of the AFDC collection bonus in fiscal year 1990 and all States receive a basic incentive of 6 percent of AFDC collections and 6 percent of non-AFDC collections even if their effectiveness ratios are low. I believe the Congress should match what happens with this new financing formula very closely; I would not be surprised if adjustments will have to be made to remedy unintended results.

On the whole, though, Mr. Speaker, the conference report represents an excellent agreement. We are taking strong action to ensure justice for children and to break down economic discrimination against women. As the author of the original legislation, I am very happy with the bill's progress and the widespread bipartisan support it has earned. I urge my colleagues to vote in its favor but I also want to say that regardless of all the ballyhoo we will hear about this bill in the weeks to come, this is only one step to ensure justice and end discrimination. The fact that so many women and children in America live in poverty, and their numbers are growing, is deeply disturbing. As much as I want to believe in miracle cures, the problems of ending this poverty are complex, and enactment of the Child Support Enforcement Amendments of 1984 by itself will not do the trick. The administration's support for this measure has been very helpful; but the administration's support is also needed to restore the commitment to programs which directly alleviate poverty, to back up the laws protecting children from abuse and neglect, to increase the availability of day care, to establish once again that recipients of Federal funding must practice equal opportunity, to guarantee fair wages, and to affirm equal rights for all women in our Constitution.

Again, Mr. Speaker, I thank everyone who has played a role in bringing this bill to completion and I urge my colleagues to vote in its favor.

31-059 O-87-47 (Pt. 16)

Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Speaker, I now yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. MOORE], a member of the committee, and an expert on this subject.

Mr. MOORE. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to join my colleagues in commending this conference agreement. The child support program under title IV-D of the Social Security Act was first enacted in 1974. This conference agreement marks a substantial redirection and addition to that program.

Many of us were appalled last year as we began to study child-support issues to learn how poor the compliance rate has been in the United States, despite the excellent work being done under the title IV-D program. Our hearings included witnesses who related incredible stories of the exhaustive but seldom successful effort to get former spouses to help support their children. We heard as well from enforcement officials who reiterated the frustrations of trying to use decentralized and multilayered enforcement procedures to keep pace with a burgeoning and often impatient caseload. Given the fact that almost half of our Nation's children sometime before reaching age 18 potentially will need to rely on child support, we concluded the obvious: further legislation is needed to give the existing program a push toward achieving more widespread compliance with child-support responsibilities. I believe the conference agreement before us today contains just that sort of needed impetus.

Summaries and detailed explanations of the provisions of the conference agreement are available, so I will not go into all the specific features of the legislation, but two need special mention: the wage withholding and tax refund offset provisions. These two offer new very formidable weapons to insure payment of child support. I am proud to have been an original coauthor and conferee. I urge all my colleagues to support the conference report.

Mr. CONABLE. I would inquire of the gentleman from Tennessee how many speakers he has.

Mr. FORD. Tennessee. The majority side had 4 more speakers.

Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Speaker, I have only one more speaker, so I would prefer to reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FORD of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BIAGGI.].

Mr. BIAGGI. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I am most pleased to rise in support of the conference report to accompany H.R. 4325, the Child Support Enforcement Amendments of 1984. This is a most significant occurence in the legislative history of the 98th Congress for it serves to demonstrate to the American public that Congress is not just concerned, but committed to providing relief to the millions of American women and children who are victimized by the scandal of nonpayment of child support.

It was just about 1 year ago when I went to the White House together with our former colleague, now the junior Senator from Iowa, Mr. GRASSLEY, to witness President Reagan sign into law a joint resolution designating August of 1983 as "National Child Support Enforcement Month." In my mind, the support of this resolution by the House and Senate and the advocacy of President Reagan and Secretary Heckler provided the catalyst for this meaningful legislative product before us.

Clearly the nonpayment or underpayment of court-ordered or voluntary child support is a full-fledged national scandal. It is an open and festering sore on our national conscience. The magnitude of the problem is both awesome and staggering. In our Nation today there are more than 21 million parents who are delinquent in their payment of child support. According to the Census Bureau, almost one-half of the men who are legally obligated to pay child support are in default on all or part of their obligations. Almost 55 percent of the more than 4 million women legally entitled to child support payments are not receiving the full amount and more than half of these—28 percent—are receiving nothing at all. The average child-support payment owed by a delinquent parent is $2,460 but the average actually paid is only $1,560.

What we are talking about with this issue is a problem which claims three distinct sets of victims. Of course they claim the affected parent—mostly women. The second are the dependent children. The third, of course, are the taxpayers of the United States.

When we speak of the children who are victimized, we go right to the heart of the issue, and this should be the one factor which motivates us to action above all others. It has been estimated that some 13 million children from both AFDC and non-AFDC families are affected by the nonpayment or underpayment of child support. It is also estimated that the nonpayment of child support cheats children out of some $4 billion in support each year. That number is even more powerful when placed against another related statistic; namely, that in the first year after a divorce, a woman suffers a 73-percent decline in her income. This means that the child-support income represents an essential element in the financial security of not only the woman but the child. It is little wonder that 87 percent of the children receiving benefits under the AFDC program are eligible precisely and only because an absent parent is not providing adequate support. In 77 percent of these cases, not a single payment of child support has been collected.

As it relates to the victimization of taxpayers, the nonpayment of child support is a very real problem. It is estimated that we spend upward of $600 million to go after delinquent parents, yet the amount actually recouped seldom makes the investment profitable. In fiscal year 1982 the Office of Child Support Enforcement in HHS was only able to collect in only 10 percent of the AFDC caseload of 5.5 million and only 30.6 percent of the non-AFDC caseload of 1.5 million.

We have clearly enumerated the problem—the issue is wherein lies the solution. H.R. 4325 is far more than a mere reaction to a problem; it represents a solid approach which should produce real improvements. Let me review its main features:

It requires States to develop by no later than October 1, 1985, a program to withhold delinquent child-support payment from employeee wages. The only exception that would be provided would be for that State which is unable to comply because their State law keeps them from complying. The bill wisely requires States to withhold delinquent payments that have been ordered by the courts of another State. That addresses one of the most ruthless aspects of the problem—the delinquent parent who is assessed to pay up child support—further escaping their responsibility by moving to another State.

The withholding program developed by the State would trigger when the amount owed in back child support equals 1 month of support payments or when either parent requests automatic withholding. The employer would have to forward withheld wages to the appropriate State agency and would be liable for any shortfall. The amount withheld would obviously have to equal the current child-support payment, any amount in arrears and the cost of the employer's administrative expenses. Under the conference agreement, withholding for child-support payments would take priority over other garnishments under State law, a critically important feature.

H.R. 4325 would repeal the current 12-percent incentive payment to States which is made only for the collection of child-support payments that offset AFDC payments. In place of the existing incentive payments would come—effective October 1, 1985—a new Federal payment to States that require withholding of delinquent child-support payments from parents' wages. The Federal payment would vary between 6 and 10 percent of the States' child-support collections, with larger Federal payments going to those States whose collections equal or exceed the costs of the withholding program.

The conference report like existing law and the House-passed version provides a 90-percent Federal match to States that establish automatic data processing and information retrieval systems to help in the collection of child-support payments. This matching assistance would be used to help purchase hardware such as computers.

One area where I do not find myself in as enthusiastic support deals with the provisions in the conference report dealing with the Federal incentive payments for child-support collections from non-AFDC parents. The House-passed bill would have limited the incentive paid for collection from non-AFDC parents to 125 percent of the States incentive payment for AFDC collection. The Federal payment for these collections under the conference agreement would be limited to 100 percent of the level for fiscal years 1986 and 1987, 105 percent for fiscal year 1988 and 110 percent for fiscal year 1989, and 115 percent for subsequent fiscal years.

It is imperative that we recognize the flaw in not pursuing the non-AFDC delinquent parent with the same fervor as we do the AFDC delinquent parent. As I mentioned the 30-percent collection rate achieved by the Office of Child Support Enforcement in non-AFDC cases is tragically low. This is compounded by the fact that the Office expended only about one-third of what they spent on AFDC cases in cases involving non-AFDC parents. It has been my experience in my years of working on this issue—that some of the most flagrant abuses of nonsupport eminate from the wealthy ranks of the non-AFDC parent. We see individuals—some making six-figure incomes completely ignoring their child-support obligations entirely.

As I have said before, there is nothing we can call this type of person but a shameless scoundrel. However, if we really expect to make improvements—we must provide States with the proper incentives for them to do their work. It is clearly a sound investment of the tax dollar from the amount we recoup from the ranks of the non-AFDC parent should more than pay for those costs associated with the tracking down.

We reach this historic juncture today thanks to the hard work of so many of my colleagues. I for one was proud to join as a cosponsor of H.R. 4325, and I am also grateful that the final conference report more accurately reflects the House-passed bill. I like many of my colleagues involved in the bill before us made reform in our existing child-support enforcement policies a top legislative priority. In my own individual case, beginning in January of 1983, I introduced H.R. 1014 which called for the establishment of a bipartisan national commission to study ways of improving Federal and State efforts to better enforce child-support agreements and to recoup delinquent payments. I felt at that time that the approach which worked so well on behalf of Social Security should be applied to this national problem as well.

Later in May of 1983, I testified before the Labor-HHS Subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee to appeal for more money for the Office of Child Support for fiscal year 1984 which in fact was approved. I am pleased to note that the Labor-HHS bill we approved for fiscal year 1985 provides for an appropriation of $425,411,000 in addition to the $138 million approved for the account last year as an advance appropriation.

As I mentioned earlier in my statement, in a related effort in June of 1983 I introduced House Joint Resolution 273 which eventually became law and designated August of 1983 as "National Child Support Enforcement Month."

Finally, I was proud to author an amendment to H.R. 1904, the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act of 1984, which would authorize a first-time study linking the nonpayment of child support to child abuse. It is an understatement to say that such nonpayment or underpayment certainly represents a form of economic child abuse. There is a good likelihood that Congress can complete action on H.R. 1904 before the end of the session, and I have every confidence that my amendment will be retained and this important study can commence.

The scandal and arrogance associated with the nonpayment or underpayment of child support has justifiably outraged many in this House and in the Nation. It has claimed too many victims—and will claim countless more unless we act. H.R. 4325 represents the tangible response we need if we are to crack down on this problem. It properly recognizes that we must take steps aimed at accomplishing one basic goal—to collect every cent that is owed by every delinquent parent. We must develop provisions that are both punitive and deterrent in nature. We cannot expect to do it all with this bill, but it is clear we must do something and that is the choice before us and we should pass this bill.

Finally, let me add a personal observation. I know of the great commitment and effective advocacy of thousands in this Nation to this issue. The lobby from the most basic of special interests, the personal one. These are individuals—mostly women who have been victimized by the non- or underpayment of child support. It has driven many of them into poverty; it has caused great suffering to them and their children. It has compounded in some instances the tragedy caused by separation and or divorce. Yet, rather than simply accepting the status quo, these victims took to the Halls of Congress and the State legislatures to seek meaningful relief—a petitioning of the Government, if you will. Anyone who knows someone who has been denied all or part of what they are owed in child-support payments knows how bad the problem is. It is when the realization strikes that it is a problem that is so national in scope that we must respond as the Congress. We have done so.

I know this problem, and I have worked at it with special attention for almost this entire Congress. I know there are others who have done so for a variety of reasons—some personal. I take some degree of satisfaction at the point we reach today, and I know those who motivated me in my work take satisfaction as well. Yet I hope they know that they provided the real inspiration for action—and their labors have been rewarded.

Let me conclude with one final point that has been raised regularly since this issue took on such prominence in Congress. Our support for improving child-support enforcement activities should not be construed as not being concerned about the diversion of child-support payments for purposes other than legitimate child-support activities. I am willing to work on this dimension of the issue in greater detail if in fact the case can be made that many or even some of those who do not pay or underpay their child-support obligations do so because these funds are diverted by the one who receives them. However, it would take us far too long to establish that case—and the time for action is now. Before I urge adoption of the conference report, I would like to take this opportunity to commend Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI, Mr. FORD, Mrs. KENNELLY, Mr. CONABLE, and Mr. CAMPBELL for their leadership in taking this initially controversial bill to final passage on this date—for this we should all be everlastingly grateful.

Mr. FORD of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER].

Mrs. SCHROEDER. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate the members of the conference committee for their excellent work on the Child Support Enforcement Amendments of 1984. This legislation is an important part of the Women's Economic Equity Act, which the congressional caucus on women's issues set as its top legislative priority for the 98th Congress. Congresswoman BARBARA

KENNELLY deserves the praise and thanks of all of us for steering this key legislation through the Committee on Ways and Means and through the conference.

This bill provides a ready and convenient way to ensure that court orders providing child support to divorced spouses are paid. It is a national scandal that a sizable number of fathers have walked away from their child-support obligations.

The conferees have adopted the best provisions of both the House and Senate versions of H.R. 4325 to produce a bill that provides the States with strong tools for enforcing compliance with child-support orders.

The conference report also makes it clear that the provisions of the bill apply equally to Federal employees as to private-sector employees. Representative MARY ROSE OAKAR, Chairman WILLIAM FORD, and I worked with the Ways and Means Committee to make certain that Federal employees should be treated like all other employees for purposes of this bill. The conference report makes this plain.

I encourage my colleagues to support this conference report.

Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Speaker, to sum up the compelling arguments on our side, I now yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. PETRI].

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the House accepting the conference report on H.R. 4325. In particular, I wish to draw this body's attention to one section of this report referred to by some as the Wisconsin amendment.

The entire legislation helps to enforce child support obligations. This is needed. The Wisconsin amendment puts the Federal stamp of approval on a promising Wisconsin initiative in integrating parental child support with Federal welfare payments.

In all too many instances, noncustodial parents have shirked their legal and moral obligation to provide child support, leaving the State and Federal Governments to foot the bill through AFDC and other welfare programs.

Through a program that I helped initiate as a State legislator, Wisconsin has taken the lead in enforcing child support. Under H.R. 4325, the Federal Government would permit Wisconsin to merge its State-enforced parental child support program with AFDC to create a single program of child support allotments for qualifying families. The child support allotments would be calculated in a very different manner from AFDC benefits.

The formula for evaluating allotments would: First, look at the amount of parental child support payments as income for the custodial parent; second, take into consideration the other income of the custodial parent; and third, evaluate the financial needs of the custodial family. To the extent that the parental child support payment and custodial parent income fails to meet the family's needs, the State will provide additional allotments.

The Wisconsin experiment is designed to reduce public welfare costs while providing adequate financial assistance for dependent children by insuring that no custodial parents meet their legal obligations. No one knows for sure whether the experiment will work, but at least it is an effort to address a real problem in welfare. If the Federal Government is not going to initiate meaningful welfare reform, at least it should not stand in the way of responsible State efforts in that direction. This measure removes Federal obstacles to Wisconsin reform efforts. I urge my colleagues to accept the conference report on H.R. 4325.

Mr. FORD of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. MORRISON].

Mr. MORRISON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I would just like to take a moment to engage the chairman of the subcommittee in a colloquy, but let me say first that I want to congratulate him on his leadership, and I congratulate also my colleague, the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. KENNELLY], for pushing forward with this legislation, which I think is most helpful and needed.

I have just a question about one particular provision of the bill.

I would like to clarify the intention of the conferees with respect to the procedural protections to be extended to taxpayers whose State income tax refunds may be subject to be intercepted under section 466(a)(3) as added by section 3(b) of the conference agreement. It is my understanding that the process through which the intercept is initiated requires that the basic due process protections of notice and an opportunity to contest the intercept is to be provided by the State to the taxpayer who is alleged to owe overdue support.

Mr. FORD of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, that is correct.

Mr. MORRISON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I would also like to clarify the intended treatment of taxpayers who file State income tax returns jointly with individuals who are liable for overdue support. In the case of a refund intercept under section 466(a)(3) as added by section 3(b) of the conference agreement, such a joint filer might have his or her refund intercepted even though he or she has no liability for the support in question. Am I correct that it is contemplated that the due process protections mandated in section 466(a)(3) include the protection of joint filers? And am I correct that it is contemplated that joint filers would also be afforded notice and an opportunity to contest the intercept?

Mr. FORD of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, that is correct. That is my understanding.

Mr. MORRISON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman very much.

Mr. FORD of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. OAKAR].

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me, and I want to commend him and the full committee chairman for their leadership on this issue.

I also want to express the gratitude that all of us have to all of the Members, the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. CAMPBELL] and others, who did such a fine job in a bipartisan spirit about something that is a national problem that relates to women and children. I especially want to thank the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. KENNELLY], who provided the kind of leadership she did on this issue. It is not easy sometimes to address issues that kind of take sides in what should be a family matter, but this is very, very important.

We know that 59 percent of all the women who are heads of households face this dilemma of not having the child support that the courts have ruled they should get. We also know that that translates into millions of women and their offspring, so it really does relate to how we treat the American family.

For that reason, Mr. Speaker, I urge the support of all my colleagues. It would be nice to have a unanimous vote on something like this because I think it would show the compassion we all have for those women who are among the poorest in the country and who have their children to support.

● Mr. SHANNON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the conference report on H.R. 4325, the child support enforcement amendments. I am pleased to see that this bill, which provides much needed support for parents trying to collect delinquent child support payments, is about to become law.

The need for legislation like H.R. 4325 is well documented. We have seen all too clearly the connection between divorce and poverty among women and children. Over 50 percent of all children who live in poverty, live in female headed households and most AFDC recipients are eligible for AFDC because the head of the household is divorced, separated, or unmarried.

The nonpayment of child support is a major contributor to a cycle of poverty into which these women and children have become locked and which has resulted in the phenomenon known as the feminization of poverty. Twenty-eight percent of families never receive any child support payments and 23 percent receive only partial payment. In the first year following a divorce, a woman's standard of living drops 73 percent, while a man's increases 42 percent.

By establishing new collection methods and by giving States an incentive to use these methods in both AFDC and non/AFDC cases, we will be providing a mechanism by which divorced parents and their children can receive their court ordered child support payments.

Mr. Speaker, this is a bill that first and foremost protects our children as well as moving a step closer to achieving economic equity for women. I urge my colleagues to give this conference report their fullest support.●

● Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report issued on the child support enforcement amendments. Passage of this bill has been a priority for the Congressional Caucus for Women's Issues on which I serve, and today marks the successful conclusion of the caucus' campaign on this issue.

When the House approved its version of this measure last November, I spoke of the shocking statistics that so clearly demonstrate the need for the forceful action suggested by this bill. As we vote on approval of the conference report, those remarks bear repeating to put in perspective the importance of today's vote for children of divorced parents.

Approximately 21 percent of all U.S. families, over 8 million total, are now single-parent families with at least one child under age 21 living at home. Women head 90 percent of those families.

A Census Bureau survey for 1981 tragically revealed that only 47 percent of those families with court orders or agreements for child support were receiving full payments, while 53 percent were receiving a small part or nothing. When those single-parent families without court orders are added to that total, over two-thirds receive little or nothing in child support payments. The Census Bureau estimates that total or partial defaults were cheating children out of $4 billion a year in support.

This intolerable situation exists despite the fact that a California survey indicated that during the year following divorce, the husband's income rose by an average of 42 percent. This contrasts sharply with the survey's conclusion that for the same period the wife's income dropped by an astounding 73 percent.

As if the resulting devastation on the children from these statistics were not obvious, consider that over one-half of all children who live in poverty are children in female-headed families, and almost two-thirds of those children depend on AFDC. The profound impact that nonpayment of child support has in exacerbating this problem cannot be overstated.

Today's action will put a clamp on this national tragedy, and suggests a beginning to reverse its effects. The heart and soul of the conference report is a requirement that States adopt mandatory wage withholding laws. To buttress this crucial enforcement mechanism, additional provisions are authorized, including a State and Federal income tax refund intercept, the revision and expansion of State incentives to pursue both AFDC and non-AFDC collections, the permission of liens on property of neglectful parents, and the suggestion that States implement a system of tracking and monitoring child support payments.

As I noted last November, this package is a first and necessary step in addressing this problem. At stake are not luxuries but necessities for our Nation's most valuable resource, our children. Food, clothing, shelter—these are the casualties of parental neglect in fulfilling child support responsibilities, and children are the victims. For these reasons, I hope my colleagues will join with me today in giving their unqualified support to the conference report on the child support enforcement amendments.●

● Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, it is rare that we have the opportunity to vote on legislation that has almost unanimous support between Democrats and Republicans, both Chambers of Congress, and the President of the United States. It is even more unusual that we pass legislation that should assist the U.S. taxpayer while improving the financial status of single-family households at the same time.

The conference report on the child support enforcement is such legislation. It is, I believe, one of the most important and best proposals to come before the 98th Congress.

The agreement contains most of the major provisions that were passed unanimously by the House on November 16, 1983. Similar legislation was passed this spring by the other Chamber, also by a unanimous vote. All along, President Reagan and Secretary Heckler have repeated their firm commitment, and provided strong leadership in moving this legislation through our processes.

The purpose of the bill is to improve techniques for collecting past due child support, as well as provide a strong national commitment to requiring parents to accept financial responsibility for their children, regardless of the marital situation.

In the 8.4 million families with absent fathers, about 56 percent of the children live in poverty. Yet only around 60 percent of the female-headed households are entitled to receive assistance from the absent father.

For those who are granted child support, less than half receive the full allotted payment, and almost 30 percent receive no money at all. In many cases, paternal neglect forces the family to turn to public welfare. The taxpayers must then pick up where the father left off. In all cases, the children suffer.

Those statistics are appalling. They represent a national scandal. In such cases, Congress usually overreacts by passing an expensive, ineffective highly symbolic law which does no good. In this case, Congress finally did something right. This bill can significantly improve child support collections, relieve the taxpayers of an unfair burden, and improve the lives of millions of families.

This bill makes a major change in the emphasis of child support collections. Under current law, State IV-D agencies have strong incentives to focus only on collecting support for AFDC families. This proposal requires that State agencies make collection services equally available to both AFDC and non-AFDC families.

The most substantial changes will occur through mandatory revisions in State child support laws. States will have until October 1, 1985, to meet the new requirements, with liberal waiver provisions, especially for States whose legislatures do not meet frequently enough between now and then to bring their laws into conformity with the new Federal law.

Under this legislation, State enforcement tools will be much stronger. All States must impose mandatory wage withholding after an arrearage of 1 month. Individuals with a history of failure to pay may be required to post bond. Liens against both real and personal property can be imposed for the amount overdue. Credit agencies will be informed of the history of child support payment.

Also, States will have the option of providing a system for collecting and paying out support if either the custodial or noncustodial parent requests. To cover the cost of servicing collections, States will be required to charge up to $25 as an application fee for non-AFDC cases. State revenue agencies will be able to intercept tax refunds from those owing support payments.

In addition to the changes implemented at the State level, a number of modifications will be made in the Federal incentive and financing formulas. Starting in fiscal year 1986, there will no longer be a Federal incentive for States to focus only on AFDC collections. The Federal matching share to the IV-D agency will stay at 70 percent until 1988, and gradually work down to 66 percent by 1990.

Interstate cases have always proved to be the most difficult cases to collect. To address this problem, limited funding will be available to States which propose to undertake new or innovative methods of interstate support collections. Also, States must recognize other States wage withholding requirements.

Finally, the conference committee agreed to adopt a Senate proposal allowing the IRS to intercept Federal tax refunds from those owing support payments for over 1 month. This provision is also effective in fiscal year 1986, and has a 5-year sunset date.

These are the most major provisions in the legislation. There are many more minor provisions. States may have to form commissions to assist in implementing the new laws. Medical support must be included as part of support. Guidelines for support obligations must be set.

This is truly a bipartisan effort. It is desperately needed. This is a profamily, protaxpayer, prowomen, prochildren, and profairness bill. The only losers will be the deadbeats who have reneged on their legal obligations as parents. I urge my colleagues to adopt the conference report so that President Reagan can sign the bill into law as soon as possible.

● Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I rise to urge my colleagues to support the conference report on H.R. 4325. These amendments will strengthen our present child support program and bring needed relief to the millions of American children whose absent parents are not meeting their financial responsibility toward them.

The bill provides States with a number of new collection tools to assist them in obtaining overdue child support payments from absent parents. These include mandatory wage withholding, Federal and State income tax refund offsets, and placing liens on absent parents property.

As a conferee on this legislation, I believe the conference report represents an equitable and effective compromise. This bill will make a dramatic difference for many American families whose past difficulty in receiving child support payments has resulted in severe economic hardship. H.R. 4325 will help overturn this trend by providing States with the ability to pursue aggressively those absent parents who are refusing to pay for their families' support.

I urge your adoption of the conference report.●

● Mr. FEIGHAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report on child support enforcement. As a cosponsor of this crucial legislative initiative, I am very pleased that this bill is ready for final passage.

The conference agreement before us today would require States to develop by October 1, 1985, a program to withhold delinquent child support payments from employee wages. The measure also requires States to withhold delinquent payments that have been ordered by the courts of another State.

These proposed regulations are long overdue. There are 7 million women in this country who have custody of minor children. Sixty percent of these women have been awarded child support, yet only a third of them collect any of the support they are entitled to receive. Clearly, millions of innocent children are being victimized by a system that does not work. We must improve child support collection procedures, and this bill represents a significant step in the right direction.

I urge the adoption of this conference report.

In a related matter, I recently intervened to settle a dispute between the Department of Health and Human Services and the Cuyahoga County Child Support Enforcement System. I bring this to the attention of my colleagues because they, too, are aware of the problems that plague child support enforcement on the local level.

In this case, some minor difficulties have been resolved, and now the needs of the Cuyahoga County Child Support Enforcement System are being met by the Department of Health and Human Services. Consequently, child support enforcement in my district has been significantly improved.

I hope Congress will continue to address the issue of child support enforcement. The system should be closely monitored, and reforms and improvements should be carefully considered. We must ensure that single parents and their children get the economic justice they deserve.●

Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FORD of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, we have no further requests on this side of the aisle.

Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. FORD of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the conference report under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

Mr. FORD of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the conference report.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. FORD of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 413, nays 0, not voting 19, as follows:

So the conference report was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF S. 2436, CORPORATION FOR PUBLIC BROADCASTING AUTHORIZATION

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 563 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 563

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to take from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 2436) to authorize appropriations of funds for activities of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, and for other purposes, and to consider the bill in the House without intervening motion. It shall then be in order to move to strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill and to insert in lieu thereof the provisions contained in H.R. 5541 as passed by the House, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on said amendment and on the bill to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LONG] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, as is the custom, I yield 30 minutes for the minority to the distinguished gentleman from Missouri [Mr. TAYLOR] pending that, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the rule makes it in order to take the Senate bill from the Speaker's table and to consider the bill in the House without intervening motion. The rule further provides for a motion to strike all after the enacting clause of the Senate bill and insert the provisions contained in H.R. 5541 as passed by the House.

H.R. 5541 was passed by the House July 24 by a vote of 302 to 91. This rule simply allows the manager of that bill to take the procedural steps necessary to facilitate final House and Senate agreement on public broadcasting legislation, either through a joint conference or by Senate acceptance of a House amendment.

As you are aware, in order to enact legislation into law both House of Congress must pass identical language in the same legislative vehicle. Routinely, the procedural step necessary to allow both Houses to act on the same bill is accomplished by a unanimous-consent request or by a provision of a rule.

In this case the Senate had not acted on the legislation when the original rule was granted on H.R. 5541, but by the time the House acted on the public broadcasting bill the Senate had passed companion legislation. When unanimous consent was requested to take the bill from the Speaker's table under the normal procedure, an objection was heard.

At the request of the Committee on Energy and Commerce, the Rules Committee granted this new rule to facilitate a Senate hookup on public broadcasting.

Finally, the rule provides one motion to recommit.

Mr. Speaker, in order to allow the House and the Senate the opportunity to reconcile differences and to move to final consideration. I urge my colleagues to adopt this rule.

□ 1810

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 563 is a simple, procedural rule designed to facilitate a conference with the other body on legislation authorizing appropriations to the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

The rule provides that the bill (S. 2436) shall be taken from the Speaker's table and considered in the House. Ordinarily, bills are considered in the House under the 1-hour rule and amendments are not in order.

Under this rule, a motion will be in order to strike all after the enacting clause of S. 2436, and insert the provisions of H.R. 5541 as passed by the House on July 24.

Mr. Speaker, this is a routine procedure and is usually handled by unanimous-consent agreement when the House has passed one version of a bill, and the other body has approved another.

In this situation, unanimous consent was not obtained for this procedure on July 24, and agreement to the motion specified in this rule will be the first step toward a conference between the two Houses.

The rule does provide for a motion to recommit, thereby protecting the rights of Members who may not want the House to go to conference with the other body right now.

Mr. Speaker, when the House considered H.R. 5541, I was one of those who urged adoption of amendments to reduce the authorization amount in the bill because it effectively tripled the budget of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

The amendments I favored were not adopted, and the House passed the bill on July 24, by a vote of 302 to 91. I think that gives us some idea of the level of support for the legislation.

Mr. Speaker, this is truly a procedural matter.

The House has had an opportunity to consider and act upon the legislation, and all this rule does is facilitate a conference with the other body on the legislation.

I am not aware of any opposition to this rule, and I urge its adoption.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. DANNEMEYER].

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, this rule that is being considered by the body at this time gives this House an opportunity of once again examining that statement that is being made all over the country today that the deficit that exists in the Federal Government is the responsibility of President Reagan and his administration.

What we are seeing in this bill that is before us is another illustration that Presidents do not set spending levels for the country, Congress does. Let me say what I mean by that.

The administration's request for 1985, fiscal year, for this activity of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting was $85 million. We previously appropriated in the last fiscal year $130 million. Last year we increased the authorizations for this program for 1984, 1985, and 1986 of $145 million, $153 million, and $162 million.

In other words, what we did last year, 1983, was to in effect rescind what we did in 1981.

This bill is another illustration of how piece by piece the House of Representatives is dismantling the spending cuts that we were able to achieve in 1981. This body, the House of Representatives, is seeking in its historically identifiable way of setting a spending level for, in this instance, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, at a level significantly higher than we established as a policy alternative in 1981 and then as to what the administration requested for this activity in 1985.

There is creeping into our process—and I think Members should be aware of this—we are not just appropriating money for fiscal year 1985 in this measure, we have now moved to what we call forward appropriating. There is funding for years 1987 and 1989.

Now, I do not know why we are doing that. We are not only creating debt every day that we are voting on measures here which we are transferring to future generations, but I guess now we are in the process of forward appropriating. I am not sure that I even know what that means, but I assume it means that we are taking appropriations that would be available for 1987 and 1989 and spending them in 1984. Now, if I have that wrong, somebody can correct me. It is not that we cannot spend enough in 1984 and 1985 that we have got to borrow from 1987 through 1989.

Now, what is the alternative if we do not adopt this rule? It is very simple. We can appoint a conference committee from the two bodies. The Senate version is slightly different than the House version. Under the rules that exist between the two bodies a conference committee would look at it and we could avoid the necessity of this rule.

Now, why do the proponents of this legislation want this rule? Very simple. They want to circumvent a conference committee. They want to strike everything after the enacting clause of the Senate bill, amend into the Senate bill the House version, send that back to the Senate, have concurrence and go to the President's desk.

The desire to increase spending for this function is so profound by the Members of this body they cannot wait for the normal process that the conference committee would consume namely a week or two or what have you. They are just determined to have this increased funding authorized so that it can get down to the President's desk and hopefully be signed into law or perhaps try to use some leverage to have the President assert whether or not he wants to veto this measure, which is significantly over the authorized level, and then condemn the President in the eyes of the special interest group of this Corporation for Public Broadcasting by having them belittle what the administration is seeking to do.

I want to thank my colleagues on the Democratic side for having called some television stations in my home State of California to call me up to ask me to desist in this effort. I say to my colleagues I thank them for that effort at lobbying. I enjoyed talking with some of the members of the staff in television stations in California.

When we finished explaining to them the 47-percent increase in the funding for this program, we turned one of them around. I do not know, maybe they called you and shared with you their thoughts that you should desist in pushing this legislation.

I do not know if the gentleman from Colorado would care to respond to that. I suspect he has not be dissuaded, but I thought I would share that thought.

I think that the responsible thing that we should do is turn down this rule. It will not stop this bill from being processed. A conference committee can come into existence and those people can do their work and then the House will have a chance to vote on the conference committee and orderly processes can work their way.

I do not see any reason to circumvent normal proceedings by adopting this rule.

Mr. WIRTH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DANNEMEYER. I yield to the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. WIRTH. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I understand the gentleman was curious as to what the position of the gentleman from Colorado was on this particular piece of legislation.

□ 1820

Mr. DANNEMEYER. I am always curious.

Mr. WIRTH. If the gentleman will yield further, I would just point out that I am also an unabashed supporter of public broadcasting, and I think that also by a margin of better than 3 to 1 the House has voted for this particular piece of legislation, agreeing, I think, that we ought to proceed as rapidly as possible and get rid of this procedural nonsense.

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Well, I thank my colleague for his—I will have to put you down as on the fence as to whether or not you want to support this rule. And I would submit that there are a lot of issues that some of us on the minority side would like to have the House take up, such as, we have got 169 signatures on discharge petition No. 10 so that we can get a vote on the proposed constitutional amendment calling for a balanced budget amendment to the U.S. Constitution. We have to resort to that discharge petition to circumvent the burial ground of the Judiciary Committee because the leadership on your side will not give us a vote.

Now, we do not have time to take up that issue, which is desired by at least 65 percent to 70 percent of the American people as something they want done, but, here we are this evening, we have got all the time in the world to take up this rule, House Resolution 563, to authorize a circumvention of the coming into existence of a conference committee to serve what end? To expedite the processing for yet further increasing increases of an irresponsible nature in this activity of Corporation for Public Broadcasting. I think we should turn down the rule.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OXLEY].

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, I just want to be very brief and remind the House—I am sure my friend from Colorado is pleased about that—remind the House that just less than 2 weeks ago we had an opportunity to debate this bill, and at the time I offered what I consider to be a very reasonable amendment to the legislation that came out of the Energy and Commerce Committee, and that was a 15-percent increase for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting over a 3-year period, that would be 15 percent per year as opposed to the rather large, extremely large increases that were granted in the bill, almost 50 percent in the first year and 81-percent increase in the authorization levels.

Clearly, by what we have done, we have gone far beyond the pale of what was dictated in the House back in 1981 when apparently the House was on a much firmer basis for spending cuts and for taking a real look at the spending proclivities that this House has become famous for.

So we had an opportunity on my amendment. My amendment received 176 votes, hardly a small number, to indicate that the House felt that there was a need for a moderate increase in the Corporation for Public Broadcasting but certainly not the 81-percent increase that we saw passed ultimately.

I would associate myself with the remarks of the gentleman from California in regard to talking about the budget deficits while at the same time going on our way and authorizing these kinds of increases. It is beyond my imagination, literally, to figure out how we can look at those kinds of increases when we are talking about substantially lower increases for things like Social Security, food stamps and other programs that this Congress funds, and yet we are going to talk about that kind of an increase.

So I would ask the Members of the House to take a real good look at this. I understand that the votes are there to pass this rule, and I understand that the votes are there to pass ultimately the motion that will be forthcoming. But I think it is one of those things that may very well come back to haunt us, in the long run, if we are not responsible enough to recognize the spending that we are about to undertake.

So I would ask the House to consider a no vote on the rule. Let the process work to the best of its ability, let a conference committee take a look at this, let us take a second look at the spending levels and the authorization levels and get back to some common sense. We have that obligation, it seems to me, to our constituents, or, at the very least, Mr. Speaker, we have the obligation not to go back to our districts and talk about all of these horrible budget deficits while at the same time voting for these kinds of increases. We cannot have it both ways, and I would only ask my colleagues if they seek to have these kinds of increases in the authorization levels, let us at least have the decency to be quiet back in our districts when we are talking about these massive deficits.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL].

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, as I have reminded Members in this Chamber ad nauseam, a majority of the Members in this House voted to restrict spending increases in fiscal year 1985 on discretionary non-means-tested items in our budget to increases of 3.5 percent.

This House has since then, wantonly, and in what I judge to be a very capricious manner, reneged on that promise by voting again and again for massive increases in spending at a time when many Members beat their breasts and tell us how nervous they are about deficits. In fact many of them tell us we are going to have to raise taxes on the average American simply because Members of this House cannot control their spending urges.

Mr. Speaker, not an hour ago this House voted out a spending bill which calls for increases of more than 10 percent in excess of last year's spending for the routine operations of the departments of our Government, Treasury, State, Justice, budgets, more than half of which are caused by salaries and expenses of Federal employees.

Even though we promised America when we voted for our budget that we would limit ourselves to 3.5 percent, it was so important to this House that these Federal employees and these Federal operations have large increases that we had to renege on our promise.

And each Member, of course, stands accountable to his or her constituency and to himself or to herself about these kinds of votes. Each of us has to make those decisions and stand or fall with them.

Now, however, having passed that budget resolution in the House and having gone far over its limits in appropriation bill after appropriation bill we come to another what is obviously not a means tested program, that of public broadcasting. And here we find it necessary to authorize increases of up to 50 percent over a spending figure we just increased just a short while ago.

Now, most of the time I listen to public broadcasting stations. I think they are excellent. On the other hand, I hear their ads, and they say they are listener-supported broadcasts. But obviously they are not. They are taxpayer-supported broadcasts because apparently they cannot make it on their own.

Well, I think all of us do not mind putting taxpayers' money into the game a little bit. I do not. But here we have a system where we are putting half again as much taxpayers' money in, and partly to revive an organization which could not make it on its own. We are repaying it for bankruptcy, rewarding it for having failed, by giving it a great deal of new money.

Mr. Speaker, I do not know what any other Member of this House is going to do, but as a fan of public broadcasting there is no way in the world that I can tell my constituents that I am really concerned about a deficit when I am willing to throw 50 percent more money for this kind of an enterprise for which, as far as I know, there is no immediate compelling need. There is no hunger; there is no deprivation of any individual.

Therefore, I am going to vote against this rule, and I will not be surprised if a majority supports it. But as usual, I will be disappointed, because this House will again have shown that it has no respect for the taxpayers' money that is given to it.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Utah [Mr. NIELSON].

Mr. NIELSON of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I would like to return to the remarks of the Representative from California [Mr. DANNEMEYER]. I agree with Representatives OXLEY and FRENZEL when they say it is over budget. The 47-percent increase in the first year is wrong. We debated that issue several weeks ago, 2 weeks ago. What concerns me is the procedure we are trying to adopt in this particular case. As I understand the rule, the rule is to take the Senate bill, strike everything after the enactment clause and insert our House bill so as to avoid a conference. It seems to me that since the bill passed a couple of weeks ago it was very easy to appoint a conference at that time. The Senate has indicated their desire, they have passed the bill already, there is no disagreement on the amounts.

I wonder why the sudden burst of speed after this has been languishing for several months in committee.

□ 1830

I really feel also that we are talking something in 1987, 1988, and 1989. It is something that could be handled easily in plenty of time in September. I wonder why we are adopting this particular procedure. It would appear to me it would be much better part of wisdom to defeat the rule and go to a conference as we do normally with this kind of bill. I am sure the moneys will stay the same because both Houses took those moneys and adopted them without change. I just do not like the procedural change and I do not understand what it is for. It can only be for political embarrassment of those who happen to support public broadcasting but are opposed to a horrendous increase at this time.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. WIRTH].

Mr. WIRTH. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, if I might just point out a number of extraordinary misstatements about this rule. One, nobody is trying to circumvent going to conference with the Senate, and in order to go to conference with the Senate, you would have to go on the House bill or on the Senate bill. What you do under any piece of legislation is simply to ask unanimous consent to strike all after the enacting clause, substitute either the House bill or the Senate bill so that you can go to conference.

I asked to do that after we had had the procedure, after we had had the full debate the time before, and it was objected. So we have to go to the Rules Committee in order to get a complying number either on the House side or the Senate side. That is all we are doing. I am sure that every member of the Rules Committee is aware of that.

When the gentleman from Utah suggests that there is something untoward about this procedure; not at all. All we are doing is the Senate can decide to take our bill, to go to conference, to do anything that they want to do. They can do anything that they want to do.

Second, to talk about the differences in numbers, as there has been an enormous amount of rhetoric before, the numbers in the House bill for public broadcasting and the numbers in the Senate bill for public broadcasting are identical, identical. So whether we go to conference or do not go to conference we are going to end up with the exact same numbers.

Now, we have had all of the debate on whether or not one wants to support increases in public broadcasting. The gentleman from Ohio had an amendment, we had that thoroughly debated. We have been through all of that; this is a simple procedure to allow the House to go to conference with the Senate or the Senate to pick up the bill and pass it on the floor over there; whatever the Senate chooses to do.

There are no differences in funding between the House and the Senate. The rule simply allows us to get on with the business of the House, which business is normally done by unanimous consent. The gentleman from California objected to that standard procedure of unanimous consent, just like objecting to somebody asking unanimous consent to revise and extend their remarks. Simple procedural operation. So here we are, consuming an enormous amount of Members' time on this process.

I rise in support of House Resolution 563. This rule makes in order consideration of S. 2436, a bill to authorize appropriations of funds for activities of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, and the rule also provides for a motion to strike all after the enacting clause of S. 2436 and insert in lieu thereof the provisions of H.R. 5541, as it was passed by the House 2 weeks ago.

The Senate and House-passed public broadcasting measures contain identical authorization levels. The legislation in both Houses is a result of a bipartisan effort to ensure that public broadcasting has sufficient funding to fulfill its congressional mandate to provide programming of excellence, creativity, and diversity. There is broad agreement that the funding levels in this legislation are the bare minimum necessary to ensure the survival and excellence of our public broadcasting system.

This is a simple funding bill, supported strongly by the several hundred public television and radio stations throughout the country.

In a effort to frustrate the will of this body, a simple unanimous-consent motion which would have provided for substituting the Senate's bill number for the House-passed bill was objected to when we considered this legislation 2 weeks ago. As a result, we must take up the House's valuable time today in once more passing this legislation. I would simply like to remind my colleagues that we passed this legislation 2 weeks ago by the overwhelming margin of 302 to 91 under an open rule in which there was more than ample time to debate the issue. We are here today to simply substitute the Senate number on the House-passed bill.

While it is unfortunate that we must waste the time to get around a tactic intended to frustrate the will of this body, I ask my colleagues to join me in taking this opportunity to again express our resounding commitment to the Nation's public broadcasting system.

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIRTH. I will be happy to yield to my colleague from California.

Mr. DANNEMEYER. I thank my colleague for yielding.

Maybe I do not understand where we are.

Mr. WIRTH. I think the gentleman is absolutely correct, and I am delighted to have been able to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 324, nays 89, not voting 19, as follows:

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 3605, DRUG PRICE COMPETITION ACT OF 1983

Mr. DERRICK, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 98-974) on the resolution (H. Res. 569) providing for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3605) to amend the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act to authorize an abbreviated new drug application under section 505 of that act for generic new drugs equivalent to approved new drugs, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed, as follows:

H. RES. 569

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3605) to amend the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act to authorize an abbreviated new drug application under section 505 of that Act for generic new drugs equivalent to approved new drugs, and the first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed two hours, one hour to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Energy and Commerce, and one hour to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary, the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule. It shall be in order to consider the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on Energy and Commerce now printed in the bill as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the five-minute rule, said substitute shall be considered for amendment by titles instead of by sections and each title shall be considered as having been read, and all points of order against said substitute for failure to comply with the provisions of clause 7 of rule XVI are hereby waived. It shall be in order to consider en bloc the amendments recommended by the Committee on the Judiciary now printed in the bill to each title. It shall be in order to consider an amendment offered by Representative Derrick of South Carolina adding a new title III consisting of the text of title II of the bill H.R. 5929. Said amendment shall be considered as having been read, and all points of order against said amendment for failure to comply with provisions of clause 7 of rule XVI are hereby waived. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions. After the passage of H.R. 3605, it shall be in order to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 1538 and to consider said bill in the House, and it shall then be in order to move to strike out all after the enacting clause of the said Senate bill and to insert in lieu thereof the provisions contained in H.R. 3605 as passed by the House, and all points of order against said motion for failure to comply with the provisions of clause 7, rule XVI are hereby waived.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 569 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is, Will the House now consider House Resolution 569?

The question was taken.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 313, nays 80, not voting 39, as follows:

□ 1910

Mr. NIELSON of Utah and Mr. SPENCE changed their votes from "nay" to "yea."

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the House agreed to consider House Resolution 569.

The results of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. DERRICK] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. TAYLOR], pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the rule before the House provides for the consideration of H.R. 3605, the Drug Price Competition and Patent Term Restoration Act of 1984. It is an open rule providing for 2 hours of general debate. With 1 hour to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Energy and Commerce and 1 hour to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

The rule makes in order the Energy and Commerce Committee amendment in the nature of a substitute to be considered as original text for purposes of amendment. The substitute is to be read for amendment by titles instead of by sections with each title considered as read. Clause 7 of rule XVI, which requires that the subject matter of amendments be germane to the measure being amended, is waived against the substitute. The germaneness waiver is necessary because H.R. 3605, as introduced, dealt only with Food and Drug Administration approval of generic drugs, while the scope of the substitute was broadened to deal with the terms of patents for drugs as well.

The rule provides for the consideration en bloc of the Judiciary Committee amendments to each of the bill's two titles. In addition, an amendment I will be offering to add a new title III is made in order. That amendment consists of the text of title II of H.R. 5929. Clause 7 of rule XVI, germaneness, is waived against the amendment. This waiver is necessary because the subject of the amendment, labeling of textile and apparel goods, is beyond the scope of the underlying text. The amendment is critical to the health and vitality of the U.S. textile industry and is very similar to language included in S. 1538, as passed the Senate.

The rule further provides that any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the whole to the bill or to the substitute and that one motion to recommit with or without instructions is in order.

Finally, the rule provides that, after passage of H.R. 3605, it shall be in order to take S. 1538 from the Speaker's table and consider it in the House. Then it shall be in order to move to strike all after the enacting clause of the Senate bill and insert the provisions of H.R. 3605, as passed by the House. Clause 7 of rule XVI, germaneness, is waived against consideration of that motion.

Mr. Speaker, the energy and commerce amendment in the nature of a substitute contains two titles. The first deals with the process by which drug companies can obtain approval to sell drugs which have already been certified by the Food and Drug Administration and marketed by one of the pioneer drug companies, but on which the patent has expired. Currently, pharmaceutical companies which produce generic drugs must undertake a lengthy and expensive procedure in order to gain FDA approval for sale of a drug with an expired patent. These tests are currently required despite the fact that identical tests have already been conducted and the FDA has previously approved the sale of the exact same drug by the company holding the patent. This bill seeks to end this duplication of effort and, more importantly, make it easier for pharmaceutical companies to market cheaper, generic alternatives to name-brand drugs when the patents on the name-brand drugs have expired.

Title II of the energy and commerce substitute amends U.S. patent law to authorize time extensions on patents for certain drugs. Extensions of up to 5 years can be granted when the patent holder can show that, after the patent was granted, marketing of the drugs was delayed due to the FDA approval process. It is hoped that this extension of exclusive rights will encourage increased research and development efforts by pharmaceutical companies.

The amendment in the nature of a substitute also contains provisions clarifying congressional intent with regard to the definition of patent infringement in the drug industry. The provision, which has the effect of reversing a recent ruling of the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, states that it is not an act of patent infringement for a drug company to test a drug prior to the expiration date of a patent if the testing is in preparation of gaining FDA approval to market the drug after the patent expires.

The Energy and Commerce Committee version of the bill would give to manufacturers of unpatentable drugs an exclusive market life of 4 years on that product. The Judiciary Committee adopted an amendment striking that provision. The Judiciary Committee also amended the energy and commerce amendment to delete any references to animal and veterinary drugs.

Mr. Speaker, this is probably one of the most significant pieces of legislation to be considered by this body. It will help millions of elderly and ill people by getting safe and less expensive generic drugs on the market in an expeditious fashion. It also helps to restore the incentive of patent protection to those drug manufacturers that spend millions upon millions of dollars in the search for new drugs.

Mr. Speaker, the rule before us is an open rule that would permit all Members to offer germane amendments to H.R. 3605. I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of the rule so that we can move to the expeditious consideration of this legislation.

□ 1920

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 569 is an open rule under which the House will consider legislation changing the application process for generic drugs and extending the patent protection afforded developers of new drugs.

The rule, which was reported earlier today from the Committee on Rules, is an open rule and provides for 2 hours of general debate.

The rule makes in order an amendment in the nature of a substitute from the Committee on Energy and Commerce for consideration an original text for the purpose of amendment under the 5-minute rule.

Mr. Speaker, the rule provides a waiver of germaneness for the Energy and Commerce Committee amendment, because the bill as introduced dealt only with the approval process used by the Food and Drug Administration for generic drugs.

The scope of the substitute reported from committee, however, is broader than the original bill since it also deals with the term of patents for drugs.

The substitute is to be read by titles, and the rule provides for en block consideration of amendments to be offered by the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Speaker, the rule also makes in order a specific amendment, to be offered by the gentleman from South Carolina, and provides a waiver of germaneness for that amendment.

The substance of the amendment to be offered by Mr. DERRICK deals with the labeling of textile and apparel goods, and is beyond the scope of the committee substitute. Since the committee thought the gentleman from South Carolina made a good case for the consideration of his amendment, the waiver was provided.

Mr. Speaker, the rule also provides for linkage of H.R. 3605 to the bill, S. 1538, after passage of H.R. 3605, in order to facilitate a conference with the other body.

The rule makes the consideration of S. 1538 in order, and permits a motion to strike out all after the enacting clause of that bill and to insert the provisions of H.R. 3605 as passed by the House. In addition, a waiver of germaneness is provided for that motion.

Mr. Speaker, our consideration of this legislation culminates a long, bipartisan effort to make it easier for pharmaceutical companies to market cheaper, generic drugs as alternatives to name-brand drugs when the patents on the name-brand drugs have expired.

There was no controversy about the provisions of this rule during our hearing earlier today, and I urge adoption of the rule.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL].

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, this resolution is a very complicated one, which is one of the reasons that I ask for a vote before it be considered. As most Members know, this rule will require a two-thirds vote for passage because it is being presented to us without benefit of a report, and within an hour or so after it has been passed. I believe the last vote required a two-thirds vote, as well.

It is a little hard to track what we are talking about in this rule. We are first given a bill on which there is a committee report. We are then told that that bill is not really going to be the bill we shall actually consider. There is another bill which will be substituted for it.

Finally, there is a third bill which is wholly nongermane to the first two. Under the rule we shall take title II, of H.R. 5929, and stick it onto the bill. When we are done with that, if anybody understands what we are doing, it will be purely by accident.

Mr. Speaker, the part of the bill that baffles me is the part of the bill which will be introduced as a substitute by Mr. DERRICK. It is half of a bill, in fact. Title II of that bill provides for amendments to the Textile Fiber Products Identification Act and the Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939, neither of which has any slight degree of germaneness to the main bill.

Item No. 1: There was no showing anywhere that the main bill in question was an urgent one and had to be considered under a rule which was passed 1 hour or 2 before under a two-thirds vote.

Rule No. 2: I do not know if we have a committee report on the Derrick substitute. I suspect we do not. I do not know if there were committee hearings on it. I just heard about it a few minutes ago. I do not know what it means. All I know is that it is not germane, and that this House has no reason whatsoever to consider it now.

I also suspect, Mr. Speaker, that after we adopt this rule and if the Derrick amendment is passed, then any sort of labeling amendment will be in order, and that means that we are likely to have leather identification amendments, perhaps footwear identification amendments, certainly tubular steel identification amendments, and perhaps a whole raft of others.

In my judgment, the packaging of these two items together is not only unwise, it is rather silly for this House. We should not be indulging in this kind of spur-of-the-moment legislation when we are looking for an adjournment the day after tomorrow.

If we would have handled this rule in the normal way, it would have laid over for a couple of days. We would have then handled the bill in the normal course of events and under the regular procedures of this House. To force the consideration of a nongermane amendment makes this body look like the other body, which does not present a very good picture to our constituents of orderly process. This rule will take two-thirds to pass. I would urge the House that it not be passed.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENZEL. I yield to the gentleman.

Have I made a mistake on that?

Mr. DERRICK. The gentleman is incorrect. It took a two-thirds vote for consideration. It will take a majority vote for passage.

Mr. FRENZEL. I thank the gentleman for straightening me out. This resolution requires only a majority vote. The previous vote that I mentioned did require two-thirds, and those who opposed it and assisted me in the opposition were not successful in gaining two-thirds, which I regret greatly.

Mr. Speaker, to sum up, this is an unusual, unnecessary, unwarranted procedure. The resolution should be rejected by the House.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KINDNESS].

Mr. KINDNESS. I thank the gentleman for yielding, no matter what they say.

Mr. Speaker, I take this time to inform my colleagues that I have filed for printing in the RECORD of today 136 amendments to H.R. 3605, the Drug Price Competition and Patent Term Restoration Act of 1984, in order to assure the opportunity for their consideration in the event the leadership calls for the bill to be considered under the 5-minute rule during the remainder of this week, which might result in my colleagues' impatience in turn calling for time limitations being imposed. We know how that works. And this is exactly the right time for that to occur.

I support the concept underlying the legislation, namely the combining of patent term restoration for new pharmaceuticals with a faster approval of generic pharmaceuticals. However, the process in which we are involved partly described by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL] just a few minutes ago is a fast process at this point. The matter has been considered in a rather peculiar way. The bill is not the bill that a lot of people thought it was. And it is combined with other elements that would otherwise be nongermane.

My concern is that the bill as presently proposed is a result, in part, of ignorance or unfamiliarity with certain parts of our laws, in particular the patent laws of our country. It has a great deal to do with our position in international trade. The bill would cost American jobs by jeopardizing exports. It would create disincentives to the development of new drugs for health minorities. It would undermine the financial viability of many universities, delay approvals of new life-saving medicines, sacrifice the American biotechnology industry and its edge in the world, make unenforceable patents on inventions used to test drugs. And the list goes on.

These are problems associated with the bill that is being brought to us in a very quick manner at a time when there is very little room for consideration of some pretty complex matters. If H.R. 3605 is considered under the 5-minute rule this week, I think we will be forced to address the multitude of issues in the bill on a piecemeal basis rather than being able to combine these concepts that are included in the 136 amendments.

□ 1930

So I would urge that the bill not be considered this week; the rule might just as well not be adopted at this point. I would urge a no vote.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken, and on a division (demanded by Mr. FRENZEL) there were—yeas 87, nays 21.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 304, nays 74, not voting 54, as follows:

CORPORATION FOR PUBLIC BROADCASTING AUTHORIZATION

Mr. WIRTH. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 563, I move to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill (S. 2436) to authorize appropriations of funds for activities of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. WIRTH].

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

S. 2436

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section 391 of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 391) is amended—

(1) by striking "and" after "1983,"; and

(2) by inserting "$50,000,000 for fiscal year 1985, $53,000,000 for fiscal year 1986, and $56,000,000 for fiscal year 1987," immediately after "1984,".

SEC. 2. Section 393(c) of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 393(c)) is amended by striking the first sentence.

SEC. 3. Section 396(k)(1)(C) of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 396(k)(1)(C) is amended—

(1) by striking "and 1986, an amount" and inserting in lieu thereof "1986, 1987, 1988, and 1989, an amount";

(2) by striking "and" after "fiscal year 1985,"; and

(3) by inserting ", $238,000,000 for fiscal year 1987, $253,000,000 for fiscal year 1988, and $270,000,000 for fiscal year 1989" immediately before the period at the end thereof.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. WIRTH

Mr. WIRTH. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. WIRTH moves to strike out all after the enacting clause of the Senate bill, S. 2436, and to insert in lieu thereof the provisions of H.R. 5541, as passed by the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Colorado [Mr. WIRTH] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. WIRTH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, 2 weeks ago, the House debated and passed H.R. 5541, which authorizes funds for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting for fiscal years 1987, 1988, and 1989, and for the facilities program for fiscal years 1985, 1986, and 1987. Two amendments designed to cut funding for these programs were defeated, and H.R. 5541 passed the House overwhelmingly, under an open rule, by a vote of 302 to 91.

Immediately following passage of H.R. 5541, I asked unanimous consent to take up S. 2436, which was introduced by Senator GOLDWATER, and was passed by the Senate by voice vote on June 15. My intention was to move to strike all after the enacting clause and insert the text of H.R. 5541. The funding levels in S. 2436 are identical to those in H.R. 5541 and given Senator GOLDWATER's strong leadership on this public broadcasting bill, I believe it is appropriate that this legislation bear the number of the Senator's bill.

However, an objection was registered, to this simple procedural request, and thus the overwhelming will of the House was frustrated due to this tactic to obstruct final consideration of the bill. Mr. Speaker, the House has debated H.R. 5541 under an open rule and has overwhelmingly passed that legislation. S. 2436 contains provisions identical to H.R. 5541. It is a very unfortunate waste of this body's time for us to have to pass this bill again, but the procedural effort that was made to frustrate the House's will makes this necessary.

I wish to remind my colleagues once more that we have already adopted this legislation by the extremely wide margin of 302 to 91, and all we are doing today is substituting the Senate number for the legislation. I ask my colleagues again to support this legislation which is so important to the future of one of our great national resources, public broadcasting.

Mr. SPEAKER, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 563, the previous question is considered as ordered on the motion.

The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. WIRTH].

The motion was agreed to.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An Act to amend the Communications Act of 1934 to extend certain authorizations of appropriations contained in such act, and for other purposes."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DRUG PRICE COMPETITION AND PATENT TERM RESTORATION ACT OF 1984

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 569 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 3605.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3605) to amend the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act to authorize an abbreviated new drug application under section 505 of that act for generic new drugs equivalent to approved new drugs, with Mr. DANIEL in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the first reading of the bill is dispensed with.

Under the rule, the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] will be recognized for 30 minutes; the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADIGAN] will be recognized for 30 minutes; the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KASTENMEIER] will be recognized for 30 minutes; and the gentleman from California [Mr. MOORHEAD] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN].

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, H.R. 3605, the Drug Price Competition and Patent Term Restoration Act, is the most important drug legislation to come before the Congress since the 1962 changes in the drug laws. It is also the most important consumer legislation to be considered this Congress.

The bill will save consumers over $1 billion by making more low-cost generic drugs available. The legislation will also provide the incentives necessary for this country to maintain its worldwide leadership in pharmaceutical research by restoring patent time lost due to Government review.

Let me briefly explain the bill. Title I of H.R. 3605 extends the Food and Drug Administration's [FDA] generic drug approval procedures used for brand name drugs approved before 1962 to those approved after 1962. For pre-1962, the FDA does not require complete retesting of generic copies. Instead, the generic drugmaker must show that his drug is the same as the pioneer drug which was previously determined to be safe and effective. Unfortunately, these abbreviated generic drug approval procedures do not apply to pioneer drugs approved after 1962. The lack of such procedures is an effective bar to generic competition because the generic companies cannot afford the millions of dollars to duplicate the test results already in the FDA's files.

There are 150 post-1962 drugs which are off patent including best sellers such as valium, motrin, dyazide, and inderal. By making these drugs available as generics, H.R. 3605 will reduce the cost of drugs for all consumers. Approximately 84 percent of our citizens pay their drug bill without any form of government assistance. Consequently, the FDA estimates the cost savings of this bill to be $1 billion. Older Americans, in particular, will benefit from the legislation because they are the largest consumers of medicines, using almost 25 percent of all prescription drugs.

Federal and State governments will also save millions of dollars. For example, the Department of Defense saved $1.2 million in 1 year on one dosage form of a drug as a result of the availability of a generic alternative.

Title II of the bill would extend the patents for drugs and other substances subject to premarket approval for up to 5 years. Because a patent continues to toll when a manufacturer is testing and awaiting Government approval, the amount of patent time remaining after approval is less than the normal 17 years. For example, representatives of the drug industry have testified that the average patent time left after approval is between 8 and 10 years. Research-intensive firms predict that declining patent term will result in the development of fewer innovative products.

The bill restores patent time lost due to Government review. Consequently, the legislation will create a significant incentive for the development of new products. In the case of drugs, this could mean new cures for untreatable diseases and less expensive treatments for controllable diseases.

This bill represents a compromise among divergent and sharply differing interests. Previously, extended approval of generic drugs has been opposed by the brand name drug companies and supported by consumer, senior citizen, and labor groups as well as the generic drug industry. Conversely, patent extension was supported by the brand name drug industry and opposed by consumer, labor, and senior citizen groups as well as the generic drug companies.

After almost a year of data analysis and negotiations, we were able to fashion a compromise bill. This legislation has been endorsed by the FDA, the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association representing the brand name drug companies, the generic drug industry, the American Association of Retired People, the National Council of Senior Citizens, Consumer Federation of America, AFL-CIO, AFSCME, UAW, and SEIU.

Mr. Chairman, this bill fairly and carefully balances the public's need for low-cost generic drugs and private industry's need for sufficient patent life to encourage the development of innovative products such as drugs. I urge the passage of the bill without amendment.

Mr. MADIGAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 3605, which initiates an expedited, abbreviated application process for generic drugs and extends the patent protection afforded the pioneer developers of new medications. This legislation culminates a long bipartisan effort to combine and balance these two objectives and promote innovative changes to the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act. Both the Energy and Commerce and the Judiciary Committees have now provided ample time for discussion, testimony, and rebuttal by groups favoring the legislation and by those who seek to change it.

On the average, it takes $85 million and over 10 years to bring a new drug to the marketplace. This tremendous investment of time and dollars by the pharmaceutical industry must be protected. The majority of time expended in meeting the regulations set forth by the FDA involves the careful testing of drugs for use in humans. After this period of clinical testing, additional administrative review further delays the period before the drug comes to the marketplace. As I previously noted, the combined time lost in meeting the FDA procedures averages approximately 10 years. These are years of lost profitability to the pioneer developer. This detracts from the resources and ability of drug companies to bring new products to the marketplace. Continued research and development by the drug industry is vital to maintain our preeminent position in medical therapeutics. It is, therefore, important to ensure that these companies be provided ample patent protection to recoup their investment.

Under the provisions of this legislation, patent protection can be extended up to 5 years as long as the extension, when added to the patent time remaining, does not exceed 14 years.

We must provide this extension to guarantee the continued commitment of resources for the development of innovative drugs to address the changing health needs of our citizens.

At the same time, I am concerned with the containment of health care costs. H.R. 3605 will allow the marketing of generic counterparts which are identical to post-1962 pioneer drugs, following the expiration of the original patent term. The contribution of medications to the overall cost of health care can be reduced drastically if these generic equivalents are brought to the marketplace in a timely fashion. It is estimated that $1 billion can be saved over a 12-year period by the increased use of generic equivalents.

This proposal is a balanced, bipartisan effort that has benefits for all—for the patients who require medication, for that part of the pharmaceutical industry that researches and develops new drugs, for that part of the industry that produces the generic equivalents of the pioneer drugs, and for the Federal agency that is charged with the protection of the public in the proper use of safe and effective drug products.

I support this important balanced approach to the marketing of drugs in this country, and I urge your support for the bill.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. SYNAR].

Mr. Chairman, I want to point out the very significant role the gentleman from Oklahoma has played in this legislation as the author of the Drug Price Competition and Patent Term Restoration Act, which has been folded into this compromise.

Mr. MADIGAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WAXMAN. I would be pleased to yield to my colleague, but I wanted to yield time first to the gentleman from Oklahoma, who in his absence I praise as a very important participant in this compromise, as the author of the Drug Price Competition and Patent Term Restoration Act. The gentleman has played a most constructive role in fashioning the compromise and he is to be commended for his statesmanship that he has offered, and since the gentleman is returning to the floor at this time, I yield the gentleman 5 minutes.

Mr. SYNAR. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from California.

Let me join in my praise not only for the gentleman from California, but the gentleman from Illinois, for their outstanding efforts. This bill comes after a long and hard and arduous compromise proposal that we have negotiated over the last 18 months.

Mr. Chairman, we have a unique opportunity here tonight and in the next couple of days to pass one of the best consumer bills this Congress will consider, not only in this Congress, but all future Congresses.

□ 2000

We are going to accomplish two purposes by passing this bill. First of all, we are going to provide new and better incentives for drug companies to go out and find better drugs; and, second, we are going to provide cheaper drugs by better competition in the marketplace that will benefit not only our elderly but all of those people who buy medicine.

We have a unique opportunity today to bring together all of those groups that are concerned about medical costs in this country and about better medicine. That is why this bill is being supported across the board by business, consumers, elderly, and medical groups throughout this country.

I ask you to consider it closely, to review the merits of the bill. But most importantly, remember that this is a compromise bill between all of those various groups that have concerns about better medicine in this country and providing better incentives and cheaper drugs for the future.

Yes, we do have an opportunity tonight to do something which we rarely get to do, which is to provide for a bill that will give us better drugs and cheaper drugs for the future. I endorse this bill enthusiastically and I ask my colleagues to do so.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Drug Price Competition and Patent Term Restoration Act. This bill accomplishes two important goals:

It provides incentives for research on new drugs by restoring a portion of the patent life that is lost during the FDA approval process; and

It increases price competition in the drug marketplace by simplifying the approval process for generic drugs.

Together, these two will bring about cheaper drugs today and better drugs tomorrow.

I introduced the Patent Term Restoration Act over a year ago with 100 cosponsors—today there are 151.

My colleagues and I were concerned about the integrity of our patent system, and the adverse effect of increasingly lengthy FDA approval on drug research in this country:

Drug research as a percentage of sales is declining.

The cost of developing a new drug averages $87 million.

The average effective patent life of a pioneer drug is reduced by 7 years because of FDA review.

The bill before us today would return fairness to the patent process by restoring a portion of a drug's 17-year patent term that has been consumed during the Government-mandated testing and approval process.

The restoration would be limited to 5 years and in no case could give a drug product more than 14 years of market exclusivity.

The other title of this bill improves price competition in the drug marketplace. It establishes an expedited approval process for generic drugs that are identical to a pioneer drug which has already been approved.

Currently, the FDA requires the same lengthy testing and application procedure for generics that it requires for entirely new drugs.

The effect has been to limit drug competition by keeping generics off the market. This bill will result in the immediate availability of 150 off-patent drugs at a cost of one-tenth to one-half of existing prices.

Consumers will save nearly $1 billion over the next 12 years. And it's important to remember that senior citizens are the primary consumers of health care.

This bill is an important compromise that improves research and development and increases price competition in the drug marketplace.

As sponsor of the Patent Term Restoration Act, and as a consponsor of this legislation, I encourage my colleagues to support this landmark legislation.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Chairman, at this time I yield myself so much additional time as I may consume.

This bill represents a compromise among divergent and sharply differing interests. Previously, extended approval of generic drugs has been opposed by the brand name drug companies and supported by consumer, senior citizens, and labor groups as well as the generic drug industry.

Conversely, patent extension was supported by the brand name drug industry and opposed by consumer, labor, and senior citizen groups as well as the generic drug companies.

After the work on this legislation and the work on this compromise bill, the legislation has now been endorsed by the FDA, the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association representing the brand name drug companies, the generic drug industry, the American Association of Retired Persons, the National Council of Senior Citizens, the Consumer Federation of America, the AFL-CIO, AFSCME, the UAW, the USW, and SEIU.

Mr. Chairman, this compromise represents broad bipartisan support. It would not have been possible to fashion this compromise without the work of the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. SYNAR], the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADIGAN], and our Committee on Energy and Commerce, and particularly I want to pay tribute to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KASTENMEIER], who has been involved in this legislation for two Congresses. His contribution has been enormous and without it we would not have had the legislation that is before us.

I want also to pay a special tribute to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORE] and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK] for their role as well in fashioning the legislation.

I have no further requests for time from our side and I would therefore yield back the balance of our time.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADIGAN] desire additional time?

Mr. MADIGAN. Mr. Chairman, I have yielded back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KASTENMEIER] is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself so much time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 3605, the Drug Price Competition and Patent Term Restoration Act of 1984. This carefully crafted compromise is both proconsumer and proresearch. I hope in the next few minutes to outline to my colleagues both how important this legislation is and how we got here.

American intellectual property law in general, and patent law in particular, is designed to reward innovation. The founders of our Nation recognized the importance of promoting the use of arts and sciences by providing Congress with a specific grant of authority in this area. Pursuant to that grant of authority, the Congress has enacted a series of patent and copyright laws. Since 1861 our patent laws have provided that in return for the public disclosure of a useful invention that an inventor may obtain a period of 17 years to exclude others from practicing that invention.

As many Americans have recognized in recent years, it is our intelligence and inventiveness which sets us apart from many of our trading partners and foreign competitors. An important element of fostering that spirit of inventiveness is a strong patent system. One ingredient to such a system is that inventors have a reasonable assurance that their inventions will be in the commercial marketplace for a long enough period of time for them to recoup their investment in research. It is this issue of effective patent life which originally motivated this legislation.

During the late 1970's, many research-based pharmaceutical firms began to complain that the effective market life of their patented inventions was being eroded by excessively long periods of regulatory review—and delay—at the Food and Drug Administration. They argued that unlike other patented inventions, they had to obtain premarketing clearance or approval from a Federal regulatory agency, the FDA. They claimed that the approval process reduced the effective patent life of drugs by about 7 years. This view was affirmed by two high-level, bipartisan panels, the National Productivity Advisory Committee and the President's Commission on Industrial Competitiveness.

In response to the problems of the research-based pharmaceutical houses, legislation was offered to restore patent life lost through regulatory review. Before acting on this legislation, last Congress the Committee on the Judiciary commissioned a study by the Office of Technology Assessment [OTA]. The OTA study, "Patent Term Extension and the Pharmaceutical Industry," found that since 1966 the average effective patent terms of drugs had declined. The study also found that the research and development costs for new chemical entities have increased at the same time.

The OTA findings standing along might have convinced some about the need for legislation on the patent side. However, the OTA study went on to point out that the current policies of the FDA served to offer additional protection to FDA-approved drugs even after they go off patent. This is so, because the FDA has erected a set of substantial barriers to the market entry of generic substitutes. The OTA also raised several cautions about any patent term legislation. They pointed out that expenditures for research and development appeared to be stable, despite reduced effective patent life. Second, they predicted that drug prices were likely to be higher during a period of patent extension. Third, they feared that patent term extension may merely increase the attractiveness of research on drugs to be sold to large markets at the expense of research on rare diseases or orphan drugs.[1] Finally, the OTA noted that reforms were underway at FDA to reduce the period of regulatory delay.

Last Congress, when faced with the task of implementing the recommendations of the OTA study, the Senate chose to enact patent term legislation alone, but the House balked. The failure of patent term legislation last Congress was primarily the result of our failure to view the regulatory and patent problems of the drug industry as a whole, as recommended by OTA.

This Congress, through the mediation/arbitration efforts of Congressman WAXMAN and others, a carefully crafted compromise has been developed. This compromise totally satisfies no one, but pleases most responsible parties. As you will hear from others today, this bill is the single most important set of patent law amendments in decades and the most fundamental alternative to the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act since 1962. This bill is also both the most important consumer bill and medical cost containment measure before us this Congress.

[1] I note parenthetically this problem has been treated, in part, by the passage of the Orphan Drug Act last Congress.

SUMMARY OF THE BILL

H.R. 3605 contains two titles. The first title of the bill creates a new system for the approval of generic drugs by the Food and Drug Administration. This approval process for drugs approved by the FDA after 1962 has been severely criticized as too cumbersome and expensive. In essence the provisions of title I of H.R. 3605 extend the procedures for approval of generics for pre-1962 drugs to the later class of drugs.

Thus, under H.R. 3605 a generic manufacturer may submit to FDA a request for approval of a generic substitute for any post-1962 drug. The generic manufacturer must establish that the proposed substitute is the same or therapeutically equivalent to the drug which has already been approved.

Under the approval process in H.R. 3605, a generic manufacturer may submit an application for approval to FDA before the so-called pioneer drug goes off patent. The generic may submit data establishing bioequivalency during this time period. In order to complete this application the generic manufacturer must conduct certain drug tests. In order to facilitate this type of testing, section 202 of the bill creates general exception to the rules of patent infringement. Thus, a generic manufacturer may obtain a supply of a patented drug product during the life of the patent and conduct tests using that product if the purpose of those tests is to submit an application to FDA for approval.

H.R. 3605 permits generic applications to be effective after a patent expires. In addition, H.R. 3605 provides that a generic manufacturer may request FDA approval to begin marketing before the patent on the drug has expired. Under current law, this situation is not an issue because of the cumbersome approval process. If the generic manufacturer seeks such an approval it must allege that the existing patent is invalid or will not be infringed. In this instance notification must be given by the generic to the patent holder concerning the application for FDA approval. In these cases the FDA may not approve the generic application until either: One, 18 months have expired or two, a court has determined that no infringement will take place. After the expiration of 18 months, if there has been no intervening judicial determination, the FDA will approve the generic application, even if the drug is still on patent.

Finally, title I also provides for a 4-year grant of market exclusivity to be granted by the Commissioner of the FDA for unpatentable substances which have been approved for use as drugs by the FDA.

TITLE II

This title of the bill addresses the question of patent term extension. As noted above, proponents of this type of legislation have argued that the reduction of the effective market life of a patent because of Federal regulatory review should be restored through an extension of the patent term. Alternatively, or additionally, some proponents of this approach have argued that without some form of legislative relief in this area there would be a diminished stimulus in innovation and research. Thus, it is argued that patent term extensions will create incentives for increased research expenditures.

The patent term extension provisions of the bill are relatively complex, and differ in many respects from the bill approved by the Committee on the Judiciary last Congress. In general, the bill provides that a patent may be extended for a period of up to 5 years if the patented drug—or other item subject to regulatory review by the FDA—has undergone regulatory review. The bill provides several general rules for calculating the period of the extension. First, only one-half of the testing phase may be counted. Second, a year-for-year matching extension is available for any time in the drug approval process that the drug spends awaiting a decision by the FDA. The 5-year rule is available to all drugs which have not yet undergone testing by the FDA. With respect to drugs which have been patented and tested but not yet approved by the FDA, the maximum period of extension is 2 years.

In addition to the 5-year rule listed above, the bill places an additional cap on the possible extension. In no case may the period of patent extension, when added to the patent life left after approval of the product, exceed 14 years. Finally, any part or all of the patent extension may be canceled if the applicant for an extension failed to act with due diligence in conducting tests or in the submission of data to the FDA.

As noted above, the other feature of the drug patent part of the bill is to statutorily modify the rules with respect to patent infringement.

OPPOSITION TO THE BILL

In closing let me take note of some of the opposition to this bill. It should not come as any great surprise that some pharmaceutical houses are opposed to this legislation. In fact, if we were voting on the ANDA provisions of title I of this bill alone, probably all of the drug companies would be opposed. The enactment of this bill will open up to generic competition, within the next few years, billions of dollars of off-patent drugs. The dissident drug companies know full well that if they do not stymie enactment of this bill they will face stiff competition on their leading drugs. For example, within the next year the patents will expire on three of the top selling drugs: One, inderal—used for cardiovascular purposes; two, Aldomet—also used for cardiovascular purposes; and three, valium—an antistress drug. It is not a coincidence that the companies that hold these soon-to-expire patents are leading the opposition to this bill.

The amendments—in the patent area—that you will be asked to vote on have all been considered and rejected by the Judiciary Committee. For the most part these amendments have one common purpose: to provide for longer patent term extensions. Some of the amendments will be disguised as technical amendments, others as clarifying in nature; yet in fact, they all go to the heart of the compromise and should be rejected.

CONCLUSIONS

When the negotiations on this subject began over a year ago, there were two goals: a fair and workable system for the approval of generic drugs at the FDA; and a sensible patent term restoration to compensate for regulatory delay. In my view these goals have been achieved. The ANDA approval process will mandate the FDA to remove the unnecessary barriers to competition. The provisions of title I of the bill will also assure that generic substitutes are just as safe and effective as the pioneer drugs. The patent term restoration provisions are less generous than what the industry requested, but are a fair accommodation.

I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. GORE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KASTENMEIER. I am pleased to yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. GORE. I did not take time earlier, but I appreciate my colleague yielding for me to just say a few brief words in strong support of this legislation. I was one of those who found myself on the other side of the debate last year. Without reopening that issue at all, which would be most inappropriate, I felt that that version was overly balanced toward the large pharmaceutical companies and did not have enough in the bill for consumers.

□ 2010

I think this bill is very balanced. It is still generous toward the large companies and will assist those companies in being successful against the increasingly stiff competition from companies in foreign countries.

At the same time, however, this bill will provide more new competition in drug pricing in the form of competition from the newly approved generic drugs which will be able to come onto the market much faster after the patent period has expired, so that overall, this bill is good both for the industry and for the consumers.

That is why all the major consumer groups are for it, the senior citizen groups are for it, and the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association is for it.

Rarely do we have a chance in this body to vote on a piece of legislation that is as well crafted as this bill is, and which has been worked on as long as this bill has been worked on.

I want to express my strong support for it and ask my colleagues to vote for it in overwhelming numbers.

I appreciate my colleague's courtesy in yielding.

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Chairman, I say in response to the gentleman from Tennessee, the bill 2 years ago did not have the ability, because of the germaneness rule, to consider the generic aspects that this bill has which gives it the balance that the gentleman says is present, and I agree with that assessment.

On the other hand in some respects this bill is more generous to pharmaceutical manufacturers; the other bill was entirely prospective. They could not have had an extension to the year 2000. It addressed no drugs currently under application or under test in the pipeline.

This bill does. I do not think that is unfair, but I will say that it is something that the pharmaceutical manufacturers certainly wanted and they got in this bill that they did not get in the bill 2 years ago.

Mr. GORE. If the gentleman would yield further, I am so delighted and thrilled that we are on the same side this year that I am not even going to pursue that debate. I am just happy that we are together on this bill, it is in the best interests of the American people, industry and consumers alike.

Mr. KASTENMEIER. I thank my colleague from Tennessee for his participation of 2 years ago, even though we were in continuing opposition for his continuing support.

Actually being from Tennessee, he serves in a long tradition not only of his father but the other Senator from Tennessee no longer on the scene who was so well known nationally.

Mr. GORE. Indeed, this bill can be compared in its significance with the 1962 Kefauver amendments which was the landmark in the laws governing pharmaceuticals in this country.

This bill is comparable in significance to that bill. Again, I thank my colleague for yielding and urging support for the bill.

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman reserves the balance of his time. The gentleman has consumed 11 minutes.

The gentleman from California [Mr. MOORHEAD] is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. MOORHEAD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute tothe gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE].

Mr. HYDE. I thank my friend for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, our colleague [Mr. FISH] joins me in the remarks that follow:

I rise in support of H.R. 3605. This legislation is designed to correct a current inequity in the patent law. Present patent law provides an inventor 17-years of exclusivity. However, for certain products such as chemicals and medications, the 17-year patent term has been unintentionally eroded by Federal premarket testing and regulations.

When Congress settled on 17 years of patent life on March 2, 1861, it never took into account today's massive Federal bureaucracy. Granted these tests are important and can't be rushed. But we can't ignore the fact that inventors in this industry do not get anywhere close to 17 years of exclusive use of their inventions.

As the patent life has eroded over the last decade, the cost of developing new medication has skyrocketed. However, out of every $1 spent on health care in the United States, only about 8 cents is paid for medicines.

Drug prices have been one component of health-care costs that has remained relatively stable over the last 20-years. While the Consumer Price Index has risen 178 percent and health-care costs have increased 629 percent , the cost of prescription drugs has increased only 34 percent over that 20-year period. The beneficial effects that new medicines have on medical costs can be graphically illustrated. Tagamet, the new ulcer drug, could save some $250 million a year in forgone surgery and physician visits if the drug were used by all who could benefit from it. The average hospitalization cost for a case of pneumococcal pneumonia in an elderly person is approximately $3,300. The vaccine to prevent this disease costs only about $100. The vaccine for rubella has produced savings in health-care costs and lost working time 47 times that of the price of the vaccine. Additionally, sodium valproate, a new medicine to treat epilepsy, has been estimated to save $612 million yearly.

Shorter patent life translates into falling rates of return, which translates into falling investment in research and development, which translates into fewer and fewer new medicines coming on the market.

This phenomenon, coupled with the inability of many new products to recover their investment, discourages innovation. For example, from 1955 through 1962, an average of 46 drugs was introduced annually in the United States; today, undoubtedly for a variety of reasons, that average is only 17 drugs a year, a decline of 63 percent.

Gradually, the time needed to complete and clear the regulatory review process has grown longer, as products and tests have become more sophisticated and the regulatory resource of agencies like the FDA have become stretched to their limit. In 1962, for example, it took approximately 2 years and $6 million to bring a new medicine from the laboratory to the marketplace. It now takes an average 7 to 10 years and about $70–$85 million to complete this testing period. Thus, it is not uncommon for a drug product to have lost up to one-half of its patent life without having yet been marketed.

This reduction in the number of drug innovations strongly indicates that the public is being deprived of new therapies. The decline in pharmaceutical patent lives, the result of inadvertence rather than congressional intent, will erode the investment research incentive provided by the traditional 17-year patent term.

This is important legislation, it is important to the consumer, especially the elderly and it is important to industry and I urge colleagues to vote favorably for its passage.

At the proper time, Mr. MOORHEAD will offer an amendment which he offered in subcommittee and lost and a modified version of which was offered at the full Judiciary Committee by Mr. HUGHES and supported by our chairman, Mr. RODINO. I urge you to support that amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MOORHEAD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. DEWINE].

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. Chairman, basically, there are many good things in this bill, but I regret there are several things that some of us on this side of the aisle are having problems with, and we hoped they would be able to be rectified in the committee, but they were not.

I would like to talk briefly about one particular aspect of this bill which is the overturning of the Bolar case.

It has been long accepted patent law, at least it is my understanding, not being a patent lawyer, but it is my understanding that for years in this country, it has been considered a patent infringement for a company to test or market or use a particular item. This particular bill would overturn the Bolar decision.

In that case, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit held, consistent with prior law, that a generic drug company may not formulate and test its version of another company's patented drug until the patent term expires.

The Bolar decision is sound law and in my opinion should be retained. However, this particular bill would overrule Bolar and thereby permit a generic company to engage in acts which heretofore would have constituted patent infringement.

I understand the committee has received a legal advice that this is constitutional. I am not sure it is constitutional, to be taking property rights away from people and away from companies. But whether or not it is constitutional, it seems to me it is bad public policy and should be rejected by this Congress.

Mr. MOORHEAD. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 3605, the Drug Price Competition and Patent Term Restoration Act of 1984.

When most people hear the words patent law reform, they do not consider those words as having a life-or-death ring. But what about words like penicillin or polio, pneumonia, smallpox and measles vaccines—do they have more of a life-or-death ring? The present impact of patent law on the drug industry is inhibiting those very kinds of discoveries.

Our patent system is crucial to the drug and the agricultural chemical industries. Ironically, these industries, while especially needing the patent system, do not receive its full benefit. It's very costly, very time consuming, and very risky to develop a new medicine. Currently, to bring a medicine to market takes about 10 years, costs $70 million and has a failure rate of 90 percent. The promise of 17 years of patent protection kept things rolling until, in 1962, the thalidomide tragedy convinced everybody that new medicines needed more rigorous testing. This, in turn, meant more time elapsed before drugs could be brought to the market.

Therefore, the length of time between patenting a medicine and getting FDA approval gradually ballooned from about 1 year pre-1962 to nearly 10 years now. In other words, a life-saving medicine making its debut today will have less than 7 years of patent life, whereas a toy or new medicine will receive the full 17 years of protection. This, in my opinion, is not fair.

I believe this legislation will mean more and better medications, resulting in better and earlier treatment. This point was well made by a Chicago Tribune editorial (May 1, 1982) which said:

> Some objections have been raised to the proposed legislation because it would lengthen the time until a drug could be copied by the developer's competitors and marketed as a generic product, presumably at a lower price. But in the long run, we all stand to benefit much more from the discovery and availability of new medications. It is far less expensive to treat patients with drugs than with surgery or long hospitalization, which may be the only alternatives. And one of the most effective ways to cut health care costs is to develop new medications. Enormous savings, for example, could be made if we had more effective drugs for heart disease, cancer, genetic disorders, respiratory diseases, and a long list of other ailments for which better treatment is urgently needed.

□ 2020

Mr. Chairman, I strongly support this bill, but I believe there are some inequities that are still left in the bill that should be corrected.

The Patent Office has requested me to offer two amendments which would correct some of the problems in the bill. The procedures are too complicated in this legislation and can be rather simply corrected, taking care of the needs that are legitimate to the legislation but cutting down the long procedural delays.

Another problem with the bill, is that it unfairly treats so-called, second-class patents, which are patents that are developed from a former patent. Many people have said it would prevent these drugs from becoming generic and coming on the market as rapidly as they should. But I would tell you that the original patented product can be put on the market as a generic. It would be only the old product patent, the one that is approved, that could get an extension under H.R. 3605. For that reason, I do not think we should have a second class patent.

There are other problems which will be addressed in amendments that are presented tomorrow. But obviously, one of the problems that we have in the bill is that it compromises the rights of present patent holders by permitting their adverse use of that particular product by potential competitors prior to the time that the patent expires.

I have an amendment that would take care of some of the problems suggested by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. DEWINE] by requiring that when a person applies for an extension of patent rights that he give up the right to exclusive use of that patent for experimental purposes during the last year of his extended patent rights. This would give the generics a right to work on that product and get a product ready for the market. But his rights in that patent would be given up by him in order to get the extension, and for that reason we would not be taking property rights from any American.

While I would appreciate an aye vote on these amendments when they are offered, I do believe the bill is a step forward, it is an improvement in the present law, and I would ask for an aye vote on the bill.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL].

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Chairman, in the discussion on the rule, I raised the objection to the procedure, first of all, of bringing a rule to this floor within an hour or so after it was passed, without the customary layover, which is contrary to our procedures unless there is a showing of great urgency. In this case, I am not aware of any showing of urgency having been made either before the committee, before the committees of jurisdiction or before this Committee of the Whole.

In the second place, the rule provided that the bill which is presented to the Committee of the Whole be amended by a substitute amendment and that there further be allowed a nongermane amendment to be offered by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. DERRICK].

I object to the nongermane amendment being a part of our process. I believe that one of the very few distinctions this House has is orderly process. We compare it with the nongermane procedure arrangements which obtain in the other body, and we have always been proud of our procedures. Now, occasionally some of our Members get urges for speed, urges of greed or other urges, and they are able to piggyback one idea which has nothing to do with the main bill onto another. That is obviously bad procedure. Every observer of our system understands that. Naturally, all of us would make the same observation, of course, unless it was our bill which was the hitchhiker in the case.

The hitchhiker itself is a highly controversial bill. It has not been heard in any committee report following this bill. There is no testimony on it. There has been no showing whatsoever that there is a need for it or that, in fact, it will do any good for whatever the authors intend for it.

On the other hand, there is some clear evidence that it is mischievous to importers of textile goods and woolen goods.

Mr. Chairman, I believe that the worst of the mischievous items in there lies in the effective date and the requirement of labeling within mail order catalogs. If you are a catalog retailer selling goods to the public, you are required under this bill within 90 days to have all of your catalogs showing what goods are U.S.-made and what goods are imported, and if you do not, those goods are prima facie misbranded and subject to the penalties of this wonderful law of 1939 that none of us know anything about. I could not even tell you what the penalties are. But I suspect that they could be substantial if they are multiplied. Therefore, one of the amendments which I will offer later on is to change that effective date to a reasonable time so that somebody placing forward orders, either for printing or for goods that are to be sold to the public, will have a reasonable chance of making good on what has been rational planning on the part of that particular retail agent.

I think it is just manifestly unfair to suddenly attack a pile of goods and say:

This was not misbranded yesterday, but today it is. Never mind if you ordered it 6 months ago, never mind if you printed your catalog 6 months ago, too bad, you are out of it.

Well, how about if you are Sears, Roebuck and you print a couple million catalogs and they are that thick, do you mean you have to throw out your spring catalog? That is what that effective date says to that kind of a company. The same thing is true, to a lesser extent, and is probably more harmful, to small importers of textile goods, who will suddenly find the goods that they have received which they have ordered 6 months ago are illegal, misbranded in the United States. This is obviously an unfair, unreasonable kind of a law. I have yet to understand what is good about it. I suspect that it will encourage consumers to go for imported goods over U.S. goods, and I suspect that that is counter to the motivations of the proponents of the bill.

I shall hope that this bill is defeated. With the luck I had on the rule today, I harbor no great enthusiasm or any great expectation that it will be defeated. It should be defeated, and I shall offer as many amendments as are necessary so that the House has a fine chance to discuss all of the aspects of the bill.

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. PEPPER], the distinguished chairman of the Rules Committee whose generosity in granting us this time accounts for our being here in the first place.

Mr. PEPPER. I thank the distinguished gentleman for his kindness in yielding to me.

Mr. Chairman, I think this bill is a fair bill. I think it corrects an injustice which has often fallen upon the big drug companies of this Nation who are in general contributing much to new and extended research in trying to find the answers, the cause and the cure of some of the dreaded diseases like heart disease and cancer that afflict so many of our people. But we in this bill have done something more than provide a greater measure of justice for the drug companies by giving them a right to extend their patents, to a certain degree, to compensate for the time they have lost while their application is being considered by the Food and Drug Administration or the companies themselves have been engaged in their own preparation for putting their drug upon the market. But the benefit to the elderly, which many of us have been particularly concerned about, they tell me, will reach something like a billion dollars in the next few years. The way the benefit will derive to the elderly is that the generic producing drug companies would be able to get the right to produce these critical drugs earlier than they otherwise would be able to do, and therefore they will be selling cheaper generic drugs, which those who are informed about the matter know simply means that you are buying aspirin, let us say, not by trade name, but by a name that really means aspirin. You get it cheaper in the marketplace when you buy it that way, as they call it, a generic drug, than you do when you buy a drug that has a brand name that is sold generally in the market.

So this is, I think, a fair compromise between the drug companies, giving them justice for the time that they have heretofore been losing, through no fault of their own, and at the same time, giving the elderly people of this country perhaps a savings of a billion dollars in the next few years by being able to buy more and cheaper generic drugs than they would otherwise be able to buy without this legislation.

I add on to this, Mr. Chairman, medicare does not cover the drugs that an elderly person consumes in the home. What I am talking about is the ability of the elderly to buy drugs that they have to pay for themselves, and on the average, 13 prescriptions a year, is the number obtained by the average elderly person. They are going to be able to save a lot of money and get a lot of care that they richly deserve.

Mr. MOORHEAD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KINDNESS].

Mr. KINDNESS. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, my purpose at this point is to make some observations for the RECORD, because it surely is not for the purpose of persuading anyone present. Here we are, a nice, warm, friendly little group. I wish at this point in time the cameras could scan the House Chamber to show how empty it is. That will not happen until later when we have special orders, if we have any special orders tonight.

I feel as though maybe I am involved in a special order right now, because that is what happens when nobody listens, or at least hardly anyone listens. That is what has been happening right along the line with the progress of H.R. 3605. It has gotten all this way without really anyone paying enough attention to certain aspects of it. It started out with a good purpose, a wonderful purpose. I agree with it thoroughly. I think that the concept of getting the clearance of generic drugs and getting them to the marketplace just as soon as possible is a great idea. It can indeed solve a lot of financial problems or help with a lot of financial problems of many people who need medicines and drugs for the sake of their health on a regular basis.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KINDNESS. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. WALKER. I thank the gentleman for yielding because I think that it might be worth underscoring the point that the gentleman made as he led off his argument. I have just done a count of the House and, if TV cameras were in fact scanning the Chamber right now, they would discover that there are only nine Members of Congress on the floor to listen to the gentleman.

Mr. KINDNESS. If the gentleman would forgive my using the term, I think this is what we call a "Walker House."

I agree with what we attempt to do in extending the term or restoring the term of patents that get run down or run out while the patented product is being put through a long, tortuous regulatory process before it is approved for use on the market. Those are two good concepts that have been much discussed by those who have heaped praise upon this bill.

But, my gosh, do we have to depreciate the value of our patent laws to do this? No, I do not think so. It has been done, I believe, accidentally in the main. It has been done, in the main, by people who did not know anything about patent law, and I am not claiming to be an expert. I have had the problems pointed out to me by people who are more expert at patent law. But the problems are there.

Let me tell the Members about an experience that I had this spring at the appointment of the Speaker of the House. I was, on the recommendation of others in the Judiciary Committee, and the chairman thereof, I was appointed to be an observer, adviser to the U.S. delegation to the fourth in a series of negotiations concerning possible or potential amendments to the Paris Convention on Protection of Industrial Properties.

Now, that is an old international agreement, a treaty having to do with the protection of patent laws. We have had a struggle going on for a number of years in which Third World countries, together as a group in those negotiations are saying, let us detract more and more from the patent laws of the industrialized nations. The developed nations have too much by way of property rights under their patent protections. We do not want to recognize those rights in our countries, and we want to be able to take the value of that intellectual property at as early a date as possible and use it for the benefit of our countries and the development of our underdeveloped countries.

Well, that is one side of the argument. Our side of the argument, the U.S. side of the argument is that we have, the developed nations of the world have for many years respected each other's patent laws, we have respected the rights of individuals to own intellectual property.

The Third World nations, however, have strongly argued that we should weaken that concept. They are backed by the Soviet Union and the socialist countries that group themselves in these negotiations with the Soviet Union. That is sort of in the background. The Soviet Union and its allies in industrial terms, in terms of international trade, would like to have the Western nations' patent laws weakened, just like H.R. 3605 does.

Do we realize how much of our commerce throughout the world involves pharmaceuticals? That is what we are talking about mainly here, drugs. That is an important area in which the United States does have some areas of advantage. We do sell pharmaceuticals to other countries. It is a part of our international trade picture.

There are other countries that would like to do more by way of taking on intellectual property in the form of patented drugs or pharmaceuticals and marketing them throughout the world without regard to, and without respect for, our U.S. patent laws and the concepts that we believe or have believed, as a nation, are appropriate to the protection of intellectual property in the form of patents.

Well, what happened in regard to H.R. 3605 now? A lot of people wanted to have this patent term restoration matter dealt with. A lot of people wanted to do something about shortening the time for generic drug manufacturers, the Third World countries of U.S. pharmaceutical operations, I guess, to be able to market more quickly these patented products when the patent runs out.

In wedding those two concepts, very worthwhile concepts, we have come together in some areas of this bill with provisions that simply derogate too much from the intellectual property rights of people in the United States. They ought to have been given serious consideration, but what happened? Nobody gives it serious consideration. Why is that? Because this is a negotiated bill; it is not a legislated bill, it is a negotiated bill.

There is nothing wrong with negotiations; it happens all the time. But when you substitute somebody's statement that, "Oh, you cannot touch a tiddle in this bill because it has all been carefully negotiated and balanced and set forth in such a manner that if anybody slips a little bit, the whole thing falls."

No; I do not believe it. Anyone who has been involved in the legislative process for any appreciable period of time or has observed it closely knows that every time that argument is made it is false.

□ 2040

Negotiated legislation is just that. It is subject to negotiation and change all the way through the legislative process. H.R. 3605 is no different and should be no different. We should ascribe no particular sanctity to this bill simply because some few individuals were involved in negotiating its contents and others went along with what was decided.
